Is the Word "Sin"

A scientist, or more probably a philosopher, is quoted as saying that the word "sin" was never used. He did not mean that there was no word "sin" but that which was formerly called "sin." No, he meant that "sin" is a misnomer, that it does not correctly designate that to which it is applied. In other words, the word "sin" has false implications. It charges people with guilt when they are innocent. Human conduct, according to this view, is to be regarded as a natural phenomenon for which no man is responsible. Sparks fly upward and nobody blames them; water flows downward and nobody blames it. Both act according to inherent nature and could not do otherwise. So man, according to this view, acts according to inherent nature and could not do otherwise. No one should blame him or call him a sinner. His conduct may be very ugly, but he is as innocent as the rose in blooming. His conduct may be very offensive to his fellowmen, and possibly they may be justified in arresting him and depriving him of his liberty to injure others, but they should not think of him as a sinner or condemn him for what he has done. He was not responsible. If there is any responsibility in the case it belongs to the Creator who gave him his nature. He did what he must do and could not do otherwise.

This "scientist" has said what few or none will believe. Men know that they are not automatons. They know that they have freedom. They know that they can do right or they can do wrong, whichever they choose. They know that necessity does not rule them. They know they can sin, can incur guilt, can make themselves sinners and invite condemnation and just punishment. They know that the word "sin" is still as vital and full of meaning as it was when God said to Cain, "If thou doest not well, sin lieth at the door."

The idea of responsibility implied in the word "sin" cannot be eliminated from human thought by the dictum of any scientist, no matter how eminent. This idea appears in all languages used by men. It has been said that the ancient Greeks had no word in their language corresponding to the word "sin;" but they had courts of justice, they tried men for wrong-doing, they condemned and put men to death, showing that they had the idea of sin. To deny the existence of sin is as absurd as to deny the existence of sunshine, even more so, for there are blind people who cannot see the sun, but there are none who cannot feel the guilt of sin. When sin permanently disappears from the world, the word "sin" may be said to be out of date. Until that time comes, we would better continue to talk about sin and try to get rid of it.

—I will strive to raise my own body and soul daily into all the higher powers of duty and happiness, not in rivalry of or contention with others but for the help, delight and honor of others, and for the joy and peace of my own life.—Ruskin.

Can We Bring Forth?

we cannot answer it. We are judging the future by the light of many events. We feel sure that it will not snow here in July and that we will have no hot and sultry days in February. We expect marriages and deaths and may with some confidence predict that the near-married will marry in 1929 and that the near-dying will this year be released from the body. But who are the near-dying? Many who show no signs of it whose death this year will bring surprise and great shock. And there may be some near-married who seem far from marriage now.

International relations may bring surprises this year. Statesmen are laboring for peace and Christians are praying for peace among the nations, but still there may be wars or rumors of wars. This is a matter of common concern and is more under control than is the matter of death. We should not only hope for peace, but labor for it in practical fashion.

This year may bring great upheavals of nature; storms, earthquakes, volcanic eruptions. We cannot tell. This matter is in the hands of God.

This year may be signalized by new discoveries or marvelous inventions. Scientists and inventors will try to make it a year of progress.

In the moral and religious realm this may be a year of growth and progress. This would be best of all. Here we may do our bit. God help us!

Is Space Limited?

Most of us are convinced that there is space enough for all practical purposes, but once in a while we are startled by the newspaper announcement that some distinguished explorer of the heavens has found the outer edge of space. The last announcement describes space as terminating in a kind of rumple or crumple. That is interesting, but the mind at once inquires, What is beyond this rumple or crumple? Doubtless there are more things in heaven and earth than are dreamed of in our simple philosophy, and our conception of space may be very inadequate, but the common sense of mankind will not easily give up its conception of the boundlessness of space. We want something to think of "that there is enough of."

"You Can't Make People Good by Law"

No, but we can in some measure restrain them from asserting their badness against other people. The murderer and the burglar and the highway robber do not kill and steal and rob as much as they would if there were no law against their bad deeds. And the bootlegger does not sell as much as he would if the law did not forbid his selling.

THE HOLY BIBLE

This great and holy Book is the most precious earthly possession of the human race. We cannot prize it too highly or read, study, and meditate upon its sacred contents too much for our spiritual welfare. Its characters have been the noblest and grandest in history, its philosophy the sublimest, and its ethics the most exalted. It was composed by devout men under the inspiration and guidance of the Holy Spirit. Concerning it St. Paul says: "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." No one who neglects it can be fully prepared for fulfilling the duties of the Christian life in a worthy manner. It is complete as it now stands and needs neither addition nor subtraction. It is for all ages and all races of men. It does not have to conform to the opinion of men in any age, however proud and boastful of their human achievements those who live in it may be. All men must shape their lives by its teachings or forfeit eternal life for not doing so.

In all respects the Bible is the most wonderful book that has ever been written. Its influence for good in this wicked world is incalculable, and it has been exerting it for many centuries. Were it not for the Bible, and the Holy Spirit which is responsible for it, how distressingly dark and dismal life upon this earth would be from a moral and spiritual standpoint! Without the light which it affords who can estimate how low the human race would sink in sin and degradation?

No other volume has had such bitter, subtle, and resourceful enemies, and today they are bestirring themselves against it to their utmost. Yet in the past it survived all these unjustified assaults, and we predict that this will be as true in the future. When its unholy foes lie buried in the dust of earth and are forgotten, and their unfair attacks upon it are remembered no more, the Scriptures will continue to occupy an exalted place in the heart and life of the faithful followers of the Lamb.

Theologians of the Modernist type claim to accept the Bible in their own way, but unfortunately for the cause of truth and righteousness they pervert its doctrines and hopelessly destroy men's faith in it. They are worse than the infidels who openly deny belief in it and scoff at it, because parading as exemplary Christians, the influence of these false brethren is far greater and constitutes a graver menace to Scriptural Christianity. The characters of these artful latter-day assailants of the Bible will no more bear analysis than did those of its coarser and less politic critics in preceding times. However brilliant their intellects, or pleasing their personalities, or wide their influence, we know what manner of men they are. We have the Bible standard of ethics by which to gauge them, and when measured by it, they are seen to be moral and spiritual dwarfs. Their action in attacking the Divine Revelation, and in nullifying its teachings in a subtle and hypocritical manner, is a severe indictment of their lives.

No man can stand still as the sea of time rolls on. We are all swiftly and inevitably moving with it toward the shores of eternity. If we use the Bible as a chart and compass to guide us home to glory, as our Heavenly Father intended that we should, we shall have a safe and prosperous voyage which will end in everlasting triumph. But if we undervalue God's Word and do not rightly use it, we shall certainly make shipwreck of our own lives, and perhaps destroy others with our influence; and our loss will be irreparable in a sense more awful than we can now realize. Thus the final destiny of every individual of the human race who attains to the years of accountability and has the truths of the Gospel presented unto him in their purity, is inseparably linked with his acceptance or rejection of the Divinely-given Book.

Orthodox Christians have always accepted the teachings of the Bible without any dishonest mental reservations. If this subjects them to unkind and unjust epithets, surely they ought to prefer to be accounted fools for Christ's sake rather than to appear wise in the estimation of misguided men. They have the heroic example of many ascended Christians and the commanding words of their Savior to cheer and strengthen them in their Christian faithfulness.—Selected.

MINISTERIAL TACT

It is seldom wise to quarrel with other people about their opinions. You may have heard of the pastor who felt that he was not receiving the support and co-operation of one of his leading members, and finally decided to go to him and find out the cause. "Yes," said the member, "it is true that I am not one of your proponents; although a large majority voted for you, I opposed your coming here."

"And may I ask the reason for your opposition?" the preacher timidly inquired.

"I opposed your coming," replied the member, "because I don't consider you a first-class preacher."

"Well," said the preacher, "that's exactly my opinion; I fully agree with you; but since a large majority of the congregation differ from us, it would hardly look right for you and me to set up our judgment against the judgment of so many. Hence, I suggest that we just allow them to have their way, and not quarrel with them about it."

The sequel tells us that, by this exercise of tact, the preacher changed his opponent into the best friend and supporter that he had in the church.

And this story contains a good hint for every pastor. If you happen to have a member who is mean enough to tell you that "you are not much of a preacher," don't quarrel with him about it. Just tell him, right on the spot, that you agree with him.

And the chances are that you will both be right.—The Church Advocate.

THE EXPLANATION

"Richard Burke, being found in a reverie shortly after an extraordinary display of powers in Parliament by his brother Edmund, was questioned by a friend as to the cause. He replied, 'I have been wondering how Ned has contrived to monopolize all the talents of the family, but then again I remember when we were at play he was always at work.'"

ANY FALSE DOCTRINE DANGEROUS

Watch against the leaven of false doctrine. Remember that Satan can transform himself into an angel of light. Remember that bad money is never marked bad, or else it would never pass. Be very jealous for the whole truth as it is in Jesus. Do not tolerate a little false doctrine one bit more than you would a little sin. Oh! reader, remember this caution. Watch and pray.—Selected.

A PROSPEROUS CHURCH

In order to have a prosperous church its membership must be made up of converted people who are ready to show they are the children of God by lives of steadfast loyalty to God. Under any other conditions a church is a mere make-believe, an organization under false pretenses, a form without life or power. The church, as an institution, is a divine organization, and each particular church so far as it is a real church, will be made up of those who love Jesus Christ and are ready to do His will.

In order that the church shall prosper, people must come to its services. It cannot succeed if its people are not church-going people. The supreme duty is that of sustaining stated public services for the preaching of the gospel to the people of its community. It has other duties. This is one that stands for all the rest. If this is well done all the rest are sure to come all right. If the gospel is forcefully and lovingly preached, and the people come regularly and faithfully, everything else can be arranged for and accomplished. But if the public worship is neglected, and the pews are empty, and interest lags, and a few people straggle into morning service and evening service, the church fails of life and strength, and is soon known in the community as uninteresting and unattractive. If the people do not come to services the preacher cannot preach as he should, but is depressed, discouraged, and Christ is dishonored. No church can have even the form of prosperity unless the people take the pains to come regularly to its services.

No church can be a prosperous one unless its people work together for its success in winning others to Jesus Christ and to a place in its membership. Many persons may be won to Christ and the church in time of some revival, but unless the members of the church are spiritually interested in their welfare and welcoming and helping them, many of these will drop out and be lost to the church. The minister and the elder cannot do it all. There must be cordial life on the part of the people and it must be an affectionate, spiritual, warm-hearted attitude that is maintained. People must be looked for, welcomed, invited; brought into the church and made to feel that it is their home. The best minister in the world cannot build up his church without the cordial co-operation of his people.

The paralysis that is on the church today in so many quarters is because the children are not being kept in line with the church. They are not in the pews with their parents learning to go to church. The Sabbath School and the Young People's Society are good in their way and place, but if they are being allowed to take the place of the church itself, they are for its weakening and death, rather than for its life and strengthening. Nothing can take the place of old-fashioned church-going and prayer meeting attendance, where the children went with their parents, and where they listened to the solid instruction into the things of God and learned to sing and pray and to think and give to the cause of Christ.

No church can have real prosperity unless its people are ready to sustain it financially and to the limit of its needs and their possibilities. A shabby, neglected church building, unattractive and dingy, will drive the outside world away and bring reproach upon the cause of Christ. Let the house of God be loved, made cheery, and attractive, and let the people show that they have a delight in it as they do in their homes. Let the pastor be promptly paid, that he may be encouraged and may feel that his work is appreciated. It is not a heavy burden on the people to keep everything in good condition, and is not half so heavy as the sense of accumulated debt. Let "Holiness to the Lord" be on the bells of the horses, and let every financial obligation be promptly and cheerily discharged.

That is a prosperous church in which the members love the Lord and one another, and are anxious to win the world to Jesus Christ, being found promptly in their places with their children beside them, with their offering in their hands, and with praise and prayer on their lips and in their hearts.

OUR GOALS FOR THE NEW CONFERENCE YEAR

1. The first purpose of the church first—saving sinners, and keeping them saved.
2. Enriching the worship programs of the church.
3. The church singing, and all churches adequately supplied with standard song books. Our church hymnal first.
4. The Children's Home supported monthly by every church.
5. Unfailing and enlarging support for High Point College.
6. A definite financial obligation for every member, and budgets pressed for every possible dollar.
7. Urging the financial obligations early in the year.
8. Pastors paid monthly, and something on budgets each month.
9. Regular offerings at every regular church service.
10. Observing all special days—Easter, Children's Day, Rally Day, Young People's Day.
11. "Men for the Ministry" Sunday observed on every charge sometime during the year.
12. Well planned and well attended rallies in every conference district.
13. Better attended quarterly conferences, and more business of the church attended to by the congregation.
14. Full support for the Pastors' Summer Conference and Young People's Training School.
15. All churches and church grounds well kept and beautified.
16. Appropriate church workers.
17. A Board of Young People's Work in every conference district.
18. The church stronger within.
19. Intensifying the spiritual life of the Sunday school.
20. A full support of every General Conference program.
21. More Women's Auxiliaries and more C. E. Societies.
22. A substantial increase in the circulation of our church papers.
23. Pay-up months—April and October.

Some of these goals are being carried over from last year; but of necessity that must be so. They are perpetual essentials, and must, therefore, be kept constantly before us. Some are new, not in idea, but in the form of a goal. All are worthy, we trust, and any effort to realize them can not but be pleasing to God, and prospering to the local church, conference, and the denomination. We are submitting them, therefore, with the hope that they may have the endorsement of every pastor and every charge, and that they may receive the earnest support necessary to make them real.

Fraternally yours,

EXTRACTS FROM MRS. SODERBOM'S TRAVEL LETTER

Methodist Protestant Mission, Kalgan, North China,
October 27, 1928.

Dear Folks at Home:

This letter was begun somewhere in Manchuria, about eleven days after we had left Stockholm. We left Stockholm about five o'clock in the afternoon of October 7th. There were quite a number of folks to see us off, both relatives and friends. As the boat left the dock there was the usual waving of handkerchiefs. We watched from the boat until we could not see them any more, and as we were about to turn away, the lights of the city flashed on. It was so pretty to see them light up one after the other.

Up to the time that we went to bed we were sailing through the archipelago which was very beautiful. We wished that it would stay light longer so we could see more of it. During the night we passed through the wide expanse of water known as the Baltic Sea. The next morning when we awoke we were sailing between rocks and rock islands with mountains all around. There were so many passages of water that I wondered how the pilot knew which way to go for the way seemed very intricate. I asked Mr. Soderbom if he did not think it was the most beautiful scenery we had passed through and he promptly answered, "No, Sweden is more beautiful." Sweden is beautiful but this was also very beautiful, and I was sorry to leave the deck even for dinner, even though the dinner was an exceptionally good one.

We reached Helsingfors about three in the afternoon. This is one of Finland's port cities. One of the Methodist pastors in Stockholm had wired his brother who was pastor of a Swedish church in Helsingfors to meet us. It seems rather good to have some one meet you in a strange country. We took a taxi to the railroad station where we left our hand baggage. That night Mr. Soderbom spoke at the Swedish church at their harvest home festival. After that we went back to the station and boarded the train for Leningrad.

Next morning the Russians came for our passports and kept them for several hours, and when they returned them there was a new stamp on them. Soon we came to the border. Here we stopped for customs inspection. My, how solemn those inspectors were! The clothing and most things they scarcely looked at, but all books and papers were thoroughly examined. I had some cards with holes cut in them to write Chinese characters by. These received much attention until they discovered the Chinese character on the back. Then they said, "Chinese" and put them back. They discovered a small tin box filled with toothpicks. They took out one and thoroughly examined it, even smelt of it. I wonder what he thought those toothpicks were! Some of the things they did struck us very funny and we wanted to laugh, but we had to keep serious, so we dare not even look at each other for fear we would laugh. Finally we arrived at Leningrad. We had to stay in the hotel sitting-room until ten at night. Then we had to taxi to another station, where we took the train for Moscow.

At Moscow, we had to stay all day and as there was no place to leave our baggage while we went for our tickets, we had to take a room at the hotel. We presented our order for the tickets in the morning and had to return to the travelling bureau in the afternoon for them. During the day we visited a couple of churches. One of them was supposed to be a real old one. They now call it a museum and charge an entrance fee. The building was fast falling to decay and there was not much to be seen or enough to warrant the entrance fee. Yet there was one thing of especial interest and that was the Bibles. These had all been printed by hand and beautifully illustrated. I suppose you know that all the churches in Russia were Greek Catholic, so there are no images in these churches, but many, many pictures which are real works of art painted on the walls. I remember one from this first church. The picture was that of a martyr undergoing torture. The blood was streaming from his feet and one hand while the other hand was laid on an anvil and the executioner was swinging a heavy sledge hammer above his head preparing to bring it down on the hand on the anvil. This was rather gruesome, I admit, but one did not think so much about the torture as about the beautiful saintly expression on the face of the tortured. It seemed as if he were oblivious to the pain and as if he were sitting in heavenly places. In another church a priest was holding a service. I was rather surprised as I had thought there were no religious services permitted in Russia. One priest had long wavy hair which fell upon his shoulders. He was dressed in a priestly costume. Beside him stood another priest in ordinary clothing. This priest had a most beautiful tenor voice. Some of the worshipers stood (there were no seats in the church) and others knelt on the stone floor. Every little while they would bow their heads to the ground. One time in the service the priest faced the people and stretching forth his hand with the Bible in it laid it upon the head of the nearest worshiper who reverently bowed her head while the priest continued his chanting. When he finished, he kissed the Book and held it out to the worshipers, who eagerly kissed it. The room was small and the worshipers few, but the whole atmosphere was reverent. In this church the pictures were very beautiful. They were everywhere and were painted on the walls all the way up to the top of the tower whose ceiling was also covered with a beautiful picture.

Many of the buildings in Moscow and also Leningrad were very dilapidated and the people for the most part very shabbily dressed. No one in Moscow seemed to be happy, not even the little children.

There was only one meal a day served on the train and that was dinner at three o'clock. The first course was Russian soup. This is a thick soup with lots of cabbage and big pieces of meat in it; one day it also had dill pickle in it. After the soup came fish or sometimes a baked vegetable. This was followed by meat and potatoes and then dessert which was mostly baked apples or pears or some kind of boiled fruit. All of this cost about 85 cents American money. There being only one meal a day, we had to carry a food box with us and a couple of enamel plates and cups besides a kettle for hot water, and knife, fork and spoons. You could get boiling water at most every station and as we had some George Washington coffee and some tea with us a lunch was easily prepared.

The people through Siberia looked more prosperous than those in Moscow and Leningrad, and there were lots of new buildings going up there.

About a ten minutes' ride from the Chinese border, the Russian inspectors came on the train, and the train waited an hour for them to do their work. They took our passports to a little house near the station and examined and stamped each one. Several inspectors, one was a woman with piercing eyes, came through the train and scrutinized both us and the coupe. I am afraid that I looked as hard at the woman as she did at us.

Finally we reached Man Chou Li at a little after midnight. Here we had to give up our passports again and go through the customs. Both Russian and Chinese custom officers were present. Then we boarded the train on the Chinese Eastern Railroad. We reached Chang Chun the next morning. Here we had to have a coolie carry our things to the station on the other side as we had to travel from here to Dairen on a Japanese train.

We had to go to Dairen as we were told at Harbin that we could not get through on the Peking and Mukden line. We telegraphed ahead from Dairen for passage on the first boat to Tientsin. We were advised to do this on account of the heavy travel that way, due to the railroad being shut off.

When we arrived at Dairen, we found that we could not get passage on any passenger steamer for a week. To stay in Dairen was out of the question as everything was so very expensive there. So we succeeded in getting passage on a freighter that carried a few passengers. The boat was to have started at six in the morning so we decided to get on the night before to save hotel bills and also to be sure that we did not miss it. However, there was engine trouble and the boat did not start at six but two hours later.

We stayed in Tientsin for one day to attend to some business, went to Peking the next and the following day took the train for Kalgan. It is impossible now to go from Tientsin to Kalgan in one day, and it is much pleasanter to stay all night in Peking. We succeeded both in getting on the crowded train and also getting a seat by the open window which is quite an advantage. In our car there were seats for about sixty, but there were over a hundred people in the car. Those who had no seats sat on the floor or lay there and went to sleep. If travelling in America were that way there would be many disgruntled folks, but the Chinese are so used to hardship that they do not grumble or complain, but are happy and make the best of any bad situation, and so it was a cheerful, happy lot of people who filled the car. We too were happy to be going back to Kalgan again, and I for one could not sit still. The dirt and the smells all seemed so natural that I did not mind it a bit.

When we reached Kalgan, although it was about eleven at night, Mr. and Mrs. Williams, Mrs. Larson, Mrs. Hannestad, of the Norwegian Mission, and most all of our Kalgan workers were at the train to meet us. How good it was to see them all again!

The next night Mr. Williams called a meeting of both foreign and native workers to thank the Lord for our safe journey and return to Kalgan.

So ended the journey from Stockholm, Sweden, to Kalgan, North China.

Yours in His service,

MAUDE L. SODERBOM.

OPTIMISM

The President's Letter

EVANGELISM

Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.

Christmas—New Year

The happiest and holiest festive season of all the year has once again come and gone. We trust that it was an occasion of happiness and peace throughout our connection, and that the Christmas spirit of unselfishness and good will may not pass with the Christmas season, but that it may abound with us to the continual glorifying of the Christ that makes Christmas. And not only for our Zion do we breathe this prayer, but for all the earth. May the peace and good will of which the angels sang become dominant everywhere.

By the mercies of God we are entering today upon a new allotment of time. Only a brief span since we began writing 1928, and yet today it is January 1, 1929. How fast the years do fly away! As we advance in life, and duties and responsibilities and opportunities increase, we appreciate more and more the meaning of Job: "My days are swifter than a weaver's shuttle." And yet the passing of time is never too rapid for the working out of God's purposes in us and through us. And whether our years be few or many, if they have been spent in obedience to His purpose, we have lived long and we have lived well. No better new year resolve, therefore, can we make than a resolve to keep the Lord before our faces, and to live the new year in fuller obedience to his purposes. May there come to each one of us a new warming of the heart as we draw near to the God in obedience to this good purpose.

Winston

Dec. 23, Sunday. It was our privilege to be here on this date for two services, morning and afternoon. We were glad to be with this charge, and to renew the fellowship of other days; however we regretted that the illness of Pastor Surratt afforded us the occasion for being there. We found him in bed, nursing a case of "flu." The attendance was small at each service, owing in part, we presume, to sickness among the members. The outlook for the work seems encouraging. The people are pleased with their pastor, and he is winning his way to the hearts of his people. We believe that the Winston church is starting on a year of happiness and progress.

Trustee Meeting

Dec. 27. We were at High Point College, in a meeting of the college trustees and the Conference Board of Education. The meeting was called for the purpose of financing the college. Mr. George T. Penny, the chairman of the Finance Committee, outlined a scheme by which it appears the indebtedness on the college can be paid, and an adequate endowment fund provided. Of course the success of this scheme depends upon how well our people respond to it. We are amply able to do it, if we are only willing. This money to provide for the indebtedness is to be raised during the month of January. We are therefore calling upon our people to do two things: First, pray every day during this month for God's help in this undertaking. Pray publicly; pray privately. Pray! Second, support this scheme. If our people will join the Finance Committee in this undertaking, the thing will be done and the college will go forward in increasing usefulness.

North Davidson

Jan. 30, Sunday. We were glad to be with Greer's Chapel, the newest church on this charge, on this date. This church is located a few miles south of Lexington on No. 10 highway. The immediate location is well chosen, and we were told that a large scope of surrounding territory will be served by the church. The building is ample in size, and well constructed, with several Sunday school rooms in the rear. The membership is not large but united and progressive. In due time they will no doubt beautify the grounds, put an appropriate marker on the highway, and make this an attractive spot for the community and for the thousands of travelers that pass over this much-traveled road.

The occasion of our visit was the cornerstone laying of the church. We preached at 11 a. m. and the cornerstone was set with appropriate service at 2 p. m. Bro. N. G. Bethea was present, and assisted in the service. Bro. Troxler, the pastor, is popular, and is proving a wise and progressive leader for this new church. We hope to visit the other churches of the charge later in the year.

Gratitude Gift

Our banker is calling upon us to pay the $2,400 loan that we secured last May to make up our full allotment of $12,000 Gratitude Gift. We have no way of paying this except by collecting from the various charges the amounts apportioned by the conference for this purpose. The New Century Service Commission is, therefore, calling upon every pastor, by special letter, to present this matter to their respective congregations, and to receive the offerings of the people for this purpose. The allotment for each charge was published in the HERALD of November 1. It is very important that this matter be attended to now. Please let no charge fail us in this. Let the amount received go forward promptly to Rev. George R. Brown, Treasurer, Reidsville, N. C. Thank you! Thank you!

Our Goals

We are publishing our goals again this week for the purpose of revision, and also to get them more fully before the conference. Owing to the fact that the special day for young people is a new order with us, it was overlooked in our list of "Special Days." We gladly add it to the list in this revision. Also, we inadvertently omitted "Makers for Our Churches." This we deem important, and we add it to the revised list. We would like to have these goals constructively criticised; and if they are found worthy, we invoke the hearty support of all conference forces and agencies in making them real.

Optimism

Let us enter the new year with it, brethren, and keep it to the front for these remaining ten months. There will, of course, be dark valleys through which we must go, and hills of difficulty that we must climb, but after all, there will be more bright days than dark ones, and more smooth roads than rough ones. Whatever may be the conditions ahead, we will meet them more bravely and successfully if we maintain a spirit of optimism. God is with us, and in the confidence of that fact let us hopefully and enthusiastically face the tasks of the new year.

RELATIVE TO CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

In speaking the other day in reference to the punishment of murderers, a gentleman of high Christian character remarked, upon being questioned, "Of course, we believe in capital punishment for two reasons: that it is the divine enactment and that we are tender-hearted and merciful men." The law, as laid down in the covenant with Noah, is: "Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed, for in the image of God made he man." It is not a light offense to slay a human being in personal anger or revenge as murderers do. Too many excuses are made for this crime, and a most insidious plea is that of "temporary insanity," by which is generally meant that one becomes so angry that he does not control himself. The man who does not control his passions is too dangerous a person to be permitted to live on and commit continued crimes against the lives of innocent persons who become his victims. The ill-founded sentimentality which refuses to enforce the law, human and divine, against guilty murders, is not tender-heartedness nor kindness. The judge and jury who punish murderers according to the law, giving them proper time for repentance and preparation for death, are the kind and tender-hearted ones, for they are taking the course which not only is just and right, but which will result in deterring others from becoming criminals and taking the lives of innocent men and women and children. A good deal is said about the frequency of terrible crimes these days. The failure to punish crime, swiftly and certainly, is responsible for much of this, undoubtedly, and the sooner that the machinery in our courts works in accord with the divine law for such cases, the safer will be the lives of people in general.—The Presbyterian, of Philadelphia.

WHY DENY IT?

Deny the Virgin Birth of Jesus? What for? Why does a fellow want to deny it? He cannot know it is not true. The denial is therefore born of a desire. Such a desire is a mean thing. It is dangerous to carry in your system, for it multiplies. If the Virgin Birth is a lie, we have the incongruous spectacle—pardon the big words—of a lie being beneficent through nearly twenty centuries.—Selected.

OUR STORY PAGE

SAKANKU'S CHRISTMAS

Nothing but snow, miles and miles of it, rolling away as far as the eye could reach! Soft and fluffy as a kitten was this quilt of snow, but let a little breeze come from the northwest—the kitten would unsheath its claws.

The house with the red roof was perched jauntily now on the top of a little knoll; smoke puffed up from the sturdy chimney, then spiraled slowly toward the ground. There was a woman's face at one window of this house, a face that seemed to reflect the apathy of the snow outside. Only the eyes were restless, and they were feverish with too much looking at the maddening monotony of white.

In response to an impatient tug at her skirts, the woman turned and gazed unseeing at the little curly-headed boy who had been trying to get her attention.

"I'ze lonesome, Muzzer, when you look out of the window all the time. Tell baby about Santa Claus."

Santa Claus indeed! The woman's mouth was bitter. So this was the day before Christmas, and this was the place where she was to pass a very merry Christmas!

The outside door opened with a bang; a chill draft swept along the floor, making the little boy shiver and draw close to his mother. There was a bumping of sticks falling into the wood-box, and a stamping of feet. A big man came to the door of the sitting-room, blowing on his fingers.

"Some cold! I'll bet dollars to doughnuts there's a storm brewing. I can feel it. Where's that extra pail? It isn't any fun hunting for a well even in your own door-yard in a North Dakota blizzard—"

He stopped abruptly at the look on the woman's face.

"Why, Etta, what's the matter?"

"Oh, everything's the matter. I suppose we'll be snowed in here for three or four days with no company but our thoughts, and mine aren't especially good company for anybody."

There was a look of pain on the man's face. He spoke slowly.

"We have each other and the baby, honey; that's something to be thankful for."

"Thankful!" The woman turned on him. "I suppose you expect me to be thankful that I have no neighbors for miles and miles, that I haven't seen a white woman for months. As for those stupid, dirty Indians, they are worse than nothing! Between them and this miserable prairie, I think I shall go crazy!"

"If you could only see those 'stupid Indians,' as you call them, in a different light, Etta; they are not really so ignorant as you think them. I—"

"Oh, yes," his wife broke in wearily, "I know you're trying to teach them, but what's the use of it all. They will never learn anything, and why should you waste your time and energy on a parcel of thankless half-breeds? Tomorrow is Christmas, and here we are! This is surely the last place on earth that God made and we are the fools that he put here!"

She turned away from him and looked out of the window where little flurries of snow were springing suddenly from the ground in curious spiral motions. The man started forward, then checked himself at a sound from the other room. The woman looked up at the clock and shrugged her shoulders. Little Harold ran to the kitchen door and lifted the knob. It turned, and the shambling figure of an Indian appeared.

"Saku, Saku," cried the boy, clapping his hands and dancing around the visitor, who was now smiling and talking broken English to the child.

"Harold," came his mother's warning voice, "come here right away, please."

Sakanku, or "Saku," as the child called him, stretched out his hands to Mr. Rees, who had come near to welcome him.

"Howdy, howdy," came his guttural English. He drew a chair to the fire like one who felt himself at home, and held his chilled fingers close to the stove. Two long, greasy braids of hair fell over the shoulders of a coat that was much too small for him. Around his waist was a plaid-colored cash, knotted fantastically at one side. The bottoms of his trousers and the tops of his moccasins did not meet. With the laying aside of his blanket and the putting on of white man's attire, Sakanku had laid aside dignity and picturesqueness.

Mr. Rees looked at his watch and then went into the sitting room.

"Isn't it nearly time for supper, Etta?"

"Probably," came his wife's reply. "I never knew an Indian to visit us when it wasn't time for a meal. I am tired of feeding them and certainly don't enjoy eating at the same table with them."

"Sh—not so loud, please!" Her husband looked back nervously at Sakanku, but the Indian was still bent over the fire.

Mrs. Rees lowered her voice a little. "I can't help it if he does hear. Even an Indian ought to have the decency to time his calls so that they won't always fall at meal-time."

She made no move, and her husband, after a minute, went back to the kitchen. He pulled a table from the wall and placed a cloth upon it, then went to the cellar-way, brought out a loaf of bread, a big piece of roast pork, cold potatoes and one of the cakes his wife had baked the day before. These things he put on the table, the loaf of bread and the knife on a plate in the center. Then he called to the Indian.

"Come on, Sakanku, let's eat."

The Indian needed no second invitation. He drew his chair up to the table, then glanced toward the other room. He was very fond of the teacher's little boy. Mr. Rees stammered and grew red as he tried to explain the absence of his wife and son from the table. He knew Sakanku's inborn pride.

The room grew darker, and a crowd of tumbling snowflakes scurried past the window, coming faster and faster every minute. Under the chill breath of the rising wind little fingers of the frost began to trace dainty patterns on the glass. Mr. Rees rose to pile wood in the stove, then glanced apprehensively out of doors. He turned to the Indian.

"You can't go home tonight, Sakanku. You live too far. We can put up all right, so don't worry about that."

He took the cap from the hand of the Indian, who had risen and was about to leave. Mrs. Rees beckoned him from the other room, and he stepped in there.

"Are you crazy, Ralph?" was his wife's question. "It's bad enough to have to feed them, but as for keeping this fellow over night, it's absurd. Let him go home the way he came."

"But he walked, Etta."

"I can't help it if he did; he shouldn't have come so far on a day like this. But to invite him to stay all night—really, I can't imagine what you are thinking of."

Her husband's face grew stern. "I'm thinking of that Indian's having to face this rising storm for three miles. It would be absolutely criminal to turn any one away on a day like this. Besides, Etta," and his face softened, "this is Christmas Eve."

"Very well," his wife answered, "you may do as you please. But I don't want my clean bed-clothes soiled. He'll have to sleep on the kitchen floor; there are some horse-blankets in the shed." Mr. Rees fixed up a rude sort of bed on the floor, with apologies to Sakanku for its hardness.

A few hours later on this Christmas Eve, all seemed quiet; the teacher and his wife asleep in their feather-bed, and the Indian resting on the kitchen floor. But in the baby's crib by the side of the big bed a little figure turned and gasped—and turned again. The breath grew rasping, there was a choking cough. Mrs. Rees awoke with a start. Again came the harsh sound from the crib. She called her husband in a voice tense with fear.

"Ralph, Ralph, wake up! Something is the matter with the baby!"

With a bound the man was on his feet, shivering as he touched the icy floor. He lighted the lamp on a nearby table, and held it over the crib. Little Harold's face was flushed and his eyes glazed.

"My God, Etta, it's croup!" he cried, and then, "listen to that storm outside. What a night for the little fellow to be sick!"

There was a steady shriek to the northwest wind. A howling blizzard raged about them, throwing itself against the house as if infuriated that there should be such an obstacle in its path. The windows shook in their casements, little drifts of snow were piled inside on the sills.

"And Dr. Meriweather lives over a mile away," groaned the man. He began to throw on his clothes and spoke sharply to his wife, who was clinging to him and sobbing.

"For heaven's sake, Etta, do something! Make a fire and get some water hot. Hurry!"

She followed him into the kitchen and tried to restrain him as he took down his heavy coat.

"Ralph, you can never find your way in a storm like this. I can't lose both you and—baby." Her voice broke.

Her husband hesitated. A hoarse whoop came from the bedroom.

"God," cried the man, and breaking away from his wife, he ran toward the outside door.

As he plunged across the threshold a gust of wind swept him back against the side of the house. The wind-demon caught at his lungs and sucked the air out of them, leaving him spent and staggering. Holding his arms in front of him to shield his face against the icy pellets that came like sand shot from a gun, he fought his way desperately into the teeth of the storm. Once it swirled him off his feet and he fell into the soft snow that was piled waist-high about him. A delicious sense of rest came over him, his eyes closed and he sank back. Then a thought stung him to his knees, whipped him to his feet, and on. It seemed hours that he was floundering through the drifts, hurling himself into the storm with all the strength of his will, but fighting hardest against the insidious languor that was seeping into his bones. Suddenly his outstretched hands struck something hard, it felt like wood. Could he have reached the doctor's house already? With the remnants of his strength he groped his way along this hard substance, reached what seemed to be a door, fumbled for the knob and fell into—the light and warmth of his own kitchen. Comprehending dimly that he had gone around in a circle he rose unsteadily and stumbled toward the door again. But another figure stood in his way, a figure with shabby coat and gaily-colored belt. He had forgotten Sakanku.

The Indian took him by the shoulders, turned him away from the door and led him to a chair, saying quietly, "I go, you stay with little papoose."

The man shook his head and tried to struggle to his feet, but the Indian held him back.

"Yes, I know wind. I know way. You kind to me, I do my best for little baby." The moccasined feet slipped away before Mr. Rees could answer, and the outer door opened again. A gust of wind came rushing through, bearing with it clouds of snow. Warily the man staggered up. Like one in a dream he saw his wife run from the bedroom, heard her scream at sight of him, helped her with the door, and then gasped out his failure. Her cheeks whitened and her hands clinched. At mention of Sakanku she started, the color came to her face, and she looked away from her husband.

A roaring fire gave hot drinks, but nothing seemed able to break the phlegm in the boy's throat. With trembling fingers they placed a lamp in every window of the house, hoping against hope that Sakanku could reach the doctor's. In the little bed the fight grew more desperate; the hands were clinched and eyes unseeing. The little fellow's features were twisted more and more with pain; every breath was an agony. The father paced from the bed to the window, with his breath making a peep-hole through the frost. But no human eye could see ten feet into the swirling, drifting snow.

Then it was that the woman prayed—and she prayed for the safety of an Indian whom she had scorned.

Now the breath was not coming so often, the little throat was weakening with the struggle. The mother lifted the child from the crib into her arms, looking down at him with a fierce intensity as if she would by her very will power call him back from the land of shadows.

In desperation the father rushed to the kitchen for more hot water. The doors rattled and shook as the wind tore the cracks at the window-casing; the oil lamp spluttered up into thin flame, then dropped to nothingness. There was a still more violent shaking and pounding at the back of the house. Incredulously Mr. Rees listened, then ran to the outer door and jerked it open. Two snow-covered figures fell inside, and in the dim light from the other room, Mr. Rees saw that one as it struggled to its feet carried a doctor's case.

* * * * *

An hour later Dr. Meriweather straightened up from the bed, smiled at two anxious faces opposite, and spoke a whole sentence for the first time since he had reached the house.

"No need to worry, friends. The little shaver will pull through all right."

He wiped his forehead from his chair with an exclamation: "Where is the Indian, the fellow who brought me here? I never could have made it without him, and he was pretty much all in when he got to my place."

The doctor started for the other room, but Mrs. Rees was before him. With a little cry she darted toward a corner of the kitchen where a figure lay sprawled on the floor, braids wet and bedraggled, scarf-ends loose and torn.

"Oh, Sakanku!" she breathed. "Can he be dead? Dear Lord, don't let him die."

Kneeling by his side she began to rub the poor, frost-bitten hands and to loosen the soiled clothing. She turned toward her husband as he approached, and there was an expression on her face that he had never seen there before.

"Ralph, we'll put Sakanku there in our own bed, by baby."

They revived the Indian and put him between soft blankets in the most comfortable bed Sakanku had ever known. Both feet were badly frozen and one side of his face, but with good care he would recover. Throbbing with pain and thoroughly exhausted, Sakanku lay still in his unaccustomed surroundings, but in the look that he gave the little bed beside him there was devotion that no pain could kill.

The dim light of a Christmas morning struggling through the storm found a woman and her husband watching by the bedside of an Indian. On the woman's face was unutterable joy as she gazed at the young child sleeping peacefully near, and in her heart was an age-old but ever-new refrain:

"Peace on earth, good-will to men."

—Margaret Beede, in Presbyterian Advance.

UNFAITHFUL PREACHERS

Some prefer popularity to plain dealing. We love to see a crowd of worldly-minded hearers, rather than "a little flock, a peculiar people zealous of good works." We dare not shake our congregations to purpose, lest our five thousand should, in three years' time, be reduced to a hundred and twenty.

Luther's advice to Melancthon, "So preach that those who do not fall out from their sins may fall out with thee," is more and more unfashionable. Under pretense of drawing our hearers by love, some of us softly rock the cradle of carnal security in which they sleep. For "fear of grieving the dear children of God," we let "buyers and sellers, sheep and oxen," yea, goats and lions, fill "the temple" undisturbed. And because "the bread must not be kept from the hungry children," we let those who are wanton make shameful waste of it, and even allow "dogs," which we should "beware of," and noisy parrots that can speak shibboleth, to do the same. We forget that God's children "are led by His Spirit," who is the "Comforter" Himself; that they are all afraid of being deceived, all "jealous for the Lord of hosts," and therefore prefer a preacher who "searches Jerusalem with candles," and cannot suffer God's house to be made a "den of thieves," to a workman who "whitewashes the noisome sepulchres" he should open, and "daubs over with untempered mortar the bulging walls" he should demolish.

—John Fletcher.

THE LINE OF LEAST RESISTANCE

Some one has said, wisely and wittily, "A river becomes crooked by following the line of least resistance; so does a man." It's a thought worth pondering. No man is worth much who does not have a purpose to which he sticks through thick and thin. The line of least resistance is a rotten line. Honor and glory are for "him that overcometh."—Selected.

SOME SIGNIFICANT "GIVES" OF THE BIBLE

"Jehovah will give strength unto His people."

"He will give thee the desires of thy heart."

"Jehovah will give grace and glory."

"My son, give Me thine heart."

"He shall give His angels charge concerning thee."

"Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, shaken together, running over, shall men give into your bosom."

"But the water that I shall give him shall become in him a well of water springing unto eternal life."

"I give unto them eternal life."

"He shall give you another comforter."

"My peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you."

"It is more blessed to give than to receive."

"He spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not also with Him freely give us all things?"

"God loveth a cheerful giver."

"But if any of you lacketh wisdom, let him ask of God, who giveth to all liberally and unbraideth not; and it shall be given him."

WHAT TO GIVE THEM

Give to the children the Bible,
Give them the message of old;
Give them the full revelation,
All that God's servants have told.

Teach them the story of Eden;
With the Creator begin;
Tell of the garden of beauty
Marred by the entrance of sin.

Lead them past ages of dimness
On to the clear, shining light;
Tell how God constantly kindled
Light in the darkness of night.

Further and further, then, bring them,
Till, at the day spring of love,
Angels and shepherds are hailing
God's wondrous Gift from above.

Tell how His people have used it,
Spreading its message abroad,
Teaching each new generation,
Leading the children to God.

THE PRIVILEGES OF PRAYER

A life of unceasing prayer is a possibility, a duty, a privilege, and a security. Search the Scriptures that you may be intelligently prayerful. Be prayerful that you may intelligently search the Scriptures. Be prayerful and search the Scriptures that you may richly live the Christian life. Without prayer, life, like the cathedral window viewed from the outside, is dull and unpleasing; with prayer, life is like the stained window viewed from within—full of divine beauty and splendor. Wherefore, my beloved, pray without ceasing, and you cannot do other than in everything give thanks.—Selected.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Democrat Charge, Mountain Valley Church.

—The Mountain Valley Sunday school has recently been organized. There is an attendance of about forty or forty-five. The superintendent is Mr. Nelson Brigman. The secretary and treasurer is Mr. Carlos Dillingham.

The people of the Mountain Valley section have taken a great interest in the Sunday school and church work.

A Christmas program was given December 24. The pageant was entitled "Joy For All." After this, Santa Claus distributed the gifts.

The monthly sermon is given by the pastor, Rev. H. W. Bell.

HARRIET L. ALLEN.

Barnardsville, N. C.

Rehoboth, Creswell Circuit.—I am mighty sorry that my report is so late, but have been so busy with examinations at school.

Preaching was held at Rehoboth church December 9. Mr. Hethcox rendered a fine sermon.

Christian Endeavor was held at Rehoboth church December 9. A fine program was given.

A quiet marriage was solemnized Tuesday afternoon, December 11 at 4 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Helen Tarkington when Miss Lillian Elizabeth Halsey became the bride of Mr. Denver Parker Tarkington. His pastor, Rev. R. L. Hethcox, performed the ceremony. When Mr. Denver Parker Tarkington was married at the home of his grandmother, he was standing on the very spot that Rev. Mr. Swain, president, christened him when he was a baby.

Mr. Tarkington is the son of Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Tarkington. Miss Halsey is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Halsey. They were serenaded Tuesday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Tarkington will be given a shower Monday night, December 31.

Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Tarkington and Miss Norma Tarkington spent Sunday, December 23, with Mrs. J. W. Halsey.

We are sorry that Mrs. W. T. Totten is ill. We hope for her a speedy recovery.

NORMA L. TARKINGTON.

Mt. Pleasant Charge.—We wish to report some items from this charge. First, a pounding, not a sudden, all at once pounding, but stretched out, all along pounding. The persons whose names follow have helped us very much in material things: Mrs. Sam Sheppard, Mrs. Thomas Smith, Mrs. R. C. Causey, Mrs. L. L. Bowman, Mrs. L. B. Clapp, Mrs. George Sheppard, Mrs. W. L. Spoon, Mrs. J. E. Stafford, Mrs. C. A. Coley, Miss Georgia Amick, Mrs. J. T. Shoffner, Mrs. W. G. Causey.

We have given the ladies all the credit for the help we have received, but the men figured in it all. Those whose names we have given are not all. We will give others later. We hope to be able to give some items from this circuit every week. This, perhaps, will be the longest report we will make.

Some of our people are real sick at this writing. Mr. Peter Garrett, heart trouble; Mr. John Lineberry, a complication of troubles; Mr. Dec. Coley, pneumonia; Sister Hettie Amick, a complication of troubles; Mrs. J. T. Shoffner, pleurisy, and Mr. John Swing and family, "flu." We hope a speedy recovery for all these brethren and sisters.

G. F. MILLAWAY.

Liberty, N. C., Rt. 2.

High Point.—On December 23rd at 11 o'clock, the pastor, Rev. Roy I. Farmer, delivered a beautiful and eloquent Christmas sermon on the subject, "God Revealed in the Gift of Christ," from that matchless text which Martin Luther called the miniature Bible, John 3:16: "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life." At this service, Mr. Clarence Schultheiss sang a lovely solo, and the choir rendered the anthem by Shelley, "Christmas."

At the hour for evening worship the "White Gifts for the King," a beautiful and impressive service, was presented by the Sunday school. The significance of the "White Gift" is to teach children and young people that it is more blessed to give to others than to receive, and the purity and sincerity of heart with which these gifts are presented. The different department of the Sabbath school from the tiny tots of the Cradle Roll and Beginners Department to the Baraca class and Aunt Lizzie Welch class brought gifts of money, food, clothing, etc., and presented them on the pulpit. These were donated to the Public Welfare Board and the Salvation Army, and amounted to the value of $125. Mrs. W. C. Hammond, secretary of the Board of Public Welfare, and Ensign O'Brien, of the Salvation Army have expressed much appreciation of these donations for the needy ones of our city.

On last Sunday morning, Rev. Mr. Farmer delivered an earnest and helpful New Year message on the topic, "The Land of Untrodden Paths." Again at the evening service a beautiful message on "Spiritual Expansion" was brought by the pastor. He said that no beautiful life ever just happens, but is built up by slow degrees from trials, sorrows, and hard experiences.

"Heaven is not reached by a single bound;
But from the lowly earth to the vaulted skies
We climb the ladder round by round."

At this service Clarence Schultheiss sang a lovely solo, "There Were Shepherds," by Vincent.

We are delighted to report the following accessions to our membership: Mrs. C. R. Hinshaw, wife of Professor Hinshaw of High Point College faculty; Mrs. A. G. Dixon, Miss Vista Dixon, Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Dixon and their two sons. These are all splendid people. Mrs. Hinshaw coming to us from the M. E. Church, South, and all the Dixons, who are Methodist Protestant by birth and training, were transferred from Reidsville and elsewhere. We are much pleased to extend cordial greetings to these new members.

The topic at the Monday evening C. E. service, the last of the old year, was led by Miss Marjorie Welborn on "Learnign From Experience."

Rev. Mr. Farmer is making an effort to obtain 100 signers to a resolution to attend mid-week prayer services at least twice a month, and thus increase the attendance at these Wednesday evening meetings.

Judge and Mrs. Lewis E. Teague are receiving hearty congratulations from a large circle of friends upon the arrival in their home of a new little daughter, who will bear the name of Dorothy Jeanne.

A Christmas cantata will be rendered by the choir next Sunday evening.

Prof. and Mrs. C. R. Hinshaw and two children went to Gatesville, N. C., to spend the Christmas holidays with Mrs. Hinshaw's mother.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Fogo, of Wellsville, Ohio, were guests of Rev. and Mrs. R. I. Farmer during Christmas week. They are the parents of Mrs. Farmer and were delighted with their visit to the South.

After being closed for three weeks on account of the influenza epidemic, the High Point city schools re-opened yesterday (Monday) morning. High Point College will open its doors again tomorrow, Wednesday, January 2, pupils registering today. Miss Vera Idol, who has been ill for three months, will not be able to take charge of her classes in English, but Arthur Kirkman, Jr., of High Point, who has studied at Oxford University, England, for two years will teach her classes temporarily.

We are sorry to note the illness of a large number of our membership from the flu, among the latest victims being Mrs. S. S. Coe and small daughter, Mary Anne.

Miss Pauline Moore, of Wadesboro, N. C., left for home Tuesday after a visit of a few days to her friend, Miss Lucille Pickens.

Miss Virginia Pickens is substituting as teacher of fifth grade at Ray Street School for Miss Louise Cook, who is suffering from the flu.

Earl Teague, of Durham, spent Christmas Day at home with his folks.

The parsonage trustees have purchased a lot on Parkway, and will soon begin the erection of a new parsonage.

Here's wishing to Editor McCulloch and his staff and all readers and contributors to the Herald a happy New Year with great peace and contentment along the untried paths of 1929.

"Ring out false pride in place and blood,
The civic slander and the spite;
Ring in the love of truth and right,
Ring in the common love of good.

Ring out old shapes of foul disease;
Ring out the narrowing lust of gold;
Ring out the thousand wars of old,
Ring in the thousand years of peace.

Ring in the valiant man and free,
The larger heart, the kindlier hand;
Ring out the darkness of the land,
Ring in the Christ that is to be."

Mt. Lebanon, Randleman Charge.—Rev. T. A. Williams and family have been warmly received by the people here. We hope that their stay with us may be very pleasant indeed and that much good may be done.

The first quarterly conference was held at New Salem church on Saturday afternoon, December 15th, with all churches represented.

January 3, 1929

The following Sunday evening the first class meeting of the year was held. While the attendance was not large, we feel that it was a good meeting.

All appointments have been filled to date and our pastor has given us some splendid sermons. The attendance at both church and Sunday school has been very fine.

On Sunday, December 30th, the Sunday school officers for the year were elected. They are: Superintendent, E. F. Jarrett; assistant superintendent, W. D. Hannon; secretary, Miss Johnnie Van Werry; treasurer, J. J. Lambe; pianist, Miss Ruth White.

Since practically all these were in office last year they are already on the job. We are looking forward to a bigger and better Sunday school.

REPORTER.

Burlington, First Church.—This parson has not broken into print since the adjournment of conference. There are two reasons for this. First, an efficient reporter in the person of Brother L. A. Braxton. Second, I have been too busy with what I consider more important matters to take time to write.

I have, as usual, been putting in seven days of the week and many times far into the nights in kingdom service. There has been no interruption of the work such as is sometimes incident to a change of pastors. If there was any sentiment before or at our last conference in favor of a change it did not reach our ears, though there might have been, so I went to conference and returned happy in the belief that in some degree at least my services had been satisfactory. Our reception by the church has consisted of what appeared to be larger congregations than formerly until the epidemic of flu came our way.

Many of our people have been ill and many of them are now ill, though only two deaths have occurred among our membership this conference year. The first one was Brother Charles Sharpe, who was buried conference Sunday, and the other was Brother G. A. Cartner, whose obituary appeared in last week's Herald. Most of our sick members are well on the way to recovery now. The parsonage has had its share of patients. Our two boys are now sick, but not seriously so, we hope.

I have spent one Sunday away from my charge in the interest of the college, preached an extra sermon three Sundays, made more than one hundred and fifty calls, mailed out more than a hundred letters in the interest of church work, besides looking after the many other things that so readily consume a pastor's time in so large a parish as this.

Evidences of Christmas are still seen around the parsonage. Our friends of former pastorates, together with a large number in Burlington, have our sincere thanks for their tokens of good will in the form of Christmas greeting cards and other more substantial gifts. We wish we could reciprocate in kind, but since time and circumstances do not permit that, we take this means of expressing our appreciation to those who read this article for their kind remembrances.

An unusual sight was observed in the pastor's poultry yard the day before Christmas. Two fine turkey gobblers were proudly strutting about. (Say it softly, for I recall another turkey story reported in the Herald a short while ago). We thank Brother and Sister er of St. Luke. It is sad to think "There was no room in the inn for the Christ-child." Sadder to think that even today so many people in places find no room, no time for Jesus. Room and time for worldly things, but no time for the Savior of the world. As he related, a group of men or women may discuss business, politics, farming, or social affairs, but so seldom do they discuss what should be most important in their lives—Christ, who died on the cross of Calvary for the sins of the world. So this, the beginning of a new year, let's make room and take time for Christ in our daily lives; live for Him each day; take time to pray and thank God every day. We can all do our part and give to Him our hearts.

We were glad to have present at the service Sunday the guests of Miss Cooke, Misses Blanche Stafford, student of Guilford College, Lula Beeson, Blanche Ingram and Treva Beeson, seniors of High Point College.

Our first quarterly conference will be held at Kernersville church Saturday evening, January 5.

Wishing all a happy and prosperous New Year.
REPORTER.

Draper.—A happy New Year to all! Let's try to do more in the year of 1929 for our God than we did in the year just going out. May we all be found in unity and love. Let's try to help someone whose burdens are harder than ours. Let's see if we can't stop so much sin in every town and city.

We held a union meeting at our church on Sunday night, December 30. Rev. Mr. Hollowell, of the Baptist church, and Rev. Mr. Vestal, of the M. E. church, spoke. Songs were sung by the choirs of all the churches. We are hoping much good will be done by having these services.

Rev. J. S. Riddle preached at the 11 o'clock services Sunday morning, December 30. We enjoyed his preaching and some of our members missed a treat by not being at services yesterday.

LOUIS B. CRAIG, Reporter.

Saxapahaw Charge.—In spite of the influenza epidemic and other causes of much sickness, we are still holding our interest in our church work. We are having good attendance for both preaching and Sunday school. We know many of our people are among the blessed, because they show by their church attendance that they hunger and thirst after righteousness. Our people are very responsive to any cause they believe to be for the advancement of God's kingdom.

The pastor and family wish to thank the various churches and individuals for the many nice and useful gifts they have received during Christmas as well as all through the past year. If a pastor suffers for something to eat on Saxapahaw charge it is because he does not visit his people and give them the opportunity to supply his pantry. Our people are very generous as well as benevolent, and we are glad that there are characteristics of Christ Himself. May God's blessings be upon them during the year 1929.

O. C. LOY, Pastor.

Fairview-Glen Raven.—Notwithstanding the fact that we had two cases of flu in our home during the Christmas holidays, thus necessitating the writer's presence at home, keeping house and nursing the sick, ours was an unusually good Christmas. Mr. C. C. Garrison, Mr. Jesse Vaughn and Glen Raven Mills Company each gave us a ham. Mr. Garrison also gave the writer a nice tie. Glen Raven Baraca class gave us a pair of dress gloves, while Fairview favored us with a pair of excellent driving gloves. Mrs. Yancey Tickle, one bag of flour, and Mrs. Herbin Thompson, one fine hen. Despite the fact that the flu has been on a rampage among our flock, we are being amply take care of.

Regular Christmas services were held at both churches. A good service was held at each place. While the writer was prohibited from attending either service, we were not left out by any means. Many kindnesses have been shown us all along the way. For all these endearing remembrances we are exceedingly grateful.

Wm. H. NEESE.

Burlington, N. C., Route 4.

Concord.—Our Christmas exercises were held on Christmas Eve with a tree and treat for the Sunday school.

Our pastor brought a splendid message at the morning hour Sunday on "The Cumbered Life." We were very glad to have Rev. J. M. Morgan, of Fallston, who is visiting his mother here, worship with us in this service. Mr. Morgan filled the pulpit at the evening hour and preached a helpful sermon from the text, "I am come to seek and to save that which was lost." We are always glad to have Mr. Morgan come home. A beautiful duet, "Somebody Cares," was rendered at this service by Misses Mildred and Eula Burris.

Our Wednesday night prayer services are getting more interesting and helpful all the time. The attendance continues good, and it is our pastor's desire to make them count for as much as the Sunday services.

Rev. and Mrs. Lawrence Little, of Durham, spent the holidays here with Mr. Little's mother. Several of our young people who have been away teaching and in college were home for the holidays.

We are very sorry to lose Mrs. H. C. Little, who moved to Durham to make her home with her son, Rev. Lawrence Little.

Several of our people are sick at this time. Mrs. J. M. Troutman is very ill and little hope is held for her recovery.

MRS. D. A. McLAURIN.

THE NEW YEAR

"A good New Year, with many blessings in it!"

Once more go forth the kindly wish and word.

A good New Year! and may we all begin it With hearts by noble thought and purpose stirred.

A good New Year! Oh let us all begin it With cheerful faces turning to the light!
A good New Year, which will have blessings in it

If we but persevere and do aright.

—E. Matheson.

—J. D. Williams, Jr., is receiving the congratulations of his friends. He came home to visit his parents, bringing his bride with him. He is taking a medical course in Philadelphia. His wife is a nurse and will be a real helpmeet to him.

1929

(President Taylor's New Year's Letter)

Dear Brother:

So often the letters that you receive from us are letters that call your attention to some pressing need, and letters that ask you to do something. We suspect that this is your feeling the moment the postman puts our letters into your hands.

Well, of necessity it must be so; but for once, here is a surprise for you. We are not writing this time to ask you to do something, but simply to convey to you our New Year Greeting.

It is our good fortune now to enter upon a new allotment of time. What it has in store for us is unrevealed. We know, however, that it will be a year of opportunity, problems, responsibilities, and surprises. The unexpected is sure to happen. It will be a year, also, we trust, of happiness, peace and progress.

Let us breathe a prayer, each one of us just now, before we lay this letter down, that we may all be kept very close to the purposes of Heaven during the year, and that Heaven may be kept very close to us.

With affectionate concern for whatever will minister to your honor, peace, and success during 1929, I am,

Fraternally yours,

S. W. TAYLOR.

AN EFFICIENT BURGLAR-ALARM

In South Dakota there is a bank cashier with a taste for chemistry who no longer lies awake at night worrying lest his bank be robbed. He has added to his protective devices an attachment to his safe that is described in Technical Notes.

Some years ago he conceived the idea that if a bottle of some strong chemical were placed between the outer and inner doors of the vault, it would almost inevitably be broken by burglars attempting to gain entrance to the safe, and the fumes of the chemical would retard the work of safe-breakers, or drive them away.

A quart bottle of formaldehyde was placed as a silent night watchman between the doors of the vault.

For five years nothing happened. Then, early in November, 1910, the test came. Professional cracksmen entered the town, and used two charges of nitroglycerine on the safe. The first one did little damage, but the second wrecked both the outer and inner doors, and of course shattered the bottle of formaldehyde. The burglars did not wait to wreck the inner safe. Choking and gasping, with tears streaming from their eyes, they scrambled out of the window by which they had entered, and left tracks down the peaceful country highway that fairly sizzled.

For days after the explosion the fumes of formaldehyde were so strong that a man could not breathe in the vault.—C. E. World.

—Bro. James Weatherly, of Reidsville, has been employed by Guilford county commissioners to superintend the road work of the county; a responsible position, but Bro. Weatherly may be expected to measure up to it.

We are broadcasting with this report a happy New Year to all the readers of the Herald.

We are glad to note that the church was not forgotten during the Christmas festivities, as this report shows. A Christmas offering ought to have been taken in each church and sent immediately to your treasurer. Possibly this was done and we will be kept busy writing receipts for a week or more.

At the end of the first quarter we shall publish a detailed report of all receipts and disbursements. If you want the name of your charge to appear in this report, send us a check.

If we want our churches to succeed, they must be run according to good business methods. Too many of them are run in a slipshod, hit-and-miss, grab-and-run way, and as a result they are always "hard up," and never pay up. Brethren, get a lot of religion in your system, and then put a lot of system in your religion and watch it work.

There are no charges for the suggestions "tucked in" this Corner. They are penalties imposed upon the members of the conference for making us treasurer. To be continued.

GEO. R. BROWN, Treasurer.

FROM OKLAHOMA

I read a piece that Brother George Laughlin wrote about the camp meeting at Chapel Hill in Davidson County a long time ago. He said if there was anyone living that was at that meeting he would like to know. My mother was reared close to Chapel Hill church. Isaac Loflin and Uncle Jackson Loflin had tents there at that meeting. I was not grown, but I was at that meeting. It was a great meeting. Brother Jackson Laughlin, Brother Henry Lewallen and Brother Lowe were there and other preachers. I was converted at that meeting. Brother Laughlin told the Christians to pray for the sinners before preaching at 3 o'clock. Those that were not praying were shouting.

I never saw as big a revival. I have been there several times at meetings. I would love to be there one more time at meeting. I have kind people living there, Laughlins and Surrats, or they were living there.

My husband has heart trouble. I ask the prayers of all the Christians that he may get well.

God bless you all is my prayer.

CERTIFICATE OF CHURCH MEMBERSHIP

M a member of Methodist Protestant Church of the Charge, North Carolina Conference, desiring to withdraw from this church is entitled to this certificate of good standing.

This certificate is not valid after six months from date and the person holding same is amenable to the above-named church until this certificate has been deposited elsewhere. (See Methodist Protestant Discipline, Page 74, paragraph 10).

The pastor receiving this certificate is kindly requested to immediately notify the undersigned so that proper record entries may be made.

..... Pastor.
Address
Date

Dear (Brother) (Sister): We regret very much that you are about to withdraw from our church and it is most important that you should, as early as possible, unite yourself to some other church. A church of our own is, of course, recommended, but if such is not to be your future church home, seek such church relations as will promote your highest spiritual good. It is the most sincere desire of your pastor that you may constantly enjoy the favor of God; that your faith and diligence may increase and that you may be kept, by the power of God, blameless unto eternal life.

NEW RADIO BIBLE COURSES

The Radio School of the Bible of the Moody Institute is putting three new courses on the air, beginning January 11. The new allocation of WMBI, 277.6 meters, 1080 kilocycles, and a cleared channel, is putting new enthusiasm into the radio ministry of the Institute. Many commendations of the clear reception and extended range are being received.

The new courses are practical and will carry much interest for Bible students. Dr. H. Framer Smith, whose "Word Studies" course was keenly appreciated, will speak on the theme, "Through the Bible, Book by Book," and may be heard each Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. "Outlines of Old Testament History" will be given by Iris Ikeler McCord each Friday at 10:30 A. M. A new course in missions, especially suited to the needs of mission study groups interested in the African field will be presented by Rev. John R. Riebe, who was for six years a missionary in tropical Africa. The subject will be "Studies of Africa," on the air each Wednesday at 3 P. M.

The public is invited to avail itself of the benefits of these addresses. To become a member of the Radio School of the Bible an enrollment fee of $1.00 for each subject should be forwarded to the Chicago address, 153 Institute Place. Examinations are provided and credits allowed on completed courses. The courses will continue from January 11 to April 12.

MY MOTHER

I see you sitting,
Knitting.
Your mind is traveling,
Unraveling.
Glad to be living,
Giving.
Time you are whiling,
Smiling.
Books you like reading,
Heeding.
I hear you laughing,
Chaffing.
Friends are now meeting,
Greeting.
Tea all are quaffing,
Laughing.
Questions you're asking,
Unmasking.
Your voice is charming,
Disarming.
Still you are learning,
Discerning.
You seem so knowing,
Sewing.
Sunshine you're bringing,
Singing.
Friends are now going,
Glowing.
Back to your knitting,
Befitting.
Love is your dwelling,
Impelling.
Silence you're keeping,
Sleeping.
Resting and dreaming,
Seeming.
Time seems so flitting,
Knitting!

—The famous Swing-Johnson "Boulder Dam" bill, which has been debated in Congress for the past six years, has at last become a law. It was signed by President Coolidge on December 21, after it had been passed by the Senate and repassed by the House. The law provides for the greatest project to be undertaken by the Federal Government since the building of the Panama Canal. Before the Boulder Dam project can become effective and work can actually begin, six of the seven States of the Colorado River Basin, including California, must ratify the Colorado River compact. That agreement was drawn up by representatives of the seven States—California, Arizona, Nevada, New Mexico, Colorado, Wyoming, and Utah—at Santa Fe, New Mexico, in 1922. It provides for the distribution of the waters of the Colorado River among these States.

—President Coolidge has increased the tariff duty on onions from one cent to one and a half cents a pound, an increase of 50 per cent. He took that action on the recommendation of the United States Tariff Commission. That body found that onion farmers in the United States were suffering from competition caused by shipments of onions to this country from Spain, Bermuda, Egypt, Chile, Cuba, Mexico, and Argentina.

—The war scare is over. Bolivia and Paraguay have agreed to settle their dispute through the Pan-American Conference on Arbitration and Conciliation, which is now meeting in Washington, D. C.

—Rev. J. D. Williams was kept from his pulpit last Sunday by illness. A returned missionary from India preached for him. Bro. Williams had the flu, but is better now, while Mrs. Williams is taking her turn with the malady.

—Miss Margaret Hartsell, daughter of Dr. W. K. Hartsell, is the bride of Mr. Lindsay Bryan Kester, of Winston. Miss Hartsell went to Winston as a teacher a year or more ago, and this is one of the consequences. The marriage took place in the home in Greensboro on December 28, 1928, Rev. R. J. Tamblyn officiating. December 28 was Friday, which indicates an absence of superstition.

—Rev. R. J. Tamblyn and wife are enjoying a visit from his father and mother and sister, who live in Michigan, where the Rev. Samuel Tamblyn is pastor of a Methodist Protestant church in Britton. The pleasure of their visit was somewhat marred by an attack of flu which sent the father and mother to bed on their arrival. They are much improved now and hope to be out in a day or two. Rev. Samuel Tamblyn was a schoolmate of the editor of the Herald back in college days, and it was a special pleasure to us to see his face again, though much changed by the marks of time.

—Nearly 900 jails and prisons, scattered throughout thirty states and five provinces of Canada, received a Christmas package of Moody Colportage Library books entitled "Good Tidings," emphasizing the Christmas message, together with a supply of the little "Pocket Treasury," consisting of selected Scripture portions, helps, and gospel songs. This large shipment, sent in one day, for about 15,000 prisoners, was made possible by the Missionary Book Funds, administered by the Bible Institute Colportage Association of Chicago, founded by D. L. Moody in 1894.

—President-elect Hoover will soon be back in the United States. Instead of making stops in Mexico and Cuba, as he had first planned, he decided to go direct to Washington, D. C., from Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. The battleship, Utah, on which the Hoover party is traveling, is expected to reach Hampton Roads, Va., next Sunday, January 6. Mr. Hoover will leave the ship there and go by train direct to Washington. He plans to be in the national capital a week or ten days, holding conferences and making plans for his inauguration on March 4. Then he will go to Miami, Fla., to remain until a few days before his inauguration.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Gurley

Mrs. Loucinda Gurley, aged 53 years, passed away December 21st, 1928, in her home near Chase City, Va. Mrs. Gurley was born and reared in Cleveland County, N. C., and was converted and joined Mt. Moriah M. P. Church, Fallston Charge, at about 12 years of age. Mrs. Gurley's name was Lowry before her marriage. About 28 years ago she was married to Mr. J. F. Gurley. To this union were born seven children, six of whom are living. Two of these are married and have homes of their own near Chase City, Va., and the other four are still at home with their father. She also leaves behind her, husband, three brothers, and one sister, and four grandchildren, and a host of friends, as she was loved and held in high esteem by all who knew her.

About 13 years ago she and her husband moved with their family of children from North Carolina and located near Chase City, Va. There was then no M. P. church near Chase City. These dear people longed for a church home of their liking and Sister Gurley and her husband had much to do with the building of our little M. P. church near Chase City.

She was a very good woman and loved her church and home. Her children say of her: "We never knew mama to do anything wrong or unbecoming to a Christian. She always tried to teach us that which was right." This saying by her own children who knew her best counts so much.

Her home was always open to her pastor. We were in her home quite a number of times during 1928 and she received us very kindly, which we appreciated and enjoyed so much.

We miss her at the church, for she was always there and gave the pastor a hearty response by giving good attention. Her place will be hard to fill in home and church.

Her body was laid to rest near the little M. P. church, December 23rd, in the parcel of land given the church by a friend for a burying grounds. Sister Gurley was the first one to be buried there. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Hicks, of Chase City, in the absence of the pastor. Her grave was completely covered with beautiful flowers given by friends as a token of the high esteem they had for her. Her life was a beautiful life, well lived. We would say to the bereaved family that you can do no greater honor to the sweet life and memory of mother than to strive to be like her.

J. B. O'BRIANT.

Nicholson

Theophilus Phillips Nicholson departed this life December 24th, 1928. He was 68 years, three months and 25 days old. He is survived by his wife, two daughters and one son. Two of his children have preceded him to the spirit world. For many years he was a leading member of Mt. Hermon church. On one occasion he represented Mt. Hermon Charge in the N. C. Conference. In every way he gave his best to his church and home and community. His passing will be remembered and regretted not only by his loved ones, but the church and the community. The funeral was conducted by the writer in Mount Hermon church, assisted by Revs. G. W. Holmes, J. Elwood Carroll and H. L. Isley, and his body was laid to rest in Mount Hermon cemetery.

May the Father's blessing rest upon the widow and the children.

Rev. Samuel Tamblyn

He is not dead, and we are not going to lay a flower on his grave, but hand him a bouquet. Not that he is not appreciated, for he is, highly appreciated by those who know him. But you do not know him and I think it will do you good to know some parts of his life.

He was born and reared in England and was fortunate in having a pious mother who trained him in the ways of religion. He says he cannot remember the time when he did not believe in God and in Jesus Christ as the world's Saviour. In early life he was converted and joined the Wesleyan Methodist Church. In young manhood he was licensed to preach as a local preacher in that church and preached in that capacity for three or four years. The Wesleyan plan of work for local preachers is interesting. A circuit might have thirty churches and thirty local preachers. The whole would be in charge of two ministers, one of them superintendent and the other assistant superintendent. These ministers would be salaried, but the local preachers would preach without pay. The only thing they would receive would be transportation to church and back and dinner and supper on Sunday. Sometimes the same vehicle would transport three young preachers, dropping them off at their respective churches and coming back for them after the night service. As the churches were miles apart, it would sometimes be after midnight before the last one was returned to his home. These local preachers would sometimes meet together in a sort of conference and have their discussions and thus help to keep burning the fire of their zeal. The plan of appointments for the whole circuit was tabulated so as to give each church every-Sunday service and to put each local preacher at a new church each Sunday. Thus a local preacher with only one sermon in his barrel would be equipped for service for many weeks. By the time he had preached his sermon twenty or thirty times he could preach it pretty well. This process gave opportunity for the discovery of what young men had in them the making of real preachers. Such were singled out and urged to go to college or university and prepare themselves for the ministry as a life work.

You will recall that John Wesley in his younger days, feeling that England was sufficiently evangelized, came to America to convert the American Indians. Bro. Tamblyn in his young manhood came to the United States as a missionary after the type of St. Paul. He had no society behind him to pay expenses, but he proposed to pay his own expenses by his manual labor and preach on Sundays. He landed in New York City and was led to a town about twenty miles away by a companion he met on the ship. He immediately attached himself to a Methodist church (not Methodist Protestant, which he did not know about) and went to work as a private member. In the course of time the pastor asked him to lead a young people's meeting. He made the meeting evangelistic and had two converts. Soon after he was informed by the trustees of the church that they did not want him to do that kind of work. That ended his stay in that church. He found the Methodist Protestant church and went to work as he felt impelled. There was at that time a great number of foreigners of different nationalities engaged in public work, constructing an aqueduct for the city of New York. He preached to them on Sundays in outdoor meetings. One Sunday while he was thus engaged he heard guns firing, and bullets whizzed over his head. He did not show signs of fear, but preached on. Later he was relieved to learn that it was only some mischievous boys trying to frighten him. The fact that he was game increased respect for him and better secured for him a hearing. When you learn that all the schooling he had had up to that time was received in three months you will marvel at his zeal.

Fortunately, about that time he came under the influence of that apostle of ministerial education, Rev. J. B. Walker, of the Methodist Protestant church. He recognized Tamblyn's worth and promise, and urged him by all means to go to Adrian College and prepare himself for the work of the ministry in a regular way. Tamblyn had the good sense to take the advice, though he was disappointed in that the Board of Ministerial Education did not have the money to provide the expected aid. Tamblyn found himself confronted by the necessary expenses of life in college with no money to meet them. Did he falter and turn back? Not he. He gave his spare time to doing chores and odd jobs, thus earning a little money. He reduced his living expenses to an irreducible minimum. For a time he lived on 65 cents a week. How did he do it? He boarded himself and lived on oatmeal. He had no stove to cook his oatmeal, but he had steam heat in his room in the college dormitory. He attached a rubber tube to the radiator valve and with it boiled water in a pail and thus cooked his food. There were numbers of people who would have been glad to help him to a more abundant means of living, had they only known, but it was not in him to ask for charity. He became so weak that he fell in a faint, but still he did not give up. So urgent was the need of his service back in New York state that he was called away from college before he completed his course, though he expected to return later. He did not realize that purpose, but he has seen to it that his two sons and daughter have had educational advantages that were denied to him. His older son is pastor of Grace M. P. Church, this city. His younger son has an important railway position in Detroit. His daughter was graduated from Adrian College last June and is now teaching in Hudson, Mich.

Rev. Samuel Tamblyn preached in Grace Church last Sunday night. His sermon touched the heart again and again as he spoke of Faith, Hope, and Charity, "three rounds of the Heavenly Ladder." His reading and his wide experience enrich and enliven his discourse with striking and fitting

IS PROTESTANTISM DECLINING?

GAUS JACKSON SLOSSER

Protestantism has been made the object of a rather interesting and stimulating barrage of articles in leading American periodicals whose charge or implication is that either it is dying or, having championed the principle of universal, individual priesthood, it should now end its life by falling upon its own sword. All these articles do have the merit of being stimulating and interesting, and they have undoubtedly proved to be "excellent copy" in connection with a presidential campaign in which the issue between Catholics and Protestants inevitably came to the front. It is quite probable, now that the election is over, that even the most obtuse have faint suspicion that if Protestantism is dead, it is a very lively corpse. This would seem to be an allowable suspicion even though the religious issue may have played but a small part in bringing about an overwhelming victory and a crushing defeat.

Our considerations of this subject, however, would be very superficial if we were to consider the vote of the American electorate, either for or against a Protestant or a Roman Catholic presidential candidate, as thereby answering the question as to whether or not Protestantism is declining. The whole personalities of the two major candidates were involved in the choice, and not necessarily any particular religious system as such.

Entirely aside from the recent political campaign and the issues that were connected therewith, what may be said about the present state of Protestantism in the world today?

I should prefer not to make any reference to the statistical side of the answer, for no group is more keenly alive than are Protestants as to the inability of figures to tell the whole story. Nevertheless, our study will be one-sided and incomplete if we do not examine the latest official statistics as reported by the churches themselves and as given in the latest official census records. Before stating any figures, it is a patent fact that the Protestant method of counting actual covenanted church members, as over against the Roman Catholic way of reporting constituencies, represents far more exactly the actual number in their communions. At the outset of the World War, the American army apportioned chaplains, Catholic, Protestant, Jewish, etc., on the basis of Roman Catholic claims. When an actual religious census of the army was made, the Protestant chaplain quotas were greatly increased and the Roman Catholic quotas were diminished, although the exact result of that census was never made public by the authorities in charge. We wonder why.

On the basis of the most dependable recent census figures, have we any warrant for concluding that Protestantism is declining? Emphatically not. And this is true even though Protestant pastors, because of the fact that their benevolence quotas and overhead expenses are figured on the basis of membership, have been pruning their membership lists with especial severity since the World War.

The Literary Digest of August 20, 1927, published an article entitled "Churches' Heavy Losses" in which the losses due to these pruning activities and to the new schemes of non-resident membership were set forth. A number of prominent publications had already jumped at hasty conclusions and by editorials and news articles diagnosed what seemed an evident decline in Protestantism. But they were dealing with a one-sided report. The Federal Council, as reported in The Literary Digest of October 8, 1927, hastened to correct the very wrong impressions made by the earlier one-sided statement, pointing out that while there were very great losses, there were greater gains, which more than offset these losses. They showed conclusively that the increase in church membership in the United States had been 9.9 per cent more rapid than the increase in population; and that twenty-five of the leading denominations had increased almost fifty per cent in the last twenty years. These twenty-five communions in 1906 had 18,762,943 members; in 1916, 23,638,597 members; and in 1926, 27,416,470 members. In these gains the Protestants have enjoyed a greater share proportionately than the Roman Catholics.

Dr. John Richelsen, a Presbyterian of Buffalo, writing in Scribner's for July, 1928, clearly showed that whereas the actual number of local congregations or churches in many Protestant groups, as, e. g., Congregationalists, Presbyterians, Baptists, and Lutherans, has been decreasing with almost unbroken regularity each year in recent times, the total membership of these much alive denominations has continuously increased. Dr. Richelsen indicates that this shows real progress toward fewer churches with larger membership for each individual church. He even suggests the need of a first-class ritual for the funeral of superfluous churches to correspond to the ritual now existent for the inauguration of new societies.

In many of the recent articles which read as though Protestantism were either dead or dying, the charge is brought in varying forms that Protestantism engenders creedlessness, churchlessness, and individual anarchy. Being sectarian and not authoritative in its tendencies, it is charged with being the chief cause of irreligion, discord, lawlessness, religious jazz, and even of the economic curse of capitalism. Taken separately or collectively, these charges sound most formidable and well-nigh crushing in their weight and portent. But Protestantism has passed through many more severe attacks when it possessed much less prestige, accumulated reserve, intellectual poise, and spiritual power than at present. I refer to the critical period when Luther lost faith in the peasants of Central Europe and reacted against democracy; to the bitter years of the latter half of the sixteenth century when the Lutherans and Calvinists hated each other almost as vehemently as they hated Rome; to the most critical late seventeenth and eighteenth centuries (1688-1790), when the Deists of England and the Encyclopedists of France threatened the total extinction of historical, revealed Christianity; and to the periods following the American and French revolutions, when Protestantism in these countries was well-nigh engulfed by agnosticism, atheism, and infidelity. All these stormy periods were much more severe at the time in their effect upon Protestantism than upon Roman Catholicism because of the fact that, then as now, the former is an open system ready to adopt new truths, while the latter is very nearly a closed system which in turbulent times assumes the attitude of a tortoise. Not only did Protestantism survive those supposedly withering attacks and come forth alive—it invariably came forth from every struggle strengthened and advanced.

Especially here in the United States, Protestantism has caught the vision of Christian social service and not only is actually ministering to the man who has fallen among thieves on the Jericho road, but is doing its best by denominational activities, through federations, and even through organic unions, to clean out all the Jericho roads, believing that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. The natural result of these serious, concrete efforts on the part of aggressive Protestant groups to rid communities of wickedness and to establish righteousness and Christian love in its place is the incurring of the great bitterness and almost vitriolic anger of all individuals, groups, classes, churches, or churchmen who hold up their holy (?) hands and call upon the churches to stick to the gospel and leave social or civic activities alone. They even go the whole way and triumphantly announce the death, burial, and epitaph of the churches that have succeeded in making them so uncomfortable in their sanctimonious and privileged non-Christian but financially paying smugness.

Meanwhile, Protestantism, in pursuing strenuous and increasingly victorious programs for the Christianization of the social order, now finds itself, as with respect to worship and the participation of its masses in meditation and prayer before its altars, in a rather impoverished state. From the standpoint of the number of worshippers in Protestant churches, their number in many individual churches has decreased. But so our Roman Catholic friends are also compelled to report. The problem of empty pews is not peculiar to Protestantism. Greatly increased facilities for communication and travel, including especially the radio and automobile, have for the present caused gravitation to more central churches in the more populous districts. The materialistic, pleasure-crazed, and immoral reactions following the World War all act powerfully to decrease church attendance.

In such a time the Protestant church is bound to suffer more than the Catholic. Protestantism, though it gained its name because of its protest against the immoralities, and the theological and polity absurdities of Romanism, and though it will ever have cause to protest so long as such evils exist, has long since become a definite Christian body and movement with a positive, distinctive, and constructive program entirely independent of the Roman church. All its major programs and practically all its confessions and dogmas that are really used in daily life (not necessarily those in print) are framed, lived, and realized either as though sacerdotal Catholicism did not exist or as though the latter group were entirely free to pursue unhindered any course it may choose consistent with commonly accepted morals. Protestantism is increasingly inclined to rejoice in the Roman church's progress in furthering the kingdom of God. It ought not to do otherwise. So also there is an increasing number of persons in the Roman faith who pray and labor for Protestantism's strengthening in the performance of its part to further Christ's program on earth.

But it is commonly conceded that Protestantism flourishes most when its entire membership, both clergy and laity, is living on a high plane of personal morality and individual consecration. Protestantism, when at its best, holds forth before its ministers and its laity programs of exactive moral purity and of definitely assumed spiritual and financial stewardship. Such programs are not popular, much less are they likely to be readily adopted in these times of comparative irresponsibility, prosperity, gaiety, and immorality following the nightmare of 1914-18. In such times as the present, the people generally choose to follow afar off. They prefer that the clergy hear the voice of God for them even as the children of Israel desired Moses to converse with God while they remained afar off. The genius of Catholicism, at least as actually practised, and as it flourishes, is that the laity shall be called to few exacting moral goals, while as for the clergy, their power of dispensing grace is entirely independent of personal impeccability, morality, or inward holiness. Consequently, these are times that are difficult for Protestantism and correspondingly easy for sacerdotal Catholicism.

But what about the charge of excessive anarchistic individualism in Protestantism? Protestants have always held, and they will always continue to hold, that it is far better for each individual to be free to approach God and His Word, with the result that many probably go astray along unwarranted tangents of interpretation, than for the whole people to be enslaved by the unscriptural, non-ethical, philosophically and psychologically untenable, as well as historically unwarranted, dogmas and directions of a medieval ecclesiasticism.

It should be clearly stated at this point that the excessive individualism of Protestantism, leading to so many denominations and cults, is now being rapidly checked and displaced by an ever-increasing number of co-operative Protestant groups, by affiliations, by local and national federations, and by organic unions. Protestant Christianity is proceeding rapidly toward world federation and toward a comprehensive unity which shall provide for diversity within this unity. In the United States, for example, Protestantism was never stronger than it is today by virtue of the Federal Council of Churches. And it is growing more united and thereby stronger yearly. The same progress is being made by Protestantism in every country where it exists, and it exists and flourishes wherever Christianity is to be found.

Much has been said and written to try to establish the thesis that Protestantism, because of its emphasis upon individualism, has caused the rise and progress of capitalism. Fifty years ago, when competition was said to be the life of trade, individualism was the underlying philosophy of commerce. But in the more recent decades when the great fortunes have been amassed, co-operation, combination, and centralization of authority have been the watchwords, and are now the foundations, of the great combines. Indeed, if we were inclined to be quarrelsome, we could say that the philosophy of Romanism being the philosophy of modern capitalism, Romanism is therefore the cause of capitalism.

Our critics are quite convinced that when once they have proved Protestantism to be individualism with multitudinous vagaries and with fissiparous and endless divisive tendencies, they have therefore proved that it has within itself that which will accomplish its own extinction. The glaring fallacy of their rather gleeful logic lies in the fact that they wholly forget that the most stable institutions on earth, be they religious, social, or political, are those institutions which have been voluntarily constituted and maintained by individual men under no form of rigorously imposed restraint. Every state or nation in the past has found itself in a state of peace with great internal and persisting power so long as the body politic was made up of free citizens. Stability, persistency, strength, and longevity are all fostered when the citizens concerned have individual freedom—not license—to realize life and liberty and to pursue true happiness. If history proves anything at all, it clearly proves that those institutions, be they state or church, which rule with an iron hand, with absolute monarchs at the head, either have changed their theory and practise of faith and government, or else they have ceased to exist as such, or they possess germs of decay which shall some day accomplish their evolution, their revolution, or their ruin. With these conclusions substantiated by the events of every century of history in mind, none but the most blind and undiscerning will deny that Protestantism has a mobile stability, while Roman Catholicism, for example, in its present form, is destined for either great changes or final extinction.—Zion's Herald.

ROBERT E. LEE'S DEVOTION TO DUTY

By H. H. SMITH

At the breaking out of the War Between the States Robert E. Lee had spent thirty-three years of honorable service in the army of the United States. Moreover, he was tendered the command of the armies of the Union in the conflict soon to begin. This brought him face to face with the greatest struggle of his life—that of deciding the momentous question as to the side he should choose in the great conflict. That duty as he saw it, and duty alone, determined his choice, no one who is acquainted with history can doubt. Randolph H. McKim, one of his soldiers, and author of that admirable volume, The Soul of Lee, says in regard to this great decision:

"Never, in any of his great battles—Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, the Wilderness, Petersburg—was his great soul so shaken as on that night in his chamber at Arlington when this momentous decision was trembling in the balance. Even now, after the lapse of fifty-six years, no generous heart can contemplate without emotion and admiration this midnight wrestling of a brave and unselfish man. One question alone presented itself to his great soul: 'What is my duty?' He put aside ambition—personal inclination—every selfish interest. Nothing weighed in the balance at that supreme moment but the purest, highest, most unselfish motives."

In a letter to his sister, whose husband and son espoused the Union cause, Lee wrote: "With all my devotion to the Union, and the feeling of loyalty and duty of an American citizen, I have not been able to make up my mind to raise my hand against my relatives, my children, my home. I have therefore resigned my commission in the army, and save in defense of my native state, with the sincere hope that my poor services may never be needed, I hope I may never be called upon to draw my sword. I know you will blame me; but you must think as kindly of me as you can, and believe that I have endeavored to do what I thought right."

The All-Compelling Sense of Duty

Long, in his Memoirs of Lee, says: "In the interviews between General Scott and Colonel Lee it is stated that the veteran commander earnestly sought to persuade the younger officer not to throw up his commission, telling him that it would be the greatest mistake of his life. But to all his pleadings Col. Lee returned but one answer—that his sense of duty was stronger with him than any prospects of advancement, replying to the appeal not to send in his resignation in the following words: 'I am compelled to; I cannot consult my own feelings in this matter.'"

With reference to the same matter, Thomas Nelson Page says: "All that we know is that, sacrificing place and honors and emoluments, leaving his home to the sack of the enemy already preparing to seize it, he decided in the sight of God, under the all-compelling sense of duty; and this enough for us to know. What did the politicians clamoring for war know of the motives that inspired his high soul?"

To an old friend, Lee wrote, just after the war: "I must give you my thanks for doing me the justice to believe my conduct during the last five years has been governed by my sense of duty. I had no other guide, nor had I any other object than the defense of those principles of American liberty upon which the constitutions of the several states were originally founded, and unless they are strictly observed I fear there will be an end to Republican government in this country."

When he was criticised for not fighting in the West Virginia campaign, he explained that no substantial success could be expected, and when one of his officers urged, "But your reputation was suffering, the press was denouncing you, your own state was losing confidence in you, and the army needed a victory to add to its enthusiasm," Lee replied, with a smile, "I could not afford to sacrifice the lives of five or six hundred of my people to silence public clamor."

At the great crisis when the question of the surrender of the army was being considered, some one said: "O, General, what will history say of the surrender of the army in the field?" He replied, "Yes, I know they will say hard things of us; but they will not understand how we were overwhelmed by numbers; but that is not the question, Colonel; the question is, Is it right to surrender this army? If it is right, then I will take all the responsibility."

The consciousness of duty conscientiously performed had been the mainstay of his life, and how appropriate that, in his last general order, dated April 10th, he should say to the faithful men who had followed him: "You will take with you the satisfaction that proceeds from the consciousness of duty faithfully performed."

In his army satchel, in his own handwriting, were found these noble words, which had been the guide of his life: "There is a true glory and a true honor; the glory of duty done, and the honor of integrity of principle."

—What a difference less than ten years makes in conditions! Less than ten years ago a saloon keeper in Cincinnati was the most ordinary of human beings. Now the one-time saloon keepers are antiques. The other day an old saloon keeper died in that city, and the Post has this to say about it. A former saloon keeper has died in the city. In the newspapers the deaths of saloon keepers are reported as the passing of historic landmarks might be reported. The saloon keeper is regarded as a figure from a remote past and he comes to public notice only when he dies. Cincinnati guesses that not even the ex-saloon keepers would vote to re-establish their former business. Those he knows are quite content in the quiet and respected occupations they now follow. As the years pass there gathers about them the romantic fragrance that hovers over antiques. "At least," says one, "my children no longer are ashamed to tell any one what their father's occupation is. In the old days they used to report in school that I was a merchant."—The American Friend.

—Henry Van Dyke says that he is neither optimist nor pessimist. Here is his characterization of himself: "I am not an optimist; there's too much evil in the world and in me. Nor am I a pessimist; there's too much good in the world and in God. So I am just a meliorist, believing that he wills to make the world better, and trying to do my bit to help."

EVANGELISM

*Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit;
so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.*

Sickness

Owing to sickness in the home—wife and daughter down with “flu”—all appointments for last Saturday and Sunday had to be cancelled. They are both up now, and we are assuming normalcy again in our work. There has been much sickness among our people for the past few weeks, and the work has seemingly been hindered. However, this is but a passing incident in the year's work. The sun will shine again, and we will appreciate it more because of these clouds. In the meantime, our sympathy and prayers are tendered to all of our sick.

Young People's Day

The program for this day, “Youth in Service,” is now ready, and may be had for the asking, by sending a card to Rev. F. L. Gibbs, Box 772, College Station, Durham, N. C. We have examined the program, and heartily commend it. It is simple and worshipful, and easily adaptable to local situations. We urge its use in all of our churches. February 3 is the Sunday designated by the Board of Religious Education as Young People's Day. Let us observe it at that time if possible, and thus harmonize with the schedule. However, if that day does not seem best for some churches, then appoint another day, and have the program at that time. The important thing is to observe the day. We appeal to all of our churches to put this program on, and to make this day a blessing to the young people, and to the entire church.

A Month of Prayer

The Old Testament scriptures put great emphasis on prayer. Jesus did, both by precept and example. All great spiritual leaders have, and do. The fact is, there has never been, nor will there be, much accomplished, that is worthwhile, without prayer. But glorious things have been accomplished through prayer, and this unfailing means of help is still available to God's people. “Ask, and ye shall receive,” has not been revoked. Just now we need to pray. During this month a campaign is on to raise the indebtedness on High Point College. Surely we should not think of trying a thing so worthwhile, and at the same time so testing, as this, without very earnestly asking God to help us. He can bring things to pass that we have not thought possible, and surely His ear will not be closed to us for a time like this. In our private and in our public prayers let High Point College be much before God during this month.

The Lord's Supper

The church advises that this ordinance be observed in stations once a month. (See 1924 discipline, page 138). This, however, is not mandatory, and may be disregarded where local conditions seem to justify it. To me, once a month has never seemed too often; to many, it is too often. It should certainly be observed at least once a quarter in all churches. And it should be made one of the most beautiful and most effective of all the services of the church. The pastor should make special preparation for it, and should make a brief communion address on each observance of the ordinance. The hymns should be chosen with care, and everything about the service should be in keeping with what the ordinance signifies. No service of the church should be more carefully thought out and planned for than the communion service. It should be made so interesting and so helpful that the pastor and the people will look forward joyously to every observance of this holy ordinance. Study your communion service, brethren, and make them rich benedictions to your people.

The Journal

The secretary informs us that it will be ready for distribution in a very few days—probably this week. We trust that every copy may be sold and read. The only way to be conversant with the actions of the conference is to read the Journal. One action that we wish to call attention to again, which will be accentuated when the Journal is read, is that which requires the budgets to be assessed in the full amount of the allotment. Every member is to be given a financial obligation—a definite amount that he is expected to pay to the church during the year. He may take this amount by voluntary subscription if he chooses to so do; if not, then the conference requires that the stewards and class leaders lay an assessment upon him. We trust that this requirement of the conference is being observed. Every member of the church should have a definite financial obligation. It is the best and, we believe, only way of teaching stewardship and liberality.

South Lexington

January 30, Sunday night. We were here on this date, and preached to a large and appreciative congregation. There was no service at State Street on this night, and Bro. Bethea and some of his members worshiped in this service. Bro. Atlas Ridge was also present. This church impresses us as having a promising field. It is the only Methodist church in all of South Lexington, and a large number of people live in the territory where it is located. We believe it should grow.

Bro. C. G. Isley, the pastor, is serving his first year here, and is already winning the confidence of the people. We were glad to hear them speak favorably of him, and to find hope and confidence prevailing with both pastor and folks. We are hopeful of this church, and we believe that this will be a year of progress for our cause at this place. We trust that they will help us to realize at least one of our goals, and become a “singing church.”

Appointments

Friday, January 11.—Draper, in conference with pastor.

Sunday, January 13.—State Street, in anniversary service, preaching 11 a. m.

Sunday, January 27.—Roberta, 11 a. m.; Kannapolis, 7:30 p. m.

Sunday, February 3.—Mebane, 11 a. m.; Belmont, 7:30 p. m.

“If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God; if any man minister, let him do it as of the ability which God giveth: that God in all things may be glorified through Jesus Christ, to whom be praise and dominion forever and ever.” “Amen.”

Wise men lay up knowledge; but the mouth of the foolish is near destruction. The rich man's wealth is his strong city; the destruction of the poor is their poverty.—Prov. 10:14-15.

A LESSON FROM LES MISERABLES

Victor Hugo, in his immortal work of fiction, Les Miserables, has given us the highest conception of the genuine religious spirit to be found outside of the teachings of Jesus Christ and his apostles. Bishop Myriel, who has been called "the spiritual man of the world," had converted his palace into a hospital and all of his income was devoted to the relief of suffering and distressed humanity. Like his Divine Lord he was absolutely unselfish. The hero of the story, Jean Valjean, had been known as No. 5630. After the long weary years of hard toil for a very small offense against the law he was released on a ticket-of-leave from the galleys. He was rudely driven from every door he sought to enter. One night he crawled into a dog kennel, hoping to find shelter from the cold rain, but was promptly ejected thence. In his desperation Valjean exclaimed, "I am not even a dog." Pointing to the bishop's palace a citizen said to the galley slave, "Knock there."

The bishop touched his hand gently and said, "You need not tell your name. This is not my house; it is the house of Jesus Christ. It does not ask any comer whether he has a name, but whether he has an affliction." His housekeeper to her great dismay was ordered to prepare a bedroom for the convict, and now he is invited to take a seat at the table. Valjean is amazed and bewildered. After supper the bishop conducted him to his room. One time in his checkered career the lines had fallen to him in pleasant places. He sleeps soundly until midnight when he awakes. Dark thoughts fill his soul. He thinks of the silver dishes he had seen on the table the previous evening when he took supper with his gracious host and resolves to get up and make off with them. The convict is soon captured by the officers of the law and brought back.

What is more beautiful in the world's literature outside of Holy Writ than the scene between Bishop Myriel and Valjean? "Ah, there you are," said Monseigneur, "I am glad to see you. But I gave you two candlesticks also, which are silver like the rest and would bring you two hundred francs. Why did you not take them along with your plate?" When left alone with the bewildered culprit the man of God put on the stern aspect of one of the old Hebrew prophets: "Never forget that you have promised to use this silver to become an honest man. Jean Valjean, my brother, you belong no longer to evil but to good. It is your soul that I am buying for you. I withdraw it from dark thoughts and the spirit of perdition and I give it to God." Thus the good bishop became the spiritual father of the galley slave. Accepting this wonderful inheritance of the Christianity of Jesus we are not surprised when Valjean became Mayor Madeline, the saint of a district and the protector of every despised and rejected creature in it.—*T. A JOYFUL DOCTRINE

The doctrine of the resurrection is full of joy to the hereaved. It clothes the grave with flowers and wreathes the tomb with unfading laurel. The sepulcher shines with a light brighter than the sun, and death grows fair, as we say, in full assurance of faith: "I know my brother shall rise again." Rent from the ignoble shell, the pearl is gone to deck the crown of the Prince of Peace. Buried beneath the sod, the seed is preparing to bloom in the King's garden.—Rev. Charles H. Spurgeon, D.D.

SHALL IT BE AN INCOMING OR AN OUTGOING SHIP?

How many have sat at the dawn of a year
And smiled as they said, with a vanishing tear:
"Ah, surely I'll see in the New Year gleam
The sweet coming in of the ship of my dream;
And that ship with rare treasures for me will be freighted,
And I'll live ever after with soul quite elated."

But somehow that ship never comes into sight,
Though we look every day and dream every night,
With the same old trouble and a little bit more;
And the same will be true until life's final ending
If it's just on the incoming ship we're depending.

Let's start at the dawn of the year that's to be
With a different program, and say: "As for me,
I'll send out a ship unto others this year,
All laden with love, good will, and good cheer";
And so sure as we do it the year with its gleaming
Will bring thousands of ships grander far than the dreaming.

PATIENCE

Sometimes I wish that I might do
Just one grand deed and die,
And by that one grand deed reach up
To meet God in the sky.
But such is not thy way, O God,
Not such is thy decree;
But deed by deed, and tear by tear,
Our souls must climb to thee,
As climbed the only Son of God
From manger unto cross,
Who learned, through tears and bloody sweat,
To count this world but loss;
Who left the virgin mother's arms
To seek those arms of shame,
Outstretched upon the lonely hill
To which the darkness came.
As deed by deed, and tear by tear,
He climbed up to the height,
Each deed a splendid deed, each tear
A jewel shining bright.
So grant us, Lord, the patient heart,
To climb the upward way,
Until we stand upon the height,
And see the perfect day.

illustrations. We do not see how those who are permitted to hear him from Sunday to Sunday can fail to grow in grace and in the knowledge of God.

He has had a successful ministry. He takes to people and people take to him. He can gather the people and keep the people together where others would see little or no prospect of a church. We suspect that a large part of his success has been due to the influence of his life companion, Mrs. Tambllyn. We wish for them continued success and joy in the great work of leading people in the way of salvation.

OTHERS' MOTHERS

"Hello, Bill, where're you going?" asked Ned Dixon as he spied his friend hastening down the street.

Bill Anderson paused and replied that he was going to the hospital to see his mother.

"The doctors say she's got a strange disease," he said. "When she turns her head suddenly, she gets dizzy and sees purple spots."

"Gosh!" exclaimed Ned, sympathetically. "Are those flowers you're taking her? You're not expecting her to die, are you?"

"Die?" exclaimed Bill. "Well, I should hope not. You'd never know she was even sick to look at her. It's Mothers' Day, you nut. Don't you know when it's Mothers' Day?"

Ned looked surprised and worried.

"Say, I forgot!" he said. "Gee, wouldn't that feaze you? Mothers' Day and I forgot, and I've got the best mother that ever was. And here I am without a cent to buy her a flower with!"

He looked with envy at the tissue paper covered package that Bill was holding.

"After all," thought Bill. "Ned's mother is a mother too, and I have a dozen carnations here." Then he said to Ned: "I'll give you one of these for your mother."

He carefully opened the paper and drew out one lovely and perfect white flower and handed it to the thankful Ned.

"I'll do something for you some day, Bill," Ned promised. "You're a good egg all right. Thank you a lot."

"'Sall right," smiled Bill.

The boys parted, Bill boarding a trolley and Ned running joyously home with his flower.

It happened that there were two hospitals five blocks apart. Bill was so busy with his thoughts that he rode right past the first one without realizing it, and he almost missed the second, too. Just in time he saw the building with its many curtained windows, and with a short cry, he sprang to his feet. The conductor pulled the cord and let him off. My, it was a close shave!

In a little while he was inside the big building feeling rather scared as one is apt to feel in a place where one has never been before. A lady at a telephone switchboard beckoned to him and asked him kindly what he wanted.

"I'm looking for my mother, a dizzy lady, her name's Mrs. Anderson," said Bill.

"Mrs. Anderson?" smiled the girl. "Number 47. Just follow the corridor to the left."

Bill thanked her and started timidly down a very long hall. He met some proud-looking men whom he thought were doctors, and when he met a nurse he asked again for Mrs. Anderson. Number forty-seven. She told him to go to the end of the corridor and just to push open the swinging doors. So on he went between doors closed and open, and though he tried not to look, he could not help seeing little rooms with people in them lying in bed.

At last he came to the end of the hall, pushed the swinging doors and found himself in a great big room with rows and rows of beds in it and a person in each bed. It made him gasp for a moment, but just then he saw another nurse.

"Where's Mrs. Anderson, please?" he whispered.

"Right over there, next to the wall," replied the nurse, pointing.

Bill was thinking: "My, it's queer, Mother being in here with all these strangers! She can't like it much, and I think it's a bum arrangement. I'm going to tell Dad about it as soon as I see him."

He tiptoed to the white bed by the wall and stood beside it looking at the still form under the white cover. Somehow he could not speak, his mother lay so quiet, with her face to the wall, breathing hard. He could see her brown hair on the pillow, and he felt the tears coming up into his eyes. Well, it wouldn't do to start bawling before all those people, so he unwrapped his flowers and laid them on the pillow. Then he said softly: "Mother!"

The head turned slowly and Bill saw a very white face with two big dark eyes looking into his. He felt queer all over, but he stood very still, and all at once the lady smiled. It was a beautiful smile that made him feel comfortable at once.

"Flowers for me!" said the lady in a very weak voice and she turned her head so she could smell them.

"It's Mothers' Day," said Bill.

"Mothers' Day," murmured the lady. "Yes, I'm a mother, but my boy is dead! I was thinking about him and longing for him, and then I heard him call me. And these flowers! Thank you, dear lad. You've done a wonderful thing for me."

She took Bill's hand and squeezed it and put it to her lips, and then she seemed to grow very tired. The nurse came and led Bill away.

"Your mother's very sick, dear," she said. "You mustn't stay any longer."

Bill held the nurse by the apron as they walked away and when they were near the door, he said:

"That wasn't my mother. It's another Mrs. Anderson, I guess."

"Not your mother!" said the nurse in her low voice.

"No, I never saw her before, but I'm glad I gave her the flowers," replied Bill. "Is she going to die?"

"I think not," said the nurse.

"Well, will you please show me another Mrs. Anderson?" Bill asked.

"Go down the corridor and ask the girl at the switchboard," said the nurse.

So Bill went back along the hall as softly as he could and tried not to look into the little rooms on each side of him. The girl at the switchboard said there were no more Mrs. Andersons in the hospital, and Bill was quite dashed for awhile. At last she said:

"Maybe she's at the other hospital. Have you tried there?"

Then Bill realized that he'd gone past the first hospital.

Out into the sunshine he stepped and began walking the five blocks to the other hospital. He was just turning to walk up the driveway, when in the grass he spied a little purple flower. It was a wild violet and he stooped and picked it, adding two little heart-shaped leaves to go with it.

By now he felt quite used to hospitals and soon found his mother. She was in a nice room all to herself, and she was sitting in a big chair dressed in a lovely silk gown. There were flowers in the room, and Dad was there too. Bill ran to her and gave her a squeeze, as he put his flower into her hand.

"Mother," he said, "I started out with twelve big beautiful flowers for you, but other mothers got them all." Then he had to sit down and tell her all about it.

Of course, Mother was glad that he had given Ned one and the poor very sick Mrs. Anderson the others.

"After all one mother is as good as another," she smiled. But Bill wouldn't agree with her.

"Applesauce!" he cried. "I don't believe that. The rest may be all as good as each other, but mine's the best!"

LETT'S FIRST LANDING

The new airport at Brenton's Point had two long runways for the mail planes to land and it was Lett Lincoln's job to keep a lookout for the planes and let the ground men know when they were coming. Lett liked his job, and he did it well; but every chance he got, he went down to the hangars and learned all he could about the airplanes themselves.

One day Captain Maurice said to him:

"Say, Lett, you can control a machine in the air, can't you?"

"Yes, sir," was Lett's reply. "But I've never had the chance to land one."

"You won't have to land one," laughed the Captain. "All that I want is somebody to go up with me today and keep the plane straight while I focus my camera and take a picture."

"I can do that all right, Captain Maurice. Please wait until I see the Port Commander and get his permission."

"I have that," said Captain Maurice. "The Commander says no planes are expected for at least five hours but that he'll have one of the mechanics keep a lookout while you are gone."

"Good!" replied Lett. "Then I can go with you."

Together they prepared themselves for the special flight. The Captain explained to Lett just what it was that he wanted.

"I've got to go up thirty thousand feet," he said. "Which is so high that unless we put these oxygen masks on, we'll be unable to breathe. You strap yourself in the passenger cockpit and I'll go in the pilot, but don't you touch the duplicate controls until I give you the word. Then keep the plane as steady as you can until after I get the picture, when I'll take the controls again."

The plane that was used by Captain Maurice for his work was just like the planes used for student pilots, with controls in both the forward and the after cockpits. If a student made a mistake while he was in charge, the more experienced man in front could correct it in time to avoid an accident. Lett was perfectly familiar with this type of plane, and so he climbed aboard and made himself comfortable.

"Put the telephone earpieces under your helmet," directed the Captain. "I'll have occasion to speak to you while we are up there, and I want you to be able to hear me."

And with these last instructions, Captain Maurice nodded to the men on the ground, who released the starting gear and sent the great propeller spinning through the air.

"All ready, Lett?"

"All ready, sir," was the reply.

"Then we're off!"

Down the runway they sped, going faster and faster until they were able to rise from the ground and take to the air. Lett placed his hand lightly on the "stick," anxious to get the "feel" of the controls. He could tell after a moment or two that Captain Maurice was an expert aviator, and he began to feel proud that he had been chosen to go up with him on this important mission.

Lett had never been up so high before. Thirty thousand feet! That was almost six miles straight up in the air—higher than the highest mountain in the world.

"When will I turn on the oxygen?" he said, speaking into the mouthpieces of the telephone.

"Watch the instrument that tells you how high you are," came the answer, "and when that reads fifteen thousand feet, turn on the air. But you'll know when you need it without looking at the instrument, because you'll feel cold and your lungs won't fill up like they do now."

At fourteen thousand feet, Lett felt the need of more air.

"I'm going to tighten up the mask," he told the Captain.

"Any instructions before I drop the telephone?"

"Yes. The real danger up here is that lack of air might send one of us unconscious. You'll be all right, I think, because you won't have to exert yourself, but I'm likely to be caught because I've got to get this heavy camera into position and the exertion at this altitude might prove too much for me. If I do get caught, bring the plane down to below fifteen thousand, and I'll come around again. Do you understand?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then drop the telephone mouthpiece and tighten up your oxygen mask. I'm going to do the same after I get through speaking. Watch me closely, and when I turn my head and nod, take control and keep the plane steady. When I'm ready to take charge again, you'll feel me at the stick. Gee—it's getting cold, isn't it?"

Lett agreed, but he couldn't say so, because he had already carried out the Captain's instructions. The plane was twenty thousand feet high now, with ten more thousand to go. No ordinary plane flies that high, and no special plane does either, unless it is to get a very large city all on the same photograph.

As they approached the desired height, Lett watched carefully for the signal. He was having some trouble with his breathing. Frost was forming on the inside of the mask, threatening to cut off the supply of oxygen from the tank. The temperature was twenty below zero.

"It is just as well that taking a picture is the work of only a few minutes," he thought. "No man could live very long up here."

The next moment he got the nod for which he was waiting. He took the controls and helped the plane on its course. He could see Captain Maurice working with the camera. He could see the oxygen mask almost a frozen shape against the aviator's face. He could see him straighten up after the picture was taken—and then Lett could see no more, for Captain Maurice sank unconscious into the pilot's seat.

Lett immediately turned the plane downward, giving it as great an angle as he dared. At fifteen thousand, he straightened her up, made a complete right turn and started her down again. Ahead of him he could see the airport, with its landing field and the two great runways. At ten thousand feet, he tore off the oxygen mask, picked up the telephone and tried to speak to Captain Maurice. There was no response. He got closer and closer to the ground. He had never before landed an airplane, and it is one of the most difficult feats in all aviation. Yet now there was nothing to do but try. So Lett flew for what he thought was a good landing position, got it, swooped down on the field and made a perfect contact.

The next minute he was in the pilot's cockpit. Captain Maurice's mask was still over his nose and mouth, but the frost had melted away. Lett took away the mask and shook the Captain until he opened his eyes.

"Hurt, Captain Maurice?"

"No, but very, very sick," groaned the brave Captain. "My mask froze up and I couldn't get any air. Who landed the plane?"

"I did," replied Lett.

"Why, I didn't know you could!" exclaimed the aviator.

"Neither did I—until I had to."

"Which was lucky for the both of us, I'm sure. Want to go up again tomorrow?"

"Yes, sir; if I can get the Commander's permission."

"It's already got," replied the Captain. "From now on you're my new assistant."—Selected.

THE ONE WHO WAS BRAVE

"Elton Tilton is just the bravest boy you ever saw, mother," said Winfred. "One day a big dog came along with his tongue hanging out, and we thought he was mad and scrambled over the fence; but Elton walked right along as calm as ever. He says he isn't afraid of bears or tramps or anything. I wish I were as brave as Elton, but I'm afraid I never will be."

"I heard a story about two boys the other day," said his mother, "and I thought one of them was very brave. They went to school together, and one day they thought it would be great fun to hide a frog in the teacher's desk; but the frog tipped over an ink bottle and spoiled a number of examination papers and other things, and the teacher was very angry. He asked the guilty boy to own his fault like a man and take the punishment he deserved. He put him upon his honor, you see. Well, the older boy, who found the frog and first thought of the joke, sat still in his seat without a blush; but the little boy, though he trembled with fear, went to the desk before the whole school and owned his fault. And he sat for an hour on the dunce's stool, a target for fifty pairs of eyes."

"O mother," cried Winfred, "I was so ashamed! I'll never do anything so mean again as long as I live. How did you know?"

"I heard two boys talking about it as I rode in the car. I was proud of my boy, Winfred; and I pitied Elton Tilton's mother, for I said to myself: 'My boy was brave, but her boy was a coward.'"

"Why, I never thought that was being brave!" said Winfred.—Youth's Companion.

AN INDIAN'S DISCOVERY

An old Indian chief was told of the Savior, but he said: "The Jesus road is good, but I have followed the old Indian road all my life, and I will follow it to the end." A year later he was on the border of the shadow of death. As he was seeking a pathway through the darkness, he said to the missionary: "Can I turn to the Jesus road now? My road stops here. It has no path through the valley."—Selected.

DON'T WORRY—TRY IT THIS WEEK

Let no day pass without personal communication with God. Begin each day by taking counsel from the Word of God, if but one verse while you are dressing.

Put away all bitter feelings and brooding over slights or wrongs, no matter from whom received.

Have on your heart some person or cause for which you are pleading God's blessing each day.

Let no opportunity pass without owning your Saviour before others, and modestly urging all to accept His service.

Let no opportunity pass to say a kind word, do some kind need, or at least smile upon those you do meet. Do this, not affectedly, but sincerely as unto the Lord.

Guard well the doors of your lips, that no unchaste word, jest or story, no slander or cutting remarks, no irreverent or untruthful statement shall pass out.

Remember that Christ will surely come, suddenly come, quickly come; and it may be this day will determine how His coming will find us, as it must to thousands.—Selected.

THE BISHOP OF BIRMINGHAM

The Bishop of Birmingham has climbed a cocoanut tree and announced that the Genesis account of creation is no longer trustworthy. According to the Bishop, Darwin, after fifty years, has been justified in all his claims relative to our ape ancestors. The Bishop delivered his soul in this and kindred sentiment in Westminster Abbey recently, denying the Book of Genesis and opining that science is our only guide in matters of life. He dismisses Revelation, referring to the fable and folklore that made up the Biblical narrative. And now, will the Rt. Rev. Bishop of Birmingham refuse longer to draw his salary from the church he has turned against and with dignity decline the remunerations that go with his priestly office? Not much! He will continue to eat his beefsteak off the liberality of the church and buy his broadcloth garments from the money given to support him by men and women of the faith. Perhaps some day these Modernists will learn the first principles of common honesty and withdraw from the church when they begin to make war upon her, but not yet. At present they are devouring wolves and feel comfortable and at home in the sheepfolds.—Bob Shuler's Magazine.

MAN AND BRUTE

Four distinct lines of demarcation between man and the lower order of animals:

1. Man is the only animal using artificial covering.
2. Man is the only animal using implements.
3. Man is the only animal using fire.
4. Man is the only animal that makes mistakes, he being guided by fallible reason; the lower order of animals, when not interfered with by man, by unerring instinct; but man profits by his mistakes and makes progress.

The dove-nest built amid the rafters of Noah's ark was doubtless complete as the dove-nest of the twentieth century, but note the difference in edifices constructed by progressive man.

Men think there are circumstances when one may deal with human beings without love, and there are no such circumstances. One may deal with many things without love: one may cut down trees, make bricks, hammer iron without love, but you cannot deal with men without love.—Leo Tolstol.

JAN. 13: "LOVING AS JESUS LOVED"

John 13:1-17

Opening Moments

Quiet Music.

Leader: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

Silent Prayer, ended by Leader: "O thou Christ of Galilee, who didst go into the homes and hearts of many folk and kindle there a light which has burned through all the centuries, make us humble sharers of Thy glory and goodness, so that we may find a purpose and a meaning in our lives." Grant us grace to do the right, always walking close to Thee. Fill our hearts with Thy all embracing love and make us better individuals, for the sake of Thy Name's honor and glory. Amen.

Leader's Outline

Our topic for this meeting, as you have no doubt already observed, is "Love." Love is the greatest force in the world. Henry Ward Beecher says that love is the river of life in this world. It refreshes our souls. Some one has also said that love is a flame which burns in heaven and whose soft reflections radiate to us. Two worlds are opened, two lives are given to it. It is by love that we double our being; it is by love that we approach God. But to look definitely to the topic, "Loving as Jesus loved," we find that there has been no greater example of love in all the history of the universe than the birth and the life of Christ. It was through the love of God the Father that He came into the world and having loved his own in the world he loved them to the end, knowing well that at any moment they might forsake Him. The love of Christ is the very essence of the Gospel.

To bring the topic to ourselves: Do we love as Jesus loved? As Christians, we ought to be willing to love every one. Perfect love does not tolerate dishonesty, slander, lying, etc. If the Gospel of love were preached in every nation, sin would rapidly disappear from the world. "Love is the crowning grace of humanity, the holiest right of the soul, the golden link that binds us to duty and truth, the redeeming principle that chiefly reconciles the heart to life, and is prophetic of eternal good."

Questions That Might Be Answered

1. Is the world coming to a better understanding of the love of Jesus?
2. Is it possible for us to love others as we do ourselves?
3. Would there be a necessity for war if every individual loved as Jesus loved?
4. What is the difference between "love" and "like"?

Topics for Discussion

1. Love, the Greatest Power in the World.
2. Christ-like Love Changes Things.

Poetry to the Point

THE SEARCH

I sought his love in sun and stars,
And where the wild seas roll,
And found it not. As mute I stood,
Fear overwhelmed my soul;
But when I gave it to one in need,
I found the Lord of Love indeed.

I sought his love in lore of books,
In charts of science's skill;
They left me orphaned as before—
His love eluded still;
Then in despair I breathed a prayer;
The Lord of Love was standing there!

—Thomas Curtis Clarke.

Appropriate Quotations

"Love is the purification of the heart; it strengthens and ennobles the character, gives higher motives and a nobler aim to every action of life, and makes both man and woman strong, noble and courageous."—Miss Jewsbury.

"Love is represented as the fulfilling of the law—a creature's perfection. All other graces, all divine dispensations, contribute to this, and are lost in it as in a heaven. It expels the dross of our nature; it overcomes sorrow; it is the full joy of our Lord."—Hooker.

"Love is the road to God; for love, endless love, is Himself."—Sonnenberg.

"Love is the master-key that opens every ward in the heart of man."—J. H. Evans.

TO THOSE INTERESTED IN CHILDREN'S MISSIONS

Any person or organization interested in mite boxes suitable for use in children's societies may get a supply from Miss Mary E. Young, High Point College, High Point, N. C.

—Rev. H. L. Isley had a funeral service at Tabernacle Monday afternoon. The deceased was John Frank Field, a prominent citizen of the Climax community. He was held in high esteem by his neighbors. He leaves his widow, who before marriage was Miss Mary Smith, and one son, R. D. Field, of Greensboro.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DAY PROGRAM READY!

Pastors, Superintendent, Christian Endeavorers and church leaders, by the time you read this you should have received a copy of the Young People's Day program for Sunday evening, February 3rd, 1929. Many of our churches failed to observe the special day at Christmas, so here is an opportunity to give the youth of the denomination a chance and to take a special offering for the New Century Service, "which counts on the budget."

"Youth in Service" is the theme of the service. The pastors are asked to give Sunday evening over to the Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor Societies, at which time the program is to be rendered by the above organizations assisted by the pastor and church leaders.

If this date does not suit, set aside some other evening in February. By all means observe this day for "Youth in Service."

If you have not received a copy of the materials, let us know.

—Beginning the first Sunday in January we are going to keep an accurate church attendance record, covering the three standard services of the church: the two worship services on Sunday and the Church-Night service on Wednesday. There are ten remaining months of the conference year. Every three months a report will be given of those attending all three of the services and of those attending the two Sunday services. Let us seek to make ours a "church going people."—Concord Church Bulletin.

—Calvary church has been greatly shocked by two recent deaths. Last Sunday morning Harmon Sullivan, brother of Bro. J. G. Sullivan, died suddenly from acute dilation of the heart. On Monday night Mrs. Elizabeth Pickard, daughter of the late Bro. W. J. Williams, died following an operation for mastoiditis, brought on by influenza. These will both be greatly missed not only in their homes but also in the community and city.

—Judge Sink denounces magistrates who commercialize their offices by making them collecting agencies, preying upon the poor and the ignorant.

—The government's flying machine, Question Mark, has broken the record by remaining on the wing for 150 hours. The engines then failed and it had to descend to the earth. The flight consumed 5,205 gallons of gasoline and 262 gallons of oil. Five men were on board and traveled about 11,500 miles.

—A presidential election—the real one under the Constitution—was held in all the 48 States on Wednesday, January 2. On that date, the presidential electors in every State, who were chosen at the election last November 6, met at their respective State capitals and cast their ballots for president and vice-president. The electoral vote will not be counted and the result announced until the second Wednesday in February. However, we already know that Hoover and Curtis received 444 electoral votes to 87 for Smith and Robinson.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

WELCH MEMORIAL TIDINGS

The Tidings has not appeared for some time, not because there was nothing doing, but because there has been so much doing that it has been difficult to find the time to tell others what has been doing.

In spite of the flu in almost every home, every service has been met and reasonably well attended. The Sunday school that was considerably cut in attendance came back on last Sunday to 216. This is not quite normal but it shows a considerable improvement.

Christmas was observed in a very impressive manner and in a way that it has left a lasting effect. The three services rendered were all well attended and each was enjoyed by all. The beautiful service, "Joyous Tidings," prepared by our New Century Service, was rendered on Sunday morning, December 23. This service was rendered by the children and young people of the church. This splendid service published by our church with such merits that every Methodist Protestant should be proud of it was rendered by our local talent in a way that every one had reason to be proud of both the service and the talent. Mr. Luther Medlin deserves credit for leading the forces in preparing this program. At the evening service of December 23 the beautiful pageant, "The Nativity," was rendered by the young people of the church. There was no question about the success of this service. It in a most impressive manner depicted the coming of our Lord. Every part was rendered with excellency and the lesson was effective. Mr. Odell Brown deserves credit for leading the forces in preparing this service. The third service was a Christmas tree service given on Christmas eve. While the program of this service was not elaborate it was enjoyed by all. And it can be truly said that the children were as well behaved as at any Christmas tree service this pastor has ever seen. The pastor and family were nicely remembered by the church and by other friends. Great numbers of our friends here and elsewhere remembered us with nice greetings which in every case was very much appreciated. For every one of these greetings we are indeed thankful. It is great to be remembered by those with whom we have labored in other days as well as those with whom we are now laboring. We trust the new year is bringing happiness and joy to those with whom we have ever labored as well as all others.

The parsonage is still being favored with nice additions to the furnishings. The latest is a nice porch set which is the gift of the Hayworth Manufacturing Company. The Ladies' Aid has informed us that other things will soon be supplied.

Sorrow and sadness have visited some of our homes even if joy has largely prevailed. On December 10 Mrs. Arrilla Bundy, one of the oldest and one of the most faithful of our Sunday school members, was taken by death. Mrs. Bundy was a fine Christian character, a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, but attended our Sunday school because of convenience. The funeral was conducted by the pastor, assisted by Bro. Pierce, and the body was taken back to her native state, Pennsylvania, to be buried by the side of her companion who died some years ago. On December 22 the home of our Bro. and Sister J. R. Durham was made sad when their 14-year-old son, William, was struck by an automobile and killed. William was a member of our Sunday school and a good boy. The funeral was conducted by the pastor, assisted by Bro. Pierce. The pallbearers were his associates, the newsboys of the local paper. On December 30 the soul of Mrs. C. S. Readick took its flight. Mrs. Readick was a member of our church and Bro. Readick is one of the officials of the church and a teacher in the Sunday school. The funeral was conducted at New Salem near Randleman by the pastor, assisted by Bro. Moton and Bro. Parker, of the New Salem church, and a former neighbor of Bro. and Sister Readick. Sister Readick was a good woman. May the good Lord bless and sustain these sorrowing ones.

In His name,

GEO. L. CURRY.

Randleman.—We had a very nice Christmas. We could not have Christmas exercises at any of our churches on account of the flu. The Sunday schools gave their usual treat. The work has started off fine considering the flu and other sickness. We trust all will soon be well again.

Our friends of former pastorates, also a large number in Randleman, have our thanks for the nice Christmas cards and other gifts given us. Mrs. A. S. Barker gave her pastor and family a nice fat hen for Christmas. Many thanks to her. The people on the charge are constantly giving us nice things to eat. On the last night of 1928 the pounding came when a large number of Mt. Lebanon members (and some who were not) visited the parsonage, and the nice things they brought for the pantry. We will not try to mention each one by name, or each article brought, as it would take up too much space, but our Heavenly Father knows them all, and we trust he will bountifully supply them in return. Miss Helen Barber is in the Clinic hospital at Greensboro very ill. We are looking for a good year.

T. A. WILLIAMS, Pastor.

Pleasant Grove.—On the night of December 24 our Christmas pageant was given at Pleasant Grove. It was very good indeed. Congregation was small because of flu. Am glad to say, as far as I know all of the sick are improving. Since our last report the Ladies' Aid has placed A Hoosier kitchen cabinet in the parsonage, and the Brotherhood has placed a nice day bed in the pastor's study. We have had a protracted pounding for some time, of nice things for the dining table. We received quite a lot of Christmas cards from the people here and other places we have served. We also received many nice presents, and for all these things we are very thankful.

D. R. WILLIAMS.

Draper.—We started the new year very well. We have on roll 94, and 59 of them were at Sunday school on Sunday, January 6th, and we hope to see our Sunday school grow. We know there is a big job ahead of us in 1929, but we hope to win against sin and the kingdom of darkness with the help of God. We are sorry to report that Sister W. T. Totten is not having as good health as we could wish. We hope for her a speedy recovery.

LEWIS C. CRAIG, Reporter.

Kannapolis.—The usual services were held Sunday with good attendance, considering the epidemic of influenza. Our pastor preached splendid sermons at both services. We were glad to have several visitors worship with us. We are sorry to lose Mrs. N. E. Tilley, who recently moved to Greensboro near West End church. We were glad to have Rev. M. C. Henderson and family, of Bess Chapel, visit in our city recently. Our first quarterly conference will be held next Friday night.

President Taylor will be with us on Sunday night, January 27, and preach for us. Mrs. Lowdermilk, who is recuperating from an operation at her mother's home in Greensboro, has not been able to return to her home here yet, but we are expecting her soon.

MRS. C. B. PRICE.

Davidson Circuit.—Yes, that was a splendid program pulled off at Pleasant Grove Christmas night. We doubt if we ever saw a better. The large tree was loaded to its capacity and then some. The recitations were fine and the crowd large. Young Brother Garner is superintendent of the Sunday school and has proved himself a splendid leader. The pastor and wife were not forgotten, being enriched in presents to the amount of about $4.00. Bro. W. A. Frank and Bro. J. P. Elliott, of Lineberry, furnished us with gifts that will be left to warm our bodies and should make us more attractive in personality. Meats and eats of varieties have come from Mrs. Hull, Loflin and others. One of the high spots of the season was a fine lot of Cleveland county pork and sausage, sent us by one of Bro. Morgan's flock. We appreciated and enjoyed this more than ink can tell, but we wonder if Bro. Morgan has failed to measure up.

The "flu" is making terrible inroads on our church services. It's fury is unabated.

We are hoping and praying that the cloud may soon pass over and that we may return to normalcy.

The parsonage grounds and church grounds here are being greatly improved and we have gotten a whisper that a new church is in contemplation at Lineberry. Why not, we need it and the people are worthy and well able.

W. D. REED.

Elbaville, Mocksville Circuit.—We are glad of the interest that was taken in Sunday school Sunday morning. We are more than proud of the sixty-six members, with which we are to begin the new calendar year. And when the question is put before us, "Are you standing in the same tracks you were twelve months ago?" we can say no, because we had no Sunday school the first Sunday in January last year, due to cold weather.

We are proud of the way our Christmas program was carried out. And every one seemed to have enjoyed it. After which Santa Claus came by and gave each of the members a nice treat and a small present.

Since our last report the adult ladies have purchased a new oil stove for their class room. We are also glad to tell you that the finishing touch has been put on the primary department's room.

We cannot express our appreciation in words for the privilege of having with us Sunday morning in Sunday school Rev. J. W. Braxton, our pastor. And to be the first church on the circuit to hear Rev. Mr. Braxton deliver his first new calendar year sermon, which was of much interest and help to all hearers. He took his Scripture from Psalm 33. The text was Saint John 19:30. Subject: We Finish to Begin. It is often heard said, We cannot comprehend our pastor, because he goes too far above the level of our heads. But we want to thank conference for the man that was sent us, because he expresses his thoughts on a level with our people.

Our goal for the coming year is, "Greater Work for the Kingdom," both in Sunday school and church services. For each reader of the Herald we hope prosperous times in the work of the Master during this new year.

STELLA BAILEY, Reporter.

South Lexington Charge.—At the last session of annual conference I was changed from the Chatham circuit to the South Lexington charge. The splendid spirit manifested toward their pastor by the Chatham people during the two years of my stay was never shown to better advantage than in the presentation on the last Friday of our stay in their midst of a beautiful memory quilt. In making this quilt, the Ladies' Auxiliary of Bonlee church earned the sum of $187.85. The presentation to us came as a complete surprise, although we were aware of the campaign that was on to raise the money by means of the quilt, we had no idea of its being given to us. It was appreciated very much. Mrs. A. A. Johnson, president of Ladies' Auxiliary, has done a splendid work during the past year. The largest amount of money raised on the quilt was turned in by Mrs. R. L. Pugh, who secured $51.00.

A warm welcome awaited us at South Lexington. Coal had been supplied at our house and we were made to feel at home.

Splendid Christmas exercises were presented at both South Lexington and Mount Carmel churches. We were remembered with many nice presents by both congregations, among these a beautiful and serviceable Bible given by the South Lexington Sunday school.

Four new members have already been received into the church at South Lexington, and we are expecting to further increase our membership during the year. Plans are being made at both churches to care for the conference claims in full. Attendance in both Sunday school and preaching services has been good in spite of the fact that influenza has been prevalent.

We were glad to have our president, Rev. S. W. Taylor, with us in the evening services December 30th. He preached one of his forceful sermons, and also spoke of the needs of the college. We hope that we can put every word into action. C. G. ISLEY.

High Point.—On account of illness, the pastor, Rev. Roy I. Farmer, was unable to fill his pulpit last Sunday morning, but Rev. Paul S. Kennett, of the college faculty, very kindly consented to bring the morning message. He chose as the subject of his theme the text from II Kings 6:6. "It Was Borrowed." He outlined the different types of debt which we owe. First, we owe a debt to the race. So far as nature is concerned God has created for us a splendid world, and the wealth of nature does not belong to any one generation. It is our duty to conserve our rich timber resources and mineral wealth to pass on intact and unspoiled to the succeeding generation. The majority of our large fortunes have been accumulated by several generations. Another debt which we owe is to preserve our physical health and strength. When America went into the World War, out of every 1,000 males examined for military service 545 were found to have physical defects. Thirty per cent were infected by tuberculosis. Then we owe a debt to American home life. A Chinese student in one of our American colleges offered severe criticism for American homes and institutions, and we ought to pay back some of the lost beauty to our home life. Another debt which we owe is to the church. We have reached the time when it is desirable to belong to a church, not only for spiritual strength, but for social, political and business purposes as well. Then we owe a great debt to our heavenly Father, and we can pay one only by service to others. In closing, Mr. Kennett related the beautiful story of Henry Van Dyke, "The Other Wise Man." Artaban, the fourth wise man, sold all his possessions, and bought three gorgeous gems, a sapphire, a ruby, and a pearl, and set out to meet Caspar, Melchior, and Balthazar, and seek the infant Jesus to lay these jewels at His feet. He set out on his swift horse, Vasda, and in a grove of date-palms he came upon a poor Hebrew exile, who lay parched by fever and dying on the roadside. He stopped and spent several hours nursing him and applying remedies, for the Magians were physicians as well as astrologers. The man revived, sat up, and blessed Artaban because he had pity upon the sick. This service had consumed several precious hours, and upon arriving at the appointed place, he found that the other wise men had come and departed to find the King. Artaban knew that he could not cross the desert on his horse, so he sold his sapphire and bought camels and food for the rest of the journey. When he finally reached Bethlehem, he entered a stone cottage where a young mother crooned a lullaby over her sleeping babe. Soon the soldiers of Herod rushed through the streets of the quiet village, slaying the little ones with swords. Artaban gave his glittering ruby for the life of the young child of the stranger. After 33 years of quest, and Artaban was a white-haired old pilgrim, he came at last to Jerusalem, on his way to Golgotha to the crucifixion of the Savior when he met a troop of Macedonian soldiers dragging a young girl, who piteously begged the Magian to save her from a fate worse than death. This was the third trial for Artaban, but he gave his luminous pearl, "the last of his treasures which he had kept for the King," as a ransom for the young girl. "Verily, I say unto thee, Inasmuch as thou hast done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, thou hast done it unto me." His treasures were accepted, and the Other Wise Man had found the King. At this service the skillful playing of Mr. Ernest B. Stimson and the rendition of "Lead, Kindly Light," as a duet by Messrs. Clarence Schultheiss and C. L. Gray, Jr., added greatly to the impressiveness of the hour of worship. At the evening service, Rev.

P. S. Kennett again occupied the pulpit, and brought a helpful message.

On Monday afternoon the three Missionary Circles held meetings as follows: Circle No. 1 with Mrs. L. R. Johnston; No. 2 with Mrs. C. C. Robbins, and No. 3 with Mrs. Fred Younts. At Mrs. Johnston's an interesting and helpful program was presented by Mesdames P. S. Kennett and C. R. Hinshaw, and there was an attendance of ten members. The hostess served delicious Russian tea and sandwiches.

The Christian Endeavor Society enjoyed a treat at their meeting Monday evening when Rev. Perry Lee Gibbs, assistant secretary of the Board of Christian Education, delivered an inspiring message to a number of the members and their friends, including several from the English Street Society. We were much pleased to learn that Rev. Lester Ballard, who has been shut in a few days with flu, was able to be present and sing a beautiful solo.

The prayer meeting and teacher training class will hold its weekly meeting as usual next Wednesday evening, and the topic, "Adults and the Life of Christ," will be discussed.

We regret to note that many of our members have been afflicted with colds and influenza, among them being both our pastors, but we are much pleased to learn that they were able to be out on Monday. Mrs. R. I. Farmer continues rather ill, and her numerous friends are wishing for her an early recovery.

Mrs. W. C. Hammond has resigned her position as secretary of the Board of Public Welfare in order to rest. Since 1925 she has held this important post of service, and filled it in a most acceptable and efficient manner. The Board and the City Council accepted her resignation with great reluctance.

We are pleased to announce that Mrs. O. D. McPherson is recovering from a rather severe case of diphtheria.

Mrs. John C. Whitesell returned Saturday from a visit of two weeks to her mother, Mrs. Moffitt, at Ramseur.

Garland McPherson has returned to Chapel Hill to resume his studies after spending the holidays with his parents.

Arnold J. Koonce has accepted a position with the well known firm of funeral directors, Vogler and Son, of Winston-Salem.

The J. C. Welch Motor Company will erect a new $60,000 garage on South Wrenn street in the early spring.

State Street, Lexington.—The services Sunday morning were well attended considering that some of the folks are still kept away on account of the "flu." There was a very encouraging increase in attendance over last Sunday.

Bro. Bethea brought us an appealing and helpful message—or rather admonition—to strive for a fuller service and deeper consecration during the year just beginning. At the close of the sermon just before the closing prayer our pastor requested that we all join hands and all offer sentence prayers pledging a more loyal discharge of duty and a hearty co-operation with God and with our pastor and with each other. Almost every one responded, even some of the smallest children present, to this request.

Solemn and impressive beyond words was this unanimous circle of uplifted hearts and voices thanking God for blessings and promising stronger fidelity in the future. At the close of this prayer the beautiful hymn, "The Mercy Seat," was sung by the entire congregation.

Sunday evening Bro. Bethea gave us another fine sermon, the subject of which was, "The School of Experience." At the close of the preaching service the Workers' Council held a meeting, Mrs. C. L. Koonts presiding.

On Sunday evening, December 23, a Christmas pageant was given by a group of the young people and children of the different departments of the Sunday school. This proved a very interesting entertainment and was enjoyed by a large audience. The offering received was a generous one cheerfully given.

Next Sunday we celebrate the anniversary of the opening of our church. Bro. Taylor, president of the conference, will speak to us in the morning and Rev. Roy I. Farmer, of High Point First Church, will speak in the afternoon and Mrs. Myer at night. There will be special music at all the services. All are cordially invited to attend and bring lunch. Coffee will be served by the ladies of the Missionary Society in the dining room of the church, where lunch will be eaten.

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Wilcox and children visited at the parsonage a week during the Christmas time, returning home last Wednesday.

Christian Endeavor has been reorganized and some new members enrolled. Splendid programs are given each Wednesday night.

The Missionary Society met last Thursday afternoon at the parsonage, Mrs. A. H. Evans, president, presiding. REPORTER.

Level Cross, Randleman Charge.—There have been a few things of interest at our church since I was elected reporter, so I will attempt a report.

Rev. T. A. Williams has filled his appointments and brought us some helpful messages. We all like Bro. Williams and his family, but we have not forgotten our former pastor and family and regretted very much to hear of their having flu; hope they are well now.

We hold our union singing every first Sunday at 2 p. m. with Prof. A. M. Fentress in charge. This singing is for the purpose of learning new songs and practice for the singers' union convention which will be held at Pleasant Garden some time next fall. The singing will continue until then and all who wish to come will be welcome and we would be glad for any singers to come and take part in the singing.

We have a very good Sunday school, which is held at 10 o'clock each Sunday morning; not so many in attendance now on account of so much sickness.

With best wishes for the editor and all the readers. MRS. T. E. MARLEY.

Lebanon Charge.—Some time has elapsed since the writer has sent a report of the Herald. We hope our friends will not take our failure to report to mean we have been idle all the time. The fact is, we have been so busy we haven't had time to report.

At the last Annual Conference we were changed from Mebane charge to Lebanon Charge. For two years it was our privilege to serve the good people of Mebane. We shall not soon forget their kindness to us, and loyalty to the church. I doubt if a more loyal band can be found anywhere. It was with reluctance that we packed our things and moved from among them. But, taking everything into consideration, we think we were justified in making the move.

We were cordially received by the good people of Lebanon. We were not among strangers, as we served this charge for seven years. We found many old friends and hope to make some new ones.

The work is starting off well and we are looking for a good year. A new furnace has been installed and plans are on for other improvements.

A very beautiful and impressive Christmas program was rendered, and all members of the Sunday school were treated. Since taking charge of the work here we have received a number of useful gifts. We wish to thank all who have been thoughtful of us.

We have been hindered considerably by sickness among our people. But we are glad to note some improvement along that line. The attendance at Sunday school was better last Sunday than it has been some time.

Our reporter has been shut in for some time. That explains why you haven't heard from us through the paper. We are expecting her to be on the job from now on.

EDWARD SUITS.

Mt. Pleasant Charge.—Gifts helpful from Roy L. Bowman, J. E. Kirkman, Mrs. L. L. Bowman, Mrs. L. B. Clapp.

Our sick people are improving, with one or two exceptions. Sister Hettie Amick not expected to live.

Bro. Hurly Soots seems to be gradually failing.

May the Lord bless these afflicted ones. More to follow. G. F. MILLAWAY.
Liberty, N. C., Route 2.

Albemarle.—Rev. Mr. Anderson left Monday for Atlanta, Georgia, where he goes to visit relatives and friends. He expects to return the latter part of the week. Mrs. Anderson and children, who have been spending some time among homefolks, will return with him.

The Ladies' Aid Society will hold its January meeting Thursday afternoon at 2:30 at the home of Mrs. W. J. Kennedy. Every member is urged to be present as some important business is to come up at this time.

Two weeks ago our pastor found on the pulpit a visiting card of one of our former pastors, showing that he had stopped to see our new church. We would have liked very much to see him and show him over the building, but suppose he was in a hurry. We would be very glad to have others of our old friends pay us a visit, if they happen to be passing this way.

We are sorry to note the continued illness of some of our members, and hope that they will soon be able to be out again, as we miss everyone of them.

MRS. JOHN WHITLOCK, Reporter.

Fairfield.—Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk delivered his second sermon to us Sunday, December 30, at 11 o'clock. Every one seemed to enjoy his message fine. The congregation was small on account of so much flu, but I feel sure he will have large congregations when the flu dies out.

Owing to the fact that there was so much sickness around here, the first quarterly conference was not held December 29 as it had been planned, but will be held the second Sunday morning in January.

The Sunday school gave a nice Christmas tree on Christmas eve. Some songs were sung and then the gifts were taken off the tree and distributed. A treat was given to the Sunday school.

Four members of our Sunday school motored to South Carolina and were married during the Christmas holidays. Miss Neppie McConnell was married to Mr. Wheeler Howard, and Miss Azealee Prim was married to Mr. Ernest McConnell.

AGNES PROCTOR, Reporter.

South Lexington Church.—Our Christmas program was carried out very nicely. There was a large crowd present and every one seemed to enjoy it.

Bro. Isley filled his regular appointment at our church Sunday at 11 o'clock. He always brings us very helpful messages. Bro. Taylor was with us Sunday night. He gave us a good gospel sermon. We were very glad to have Bro. N. G. Bethea and some members worship with us. We are always glad to have visitors. Bro. Bethea and his people have been very nice to us. We appreciate it very much. As the new year has come may we do more for each other and in so doing we will be working for Jesus our King who gave all that we might live. He paid the price for us, and let us consecrate our all to Him and make this year a year for Him.

REPORTER.

Pleasant Grove.—The attendance at Sunday school and church services has held up well since there is so much sickness in the community. Brother Williams brought us two splendid sermons Sunday. At the morning service the text was, "For mine eyes have seen thy salvation" (Luke 2:30). At the evening service St. Matthew 19:22: "But when the young man heard that saying, he went away sorrowful, for he had great possessions." We fear there are a great many today like the young man of old would like to have eternal life but are not willing to pay the price.

The death angel came to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Kennedy Wednesday before Christmas and claimed one of the dearest little boys, Clayton, four and one-half years of age. Then on the next Sunday morning death invaded the home of Mr. Maynard Kennedy and claimed Mrs. Kennedy, the wife and mother. Mrs. Kennedy had been suffering with heart trouble for some time. She will be greatly missed in the church and community, but most of all in the home, as she leaves a husband and nine children. Our hearts go out in sympathy to those who mourn. May they be sustained by the God who loves us and who doeth all things well.

MRS. RALPH KENNEDY, Reporter.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle Charge.—Today was a good day at Mt. Zion. Due to so much sickness throughout the membership of our Sunday school we left off our entertainment; however, the school raised something over $20.00 and bought a treat for every member of Sunday school and today there was a large attendance. Our pastor has been away most of the time, spending Christmas with his children of High Point, Henderson and other places.

We are sorry to have to report the death of one of our most beloved members, Bro.

George N. Butner. He died in a Winston-Salem hospital after a long period of declining health. Bro. Hunter conducted his funeral at Mt. Zion at 11 o'clock December 20th, after which he was buried in the cemetery at Mt. Zion right alongside our beloved brother, Uncle William Brown.

Bro. and Sister C. R. Mikles are the happy parents of a new baby; also, Bro. and Sister Chester Lane have a new boarder.

The women's board met immediately after Sunday school today with a good attendance.

Best wishes to all for a very prosperous new year.
C. W. ALLEN.

First Church, Winston-Salem.—Sh! Sh! Sh! While we slept the New Year slipped up on us; did it catch you napping? If it did, don't let it leave you that way.

Last Wednesday night after prayer meeting the regular quarterly conference was held. Everything went off harmoniously, all reports that were made were accepted unanimously. Rev. H. F. Surratt read his report, which included the appreciation for the co-operation they have received from the members of the church and all the courtesies that have been shown them. At the end of this report were some suggestions for the betterment of the church and community. These were especially interesting and were re-read to the congregation the following Sunday.

The regular monthly sacramental service was held Sunday morning in which a good number took part.

The Christian Endeavor held its regular weekly meeting Sunday night at 6:45. The topic used was "Learning from Experience." (We surely are having some experience in the reorganization of our society, but we are great believers in stickability.)

Tuesday afternoon the Ladies' Aid and the Women's Missionary Society held a joint meeting the home of Mrs. R. H. Shouse.

Wednesday night was the regular mid-weekly prayer meeting (in case some people didn't know we have them). This week we went a round higher on our "Ladder of Christian Graces."

Thursday night the Young People's Missionary Society met at the home of Mrs. J. A. Gwyn. Do you remember who won the banners last year? Better watch out.

Friday night the Home Circle is holding a measuring party at the home of Miss Ruth Hill. All members of the church are cordially invited, especially the heavyweights.

I saw in this paper last week that Santa Claus was real good to the Children's Home. Why is it just at Christmas time we open our hearts and pocketbooks a little wider and a little oftener?
EVELYN SMOTHERS.

Zoar, Mecklenburg Circuit.—Owing to cold and flu in some of the homes, attendance at church was very small Sunday. Pastor Hall filled his appointment at 3 o'clock with a small congregation, but every one was attentive and seemed to enjoy his sermon. The members of Zoar are glad to welcome Rev. W. C. Hall back again as pastor. Wish for all to co-operate and make this the best year yet.

There will be prayer meeting next Sunday at 2:30. Mr. W. C. Hartis was appointed to conduct the meeting.

Best wishes to the Herald.

REPORTER.

Mt. Hermon Church, Creswell Circuit.—Our pastor, Rev. R. L. Hotheox, did not fill his appointment due to the bad weather and there was no one out, but he preached for us at the night service a splendid and very helpful sermon.

We held our regular Thanksgiving services and took the offering for the Children's Home.

The Sunday school gave a Christmas tree to the children which I think was enjoyed by all.

Our Ladies' Aid is doing a splendid work; in fact, I don't see how we ever got along without it. They gave a box party, the proceeds being $50.60.

We are hoping to make this the best in the history of our church.

The Sunday school greatly misses our secretary, Miss Minnie Lee Davenport, who is attending school at E. C. T. C. at Greenville.

Hoping the readers of the Herald a very happy New Year.

CALLA BARNES DAVENPORT.

English Street.—Many things to make us both happy and sad have happened since our last report. Many of our church folks have been sick and some are still sick, but we have much to be thankful for in that there was not a death in the membership of this church, and the pastor and family escaped the sick list. Bro. Reynolds is always on the job; it seems that he spends seven days a week in the Master's work. He begins his preaching services on time and closes on time, and to hear him preach once means you'll want to hear him again. I trust many will take these beautiful messages to heart and live a life that is worth while so when the final summons is heard we will be ready to stand the test.

The Sunday school secretary is starting a new roll with 111 present last Sunday. Some of the classes will have to be divided, so more teachers are needed. We appreciate the active part the pastor's family is taking in the singing and teaching the classes of the little folks.

The church has been furnished with new Methodist Protestant Hymnals, which changes the order of service.

Owing to the serious flu epidemic the regular Christian Endeavor business meeting was not held in December, but on next Friday night the business for two months will be looked after.

The Ladies' Aid is doing good work under the leadership of our new president, Mrs. Gaebel. They paid $19 on a church debt last week and $5 this week, besides some other things they paid for recently.

The Jennie Lee Philathea class held a watch party at the home of Misses Iris and Tressie Caudle, watching the old year go out and the new year come in while the whistles were blowing and bells ringing. Miss Tressie Caudle was the first to enter our church in 1929 and ring the bell.

The board of stewards, J. A. Robbins, J. A. Bowen, J. A. Lee, M. L. Boswell, H. L. Swann, Mrs. G. Y. Stone and the pastor held their monthly meeting New Year's night with Mrs. G. Y. Stone.

In spite of the flu and other causes of much sickness the prayer meeting attendance has held up well, but we are expecting more next Wednesday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Cicero Clodfelter's baby girl was the victim of flu and pneumonia; this makes two children that God has called from this home in less than a year. We extend our heart-felt sympathy to this family.

There have been many wedding bells in Hight Point. Among the happy wedding ones was Miss Connie Hilliard.

Wishing for all churches a successful year.

MRS. J. A. LEE, Reporter.

Denton Church.—The Denton church has been handicapped lately because of the flu epidemic, but we are again having better attendance.

Appropriate Christmas exercises were held at our church, the children doing splendidly, considering the small amount of time they had in which to practice.

Two of our church members were married Christmas. Miss Mary Lee Frank was wed to Mr. Wade Lanier. This ceremony was performed on December 30th at the home of the pastor, Rev. E. A. Bingham. These young people are of the best families of our church and we wish them much happiness.

On last Sunday our pastor preached a very appropriate sermon on the beginning of the new year right, to a large audience.

We are sure that every one enjoyed this fine gospel message. Our pastor always has a fine message for the people, and all enjoy these messages.

Our C. E. Society continues to grow under the efficient leadership of the president, Miss Blanche Hoover.

We wish the Herald a prosperous New Year with continued praise.

REPORTER.

Concord, Saxapahaw Circuit.—Although we have much sickness in our community, we had a very good attendance at the regular morning service at our church. Mr. Loy gave us an excellent sermon. If the people of this church would only apply this sermon to their lives they would make this world a better place in which to live. Mr. Loy has given us many good sermons, but it seems that each one grows better.

Mr. T. H. Moore has been confined to his home, but we are glad to know that he is improving.

Mrs. R. N. Roberson, Mrs. W. P. Lewis and B. S. Curl have also been confined with the flu, but all are improving.

Wishing all a very prosperous New Year.

REPORTER.

Asheville.—Rev. F. W. Paschall is certainly giving us fine sermons. The regret is that our attendance is not so good because of such sickness among our members.

Miss Maggie Willis, one of our most loyal and faithful members, passed away Sunday morning at the French Broad Hospital, after a short illness.

Miss Novella McIntyre is improving. We are glad to report she is able to walk a few steps.

Miss Eudora Younginer returned to High Point Sunday to resume her teaching in the High Point High School.

The monthly business meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society will be held Friday evening at the home of Miss Clarice Younginer, the retiring president. Miss Nancy Clouse, the president, will have charge of the meeting.

The monthly meeting of the brotherhood was postponed from the second to the third Tuesday of this month because of the absence of our pastor, who will be in High Point this week.

REPORTER.

Pilot Church, Pinnacle Circuit.—Some of the things happening at Pilot recently include our Christmas entertainment. The pageant entitled "The Star Leads On" was rendered pretty well, a nice tree, a good Sunday school treat, and, best of all, a full house of well-behaved folks.

Our Sunday school voted to continue on through the winter weather. Those of us who braved the cold wind and went to church the first Sunday in the new year feel we were well paid for the going. Bro. Hunter preached to a small number, but he seemed to enjoy liberty in speaking and the message, we believe, was well received. Personally, I feel better since hearing my pastor preach.

May our New Year resolutions include something of the theme of the sermon, "Faith in Christ that brings us in closer touch with a personal Savior."

Denton Charge.—There has been so much sickness in this community that the attendance has not been very large for a few Sundays. The attendance was much better at Denton yesterday. So many were sick around Cid that we had very few out.

Two of the churches, Denton and Piney Grove, had Christmas exercises, a tree and treat for the children. Cid had planned and was preparing an exercise, but on account of so much sickness had to call it off. But they gave the children a treat. Mrs. N. W. Lanier, the reporter for Cid, has been sick for some time with the "flu." We hope all the sick ones will soon be able to attend church again.

SPECIAL SERVICES

State Street Church, Lexington, will have special services second Sunday in January to which all Methodist Protestants nearby are invited. President Taylor will preach at 11 a. m. Rev. Roy I. Farmer will speak at 2 p. m. and Mrs. H. W. Maier at 7 p. m.

Rev. E. L. Ballard will sing in the afternoon service and the Crescent Quartette will sing several numbers during the day, singing in all the services. We are inviting all our Methodist Protestant friends in Davidson County especially to come and join us in this second anniversary of the opening of our Sunday school building. Come and bring your lunch and stay all day. The ladies of the church will furnish hot coffee to all who come, and we will have a picnic dinner in the dining room of the church. Plenty of room and comfortable.

Those who are near enough to come in the afternoon and cannot leave their Sunday school or church services in the morning will be amply repaid for coming to the afternoon services, for we have a helpful program arranged. Plenty of parking space near the church as Zimmerman filling station does not open on Sunday and they give us the privilege of their space across the street in front of the church. Will be glad to see any who will come.

AMERICA AND ENGLAND

We two are one,
And so shall ever be;
Not by man-made law,
'Tis God's divine decree.

We two are one,
Let crafty critics cease;
Solemnly we are pledged
To keep perpetual peace.

We two are one,
In spirit and in speech;
While wisdom's at the helm
There cannot be a breach.

We two are one,
Base traitors then beware;
Our enemies may plot,
But are impotent to scare.

We two are one,
Held by friendship's hands;
The trust that we possess
We share with other lands.

We two are one,
Abreast we stand for right;
Aloft we hold the torch
Of freedom's holy light.

We two are one,
And so shall ever be;
Not by man-made law,
'Tis God's divine decree.

AIR MAIL TO PANAMA

Air mail service between the United States and the Panama Canal Zone will begin this week, January 11. It takes a ship seven days to go from the United States to Panama. The mail planes will make the trip in less than three days; the actual flying time will be 19 hours. Starting from Miami, Fla., the planes will make stops as follows: Havana, Cuba; Belize, British Honduras; Tela, Honduras; Corinto and Managua, Nicaragua; Puntarenas and San Jose, Costa Rica; David and Panama City, Panama; and Cristobal, in the Canal Zone. Passengers as well as mail, will be carried in the near future.—Current Events.

—John D. Rockefeller has bought a Methodist Protestant church at Tarrytown, New York. The lot has a frontage of 80 feet and the price to be paid is $80,000. This is a historic church and there is regret that the present members voted to sell it. This is the church in which Anna Howard Shaw was ordained to the ministry. Mr. Rockefeller permits the church to be removed with all its furnishings and memorials. He wants the ground to complete a park and residential development. Among the pastors of this church Dr. Lyman E. Davis and Rev. Samuel Tambllyn have place and we believe Dr. C. E. Wilbur also.

—Mrs. Elizabeth Williams Pickard was buried in Flat Rock cemetery. The funeral was held in Asheloro Street Baptist church, where she and her husband held their membership. Bros. Geringer and Bates assisted in the service.

Your treasurer had to take care of the G. C. Gift debt, amounting to $2,350.00, assumed by the Annual Conference. This means that he will be expected to pay $35.25 interest each quarter until the debt shall have been discharged. The interest will be due on April 1st, and must be paid. One note for $350 ought to be paid off when the interest is due. Brethren, make it possible for your treasurer to do this.

If the members of the church would tithe their income monthly, we would meet all of our obligations and have a good balance in the bank. No appeals for funds would be necessary at any time, and our church would go forward by leaps and bounds. In a little while we would pay off the college debt, take care of our church extension work in a creditable way, and gladden the hearts of our superannuates by giving them adequate support as long as they live.

If you do not believe what we have said, try it out for a year and disprove it if you can.

Your treasurer is working on the assumption that the members of the church want to know all about the financial condition of the conference, and he is taking the pains to keep them informed. Our policy is: "Tell it to the churches; it's their business." If this is not a good policy, say so, and we will change it.

Clothing and Other Supplies

Rev. Geo. L. Curry, 6 hens.

A Sunday school class, Arlington, Ohio, Mr. Will Hoy, president, a box of Christmas toys, pictures and books.

Rev. T. J. Whitehead, for Spring Church, West Thomasville, 13 quarts canned fruit and preserves, one pumpkin, one-half bushel Irish potatoes and one peck sweet potatoes, with cash as reported above.

Rev. C. J. Kerlin, for Logansport (Ind.) S. S., a Christmas box containing toys, games, handkerchiefs, tooth brushes, stockings, towels and wash cloths.

Mrs. W. C. Hammer, for the ladies of Asheboro church, one box of clothing for girls, towels and other supplies. This should have been reported sooner.

Mrs. Ida Guyer, for her S. S. class, Lebanon, a Christmas box containing material for shirts for all our boys, and a handkerchief for each boy.

We are thankful to all those who thus remembered us.

The report is considerably shorter this week, but we realize that we are just getting started into the new year and that good reports will be coming in from all the churches and Sunday schools of our conference throughout the entire year.

In our books in this office we are opening an account with every church in the conference. The charge is first listed and then each church on that charge is listed with space given for 12 or more offerings during the year. We will keep you informed about these offerings betimes through your Sunday school superintendent.

Our Needs

Letters frequently come into this office asking for a list of our needs. Our great need just now is money. We have recently purchased three good cows, and got them at a bargain, we think, and they must be paid for. We will be compelled to buy some farming tools and supplies before beginning our spring work on the farm.

The building in which we are living has been in use for 16 years, so the window shades are almost given out, the furniture in some cases is dilapidated, and the floors in some places are badly worn. These things must be attended to at an early date besides keeping up the regular running expenses.

This gives you our needs as well as we can express it in brief terms.

We shall be glad if a number of our churches and Sunday school will set a definite amount which they will give every month. The amounts reported above for Asheboro and Concord and the Young Ladies' Bible class, Welch Memorial, are their regular monthly offerings. Others are making regular and stated offerings per month. If all will do that we would have a regular income. We thank you, and may God bless you.

Faithfully yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

The Zionist Movement

The Zionist movement originated near the close of the last century. The purpose was to provide for persecuted Jews in different parts of the world a place of refuge where they might be gathered together and form a nation of their own. The place that most commended itself for their purpose was Palestine, their ancient home-land. Certain Bible prophecies seem to predict the restoration to the Jews of their ancient heritage, and this made a strong appeal to the religious-minded Jews. A place was found in Palestine and the migration started. The movement is still in progress and Jews and Gentiles everywhere are appealed to to finance the movement.

The project is regarded both favorably and unfavorably. To some it seems Quixotic and extravagant. Others are inclined to see in it a fulfillment of Bible prophecy and therefore are disposed to give it aid or at least bid it Godspeed.

The question is somewhat like that of the colonization of the negroes in Africa, sentimentally desirable but seemingly impossible. Of both we may say, If it is the purpose of God, it can be done and will be done. But that is a matter about which there may well be doubt.

We believe the Zionist movement comes from Jewish rather than Christian impulses. Jesus taught that acceptable worship does not depend upon locality but upon spirit. The Jews can be people of God without returning to Palestine. Returning to that land will not make them the people of God. We suspect that the Zionist advocates have not gotten wholly free from the old false Jewish ambition to be pre-eminent among the nations. However so far as their effort is practically philanthropic we wish them the greatest success. No one should blame persecuted Jews for seeking a land of refuge which they may occupy as their own.

The Cruiser Bill

Congress is faced with the Kellogg Peace Pact and at the same time with the Navy's Cruiser Bill. It seems to be asked in almost the same breath to declare for peace and declare for war. There may be no insincerity in signing peace treaties and at the same time making such defense preparations as are necessary to prevent war. Yet it is unfortunate that the two measures come together. Building cruisers is susceptible of a twofold interpretation. It looks more like preparation for war than preparation for peace. President Coolidge seems to be a cool-headed man and he has declared for the cruisers. Yet our good president has been much ridiculed by English papers and it may be his head is not as cool as he thinks it is. We trust that discussion will clarify the situation and enable Congress to take proper action. We regret that we cannot tell Congress just what to do.

—The United States Senate ratified the Kellogg Peace Pact on Tuesday. There was only one vote against it.

Wanted—A Pastor

A man of zeal and a man of wisdom,
Bubbling with fun and grave as a sage,
A ready mixer and a wonderful student,
Equally at home with infancy or with age.

As bold as a lion and meek as a lamb,
Leading in fight and counseling peace,
Tough as an oak and tender as a vine,
Strong in his arms and weak in his knees.

A man of firmness and a man of yielding,
Ready to go on and ready to turn back,
A man who knows which way the wind blows
And is never caught in a cul-de-sac.

A man who can run with the hares or the hounds
And honor the company he keeps.
A man whose discretion knows no bounds,
Who the limit of prudence never overleaps.

If you can send us the man, send him on:
We will receive him with open arms;
We will give him a chance to see what he sees
And be duly impressed with our charms.

ANNUAL MISSIONARY THANK-OFFERING

The time for the annual February thank-offering is near at hand. Special emphasis is being made this year upon this event, that it may be backed up by the whole denomination. The Executive Committee of the General Conference has asked that the secretaries of the Board of Missions get thank-offering envelopes into the hands of all pastors of churches where there is not now a missionary organization. These will go out in a few days. The president of the General Conference has made a personal appeal to pastors which will be published.

Many of the branches are doing special work with the funds received through these thank-offerings, in providing buildings so badly needed. Let every branch, every auxiliary and every pastor get behind the February thank-offering.

—That is a pathetic story of the two young physicians of London who gave their time to cancer research, reduced themselves to poverty, and then took their own lives because they said life was not worth living. They might have taken a saner view of life and found some task that would have enlisted their interest. A man makes a very serious and presumptuous mistake when he pronounces his life not worth pursuing. He knows not what great values Providence may lead him into the realization of in the future. Life is a great and sacred trust never to be despised.

UNION OF DENOMINATIONS

Undoubtedly organic church union is coming. The idea is receiving more thought than ever before, and just now it is being given an extra impetus by the fact that so many small denominations are struggling for existence. It is undeniable that when any church must put forth great effort to secure funds sufficient for financing its operation, its efficiency for doing the work for which it exists is greatly impaired. For instance, a local church which must spend much time and effort getting its budget subscribed, then add extra effort in making collections sufficient to pay operating expenses, has little time, thought or funds left for the real work of the church.

Suppose two or more small denominations similar in character should unite. It would mean that where there are two small struggling local churches with two overheads and two of everything else, there would be one large congregation, one overhead, the money strain would be removed, and the church could do a real work.

I am keenly interested in the pending union of the Congregational and Christian denominations which seems likely to be effected soon. This union, when operative, will bring relief to a large number of local churches.

It is true, the Methodist Protestant Church has not been invited to become a party to this union. But does any one think for a moment that two Christian churches that can unite with each other would present an unfriendly attitude towards a third denomination which might wish to join them?

My suggestion is that in a tactful manner we ascertain from the Congregational and Christian churches if they would welcome a third party to the coalition, and, if the answer is favorable, proceed at once to take the steps necessary to such union. This need not involve any embarrassment if the matter is approached in the right way, and would stay threatening disintegration. Eventually the Protestant churches must lay aside their pride and prejudices, compose their differences, and get together. The waste of the denominational system is too enormous to be endured much longer.

This is an appeal, not to the ministry alone, but to the laymen as well, of our denomination, to face the situation squarely, recognize the facts and take steps to see what can be done to bring about this consolidation.

E. S. WILLS.

FINISH THE JOB

HARRY EMERSON FOSDICK

I am one of those who have had the privilege of seeing the work of the Near East Relief. I am not ashamed that tears came to my eyes as the pictures were shown on the screen, because of the memories they invoked—the workshop where the children were being trained, and many other scenes that I remember so well. I never shall forget that day in Athens when these poor children paid a thanksgiving to Almighty God for their food.

Now that you have started the work, it must go on, and I will give you three reasons why it must be completed:

1. For the sake of the children.

Any of you who have seen these children realize how absolutely worthwhile it is to save lives like these. Some of the best stock is in these Armenian boys and girls. Those of us who deal with them at Columbia University know that some of the finest brains with which we deal come from these people. We must do the work for the sake of the children and we must not stop because we have saved them through their teens. My children at home are fifteen and seventeen years old respectively and I do not consider my job done by any means. I would not want any person who had the responsibility for them to drop the responsibility for their care at this point. Let's follow through until this thing is done, and the children have the chance to be established in life.

2. What it means to the Spirit of Good Will in the World.

I have just come back from Europe. There is nothing that can save the situation there except good will, and there is only one thing that promotes good will and that is good will itself. Somebody must start it, somebody must keep everlastingly at it, deeming it a privilege to have a chance to promote good will. We have been handed this wonderful opportunity to show good will where good will counts most, and that is where it is shown to children.

3. What it means for our nation.

I am not very proud of the record of our government since the war, although I am feeling a little better since the Kellogg pact. What we have been doing has been rather self-centered. Here is something that we can do. Here is a chance for us, the American people, to say in terms that will be well understood that we do care—that we are not isolated, that we do not think that we can let the rest of the human race whistle.

Because of the children, because of the spirit of good will, because of the opportunity that comes to the nation, let's see it through!

Schwab said that passing through Arizona he asked a porter what the average tip was. The answer was that a dollar was the average. So, the following morning Mr. Schwab gave the porter a dollar. "For the Lord sake, Boss, you're the first man that ever came up to the average."

As I understand it, it is our business to go out and place the average high and then get as many people as possible to come up to it.

THE ONENESS OF HUMANITY

One of the great truths declared by the Incarnation of Jesus Christ was the oneness of humanity. Jesus Christ was made man. He was not a man only, but The Man. In Him all humanity was centered. Therefore, every man has a holy relationship to Him, and consequently all men have a relationship one to the other. St. Paul declared at Mars Hill: God "hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth." My neighbor is my brother, and neighborliness is not confined to nationality nor yet to near association. The man of Africa or China is my neighbor just as much as the man who lives near me or the man who works by my side. Christianity reveals just that truth concerning brotherhood.—Rev. Floyd W. Tompkins, D.D., in The Living Church.

GOD OUR STRENGTH

The heart's natural strength of spirit and resolution may bear up under outward weakness, or the failing of the flesh; but when the heart itself fails, which is the strength of the flesh, what shall strengthen it? Nothing but God, who is the strength of the heart and its portion forever.—Archbishop Leighton.

DENOMINATIONAL ENTERPRISES

RESUME OF MINUTES OF A MEETING OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE BOARD OF MISSIONS

Held in Baltimore January 3, 1929

The proposed new church at Findlay, Ohio, was considered. Dr. Haddaway was asked to visit Findlay and confer with Dr. F. L. Brown and Rev. Baughman in an effort to determine the best course to follow.

The committee discussed plans for the May meeting; it is hoped that we may enjoy a great week of inspiration. Of course no plans can be definitely announced until all the organizations involved have considered them, but it has been suggested that since all the General Conference Boards, the Annual Conference presidents, the Executive Boards of the W. F. M. S. and the W. H. M. S. may meet in the First Church, Pittsburgh, during the same week, if they are agreeable to that arrangement; it will make a great occasion of inspiration. The meeting could begin on Tuesday with the session of the Board of Education. If agreeable to the two Women's Missionary Societies, their Executive Boards could meet on Wednesday. Thursday afternoon and evening could be set aside for the anniversary program of the W. F. M. S. The conference presidents could meet on Friday and so on through the week, closing with a great meeting on Sunday night. This plan has been suggested to Mrs. East, the chairman of the Anniversary Committee of the W. F. M. S. She has also been notified that the Board of Missions stands ready to co-operate with her committee in any possible way to make their part of the program effective.

Miss Miskimen, our missionary on furlough from India, made a very interesting report of the work at Dhulia, and upon motion was employed to return to India at a date to be agreed upon later.

Mrs. Thompson was asked to correspond with Miss Dexter and make some satisfactory agreement with her concerning the time at which her resignation from the work at Pine Ridge shall take effect.

Dr. Miller and Dr. Haddaway, having visited the work at Dillonvale, Ohio, reported it to be in excellent condition, and complimented Miss Eiss upon her success there. Mrs. Hazel Greenwald was employed to succeed Miss Eiss in this field. Mrs. Greenwald comes to us highly recommended. She is the sister-in-law of Rev. Harris, our pastor at Dillonvale. Mrs. Greenwald's salary will be $75 per month, and she will be given $50 as working capital to be used in the mission.

Provision was made to meet the appropriations previously made to Rochester, N. Y., and Calvary Church, Washington, D. C., but no new appropriations were made.

The following resolution was adopted: "The attention of the Board of Missions has been called to the fact that Rev. C. O. Harvey, a member of the Illinois conference, has been canvassing in several conferences for funds to be used in Home Missions work in Chicago. The Board of Missions has not authorized Brother Harvey to canvass for such funds, and does not approve of his methods. The Board would caution our people against responding to such appeals from unauthorized parties for the support of its work."

Emmanuel Church, Philadelphia, has asked to be supplied with a full-time pastor, stating that they are willing to take care of all current obligations in connection with the same. Dr. Makosky and Dr. Haddaway are attending to this matter.

Dr. Broomfield and Dr. Haddaway represented this Board in a conference with the Church Extension Society of the Onondaga Conference, the pastor of the Rochester church and the architect concerning their new building. The lowest bid for the completion of the church was $35,000. Every church seeking the assistance of this Board should consult the Board before its building plans are adopted, as was done in this case.

One thousand dollars was cabled the China Missions to meet all bills to date. It takes eight weeks from the time we send a check before it is usable by our workers in China.

A letter from Mr. Soderbom was read in which he spoke in the most complimentary terms of Mr. Horace Williams and his work. Mr. Williams will return from Kalgan in July.

A report read from Rev. Cassen describing the damage done their home by the flood in India makes it imperative that steps be taken at once to furnish them with a place to live. The mud walls of the house are out of line six and eight inches, and the second floor made of cement is likely to fall at any time.

On motion Dr. Haddaway was instructed to notify Rev. Minnis that it is the desire of the Board of Missions that he plan to return to India in time to relieve Rev. Paul Cassen for his furlough.

The financial report for the quarter for the Nagoya Middle School shows receipts of 27,413 yen and total disbursements of 16,498 yen, leaving a balance of 9,904 yen. The fine auditorium being erected here is probably completed by this time, and a beautiful stone entrance to the school, built by the students in honor of the coronation of the emperor, is said to be one of the most beautiful gate entrances to any of the schools in Nagoya. The Board expressed its appreciation to the students for this achievement.

The Board endorsed the union of the Nagoya Third and the Atsuta churches, and the building of the new church on the kindergarten lot provided the W. F. M. S. consents to the use of that land.

Dr. Haddaway was instructed to send 24 copies of the church discipline to the Japan Mission.

An appeal was received for the $2,500 promised by the W. F. M. S. for the purchase of the Hamamatsu church lot.

On motion an expression of appreciation was extended to the missionaries and workers in Japan for the excellent work they are doing.

The Japan mission was granted the same budget as last year. The monthly budget for the Woman's department was $2,188.75, and the monthly budget for the Board of Foreign Missions department was $2,093.71.

Miss Alice Coates reports that there were 49 students enrolled in the Hamamatsu Kindergarten during the last quarter. They have moved from the Shin Machi chapel to a small public building at a slight increase in the cost. The operating expense is $518.46.

The report of the Oyama Kindergarten by Miss Sampson shows an operating expense for the quarter of $221 with a deficit of $6.02.

Miss Williams reports for the Nagoya "Kakiwa-Shinsei" Kindergarten that there are 83 enrolled, and there have been several conversions. The balance in the treasury of this school is $25.00.

The Tokio school for the blind reports 41 students enrolled with disbursements for the quarter of $754.00 with a balance in the treasury of $65.00.

In the evangelistic work Miss Williams reports 210 sessions held for the quarter in Nagoya with an average attendance 462; baptisms 2; inquirers 33; visits 67; leaflets distributed to homes 1,260. The receipts and disbursements were about equal. The evangelistic work at Yokohama is also encouraging.

The evangelistic work at Nagoya and Yokohama under the direction of Rev. Paul Warner is very successful, with receipts and disbursements about equal.

Dr. Haddaway reported that he had disposed of certain office furniture once used by Dr. Klein for $45, and had been able to equip the new office with second-hand furniture for the same amount.

On motion Miss Fleigle was invited to meet with the Executive Committee at its next meeting to be held in Pittsburgh February 12, at 9:30 a. m.

The meeting was adjourned with prayer by Dr. Broomfield.

AN APPEAL TO PASTORS

The annual thank-offering of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society has been of great assistance in supporting their program. Under the plan of merger this thank-offering is still to be received in February, and credited to the Woman's Department of our Foreign work. As president of the General Conference, I appeal to all pastors having missionary auxiliaries in their churches, to do their best in helping their women secure as large a thank-offering as possible. To those pastors in whose churches there are no missionary auxiliaries, I appeal to you to enlist the membership of your churches in making the February thank-offering the largest in our history.

The offering in the local church will be credited on its General Conference assessment. Appropriate envelopes will be furnished for distribution in each congregation.

J. C. BROOMFIELD.

"OUT OF MY POVERTY"

"Out of my poverty have I done this," said Tycho Brahe, for he made all his astronomical discoveries without a telescope. It is a big eye that is wanted in astronomy more than a telescope. "In my poverty have I done this," said Christopher Columbus when he crossed the Atlantic in a leaky vessel that you would not use today for a Newcastle collier. But it was enough for a great soul; he did not cross the Atlantic in an "Atlantic Liner." "Out of my poverty have I done this," said Turner, for he painted his masterpiece in the National Gallery out of broken tea-cups. "Out of my poverty have I done this," said John Milton, when the poor blind poet gave us "Paradise Lost." "Out of my poverty have I done this," said John Bunyan, when the poor tinker handed us out of Bedford Gao! all the treasures of The Pilgrim's Progress. Out of my poverty! It is never a question of instruments, and of resource, and of partnership; it is a question of spirit, faith, enthusiasm, sacrifice. By God's power we triumph over circumstances, and build the Church of the Living God.—Rev. W. L. Watkinson.

OPTIMISM

The President's Letter

EVANGELISM

Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.

Absentee Members

"Members of the church who remove from the community without taking a certificate, shall be given pastoral care through correspondence by the pastor." This revision in our church law, as to members, was passed by the last General Conference, and is now the law of the church. One earnest and progressive pastor writes us that he is beginning to observe this law. His church has nearly one hundred absentee members, and he is seeking to give them pastoral care by correspondence. He, no doubt, will get good results. We trust that all of our pastors will begin at once to observe this law.

Pastors and the Budgets

"Does the conference have any way of dealing with pastors who do not try to collect the budgets?" This question was asked us recently. We trust that we have no such pastors. However, the law requires that all pastors who fail to collect the budgets shall explain to the committee on official character, and if they fail for three years to collect the budgets, and do not have a satisfactory explanation, the law requires that they be left without an appointment for one year.

The Gratitude Gift Balance

We are calling on pastors to present this matter to the people, and to entreat them to pay this balance. The amount on no church is large. We trust that the people may feel that way about it, and that there may be a generous response. This loan was secured in the interest of the conference and the church, and on the faith that the people would back it. We still have that faith. Send collections promptly to Rev. George R. Brown, Treasurer, Reidsville, N. C. Thank you, brethren! Thank you!

Each Church to Establish

At the request of Rev. J. H. Straughn, D.D., Executive Secretary of Promotional Work, and Treasurer of the General Conference, the Winston Conference very readily adopted his program for promoting the work with which he is charged by the General Conference. There are two features in that program that we call attention to here. First: A "New Century Service Commission" to be set up by each church. This Commission is to consist of three departments or committees, as follows: Educational, Stewardship, and Finance. This Commission is to be appointed by the quarterly conference, and is to work under the supervision of the quarterly conference. The pastor is to be chairman of the Commission.

Second: A "Woman's Auxiliary" in every local church. It is gratifying to know that in the North Carolina Conference the women are practically a unit in their support of the new order for women's work, as created by the last General Conference. We urge that each of these provisions in Dr. Straughn's program be established in all of our churches just as early as possible.

Young People's Day

February 3rd is the time. If you have not already done so, please get the program, and hold this service. "Gibbs pays the freight." Send him a card, Box 772, College Station, Durham, N. C., and sooner than immediately the program will be in your hands. We are anxious that our churches observe this day. The offering goes to Treasurer Brown. The local church takes credit on G. C. B. In sending in, specify that offering was raised on "Young People's Day."

State Street

We were with this church Sunday, January 13, in the second anniversary service of the opening of the Sunday school building, preaching at 11 a. m. and attending the afternoon service also. The basement of the church was converted into a dining hall for the occasion, and a bountiful dinner served to all who could stay for the afternoon program. The attendance was very good, we thought, both morning and afternoon. Bro. Isley called in his morning service at South Lexington, and he and his people worshiped with State Street. Bro. Surratt and some of his people of the Winston church were down for the afternoon program. Bro. Farmer, who spoke at this time, was attended by some of his people of the First church, High Point. During the five years of its existence, this church has made very encouraging progress. We were glad to find that it has the confidence of the community where it is located—an indispensable asset to any church. A heavy debt is giving his people some concern. They have built well, and have accumulated in the five years of their existence about $30,000 worth of property; there is, perhaps, no better church location in the town of Lexington than ours at State Street. The people are united and are contributing liberally and freely to the work. We greatly hope that help may be provided for them, and that they may have continued growth, and be able to render increasing service. Bro. Bethea is popular with his people, and is proving for them a wise and helpful leader. We enjoyed the day with this charge.

On our return home Sunday night, we stopped to worship with First Church, Thomasville. We found Bro. Powell sick and unable to hold his service. Bro. Scarlot preached. We misjudged the hour of service, so did not arrive until late. We found several in attendance, and were glad to worship with them, and to hear Bro. Scarlot in at least a part of his sermon. Bro. Powell and his family are pleased with their new field of service, and the people are pleased with the new pastor and his family. Bro. Powell is entering enthusiastically upon his work. We trust that he may be well soon, and that this may be a happy year for him and his charge.

Gleaned

From the HERALD of last week, we glean the following interesting and pleasing comments:

"Bro. — is always on the job—to hear him preach once means that you will want to hear him again." "The Ladies Aid is doing good work under the leadership of our new president, Mrs. —. They paid $— on church debt last week, and $— this week." "Our pastor always has a fine message for the people, and all enjoy these messages." "Our C. E. is growing under the efficient leadership of the president, Miss —." "Our Sunday school voted to continue on through the winter weather." "I feel better since hearing my pastor preach." "Our goal for this year is 'Greater Work for the Kingdom, both in Sunday school and church services.'"

Where this spirit prevails, happiness and success will follow.

Assigned

On January 10, Rev. J. B. O'Briant was duly assigned as pastor of Vance charge, to serve for the remainder of this conference year. We predict that this will prove a happy pastoral relationship, and that the year will be fruitful in good results. May God abundantly bless this new relationship for pastor and people.

BE NOT AFRAID

Doubt Him not, although He leadeth
Other ways than hope has said;
All the grace thy spirit needeth
Dwells in Him. Be not afraid!

Faileth all of earth's reliance?
Do thy "vine and fig-tree" fade?
Thou hast bid all foes defiance
Through thy Lord. Be not afraid!

Fret thee not about the morrow,
Faint thou not for hope delayed;
He will lead, through joy, through sorrow
To thy Home. Be not afraid!

Trusting thus, and trusting ever—
On the Lord Jehovah stayed,
Thou at last shall ford the river
Safe, through Him: Be not afraid!

An old colored minister whose larder was quite empty arose from his knees after prayer one bitterly cold morning just in time to see a large opossum disappear into a big oak near the little manse. Thereupon he is said to have seized an axe and rushed forth, calling jubilantly to his wife: "Hurry out here, Martha! De good Book say 'Lijah was fed by ravens, and 'possum dis col' mornin' is none de less providential."

There is perhaps no trait that the Christian of today needs more to cultivate than that of associating God's providence with the commonest blessings of life right here and now. Such an attitude will strengthen his faith, deepen his reverence, and intensify his sense of God's love and nearness. When we think of God we should be able to say, "He is here." His promises of plenty for the time of need, of strength and grace for the daily task were not for people of a past age only; they are for us today as well.—Forward.

OUR STORY PAGE

THE COUNTRY AGENT

"My letter, please, Mr. Amberly," said Ruth Manley, holding out her hand at the post office window for the letter she was sure of receiving.

"Now, if a storm should come up, or the train should get wrecked, or the bridge swept away, I wonder what would happen, Miss Manley?" the old postmaster and storekeeper questioned, a twinkle in his spectacled eyes. "Reckon he'd have to write two or three at once to make up for it, wouldn't he?"

"But they are very precious letters, Mr. Amberly, and quite certain to come, unless something does happen. They are my mother's letters, and she writes so that I can get one every day. If something should happen, I guess maybe she would do just what you say—write two, at least, to make up for it."

"You don't say! Now, ain't mothers wonderful, to take time to write every single day?"

"Mine is wonderful," smiled Ruth as she hurried away to read her letter.

An old man with a coonskin cap on his head and a rifle across his knees sat on the steps of the little store. As she passed him she bowed courteously, stopping to pat a dreary-looking old, black hound that lay curled in the dust at the man's feet. Ruth liked dogs, and the old hound looked tired. He was not used to petting, and he wagged his tail feebly in acknowledgment.

"A newcomer, ain't she?" inquired the man of the postmaster, "all tricked out like these here town women."

"She's the new-fangled agent—home demonstration agent—the county commissioners have saddled on us taxpayers," the postmaster informed him. "Me and you, we ain't up with the times, Orrin; I ain't got no family, but you'll have to let your girls join her clubs. All the women think a sight of her, so far. She ain't been here but a few weeks."

Old Orrin Cale, rich in range cattle, wild hogs in the hommacks, and a quantity of flatwood lands, growled derisively. "Nothin' but plumb foolishness," he declared indignantly. "As if we ain't taxed enough without sending a snip of a girl down here to show us how to do things we been doing without her! Much she cares about the folks—it's the salary she's after!"

At this point Mr. Cale was mistaken. Ruth did need her salary, but she did not value it more than she desired the welfare of the backwoods folks. In fact, her salary was decidedly meager, for the country was poor and the commissioners had had to consider before they dared decide to put this extra burden upon it. And some of the commissioners, like Orrin Cale, regarded the proposed home demonstration agent as a needless encumbrance and expense.

In the privacy of her own small room at the house where she boarded, Ruth read and re-read her mother's letter.

"I'm glad you make friends easily," wrote her mother. "In your work, tact is necessary—the soft answer that 'turneth away wrath,' and a genuine interest in the people themselves. But I must quit preaching and tell you about the neighborhood affairs."

"Wise little mother!" thought Ruth as she folded the letter and slipped it, in company with a big pile of others, into her trunk.

Ruth had made friends. And Mrs. Hemming, with whom she lived, had proved a veritable mine of information about the neighborhood.

"You've seen about all the folks hereabouts, except old Orrin Cale, and there's no use in risking an insult from him. I'd give him and his girls a wide berth," said Mrs. Hemming, frankly, when Ruth had asked if there were any people she had not seen. The county was small and in a day's journey in her sturdy little car she could easily reach any part of it.

"But I must see him, Mrs. Hemming," insisted Ruth. "It is really necessary if he has children. I'm sure he won't be insulting."

Mrs. Hemming, protesting that it was no use, gave directions about reaching the home of the old cattleman, who lived with his two motherless daughters, girls of thirteen and fifteen.

The Cale home was the dreariest of all the dreary abodes Ruth had visited down in the flatwoods of the county. Nothing more than a shack, it was set in a fenced-in inclosure, wherein bloomed a few discouraged-looking flowers, dusty from the frequent scratching of some nondescript poultry. Still they were flowers, thought Ruth, and some one who lived there must crave beauty—better things.

No one answered her knock at the open door, so she walked in. Two girls lay in a corner of the room, both asleep and both evidently ill.

Ruth tiptoed over to the one of the few chairs in the room and waited for the girls to waken. "Chills, I guess," she thought, as she surveyed the dreary surroundings. "There's not a screen and not a mosquito net. If they'd learn to fight mosquitoes down in this country, what a blessing it would be!"

In a few minutes one of the girls stirred, whimpered a little and begged for a drink. Ruth stole softly to the bedside and smiled down upon her.

"I'm Ruth Manley, your home demonstration agent," she told the girl, who sat up, evidently frightened at Ruth's presence. "I'll bring you a drink if you tell me where to find the water."

The girl, hesitating, told her at last that the water bucket was on the porch. Ruth found the water, but it was warm, so she drew a fresh bucketful from the well and brought the pail and the dipper to the bedside, where the other girl, now very wide awake, sat with her sister, conversing about their visitor in low tones.

"Is it chills you have?" Ruth asked solicitously. Yes, they had chills, but they hoped to miss them today.

They did not miss their chills. At the regular time for their recurrence, which was in a few minutes after drinking, the patients began to shiver. Ruth piled quilts over them and sat with them till the chills had worn off and fever had come on. She knew that as soon as the fever was over they would be hungry, and she asked if she couldn't get them something to eat.

"No, I reckon not," answered the elder, Loretta. "Pa'll be comin' home presently, and he'll cook us something. He's away in the flatwoods rounding up his cattle."

"I—I wish I had some chicken soup," whispered Janie, the younger, shyly; "we got some chickens big enough to kill out in the yard. They'll come if you feed them."

"All right, we'll have chicken soup," promised Ruth, and she set about her task briskly. She built a fire in the rusty little stove in the shed, or lean-to kitchen, and put the kettle on. Then she proceeded to catch one of the nondescript fowls. By the time the fever had cooled, the girls found a pot of savory soup almost ready for them.

"Tomorrow we'll be up," said Loretta, gratefully, "and can do our own cookin'. We thank you kindly, miss."

"But if we ain't got no quinine to take, we won't miss our chill," said Janie. "I—I'm right tired of havin' chills, I am. Pa can't go to town and get any more quinine today, though."

"You ought to begin early in the morning and take it all day; I have a big bottle of it, and plenty of capsules; I'll come back and bring them to you early tomorrow," promised Ruth, as she drove away.

"Even if she is nice, I'm almost sure pa won't let us join her club," said Loretta, bitterly.

Nevertheless, when Orrin Cale returned, his daughters told him of their visitor and what she had done for them.

"She's the lady that teaches girls to can and sew and do lots of things," said Janie, eagerly. "And—and, pa, she wants us. Can't we join?"

"No!" emphatically declared their parent. "I'll have no such foolishness as that. Don't let me hear another word about it, either. And I'll jest skin these squirrels and salt 'em so's you-all can cook 'em tomorrow, when you ain't chillin'. Wish I had some quinine, but I got to go back early after them cattle."

The following morning he had cooked the family breakfast and put the squirrels on to stew when Ruth returned, though it was still early.

"It's very kind of you, Miss," Mr. Cale told her, as she explained her errand. "I'm grateful—and will pay back the medicine. But I want to tell you right now that if you are expectin' my girls to join any of them fool clubs of yourn, you are mistaken. I'm warnin' you in time. If you are comin' with any such notion, you'd better stay away. I'll never let 'em join, and what's more, I don't want you talkin' to 'em about it."

Ruth's face flushed, and an angry reply rose to her lips. But she couldn't afford to spoil everything by falling out with this man. "I'm sorry—sorry for the girls, for they will miss you so much. But I promise you I'll not mention club work to you or to them until you wish it. Do you mind if I go in to see them now? I am on my way down the road. Lois Britt wants me to show her how to can her strawberries."

Orrin Cale, a little embarrassed at receiving a soft answer when he had expected protests from Ruth, muttered sheepishly that she could go in.

Loretta missed her chill the next day, but when Ruth came by on her way to help another girl with her strawberries, she found little Janie with a high fever, muttering deliriously, and with only the frightened Loretta to care for her.

"Pa went off early, and I don't know what to do for her. Can't you stay with us?" pleaded Loretta.

"Of course I can," decided Ruth promptly, as she laid aside her hat. "I'll do what I can, and if Janie isn't better soon, I'll go for the doctor. It won't take me long."

And then she remembered that the young doctor, a newcomer, had gone to a distant city to attend a convention, and that there was no other doctor nearer than the county seat of the adjoining county. Still if necessary, Ruth decided that she would either go for him or drive back to the village and telephone for him from the store.

When Orrin Cale returned at noon he found the agent busy applying such simple remedies as she had learned in the home-nursing course she had taken. But nothing she could do seemed to allay Janie's fever.

"She needs a doctor, Miss, don't she?" queried the thoroughly alarmed father. And within ten minutes Orrin Cale was jogging over to the village to telephone the doctor in the next county. In case the doctor should be delayed, Ruth had directed Janie's father to purchase certain remedies which would keep the fever down for a time, at least.

When the old man returned he brought the remedies, also the news that the doctor had gone to the convention.

"Well, we shall have to do what we can without him, Mr. Cale," declared Ruth. "I've taken a course in home nursing, and I know what to do when one can't get a doctor. Just keep me supplied with plenty of fresh water and I'll try to take the doctor's place."

She took his place very effectively, for, in the middle of the night, Janie's fever left her and she fell asleep. The next morning she awoke hungry, begging for more soup.

"I declare, you are as good as a doctor!" decided old Mr. Cale with rather grudging admiration. "At least, you're as good as the doctors we've got down here." He hastened to add: "They're small potatoes and few in a hill."

Ruth laughed. "Thank you, Mr. Cale," she said. "Now, I'm going to leave Janie to you and Loretta, but first I'll show you how to make chicken broth. That is really what she should have."

Janie and Loretta both took the tonic Ruth recommended. Ruth continued to visit the Cales long after the chills had departed, but she never again spoke to their father or to them about joining her clubs, though their wistful faces haunted her when the other girls of the community were having good times at their neighborhood cannings.

"I'm mighty sorry we're going to lose our agent after this year, Miss Ruth," regretted Mr. Hemming, the county commissioner who had been instrumental in securing Ruth. "You see, Dave Lacey is out of the race, because he's going to move away. And old Orrin Cale, who's opposed to everything in the way of progress in the whole round world, is the new candidate. He'll be elected, too, for there's no opposition; Orrin Cale is a big taxpayer, you know, with all his range cattle and all that wild land. He would have to pay a heap more if that land was cultivated, and his cattle were counted. Yes, I'm mighty sure we'll have to give you up after this year. All I can say is that I hope you'll find a better county and a bigger salary when you do make a change."

But Ruth was not sure. She was new in her work, and there were always experienced agents waiting to apply for good positions in the more prosperous counties; Ruth felt very sober about her prospects for work in the state.

"If I could help it, I wouldn't exchange this county for any other," she mourned as she bumped along over pine roots on the dreary road. "If only I could keep it for a few more years, until all the girls and women became interested, why, I believe I could make it one of the banner counties of the state. But if Orrin Cale is to be county commissioner, I'd better stop thinking about it and write Miss Lane, the state agent, for other work, if any such article is to be found."

Ruth, absorbed in her own thoughts, failed to see a man mounted on a rangy pony, a black hound crouched at his heels. Not until he spoke did she see him.

"Nice mornin', Miss," said Mr. Cale.

"Very nice, Mr. Cale, but a little rain would improve these flatwood roads," answered Ruth. "The sand is getting pretty deep and hard to pull through."

She was going to drive on, when the old man held up his hand as a signal for her to stop.

"I reckon you heard tell I was goin' to be county commissioner in place of Dave Lacey?" he asked abruptly. "And I reckon, likewise, your good friends saw to it that you knowed I warn't noways in favor of taxin' the folks in this county to death to support a new-fangled agent that don't do nothin' to earn it?"

"I heard that, Mr. Cale," answered Ruth, striving to keep down the hot words.

"And neither am I in favor of it," declared Mr. Cale, vigorously. "But you don't come under that head, ma'am—you've earned every 'measly' cent the county's paid you. And I just want to say that at the first meetin' of the new board I mean to see to it that your salary is raised so's you needn't pay no attention to outsiders' talk about this here county not needin' me and you both. There's another thing, Miss Ruth—I'm aimin' for Loretta and Janie to join anything and everything you've got a hand in. I made up my mind that night you set up with Janie, and I fetched water for you to sponge her, that I'd do it. But I was too much like this here hound dog to come out like a man and say so. What's more, when you come back, with an increase in salary, which I'll make up by taxin' every yearlin' I got, countin' 'em twice over, if need be, you'll find my girls ready and waitin'."

And wheeling his pony suddenly, before Ruth had opportunity to thank him, old Orrin Cale rode away through the woods, his black hound, for years the only friend he could count on, shuffling along in his wake.—Anne McQueen, in Forward.

"HOLDING OUT" ON GOD

Ten cents a week, or the price of a soda, is enough for the Lord in the opinion of some of the families in a certain church in Montclair, New Jersey. There are other families who attend the church, and think it can get along without any financial help from them at all. The church budget, according to a pamphlet recently issued, is $35,000. There are 408 families in the parish, and 145 families contribute nothing, leaving the total burden to the others. It is equally interesting to learn that there are 431 automobiles in the 408 families, or more than one automobile to each family. Here are some interesting items, which may have a familiar ring to the real workers in some other churches:

"Forty families pledge per year less than the cost of one tire.

"One hundred and nineteen more families pledged per year less than the cost of two tires.

"Five families pledged per week just the cost of two packages of 'life-savers.'

"Seven more families are happy to contribute per week the cost of one soda.

"Twenty-eight more families estimate the church's blessings per week equal to one admission to a Montclair movie (if one sat in the balcony).

"Forty-six more families prize their religion in terms per week less than half a pound of candy.

"Twenty-two more families are content with a weekly gift of the cost of two and a half gallons of gas. How far will the car go on that?"

"Fifty-one families count it a joy to subscribe per week a sum equal to what many men spend for smoking in one day.

"Forty-nine more families are satisfied with a weekly pledge of the amount spent for one luncheon at a moderate-priced restaurant.

"Why go further? Oh, yes. One hundred and forty-five more families have pledged nothing. Their church membership being totally carried, their church dues entirely paid, by others."—The Literary Digest.

NOT DEAD

My friends, the Christ is not dead. Still among the seething tumults of mankind He walks with healing in His seamless dress. Still from His pierced side there flows the stream in which the world can cleanse its soul. Sin and selfishness and the forces of entrenched wrong still fear Him, and know Him to be not a dead but a living issue. I believe in the redeeming power of Jesus Christ; I have seen it make saints and heroes too often from the very dregs and scum of humanity to doubt its terrific reality. And what He can do with individuals, He can do with collective mankind. If the world indeed be sick unto death and civilization be at its crossroads, if we live under leaden skies and on the shifting sands of much uncertainty, the call to each of us is not to give way to an inveterate despondency but to lift our heads in dignity and courage, to nerve ourselves for our part in that great and glorious adventure of inevitable sacrifice and service which alone contains the certainty of humanity's restoration and which demands that men shall give as well as take.

Is not the message of the angels at His empty tomb—"He is not here; for He is risen"—the surety and the pledge that if the sun goes down the dawn will come again?" Is not every calamity that is a curse, and adversity, if viewed in the light of Him who walked with the disciples on the road to Emmaus, the minister of blessing? It may be, and if we are faithful it will be, that in the very problems of our times there lies the way to a clearer realization of Christian theory and duty than now we recognize, that in themselves they are weaving on the loom of our dilemmas a faith in which a new generation will win to a loftier religious experience, a deeper charity, a wider brotherhood, and a nobler reverence for the sacred rights of man than we have ever known.—Christian Advocate.

CHRIST THE SINNER'S HOPE

Had the Savior come to befriend the righteous, I could have no claim; but I read He came to save sinners, and that He is able to save them to the uttermost. His own Word and Spirit first invited and enabled me to venture my all upon Him. I know that I have committed myself to Him a thousand times—how then can He give me up? Thus I endeavor to reason against the enemy who can easily prove that I am worthless, ungrateful, and unfaithful; but he cannot prove that Jesus did not die, or that He did not say, "Him that cometh to Me I will in no wise cast out."—John Newton.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

By Grover L. Angel

President C. E. Society, High Point College

JAN. 20: "SEEING THE GOOD IN MEN EVERYWHERE"

John 1:45-51

Plans for the Meeting

(If it is possible have each member bring in at least one good deed that he has observed by watching his friends and acquaintances throughout the week. If a number of good things are found then the member will have more to report. It is hoped that such a search will cause the persons to look for the good, in preference to the bad, in those people with whom they come in contact.)

Opening Moments

Quiet music.

Silent Prayer, ended by Leader:

"We are grateful to Thee, our Heavenly Father, for the many blessings that Thou dost continue to bestow upon us. We are thankful for the material blessings, for life, and health, and strength, and all other benefits. But most of all, our Father, are we grateful for the fellowship with those about us and for the great love of Thy Son. Help us to look for the best qualities in those of our acquaintance, and to so live that they can not help but see the good things in our lives. We invoke Thy blessing upon this meeting, and trust that some little good may be accomplished by our efforts toward the advancement of Thy Cause and Thy Kingdom. Fill our hearts with Thy love, so that we may look on all humanity as our brothers, and our friends. Grant us strength to ever walk close by Thy side. For Christ's sake. Amen."

Quiet music continued.

Suggested Program

Hymn: "Take my life and let it be."

Scripture lesson, with explanation by the leader.

Special music.

Answering of questions.

Special music: Piano solo.

Poem.

Hymn: "Saviour, Thy Dying Love."

Sentence prayers.

Telling of good deeds observed in others.

Talk, by pastor.

Hymn: "Blest be the tie that binds."

C. E. Benediction.

Scripture Explanation

John 1:45—Did Philip find Jesus, or Jesus find Philip? We often take credit for new ideas, new achievements, and discoveries when it is only we ourselves that have been discovered. God is constantly searching for those who are capable of receiving His message. We should seek someone, like Philip, to share our spiritual blessings with.

46—Why can't we look for the good things in people instead of the bad? As a result of Nathanael's disbelief he nearly missed the greatest contribution that Nazareth or any other nation has ever given to the world. We should, before we discount others, look hopefully and expectantly for some good which we are almost sure to find.

47—Of course Jesus knew all about the life of Nathanael, but He mentioned only the good things when he said "in him there is no guile." Then, if we are to be Christ-like we should, too, look for the good in other people.

48—Jesus was watching Nathanael while he was under the fig tree and was forming an estimate of his character. This frequently happens in the life of every individual. When we are least expecting it someone is getting an estimate of us. How we should be on guard so that there would be an abundance of good in us to see.

49—Philip confesses Jesus. Looking for the good in people is one way to prove our relationship with the Heavenly Father.

Questions to Be Answered

1. How does looking for the good in other people affect us as individuals?
2. What would the effect be on the world if all nations looked for the good in all others?
3. Do individual criticisms reveal the level of one's life?
4. How does the good in others affect us as a society?

Poetry to the Point PIPPA PASSES

(Looking for the good in the world)

"The year's at the spring
And day's at the morn;
Morning's at seven;
The hillside's dew-pearled;
The lark's on the wing;
The snail's on the thorn;
God's in His heaven—
All's right with the world!"

AN APPEAL FROM JAPAN

I have received a letter from Miss Olive Hodges, one of our missionaries in Japan, asking for 300 copies of the little Convention Hymn Book used in our Young People's Convention at Baltimore last May. Our department does not have the funds with which to provide these books. The cost will be $30.00 plus transportation charges to Japan. This is a challenge to six individuals or Sunday school classes or Christian Endeavor Societies to send $5.00 each to cover the cost of these books. Upon the receipt of this amount, the writer will purchase the books and pay the transportation charge. I challenge you to help bring this much sunshine into the lives of our youngsters in Japan!

MORE WISHES

I'd like to be a barber
And cut the whole four short:
The beard, the hair, the prattle,
And the barber shop retort!

I'd like to be a postman
And go from door to door;
I would not read the postcards,
It's such an awful bore!

I'd like to be a poet
And write immortal verse;
My head filled full of images,
And empty quite my purse!

I'd like to be a philosopher,
And wisely say "Ahem!"
The people would not fathom me,
Nor would I fathom them!

I'd like to be a policeman,
It must be mostly fun;
The faster that a burglar ran,
The faster I would run!

I'd like to be a soldier
And give the right salute;
Confronted by an enemy,
I'd shoot before I'd scoot!

I'd like to be a clergyman
And teach what I was taught;
I'd preach a succinct sermon
And practice what I praught!
—GRENVILLE KLEISER.

I'd like to be a milkman
And make an honest living
Selling near-milk by the quart
And honest measure giving.

I'd like to be a fireman
And play the noble game;
I'd thoroughly drench with water
All that escaped the flame.

I'd like to be a waiter
And pocket splendid tips;
I would not ask for them, O no!
No hint should pass my lips.

I'd like to be a proof-reader
On the country's greatest daily;
I'd puncture Mr. Bombast's inflation
And set the nation laughing gaily.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

THE POSTAL CARD

W. F. Kennett, Editor

The Postal Card has not appeared in quite a while. In the meantime a number of persons have said they miss it. The editor is now a retired minister and has little of interest to communicate to the reading public. Besides, he has not been well for some time. He has seen but two or three M. P. preachers since the last meeting of Conference. President Taylor has been kind enough to call us over the phone two or three times.

Since the Postal Card last appeared, Christmas has come and gone. Some fifty or more Christmas cards came to cheer us and among the presents received was the annual Christmas stimulant from our good friend, Mr. L. F. Ross, of Asheboro, N. C. This stimulant is fine on cold mornings and helps us in getting from under the blankets and to get the fire going. On the 15th of December in good time for Christmas, the third annual shipment reached us. This present is rich, rare and unique. Mr. Ross is at the head of a large lumber business and ships much building material to the growing city of Greensboro. In preparing this material there is a certain amount of pine too rich for lumber, and out of this rich pine a great box of pine nicely sawed and closely packed in a great box has come to us as a Christmas present. On cold morning all we have to do to get from between the blankets, throw on a handful of this stimulant, touch it with a lighted match and hop back in bed. Fine! Yes, it is fine, and a box lasts all winter. Certainly we thank Mr. Ross and think of him often.

One other visit of cheer and profit: On the 19th of December two very fine looking young people came to 417 to be made man and wife. Mr. William Fred Wilson and Miss Ruby Hunter Friddle. These young people grew up almost in sight of Flat Rock church and their coming to us for this service takes us back to the days when we served Flat Rock church and when we knew the parents of these young people. We wish for them a long and happy and very useful life. If there are other young people who need our services, remember our number is 417 North Elm Street, Greensboro, N. C., and our phone number is 1109.

Greensboro, N. C., Jan. 9, 1929.

Friendship, Mt. Hermon Charge.—We now stand at the beginning of a new year, a span of time which is not marred or spoiled by errors or mistakes. The year is our own to use as we choose. Shall we spend our time in building or destruction? The good and the evil are still before us as they have always been, so every man is free to decide whom he will serve during the new year.

The Christmas holidays passed very quietly in our community. We did not have the usual Christmas program and tree this year. We should strive to do better next year and celebrate the birth of the Saviour in a fitting manner.

The sudden death of Mr. J. F. Homewood on December 27, 1928, was a decided shock to the community. Although Mr. Homewood was a member of the Church of the Holy Comforter in Burlington, he often worshiped with us at Friendship and he will be missed from our services as well as in the community and his home. We extend to the bereaved family our deepest sympathy in their bereavement.

We note with regret the serious illness of the oldest member of our church, Mrs. Barbara Isley. While suffering from a fractured hip sustained in a fall during the Christmas holidays, she contracted double pneumonia. Little hope is entertained for her recovery. Aunt Barbara, as she is familiarly known in the community, is 94 years old.

At the regular morning service last Sunday the pastor gave us a splendid sermon. He reviewed the life of Paul and gave some practical pointers on everyday living. Mr. Garland and Miss Edith Isley sang a duet, "Just a Whispered Prayer."

The first quarterly conference of this charge will meet Saturday, January 19, at 2 p. m. at Mt. Hermon church. All officials of the church are expected to be present.

MAE PATTERSON, Reporter.

Greer's Chapel.—Sunday, December 30, 1928, all day service was held at the church, and a nice dinner was spread at noon on the grounds. Rev. R. S. Troxler, the pastor of this church, was there. The president of the annual conference, Rev. S. W. Taylor, was at service all day, and the two preachers conducted the service in the morning. After dinner the corner stone was laid. Rev. N. G. Bethea, pastor of Lexington church, was there and took part in the ceremony. We were glad to see as large a crowd out for the service, and were glad to have these preachers with us. The talks and the sermons were good. Everybody seemed to enjoy the day.

Rev. R. S. Troxler delivered a wonderful sermon Sunday. As it was the first Sunday in the new year. There were four to join the church by letter Sunday. We were glad to accept them.

We pray God's blessings on every one.

LOUISE.

Pine Hill, Davidson Charge.—Bro. Reed filled his appointment the second Sunday at 3 o'clock. He brought a good message. His subject was "The Birth of Christ."

Our prayer meeting and Sabbath school are moving on yet. The flu has been raging for some time, but we hope to see our people out at church again.

We have not forgotten Bro. Ridge and his family. We pray that he will have a great success in winning souls to Christ. Let us all be on our job doing something for the Lord and cast our bread upon the waters; we shall find it in many days.

Wishing the Herald family a happy New Year.

F. L. SMITH, Reporter.

Pinnacle and Mt. Zion Charge.—It has been some time since you have read a report in the Herald from us. We should have written sooner, but God alone knows what we have experienced since our last writing. Death has visited our home in rather an unusual manner and it seems to us, in a very serious way; yet we know that death carries with it that sadness everywhere it goes, and we have reasons to be so thankful that we have been spared of these bereavements as long as we have. This is the second to go out of a family of 11 and the first to be taken out of our home.

We try to be as thankful as we have been highly favored, but we are so sad at present. We desire the prayers of every reader of this article that we may be submissive to the will of our heavenly Father and that we may be able to start off our new year's work successfully.

We wish to extend our sincere thanks to the good people of this charge for their many acts of kindness and assistance they have rendered us during all of our troubles; also our many friends outside of this charge that have helped us so much with their prayers, letters and telegrams of sympathy. We so much appreciate all.

We don't feel that we would have been able to hold up under all this strain without the help we have had from our many friends and our precious heavenly Father. We also desire to thank the people here for many good things to eat that we have recently received. Bro. Wesley Jones presented us with a nice turkey for Christmas. Brother Hubert Hauser, Bro. Oliver Hauser, Bro. Ernest Watson, Bro. Ernest Ayers, Bro. H. E. Keiger, Bro. Luther Keiger and Bro. Floyd Culler have given us fresh meat and vegetables, and we have received many other things too numerous to mention, but God knows all of the donors and will reward them personally.

May He also give us wisdom and strength to repay with faithful and efficient service and that much lasting good may be done through His name during the present year.

A. L. HUNTER.

Alleghany, Davidson Charge.—Brother W. D. Reed preached a good sermon yesterday. It was his first sermon here and we were glad to get to hear him. It seems a long time since we had preaching. We think the people will like Brother Reed. We like Brother Ridge and family and hated to give them up. We wish them great success where they have gone.

REPORTER.

West Forsyth.—Regular services have been held on this charge for the past two Sundays except at Baltimore church on the first Sunday morning, when a funeral was held instead of the preaching service. Mrs. Gorrell Logan, member of a Baptist church, was buried there, with funeral services conducted by Rev. Charlie Hutchins, Friends' pastor.

The Lord's Supper was observed at Stony Knoll church in the afternoon of the first Sunday with a medium-sized congregation present. After the service the pastor was asked to stop at the home of Bro. Willie Spencer, where he was presented with a box of nice fresh pork and sausage, for which we are thankful.

Last Sunday was spent with Union Hill church. We observed the Lord's Supper following the sermon. The attendance was fairly good. The pastor and family enjoyed a splendid dinner in the home of Bro. J. W. P. Baker and family.

Some pastors have been reporting an extended pounding. This pastor can report the same kind of treatment. Since our last report two weeks ago we wish to acknowledge several gifts for our dining table; also we wish to report that the gifts include a number of hens and one rooster, so we now have a poultry yard at the parsonage. Those having a part in the poultry gifts are Mrs. S. M. Spease, of Stony Knoll church; Mrs. C. G. Hunter and Mrs. Wesley Long, of the Pleasant Hill church. While on a visit to the home of Bro. W. T. Hennings and family, of the Stony Knoll church, our Ford was loaded with fruit and potatoes. Mrs. J. O. Patterson, also of the Stony Knoll church, provided the pastor and family with a nice squirrel ready for the pot and butter with which to make a squirrel pie, the first we have enjoyed since locating on the charge. We received a good amount of fresh meat from Mr. and Mrs. Arzie Davis, of the Pleasant Hill church. Mrs. Creech, a neighbor to the parsonage family, and member of the Baptist church, has given us kraut and hominy. We thank each one for these useful donations and appreciate them very much.

This pastor appreciates having a Ford repair man among the membership of Pleasant Hill church in the person of Bro. Holt Long. He is one of the village merchants and also conducts an automobile repair shop. This generous member has refused the pay offered him by the pastor for repair work done on the preacher's car. This is highly appreciated by the pastor.

About all of the people who have been sick among the membership have recovered, and there is much less sickness than a few weeks ago. Bro. W. S. Bodsford, of Harmony Grove church, who was injured last month by being hit by a passing Ford near his home, is improving slowly. He spent four days in the Baptist hospital at Winston-Salem.

Our services next Sunday will be at Pleasant Hill at 11 o'clock in the morning and at Tabernacle in the afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. We are expecting to observe the ordinance of the Lord's Supper at each church next Sunday. C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Burlington, First Church.—Many of our members have been confined to their homes by illness for the past few weeks. Mrs. J. R. Rogers is a patient at the Rainey Hospital, of this city, and last reports were that she is getting along nicely. Mrs. E. L. Way is in St. Leo's Hospital, Greensboro, N. C. She is getting along as well as could be expected, I think, was the last report. Among the other sick members are W. E. Smith, our Sunday school superintendent, and W. E. Crutchfield, and many whom we are not able to report at this time. We truly hope for each one a very speedy recovery.

Last night Bro. Bruce A. Weatherly, one of our members living on Harris street, departed this life, after a few days illness of pneumonia. He leaves, besides his wife, two little boys to mourn their loss. We pray God's richest benedictions upon all the family and loved ones in this trying hour. Funeral service at the church Monday at two p.m.

Attendance at Sunday school today was 258 and offering amounted to $15.81. The influenza epidemic has affected our attendance to the extent that the congregations are much smaller in number. We trust that the attendance will soon be normal again and that the sick here and elsewhere will soon be well.

The Alamance County Sunday School Institute will meet in our church Wednesday and Thursday evenings of this week. Let each teacher and officer of the Sunday school and church plan now to attend all services.

The regular monthly business and social meeting of the Ladies Aid Society was held last evening at the home of Mrs. Ed Thomas, with Mrs. Thomas, Mrs. T. J. Teer, Mrs. A. W. Terry, Mrs. W. H. Wheeler, and Miss Inez May as joint hostesses.

Living room and dining room were thrown together and prettily decorated with potted plants and pink carnations.

The Scripture reading was given by Mrs. T. T. Stafford, after which Mrs. J. M. Crawford, president, conducted the business session. A social hour was enjoyed afterward, the hostesses serving sandwiches and coffee.

L. A. BRAXTON, Reporter.

Love's Grove, Midland Circuit.—As I have been appointed as reporter, I will try to let our family of readers hear from us. We have been building a new church, a brick veneer, and we have it very near completed now. We had preaching in our new church today. Our pastor, Brother Hulín, preached one of his soul-stirring sermons today. Those not out to hear him missed a great treat. Our people like Brother Hulín and wife fine: they seem almost like father and mother to me. There cannot be too much said in praise for them both. All churches around here like them fine, they are of so much help to all.

Our Sunday school is moving along fine with our new superintendent; he is always on the job, working for the Master.

Brother Dixon Reed paid us a visit the fifth Sunday; he is one of our boys as we call him, as he was once one of our family at Love's Grove. We always have a warm place in our hearts for him and family, wishing them both much happiness in life and asking them to come again. We would ask our former pastors and members to come back and pay us a visit and help some on the finances, as we are in need. Brethren, if you can help any, mail check to Mr. Walter Little, Stanfield, N. C., R. 2, and it will be much appreciated. If you can't help financially, will you pray for us that when we get our new church finished we may have it paid for, that we may dedicate it to the Lord for His goodness to us all. Brethren, who will be the first to send in a check for any amount? We know you want a part in this great work at Love's Grove, as there are so many people with loved ones buried here under the shelter of this old church.

Hoping for all a great year,

JOHN N. SMITH, Reporter.

Orange Charge.—Sickness and other things have interfered with the work considerably. Most of our people seem to be improving now. We have had no deaths among our membership recently.

All appointments have been filled today. Congregations have been off some for the last few weeks on account of sickness.

We have been remembered with a number of things suitable for the kitchen table. Yesterday while we were trying to discharge our duty at Chestnut Ridge church the Ford car was severely bombarded, the front seat being filled with packages, jars of fruit, etc. We arrived home safely without being held up by an officer. Fruit jars sometimes look suspicious, but all these would have passed inspection. B. M. WILLIAMS.

Cleveland Circuit.—The health of our people is better now, but there is some sickness yet among us. The writer's family have all been sick but are better now.

Mrs. Jno. A. Powell is sick with flu. We hope she will soon be well again. On Christmas day I held the funeral service of Clarence Kanipe at Oak Grove church. Clarence was only eight years old. It was hard to give him up. On last Wednesday, January 9, we attended the funeral of the four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Jonas at Polkville M. E. church. They were both victims of flu and pneumonia. The bereaved families have our sympathy.

I filled my regular appointment at Mt. Moriah church last Sunday at 11 a.m. Here we met with a splendid congregation for a cold day (for it was a cold day). At the close of the service we observed the communion and quite a number came forward and took part in the service. Mt. Moriah is one of the oldest churches on the charge. We are informed that Rev. W. A. Ledford, Rev. Robert Short, and perhaps other ministers have gone out from this church.

In the afternoon we drove up to Mt. Pleasant church. This must be the little brown church we sometimes sing about. It is located in the foothills of some of the most beautiful mountains in western North Carolina. Here we found a small group of Methodist Protestants who are anxious to hear the Gospel. It is a pleasure to preach to them. The people on the charge have many nice things to say about their former pastors.

Since Conference it seems that preachers have been reporting quite often because things that are worth while have been taking place. The people just keep pounding the preacher, and he feels that he must keep on reporting it. So much of this may be taxing the patience of the Editor, but we just can't help it. We have received a protracted pounding since moving here, but on the night before Christmas quite a number came and found their way into the kitchen and dining room and left many useful articles for the pastor and family. Some who could not come sent their gifts. I don't know how many had part in this, neither do I know the value of the pounding in dollars and cents. While we appreciate their gifts, we appreciate still more the spirit that prompted this act of appreciation. We spent a very pleasant hour together talking and singing. But it was difficult to find words to express to them our gratitude. Our meeting was closed with prayer and the people returned to their homes. When we looked around Christmas morning we were more convinced than ever that there was a real Santa Claus. May the Heavenly Father richly reward every one who contributed in any way to the comforts and necessities of the pastor and family; we desire in return to give our best in services to the people of this charge. C. E. RIDGE, Pastor.

Mt. Pleasant Charge.—Since our last report four of our sick people have died: J. B. Coley, 87 years; Hurley Soots, 33 years; Andrew M. Lineberry, 83 years, and Hettie Amick, 84 years. Others are very sick at this writing. We hope for their recovery.

More gifts received: Mr. and Mrs. James

T. Bowman, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Bowman, Mr. and Mrs. Myers, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Clapp, Mrs. Susan Pritchard. We are thankful for these gifts. G. F. MILLAWAY.

Liberty, N. C., R. 2.

Hope, Chatham Charge.—Our services Sunday were very well attended, considering the influenza epidemic. Quite a number of our people have been sick. Mr. C. C. Routh and family have been on the sick list, also Mrs. A. A. Johnson, Mrs. R. R. Brewer, and W. H. Andrew. We hope they will all soon be back with us again.

Sunday school is progressing nicely with our new officers. The interest is good, though the attendance has been off a little. We are hoping to get back to our normal attendance and more this spring.

Rev. A. O. Lindley preached at the 11 o'clock service, and he seems to preach better each time. His sermons are full of good thought and helpful suggestions. I feel that we are missing a great deal by not being able to have Brother Lindley among us more.

We were pleased to have Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Hanner with us at the service Sunday. On account of bad health Mr. Hanner has not been able to be with us much lately, and we always miss him.

Best wishes to the Herald and readers.

KARA ANDREW, Reporter.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—Our new pastor, Brother Trollinger, has filled all appointments, and we have learned to love him and look forward to his coming. He was with us last Sunday afternoon and gave us a wonderful message. He has had flu, but is gaining his strength again. Sorry to know that his wife's health is not good.

We had a beautiful Christmas program and tree gotten up and given by our school teachers, Mrs. Gibbs, Mrs. Haynes and Miss Trent. Our Sunday school is moving along nicely considering the epidemic of flu. We hope to do a great work for the Master beginning with this New Year. On account of bad weather and flu we are not having Christian Endeavor on Sunday nights, but have it on first Sundays just after Sunday school. The young people are enthusiastic and willing to do their part.

Pray for us that we as church workers may be faithful until the end, and that we may co-operate with our pastor this year as we never have before.

MRS. G. W. APPLE, Rep.

Jan. 15, 1929.

Welch Memorial.—At our last monthly congregational conference, a forward step was taken when the duplex envelope system was adopted. The duplex envelope system will help any charge that is willing to work it, but especially is it beneficial to a work made up so largely of a people who earn their money as these people here do. We are eagerly looking forward to what we believe will be good results.

Two of the young men of Welch Memorial have recently been given positions of honor. Mr. Luther Modlin has recently been elected as president of the City Union of Christian Endeavor. Mr. John Easter has recently been made president of his class at the College. These are two fine young men. We are looking for them to make their mark in the world for great good.

The Methodist Protestant churches of High Point are observing the Week of Prayer this week in union services. Each church will have a service with a pastor of one of the other churches as speaker.

Sorrow has again visited us when death on last Friday morning took from our midst Mrs. A. R. Tucker, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Peter Vuncannon, of Randolph county. At the age of 10 years she joined Charlotte Methodist Protestant church on Richland charge. After marriage she and Brother Tucker joined Fair Grove church on Why Not charge, where she remained a member until she moved to High Point. On moving to High Point she joined Welch Memorial, where she remained a member until she died. She was a good woman all her life, and faithful to the last. The funeral was conducted on last Sunday in the presence of a large attendance. Brother Pierce conducted a brief service at the home and the funeral proper was conducted at Fair Grove church, Why Not, by her pastor. May the good Lord bless the sorrowing ones.

In His Name,

GEO. L. CURRY, Pastor.

High Point.—The Universal Week of Prayer is being observed this week by Methodist Protestants here, and union services are being held. Rev. Roy I. Farmer, Rev. Geo. L. Curry, Rev. Edward Suits, and Rev. G. L. Reynolds are leading.

The usual services were observed in First church last Sunday, the Sabbath school convening at 9:45 a.m., Mr. E. L. Douglas superintendent; the Junior church meeting at 11 o'clock under the ministry and supervision of Rev. E. Lester Ballard, and the adults met in the main auditorium where they listened to a delightful sermon by Rev. Roy I. Farmer, from the text in Luke 9:51, "He stedfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem." The pastor said in part that there never has been another such example of steadfast loyalty as Jesus Christ. The realism or fight of life is a constant conflict between what really is and what ought to be. Men and women are mastering what was once thought to be impossible. In order to gain the subjection of moral and spiritual forces within us, you and I must be like Jesus when he set his face to go to Jerusalem. Jesus knew the simple lesson that to be popular with the world is not always to be right. Jesus so deformed himself that he was willing to face Calvary, and in order to impress the world with the sinfulness of sin he died young—he was not tired of life and he had not fulfilled his mission. He knew that he was not forced to make the supreme sacrifice, but he did it spontaneously. He knew that his own life must be given of his own accord. To touch other lives he came to the end. To the woman who broke the alabaster box of precious ointment for his anointing Jesus said it was not waste, but a sacrifice. Did your mother and mine waste her life? Did Ridley, Chalmers, Moody, Livingston live in vain? Jesus, who stedfastly set his face toward Jerusalem, expects us in High Point to follow his example. We are not responsible for our environment at birth, but we are accountable for the manner of life we lead. I know where Christ was crucified—it was in your heart and mine, when we ignored, rejected, and grieved him.

"On parent knees a naked, newborn child,
Weeping thou satest while all around thee smiled;

So live that, sinking in thy last long sleep,
Thou mayest smile while all around thee weep."

At this service Mrs. J. C. Whitesell and Mr. Clarence Schultheis sang "Though Your Sins Be as Scurlet" in a charming manner, and the choir rendered very beautifully "How Long Wilt Thou Forget?" At the evening hour for worship, C. L. Gray, Jr., sang the popular favorite, "Abide With Me," by Bohm. Rev. Mr. Farmer delivered the message on "The Day of Christian Opportunity."

The Ladies' Aid Society held an interesting and well attended meeting at the church Monday afternoon. The election of officers for the coming year resulted as follows: President, Mrs. J. C. Whitesell; vice-president, Mrs. S. S. Coe; secretary, Mrs. John H. Walker, and treasurer, Mrs. C. L. Gray. A vote of thanks was tendered to Mrs. C. C. Robbins, the retiring president, for efficient work and loyal service for several years. The Aid Society appreciates greatly the gift of a check for $5.00 from Mrs. A. H. Guire, who is almost 87 years of age, formerly a resident of High Point, and a loyal member of the First church, but now living in Lenoir, N. C., with her two sons. Her love and interest in her church and its membership have continued steadfast through the years of enforced absence, and "though absent in body, she is often present in spirit with us, and her prayers ascend daily to the throne of grace for the success and prosperity of the First church, High Point. At the conclusion of the business meeting, the hostesses served delicious refreshments, followed by a pleasant social hour.

We are highly gratified to learn that the late philanthropist, Mr. B. W. Duke, of New York and Durham, left to the Children's Home a bequest of $5,000. Mr. Duke, his father, the late Washington Duke, and brother, James Buchanan Duke, were natives of Durham County and built up a colossal fortune of many millions, a large part of which they gave away to different forms of charity and benevolence. Their greatest achievement was the founding of Duke University, which is the second most richly endowed university in America. Orphanages and hospitals seemed to have an especial appeal to these generous spirits, and they have enriched their native state very greatly by their numerous bequests and legacies irrespective of denomination. Our local institution will be benefited and blessed by this timely gift.

We are gratified to note that Mrs. R. I. Farmer, who has been suffering from influenza, is much improved. Miss Vera Idol, who has been ill for three months, is able to meet her English classes in High Point College.

Mr. Harry Martin, of Winston-Salem, is the guest of his sister, Mrs. E. Lester Ballard at their new home on East Lexington Avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold J. Koonce and children will move to Winston-Salem February 1 to make their permanent home. The congregation is very loth to give them up from our membership.

Dr. J. T. Burrus is critically ill with pneumonia at High Point Hospital. The prayers of thousands of friends who have been helped by his wonderful skill and sacrificial love, ascend hourly for his restoration to health. No man in High Point would be more greatly missed than Dr. Burrus. His son-in-law, Dr. Hugh Black, of Spartanburg, S. C., is constantly at his bedside.

Shoals Church, Pinnacle Charge.—Bro. Hunter preached a mighty good sermon to a large and attentive audience Sunday.

Bro. I. O. Hauser, circuit steward, called a meeting of the stewards for 3 o'clock at the home of J. P. Owen. A right good attendance of official members was present as well as our beloved pastor, and we hope to see some improvement in the financial part of the work this year. Let's all go to work now to collect and pay every claim and not wait until just before Conference.

Our Sunday school has not had as good attendance as usual owing to so much sickness in our community; however, we hope all will soon be back in their places again.

Master Porter Hauser, who has been a patient in a Winston-Salem hospital, was at church again Sunday, we are glad to note.

Our church trustees have had our church covered, which adds much to its appearance.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.
REPORTER.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—Our Christmas program was carried out very well considering the time we had practiced. There was a very large crowd present and all seemed to enjoy the program.

The attendance at Sunday school and preaching services is holding up very well for the winter months. We are very glad indeed to have Mr. and Mrs. Howerton and family to join our Sunday school. Mr. Howerton moved from near Enfield to Hollister. We welcome them in our church and community.

Sunday night was our regular preaching service and our pastor preached one of the best sermons I have ever heard him preach. I heard several people complimenting this sermon.

Miss Sallie Wood, one of our faithful members of our Sunday school, is expecting to leave today (Monday) for Greenville, N. C., where she will enter school. We will miss her in Sunday school.

Rev. Willie Wood has returned to High Point College after spending the Christmas holidays with his parents.

KATHLEEN SHEARIN.

Salem Church.—Since our last report there have been several things happening, not all accidental, either. Cupid has pierced the hearts of two of our young people and the result was that Sallie Elizabeth Paris and William Adrian Jobe were united in marriage by their pastor December 22. We all wish them a long and happy life together.

There has been quite a lot of flu in our vicinity, though no serious cases have developed. Our superintendent has been kept away from Sunday school on account of his wife being sick. Others have been kept away from fear of catching flu, so our Sunday school hasn't been what it could otherwise have been.

Our pastor filled his appointment Sunday with a very inspiring sermon on "Jesus, the Saviour of Men." He brought new light on the subject and all present enjoyed the sermon and should have been greatly benefited by it. You members that haven't heard Bro. Loy should come out and hear him. He will tell you something that you need to hear and I'm sure his sermons will do you good, too.

You non-Sunday school members are needed at Sunday school to help carry on the work.

We are just launching out into the new year of 1929. Let us profit by the past, plan for the future and ever press onward toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

Pleasant Hill, West Forsythe Charge.—I thought a new reporter would have been clef ted before now, but as there has not been I will report again. Our Sunday school is moving along nicely. We had a good attendance last Sunday. New officers and teachers were elected the first Sunday, as follows: Superintendent, Prof. W. B. Speas; assistant, Mrs. J. F. Hunter; secretary and treasurer, Mr. J. D. Anderson; assistant, Miss Lola Long; teachers, Adult, Mr. C. G. Hunter; assistant, Mr. J. F. Hunter; Senior, Mrs. W. B. Speas; assistant, Mrs. A. L. Davis; Intermediate, Miss Lucille Sprinkle; assistant, to be supplied; Junior girls, Mrs. R. G. Whitman; assistant, Mrs. R. G. Holder; Junior boys, to be supplied; assistant, Mrs. H. C. Whitman; primary, Mrs. J. F. Hunter.

Our new pastor, Rev. C. B. Way, has filled two appointments for us. He delivered two good and helpful sermons. He will preach again for us the third Sunday. We are very grateful to the Conference for sending such a splendid pastor and family to us.

The Christian Endeavor Society met at the church last Sunday night. The president, Mrs. R. G. Holder, led the meeting. We hope the attendance will be better this year than last year.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies met at the home of Mrs. R. G. Holder last Tuesday night. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. C. G. Hunter.

MRS. ARZIA DAVIS, Reporter.

Lincolnton Station.—It has been some time since I have seen a report from our church and I feel that the Herald readers should know the good work we are doing here. The first phase of this good work is our Sunday school. We are very proud of it because it is growing in number and in the spirit of doing more for the Master. The Sunday school is under the leadership of our good superintendent, Mr. E. E. Eurey.

Our new pastor and his good wife, Mr. and Mrs. Fred R. Love, came to be with us immediately after Conference. In the short time that they have been here they have already proved a great help to the church and all its activities. Bro. Love has been delivering some wonderful messages from time to time. He is a sincere believer in the old-time religion and preaches accordingly.

The attendance at preaching services is larger now than it has been for some time and we hope that it will continue to increase.

I feel that this report would be incomplete without mentioning our C. E. Society. We are proud of our society and we feel that our young people are among the best in our entire denomination. They are carrying on a great work, which is not only helping the church at present, but it means great leaders for the future. They are ever alert, ready and willing to do anything for the upbuilding of His Kingdom.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

REPORTER.

Lexington, State Street.—Last Sunday was a red letter day in the history of our church. Seldom do so many good things come to any church in one day as it was our privilege to enjoy in the celebration of our second anniversary service. Two years ago, Sunday, we held our first service in the church building and five years ago the first Sunday in this month our Sunday school was organized in the Masonic hall. These gentlemen were kind enough to let us use their building until the parsonage was built. The services then were held on the first floor of the parsonage, our pastor and his family living upstairs, until the opening two years ago of the building we are now using.

All the speakers and singers we expected Sunday were present except Bro. Hendry, of Concord. He was to have made one of a quartet, but was not able to be with us as he is just recovering from an attack of flu.

President Taylor brought us a forceful and inspiring sermon at the 11 o'clock hour. This was enjoyed by practically all our own congregation and many visitors from other churches in town and quite a number from neighboring towns; among these were the president's brother and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Taylor.

At the close of the morning address lunch was served in the church dining room. The spread was bountiful and delicious and very much enjoyed by all present.

The ladies of the church served hot coffee to as many as cared for it.

The Crescent quartet was with us in the morning service and sang for us twice, and also gave us two songs in the dining room just at the close of the luncheon period. We all appreciate the kindness of these gentlemen, and are always so glad to have them with us.

At the afternoon hour, 2:30 o'clock, Rev. Roy I. Farmer, of High Point First church and his associate pastor, Rev. E. L. Ballard, were with us. The address by Bro. Farmer, "The Glory of the Commonplace," was splendid in every sense of the word and so exactly what we needed. He made us all feel that "great things from small beginnings grow."

Bro. Ballard delighted the audience with two selections, sung in his impressive way. Indeed, the High Point folks are highly favored to have with them two such men as Bros. Farmer and Ballard.

At the night service Mrs. H. W. Maier gave us a beautiful address, stressing the beauty of loving service. The charm of Mrs. Maier's personality cannot be described, but all who have heard her appreciate her appealing and uplifting influence.

The Leonard sisters, Misses Willie Veigh, Margaret and Mildred, were with us Sunday evening and sang two selections, which every one enjoyed very much. We are always glad to have an opportunity to hear these sweet singers.

Bro. B. F. Sink was with us also Sunday evening and kindly consented to direct all the singing for the hour. We thank him and hope he comes again.

Bro. Isley, of South Lexington, called in his morning service and was with us, bringing a large number of his congregation.

We were very glad to have them with us and appreciate Bro. Isley's friendly spirit.

Bro. Surratt, of the Winston church, and some of his folks attended the afternoon service.

We were pleased to have with us in the afternoon Capt. A. M. Rankin and Mr. J. H. Tussey, of High Point.

This celebration service was so helpful and so delightful that our pastor says we will make it a fixed custom. We extend to all who helped to make Sunday such a perfect day our sincere gratitude.

REPORTER.

Cedar Falls.—The attendance was better yesterday. Some of our members were sick and could not attend church last Sunday, but were able to be out yesterday. Bro. and Sister G. A. Laughlin are both sick, but are a little better. We hope they will soon be able to come back to church.

Our pastor, Bro. T. E. Pierce, and his wife were with us yesterday. Bro. Pierce delivered a fine sermon. We just had a good service yesterday morning. The Lord certainly was in our midst. I think every one was made to feel better after hearing such a fine sermon. We are certainly proud of our pastor. Let's all come and make this the best year yet.

Last month our Sunday school lost one of its members. The angels came and bore the spirit of little Charles Irvin Ferree home to be with Jesus. He was a sweet little boy. Jesus needed another little flower to help decorate the mansion He is preparing for us and so little Charles was called. May God's richest blessing rest on the father, mother and relatives.

Gibsonville Church.—It seems that we can't or, at least, we don't get a report in the paper except just once in a while, but we are still working, praying, and progressing some. Perhaps we are too silent about our work and need to boost our work more.

Our Sunday school attendance has been off somewhat, due to the flu epidemic, but it is improving now. Last Sunday we had an increase of 20 in attendance over the previous Sunday. Some of our folks have gotten into a habit of sleeping so late on Sunday mornings that it is impossible to get out to Sunday school by 9:45. Our superintendent and teachers are putting on a contest to awake them and get them out in time for the beginning exercises. Last Sunday the Intermediate boys' class won the honor, they being the first class on time to spell their motto, their motto being, "We do it."

The officers for the Senior Christian Endeavor Society have been elected for this year. They are: Mr. Kennet Williams, president; Miss Lessie Faucette, vicepresident; Jasper Randolph, recording secretary; Lee Madkins, corresponding secretary, and Miss Orpha Burgess, treasurer.

We have a live bunch of Juniors and Intermediate Christian Endeavorers. Mr. F. R. Owen has been elected superintendent for Intermediates and Miss Lena Faucette, pianist. Misses Lessie Faucette and Orpha Burgess have the Juniors.

Rev. P. E. Lindley continues to favor us with his splendid sermons every Sunday morning. We are especially glad to have Mr. Lindley with us as pastor of our church. Mr. Lindley was pastor of this church about ten years ago and is kindly remembered here by a large number of friends. We regret that Mrs. Lindley has been sick and not able to be out, but we hope she will soon be well and can come down and worship with us.

Several new faces have been seen at the preaching hour. We extend to you a hearty welcome and trust that you will see fit to come again.

Samuel Whitesell continues to be very sick with pneumonia at his home on Burlington street.

PINE RIDGE NEWS LETTER

We held eight Christmas services this year, and gave out about 800 gift packages of candy, etc. The best of all was our six o'clock Christmas morning meeting for praise and prayer.

We have entered the new year with enthusiasm and the largest enrollment yet, 190.

We are giving more attention to what we call our Extension Department than ever before. Within the last two months we have held revival meetings at three outlying points with gratifying results. We are trying to do definite constructive church work at five different places.

While we have had some flu cases, our school program so far has not been seriously interrupted. Our trained nurse has been quite busy, but we are thankful that conditions are no worse than they are.

We were especially thankful that we have a consecrated, competent nurse a few days ago when a message came telling us that a little child had fallen into an open fireplace and was seriously burned. Miss Baird went as quickly as possible, and found in a home utterly devoid of necessary comforts a little baby that was so badly burned that surely without attention would soon have died. She has kept in touch with the case and now the child seems to be out of danger.

Cash Christmas gifts from our friends have enabled us to purchase two more cows, so that we now actually have a reasonably good supply of milk—an average of nearly 20 gallons daily. Perhaps nothing else would have brought more lasting and beneficial enjoyment.

Recent gifts also enabled to purchase a larger printing press so that we now are printing an enlarged and improved "Booster." If those who are not receiving our paper would like to have it, just let us have your address and if you can use a number of copies to good advantage, let us know how many.

With gratitude in our hearts for the many friends who have been so helpfully co-operative with us and rejoicing in the many opportunities afforded us for using all these gifts to the glory of God, in rendering a greatly needed service.

Please check up on these reports, and if any mistake is found notify the treasurer at once. He made a mistake this week in one of his receipts, but his attention was called to it immediately and it was corrected. Your cooperation will be appreciated.

If you want your individual churches given credit on our books and in these reports for contributions made by them, name them together with the charge, and it will be done.

I have not found anyone who believes for a minute that automobiles and stores and farms and homes can be run without money; but I know people who seem to think that churches and colleges and missions can be run and maintained without money, at least without their money. Isn't that funny?

Men who withhold from God that which belongs to him never profit by it. Sickness or accident or failure will levy its contribution on them sooner or later and they must turn loose God's share and more. And this isn't funny. Read the eleventh chapter of Proverbs.

We have sometimes prided ourself on being able to read writing; but we make no boast on being able to decipher hieroglyphics. That is to say, write your name so it can be read. Selah!

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Resolutions of Respect

Whereas, our Father in His wisdom elevated Sister Annie L. Kennedy from this life to her Heavenly home on December 23, 1928; and, whereas, Sister Kennedy was a gentle mother, a dear wife, a loyal neighbor, a kind friend, a splendid Christian woman and a faithful member of our Bible Class;

Be it resolved, That we extend our deepest sympathy to her family at this moment of their greatest grief, and

Be it further resolved, That a copy of this resolution of our high regard for Sister Kennedy and deep sympathy for her family be sent to them, our church paper, and entered in the record of our class.

Dunn

Mrs. Mary Dunn, widow of Rev. J. S. Dunn, died January 5th, 1929, age 76 years.

Funeral conducted by the writer Sunday afternoon, January 6th, at the parlors of Hall, Wynne and White, Undertakers, Durham, N. C., after which the remains were placed in Maplewood cemetery, Durham, N. C.

The only close relative of Mrs. Dunn is an only daughter, Mrs. E. R. Neems, of Durham, N. C.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Rome

Rev. Peter Anderson Rome departed this life on December 31, 1928. He was 74 years, four months, and 17 days old. The funeral was conducted by Rev. Z. D. Harrill, of Ellenboro, assisted by Rev. Hipp, of Bostie, and his body was laid to rest in Oak Grove cemetery on New Year's Day. He had been in ill health since last August with dropsy, and his death was not unexpected.

Mr. Rome was twice married: first, to Miss Maggie B. Gladden in 1877. To this union five children were born; one died in infancy; the four who are still living are Mrs. Avery West, of Belmont; Mrs. George Green, of Ellenboro, Route 2, and Mr. Thomas and Mr. Anderson Rome, both of Ellenboro, Route 2. He also leaves one sister, Mrs. Simp McKinney, of Forest City, and 23 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. His first wife preceded him to the grave June 5, 1923. He was married to Miss Ann Wall, on March 6th, 1924; she is still living.

Mr. Rome had lived in this country 'most all his life, and he was known by 'most everybody in this county. He was a kind friend, good companion, father, grandfather, and neighbor, and he was loved and held in high esteem by all who knew him. His passing will be remembered and regretted not only by his loved ones, but the church and community.

Mr. Rome joined Oak Grove Methodist church at an early age; later he joined the Wesleyan Methodist church where he was ordained to preach. He was faithful to this church for some time and then he joined the Methodist Protestant church at Caroleen while Rev. J. D. Morris was pastor there, but at the time of his death he was a member of High Shoals Baptist church where he had been a member for about three years. His life was a beautiful life well lived, and should be a good example to his children, grandchildren and all his relatives.

The flower girls were his granddaughters and were as follows: Misses Cordie and Annie West, Estelle, Mae, and Mamie Greene, Vonnie Linzey, and Minnie Rome.

The pallbearers were grandsons and were as follows: Messrs. Walter, Austin and Lewis Greene, Clifford West, Ray Wilson and Raymond Linzey.

We would say to the bereaved family that you can do no greater honor to the sweet life and memory of father than to strive to be like him.

ADELL McKINNEY.

—Rev. S. W. Taylor turned off the water in his house (as he supposed) to make some repairs in a faucet. He went down town after the necessary materials and was startled on his return to find the water a foot deep in the basement and getting deeper every minute. This gave him some exercise bailing.

—Rev. R. J. Tamby took his father and mother as far as Baltimore on their way to New York. He expected then to attend the Cruiser Bill Conference in Washington.

—Railway trains have slain their thousands and automobiles their ten thousands.

—What to do with old safety razor blades? It is a vexing and perplexing problem which many have tried to solve while the pile of discarded blades kept mounting up. Now a man comes forward with a proposal to harness them together and making mowing machines out of them. Next!

—We now have a minister who has been a D. D. from infancy.

—We note that Bro. Tambyln and other Methodist Protestant ministers of the West and North call themselves ministers rather than pastors. We believe this is the practice of ministers of some other denominations. It seems a little more modest to call yourself a minister or servant than to call yourself pastor or shepherd. However, one in charge of a church is expected to be both servant and pastor and what he calls himself is a matter of sentiment.

—Mrs. Henry Gilmer, who lived next to Calvary church and who was a frequent attendant, died of paralysis last Sunday night and was buried at Alamance Presbyterian church on Monday. She was a good friend of Calvary church and we feel a distinct loss in her going.

—Scarlet fever has invaded the home of Bro. Plummer of Calvary church.

—The second annual state-wide Institute on Parental Education will be held in Raleigh February 13, 14 and 15, it is announced by T. E. Browne, chairman of the North Carolina Council on Parental Education. Outstanding specialists have been invited to address the Institute and to lead open forum discussions upon various phases of child life. The program of the 1929 Institute will emphasize the study of adolescence.

MARRIED

Cheek-Core

Mrs. Paul Cheek and Miss Bemis Core were married by the writer at his home on December 22, 1928. Miss Mattie Cheek and Mr. Pickard were present to witness the quiet, though impressive, ceremony. Bro. Cheek has been secretary of the Sunday school of Graham M. P. church for the past eight years. Mrs. Cheek has been Sunday school pianist of the same church for quite a long time. These were the first couple to be married in the new parsonage of Pleasant Grove. We wish for them a long and happy life.

D. R. WILLIAMS.

Lanier-Frank

Wade Lanier and Mary Lee Frank were married by the writer on the evening of December 31, 1928, at the parsonage at Denton. They were accompanied by a few friends. The bride and groom are members of Denton Methodist Protestant church.

We wish them many happy and successful years together.

E. A. BINGHAM.

TRIED TO KILL HIMSELF

First he tried hanging,

But the rope broke in two,

And he fell, a ludicrous sight

To those who chanced to view.

Next he tried shooting,

But hit no vital spot,

And deplored his utter failure,

As he lay upon his cot.

Then he tried drowning,

Leaping from a lofty pier,

But sailors soon fished him out

And saved his life so dear.

Next he tried asphyxiation,

Saying, "In the morn I'll be dead;"

But he forgot to turn on the gas

And woke up refreshed instead.

Then he tried a deadly poison,

Taking a mighty dose;

But he overdid the thing

And missed the fate so close.

"There's one more thing I'll try,"

Said he; "the 'harmless' cigarette;"

He tried it faithfully for years,

And now his last sun has set.

HOW ONE PASTOR DOES IT

A pastor who for years has been extraordinarily successful in securing subscriptions for the church paper thus writes in a note of last week:

"In recent years I have found a better way of handling subscriptions than I once had. Now I say to folks, I guess you want to renew your subscription to the Herald. Most of them will say, Yes, but I cannot today, for I have no money. Then I will say, Well, I will just send it on in and you can hand me the money later. The most of them will say, Well, if you want to do that I will hand it to you in a few days. And most of them do. It has been very little that I have ever lost on subscriptions."

We thank this brother for this statement of his method.

OUR CHILDREN'S HOME

The item in last week's Herald reporting "West End S. S., $2.70" was meant for West End, West Thomasville charge.

For this report we have: Yarborough's Chapel, Yarborough's, $2.70; First Church, Burlington, $58.86; South Lexington, South Lexington, $1.95; C. E. Society, First Church, High Point, $5.00; Mt. Lebanon, Randleman, $6.15; St. Paul, $6.06; Pleasant Hill, Spring Church, $4.79; Pleasant Grove, Davidson, $3.00; Lineberry, Davidson, 50 cents; Mrs. J. T. Bean, Pleasant Hill, Why Not, $5.00; Bethel, Flat Rock, $2.75; Pine Grove, Kernersville, $4.15; Gibsonville, $7.79; Palestine, $1.00; Friendship, Mt. Hermon, $4.32.

Clothing and Other Supplies

Rev. Jabus Braxton, for Bethel on Mocksville Charge, a donation consisting of one hen, potatoes, canned fruits and other supplies. I thought this was reported on January 2nd. Beg pardon for the omission.

Rev. H. L. Schlinke, for the North Carolina Avenue Church, Washington, D. C., three boxes containing 6 towels, 6 wash cloths, soap, tooth paste, two new dresses, 15 second-hand dresses and 2 coats, 3 tooth brushes, and one dozen lovely new dolls, which pleased the children very much.

Miss Vista Dixon has taken little Polly Jensen to clothe. Both Vista and Polly are happy in the arrangement. Several children are being thus clothed.

We have several little girls and several little boys, and larger ones, too, whom no one has adopted. Who will be the first to adopt one of them to clothe, or to feed and clothe. It has been estimated that $5.00 per month for the 12 months will clothe one, and that $10.00 per month will feed and clothe one. Individuals or S. S. classes or C. E. societies might easily do this. Write us about it and we will be glad to make the assignment.

Those Goals

One pastor writes that he is trying to get each church and Sunday school on his charge to set a definite goal for the monthly offering for the Home. We hope he succeeds in this, and that all pastors and Sunday school superintendents will undertake to do the same thing. A definite amount per month from each church and Sunday school will put the Home on a sound business basis. Several are doing that already, and the success of it leads us to ask that all do it.

We thank you, from the depth of our hearts for the response you are making to the Home, and we are praying God's blessings upon you. And we crave your prayers that we may have wisdom for our every task.

The Duke Gift

You have doubtless noted in the daily papers that the late J. B. Duke left a bequest to the Home of $5,000. For his thoughtfulness of us we are profoundly grateful. That will not help immediately, except as it encourages us to give more largely, but it will help in the coming days.

Recently we wrote a note of thanks to Mr. R. R. Knight, Greensboro, N. C., and one to Miss Nettie Brown, Route 3, Jamestown, N. C., and those notes both came back. Their gifts have been acknowledged through the Herald, but we wanted to say "thank you" personally.

Faithfully yours in His service,
A. G. DIXON.

OUR CHILDREN'S HOME

It was just a few weeks ago that a young mother was taken out of a home and left four little girls. The youngest was six weeks old. She was one of our neighbors' girls and also a member of our church. The father applied at the Home for the children, but later it was decided not to separate them if he could keep from it, so they will not enter them at present. What a sad picture a home all broken up is! We made the remark that we wished we were rich and we would build a home just for little children. We are in need of a cottage at our Children's Home for little girls and boys also, and as we thought of the great need we had another thought that if we could not give what we would like we could give what we could. If you can not give your thousands you can give the widow's mite and the least you do for Jesus will be precious in His sight. If among the older people you may not be apt to teach, feed my lambs, said Christ, our Shepherd. Place the food within their reach, and it may be that the children you have fed with trembling hand will be found among your jewels when you reach the better land. So our thought has gone into action and we want to give the little that we have.

Once a little girl had a penny; it seemed so small, but she dropped it in the collection plate and sent it on to missions. That little penny was the start of a mission school. Is there anything too hard for God?

We are writing this in the Herald so the trustees, preachers, Woman's Home Missionary Societies and all other Methodist Protestants can see and decide what you will do. If you were in the Home, as we have been, you would decide that it was needed and would want to build at once.

First of all, we would like for the Home Missionary Society to start this and do all we can and get all other women to help us build a cottage for little girls. When all women have done all they can, then we would ask the men to help us and also ask them to build a cottage for the little boys. We hope you will take it up and that we do rise up and build. Let's do more and better work this year.

In conclusion, we will say we will start this fund by pledging $100 for the building of a cottage for little girls. Who will be next?

We close by wishing one and all a most successful year's work.

Sincerely,

MARTHA PARSONS.

DID YOU HAVE A VACATION CHURCH SCHOOL?

We are anxious to have a report from every Vacation Church School or Daily Vacation Bible School held in the Methodist Protestant churches during last season. Our denomination is to make a report on these schools in a conference of Vacation School leaders from all over the country the first week in February. The reports received by our office are exceedingly meagre and incomplete.

If you held a Vacation Church School, please let me have the following information by return mail:

1. Number of pupils enrolled.
2. Number of teachers (please indicate how many were paid and how many were volunteers).
3. The approximate total cost of the school.
4. The length of the school term.
5. Name of principal or superintendent.

If your report is to be included in our denominational summary it must be received at once. Thank you!

A Reform That Came and Went

You will probably not find anybody living that is old enough to remember what I am about to relate. And you will not find it in any history of our country, but the historians cannot tell all that happens, for the world could not contain the books that would be written. You need therefore have no difficulty in believing my narrative.

In the early history of our country there was much theorizing and much experimenting. The elements of a great nation were here, but how to combine them was the problem. In the time to which my narrative goes back there appeared an influential man who came to be regarded as a great reformer. The people believed in him and whatever he said went.

He was a student of public affairs and aimed according to his best judgment at the public good. In his studies he came to the conclusion that a very large part of the trouble that afflicts mankind springs from the division into families. Feuds and jealousies and contentions and bloodshed might be unheard of if all families were reduced to one. How to do this was the question. He studied the problem and decided that it would virtually be solved by all families assuming the same name. This would be a very sweeping change, too great to be made at one time. But he thought two steps would be sufficient. Therefore he had the general assembly pass a law that all family names beginning with any of the first thirteen letters of the alphabet (from A to M) should be changed to Jones, and all names beginning with any of the last thirteen (from N to Z) should be changed to Smith.

So great was the respect for the great reformer that the people obeyed without a murmur. Then every man you met on the street was either Mr. Smith or Mr. Jones. But the great reformer knew that his work was not yet done. There were two families now, both large and powerful, and there was constant danger of a clash between them. Evidently the country was not safe. Somehow the two must be made one. But how? Neither the Smiths nor the Joneses would concede advantage to the other. The great reformer decided upon a tactful compromise. It would not do to call all men Smith and it would not do to call all Jones. Therefore he made a skillful combination of the two names in the splendid new name of Jith. The general assembly readily adopted the proposal and our people in this country became one family of Jiths. Then every man you met was a Mr. Jith and every woman was either Mrs. Jith or Miss Jith. Store fronts bore such signs as Jith and Jith, Druggists, or Jith, Jith and Jith, Clothiers. The great reformer was happy in the thought that he had been a great benefactor of his country. Great honors were conferred upon him. But he did not long survive to receive the congratulations of his grateful fellow countrymen. But after he was gone a great monument was erected to his memory which may be seen now if it still stands.

But soon trouble arose in the post office. A letter came addressed to John Jith. The mail clerk looked on his list and found 193 different men all bearing the name of John Jith. All could claim the letter. To which one should it be delivered? The matter was reported to the general assembly for supplementary legislation to relieve the difficulty. The wise men wrestled with the problem and finally decided that every man might assume as a middle and distinguishing name the name he had formerly dropped. John Jith who was formerly John Washington might now write his name John Washington Jith. The trouble was thus overcome and things went on smoothly.

But after a while it dawned upon the people that there was no need to write the name Jith. Since all were Jiths, it was to be understood that some Jith was meant. So, in addressing letters in a hurry, they simply wrote John Washington or Mary Summerbell. Gradually the custom of writing Jith ceased, and today, though we are all Jiths, few of us know it. We have lapsed back into the condition from which the great reformer lifted us. The reform came through mighty effort, but it went with little effort or none at all.

"Will Ye Also Go Away?"

O Thou Man of Galilee,
Saviour sent from Heaven!
Should we lose faith in Thee,
Could we be forgiven?

In Thee is found all power,
Thou rulest heaven and earth;
By Thee we live each hour,
In sorrow or in mirth.

The words of life hast Thou,
Thou wouldst our lives enlarge.
Shall we turn from Thee now,
Recreant to our charge?

Thou art the Prince of Peace,
To us Thy peace is given;
Thou makest wars to cease,
And changest earth to Heaven.

Thou art our Spring of Joy,
Thou healest the souls of men;
Pure pleasure, without alloy,
Rich blessings, never end.

To whom else should we go?
What prince or sage or priest?
Vain helpers all, we know,
The greatest and the least.

We will not lose our trust
In the Man of Galilee.
We will lie down in dust,
And then His glory see.

ROALD AMUNDSEN AND DR. COOK

By REV. LUTHER K. LONG

The accounts of Dr. Cook's false claim that he had reached the North Pole—and his later financial crookedness, which landed him in a Federal prison—make sad reading for those who hold in high esteem adventurers in Polar exploration.

Roald Amundsen's character and conduct, as set forth in his latest book, My Life as an Explorer, are eminently satisfying to readers who are interested in heroic and generous men. In this book Mr. Amundsen makes two references to Dr. Cook. These references are gratifying to all of us who like to think as well as possible of our fellowmen.

Both of these men, in 1897, were members of the Belgian Antarctic Expedition to study the South Magnetic Pole. Amundsen was only twenty-five years old, but before the Belgica had left Europe he was chosen first mate. Dr. Cook was the ship physician.

"The original plan of our expedition," writes Mr. Amundsen, "had been to proceed during the summer to the region of the South Magnetic Pole on South Victoria Land and there establish a winter camp where four men would be left with adequate supplies while the ship and the rest of the men returned to civilization for the winter. They were to come back for their four comrades the following spring. The men who were to be left on the Antarctic continent were the Rumanian scientist, the Polish assistant, Dr. Cook, and myself."

But the commander and the captain were not sufficiently experienced with Polar ice. On that account the Belgica got locked in the drifting ice fields and the Expedition had to remain there thirteen months. This was tragic. For their food and clothing were utterly inadequate for safely passing a winter in the far South—to say nothing about a comfortable winter.

"For thirteen months," continues Mr. Amundsen, "we lay caught in the vise of this ice field. Two of the sailors went insane. Every member of the ship's crew was afflicted with scurvy, and all but three of us were prostrated with it. This wholesale attack of scurvy was a sad experience. Both Dr. Cook and I knew from our reading of Arctic travels that it could be avoided by the use of fresh meat. We had, therefore, spent many weary hours, after the day's hard work was done, travelling for miles over the ice in search of seals and penguins, and with great labor had killed and brought to the ship a great number of each. The commander, however, developed an aversion to the flesh of both that amounted almost to a mania. He was not only to refuse to eat it himself, but he forbade any of the ship's company to indulge in it. Consequently, all of us soon got the scurvy. The commander and the captain were both so prostrated that they took to their beds and made their wills."

The command of the expedition then devolved on Amundsen as ranking officer. He immediately got hold of the carcasses of the seals that had been killed and began feeding the men on fresh meat. The result was that the health of all was greatly improved. Now comes the fine testimony concerning Dr. Cook.

"It was in this fearful emergency," testifies Mr. Amundsen, "during these thirteen long months in which almost the certainty of death stared us steadily in the face, that I came to know Dr. Cook intimately and to form the affection for him and the gratitude to him which nothing in his later career could ever cause me to alter. He, of all the ship's company, was the one man of unflinching courage, unfailing hope, endless cheerfulness, and unwearied kindness. When any one was sick, he was at his bedside to comfort him; when any was disheartened, he was there to encourage and inspire. And not only was his faith undaunted, but his integrity and enterprise were boundless. With the return of the sun after the long Antarctic night, he led small parties on scouting expeditions in all directions looking for evidences that the ice might providentially open and leave a channel for us back to the open sea."

Dr. Cook's wise planning and energetic resourcefulness were the main factors in extricating the Belgica from its exceedingly perilous situation in the ice, and in saving the lives of all connected with the expedition. No wonder Mr. Amundsen has always held the Doctor in grateful esteem.

The other reference to Dr. Cook has to do with a visit to him in the Federal penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth. Mr. Amundsen was lecturing in the United States in the spring of 1926. He says:

"My itinerary eastward from the Pacific coast took me through Kansas City and within a short distance of the Federal penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth. Recalling my acquaintance with Dr. Cook during our two hazardous years on the Belgica expedition to the Antarctic, remembering also the debt of gratitude I owed him for his kindness to me in my novitiate as an explorer, and recalling that I owed my life indeed to his resourcefulness in extricating us from the dangers of that expedition, I felt I could do no less than to make the short journey to the prison and call upon my former benefactor in his present misfortune. I could not have done less without convicting myself of base ingratitude and contemptible cowardice. I did not then, nor will I now, discuss the career of Dr. Cook in his later days. I am wholly unfamiliar with the facts which led to his imprisonment, and I have no desire to know them or to have an opinion regarding them. Even had I known that he had been guilty of baser crimes than those with which he was charged, I would still have felt my duty and my inclination to be the same. Whatever Cook may have done, the Cook who did them was not the Dr. Cook I knew as a young man, the soul of honor and kindness, lion-hearted in courage. Some physical misfortune must have overtaken him to change his personality, for which he was not responsible."

The fact that newspaper reporters grossly misrepresented what was said during this visit with Dr. Cook, and the further fact that the National Geographic Society because of the reports withdrew its invitation for Mr. Amundsen to address it—in spite of his telegraphic denial of the newspaper misrepresentations—only emphasize the worth of the great explorer's loyalty to an old friend and fellow-worker. Mr. Amundsen has taught us a very important lesson.

A THOUGHT THAT WAS EFFECTIVE

A man stopped a preacher in a London street, and said: "I once heard you preach in Paris, and something you said was the means of my conversion." "What was it?" "The latch. You said, 'The latch is on our side of the door.' I had always thought God hard, and that we must do something to propitiate Him. It was a new thought that Christ had done it all, and was waiting at the door for me."—The Southern Churchman.

A LETTER FROM REV. PAUL CASSEN, OF INDIA

(Submitted by Rev. G. W. Haddaway, D.D., Exec. Sec'y)

The following is a letter from Rev. Paul Cassen in charge of our work in India, which letter gives its own information and makes its own imperative appeal.

For some time it has been apparent that the bungalow on the Men's Compound was in need of repairing. Even before Mr. Minnis left for America, the bungalow needed attention, but we realized that it would be a rather expensive proposition, and knowing the financial status of the Board, we felt hesitant about asking for money to make the repairs at that time.

However, during the past rainy season the roof leaked profusely, and it is imperative that something be done before the next rainy season. The ceilings on the second floor are covered with cloth, as is the custom in India, and the time for the renewal of the cloth is long past due. In many places there are large holes, and the dirt sifts through, making it impossible to keep the upstairs clean.

Another need is that the back and front porches need repairing, which will almost amount to rebuilding them. In looking over the house to see just what ought to be done, I noticed that the walls are out of line as much as four or five inches, and in one place nine inches. All of the arches are cracked, and the floors of the second story vibrate considerably when walked over. The bungalow is not a frame structure, but is made of brick and mud for the most part. The floors of the second story are cement over a wooden framework.

Taking all these things into consideration, I felt that I should like expert advice concerning the bungalow, before making a report to the Board. Accordingly, I requested the Executive Engineer of the Public Works Department of West Khandesh to come and have a look at the house. At the present time he is superintending the building of a large bridge over the Topti River, which is estimated to cost about $250,000, so I feel that he is competent to judge the bungalow. He went over the house from top to bottom, and examined it very thoroughly. The following is his report:

To attempt to put the house in good state of repair, he said, would involve a very large expenditure, at least one-third of the cost of a new bungalow, and he advised building a new one in preference to repairing the old one. His thought was that we might begin to repair on what would seem to be a low estimate, but that as the repairs proceeded, we would find many things that would need to be done that had not been included in the original estimate. For instance, in repairing the walls that are out of line, we would probably weaken the rest of the structure, and thereby make other repairs imperative. Then, after all repairs had been made and a great deal of money spent, we would have only an old bungalow that would last but a few years. He also stated that he thought the bungalow unsafe for occupancy during the next rainy season, because with the walls in their damaged condition one cannot be sure as to whether the bungalow will stand or not. The bungalow might stand for a number of years, and then again it might collapse and cause a great deal of damage both to mission property as well as to the occupants.

Have we not men and women in the Methodist Protestant Church, and especially in the Maryland Conference, sufficiently interested in the above appeal to respond promptly with funds with which to build the home for Rev. and Mrs. Cassen, the cost of which will be between $5,000 and $6,000 in American money? One contribution of $1,000 is already in hand for this purpose. Let us hear from the entire church promptly with reference to this matter. Contributions may be sent to Rev. G. W. Haddaway, 516 North Charles Street, Baltimore, Maryland.

A RECOGNITION DAY FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS

One of the most helpful and unusual services the writer has ever had the privilege of attending was a "Recognition Day" service for the officers and teachers of the Sunday School of Hampden Methodist Protestant Church, Baltimore, Md., conducted on Sunday, November 18th. The originator of the idea was Lawrence Beyer, treasurer of the church and assistant superintendent of the Sunday school. He realized the value of publicly calling attention to the faithful services of all who had been connected with the Sunday school for ten years or more and worked out his plan very carefully with the full approval of Dr. E. D. Stone, pastor of the church, and the officers of the Sunday school.

A careful canvass was made of the entire church membership to discover the names of those who had formerly taught in the Sunday school but who, for various reasons, were not active at the present time. To this list were added the names of those who had taught during their lifetime but who have since passed to their reward. Announcements were made in all the classes for two or three weeks in advance of the services and all members of the Sunday school were urged to be present.

On the day the Recognition Service was held, it was the privilege of the writer to attend both the Sunday school and morning worship services. We made brief visits to each department and were greatly impressed with the very evident interest and activity in every department. During the study hour, it was our privilege to attend the Emmanuel Bible Class, one of the largest and most famous men's classes not only in our denomination but throughout the country. This class is taught by the beloved pastor of Hampden Church. The auditorium of the church was filled with a great host of men who were keenly interested in the straightforward and challenging message of their great teacher. Following the Sunday school hour, the auditorium was cleared and the entire middle section reserved for the Sunday school. Promptly at the stroke of 11:00, the entire school from the Junior to the Adult departments, inclusive, began marching in to the music of "Onward, Christian Soldiers." Nearly six hundred had remained for the Recognition Service, and the auditorium was packed to the doors with the Sunday school and members of the church who crowded in to witness the service. It was an inspiring sight to see the great host of Juniors, and Intermediates, followed by their elders, marching into the church, every person with his Bible and in an orderly array led by their various teachers and officers.

After a specially arranged worship service of music and song, it was the writer's privilege to bring an address on "Facing Our Responsibilities in Religious Education," pointing out the challenging task of building a program of religious education that would parallel the modern program of secular education as offered in the public schools. Following this address some very timely remarks and a genuine tribute of love and tender appreciation were made by Dr. Stone, after which he turned the meeting over to Lawrence Beyer.

In a stillness that could almost be felt Mr. Beyer called the memorial roll of those who had taught in Hampden Sunday school in the years gone by and who had already been crowned by the Master Teacher. There was a significant pause and a tremor in the voice of the reader as he reached the name of his sainted mother who was for many years a leader in the local Sunday school. It is worth noting that not only was his mother a most active member during her lifetime, but his father has taught in the Sunday school continuously for thirty-seven years and is still teaching a large class. Lawrence himself has taught for seventeen years.

After the memorial roll was called, the list of those who have taught for more than ten years was read and those present in the audience were requested to come to the front of the auditorium. At the completion of the list, a total of thirty-five stood in a semi-circle around the altar rail. With well-timed words of appreciation and tribute, Mr. Beyer expressed gratitude of the church and Sunday school for the long and faithful service of those who stood around him. To each person in the group there was presented a solid gold pin on which was engraved the single word, "Service." No doubt this beautiful token of love and recognition presented on behalf of the Sunday school will inspire their possessors to even greater consecration to the noble service to which they have given their lives. After the presentation of these pins, Dr. Stone led the audience in a most uplifting and inspiring prayer of dedication and consecration.

One of the striking features of the service and one which will not soon be forgotten by any one present was the unusual rendition of that beautiful old hymn, "I Love to Tell the Story." The entire school stood throughout the singing of the four stanzas of the hymn and while they sang the chorus at the end of each stanza, every person of the great throng raised aloft a copy of the Holy Bible. It seemed to place a new emphasis on the value of God's Word. After prayer and benediction, every one in the audience seemed loath to leave the auditorium because of the hallowed sweetness of the spirit of fellowship that had pervaded the service. Many remarked that it was one of the most impressive services the church had held in many a day.

Dr. Stone and his splendid corps of workers combine in a remarkable manner an intense evangelistic zeal that permeates every phase of their church program and the right emphasis on a well-rounded educational program that has for its purpose the building of Christian character upon the foundation which has been laid in evangelistic effort. It is an example that all our churches might well emulate. The type of service to which this article refers will do much to bring about the needed emphasis on religious education as a definite phase of the responsibility of a modern church program.

OPTIMISM	The President's Letter	EVANGELISM
Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.

Draper

January 11.—We were here on this date, in conference with Pastor Totten, in regard to relocating our church. A desirable lot has been made vacant by a recent fire, and our people are desirous of securing it from the mill corporation for a church site. If that can be done, our present church property will be sold, and a church built on the new location. This would be a decided advantage to our work there, and if our people can find a way by which they can go forward with the project, I think they will be wise in doing so. We shall watch developments with interest and prayers.

Liberty-Siler

January 20.—On this date we were at Siler, preaching at 11 a. m., and holding quarterly conference in the afternoon at 2:30. The usual matters of a first quarterly conference were attended to. The principal business, however, was a pastoral supply for the charge. Definite steps were taken to secure a pastor, and if plans do not miscarry, we hope to have the work supplied at an early date. The conference was well attended, and a pleasing spirit prevailed. We enjoyed worshiping with the Siler congregation at the morning hour, and also their fellowship and kind hospitality. The church there is busy and hopeful. They are planning to observe Young People's Day on the first Sunday in February. We are hopeful that the charge may soon be in the way of a happy and prosperous year of Kingdom service.

Young People's Board Meeting

January 21.—This was held in First Church, High Point, with every member of the Board present. We presume that a detailed report will be given by the secretary, so we shall not enlarge here. The meeting was earnest and progressive, and we predict a year of good work for the Board.

Omitted

In spite of our painstaking care in listing for the Journal the Honor Roll churches, our attention has been called to the fact that West End Church is omitted from the conference honor roll of charges paying all claims in full. We accept full responsibility for the oversight, and hereby apologize for the omission. West End worked with unflagging zeal to meet all obligations, and we regret that the church was not given credit in the list of Honor Roll charges.

Report "S"

We wish to call attention to the last paragraph in this report. (Journal, page 67.) We urge that all pastors do what is requested here. It is a worthwhile undertaking, and should be rewarded with good results. Please do this, pastors.

Pastoral Service by Correspondence

Try it, brethren. It is eminently worthwhile, and we are confident that it will more than justify the cost and labor. One pastor says that one reply has fully compensated him for all the letters sent. Absentee members will appreciate this pastoral attention. It will awaken within them a renewed sense of their obligation to the church, and cause them to be better church members and better Christians. Let us not neglect the absentee members.

Hymnals and Song Books

The Conference committee on Church Music recommends that our Hymnal be given first place in our churches. The committee further recommends that our publishing houses be conferred with when the Hymnal is to be supplemented by other song books. Any standard song book can be supplied by either of our publishing houses—Baltimore or Pittsburgh. Please communicate with them before buying.

Thank-Offering Service

February is the month for holding the Thank-Offering service of the W. F. M. S. Dr. Broomfield has called attention to this through the church press, and is urging that special emphasis be put upon this service this year. We urge that this service be held in every church in our conference where there is a society, and that the offering be stressed. We urge, also, that in churches where there are no societies, the matter be presented to the people by the pastor, and that that they be given an opportunity to make an offering for this purpose. The women have been realizing annually a considerable income from this offering. The amount realized in our own conference is usually about a thousand dollars. We want to make it large this year because the need is urgent. Let every church make an offering, and take credit on the G. C. B. of the local church for the amount. Send money to Mrs. S. W. Taylor, Treasurer, 126 Tate Street, Greensboro.

The New Order of Women's Work

The women of our conference are adjusting themselves as rapidly as possible to this new order. Already some of our strongest churches have effected the change and are going forward with their work along lines prescribed by the new arrangement. In course of time we expect to become adjusted to the change, and thoroughly organized according to the plans adopted at our last General Conference. We urge the women of our conference to realign their work as rapidly as possible, and to put the full force of their organizations behind the entire program of the church. Mrs. C. W. Bates will be glad to give assistance in the reorganization of the work. Her address is Asheboro Street, Greensboro, N. C., Box 1501.

The "Calling" First

Pastors are busy men. Their work has grown to be many-sided, and their duties multitudinous. So much so that one pastor of a prominent church said he did not have time to be spiritual. When Dr. Jowett was called to the pastorate of Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York, he expected many calls from the outside, and of course had them. But he declined most of them, and with uniform consistency refused to be drawn away from his God-given work of preaching the gospel. He said that this was his business, and because it was his business, he determined to give it first place—a good rule for every minister. We must "take time to be holy"—to study—to preach.

Appointments

CHURCH UNION

Quite frequently the subject of church union bobs up in our church papers. And possibly no question in all the church has been discussed more and made less progress. There have not been many unions of denominations. The shibboleth continues to have a strong appeal to most of us.

Personally, I am not opposed to church union; i. e., I would not be, if by it we made progress in church affairs. As the matter appears to me, it ends in a profitless discussion and has, in our case, left us weaker because of it. I may be mistaken, but I think that our church had a better morale twenty-five years ago than it has today. And as is generally known, our greatest agitation over union occurred in the past quarter of a century.

I raise the question whether a union of two or more denominations, could it be consummated without great loss to the participating denominations, would greatly change the status of the denominations involved. That is, could we unite without losing great numbers of our members, would there accrue any advantages that would be worth the effort of the experiment?

Most of our local churches would remain where they are and as they are. The same people would support them who did it before the name was changed. For example, were we to unite with the United Brethren or the Congregational church, our status in North Carolina would be identical to what it is today. Few of our people would really know what had happened.

Or take another case; suppose we united with the M. E. Church South, there are possibly a half dozen communities where a union might be consummated to the advantage of the two, provided the members were willing to do it. All the others would remain as they are. Nor would there likely be an increase in the membership of these churches by such union. The very same people who were bearing the burdens there would continue to bear them.

But it is claimed that were we united with some other denomination it would cost us less. The answer to that is both yes and no. Were we to unite with the Primitive Baptist church, it would cost us less to keep our general church going than it does today. But were we to unite with either of three others named, it would cost us more. That is, we would be compelled to pay more, if we did as well as the members of these denominations now do. Our average contributions to the benevolences of the church are at present

HER NARROW LIFE

"Poor Ruth West! She's led such a narrow life! It's a shame, too! She was the brightest girl in our class away back when we were in school together. Mercy, don't ask how long ago that was!" Mrs. Van Epps touched her marcelled white hair with a much bejewelled hand and went on, "Ruth used to say with her eyes shining, 'I'm interested in everything in the world and I mean to see as much of it as one pair of eyes can see before I die.' But her mother's health failed and Ruth settled down here at home to be with her. The mother lived on, a semi-invalid, until she was eighty-four. Ruth was a woman of almost sixty by that time and she stayed right on here. So, you see, she's been in this dead little town all her life. Poor Ruth! I certainly do feel sorry for her! I've been back here a month now and I'm bored to death already. Think of being shut up here all one's life!" Then her attention wandered from Ruth West to its usual center of interest, her own affairs. Not often did she leave the absorbing topic.

"We wouldn't be stranded here this way if it hadn't been that we couldn't decide what to do this year," she explained irritably. "I didn't want to go across again. We've been a dozen times and I'm sick and tired of it all. The hotels aren't comfortable and I don't like the food they serve. If you stay in London your room is cold if you are in and it's forever raining if you go out. The weather's atrocious! And if you go to Italy there are so many dirty beggars everywhere. I loathe seeing them! And I'm tired of Paris. So we didn't go. But we couldn't make up our minds what to do then. I'm sick and tired of all the resorts, there are such mobs everywhere. I'm not interested in California. And of course New York and Chicago are impossible during the summer. So we came back here to my old home and I'm certainly sick and tired of the dead-alive old place."

I had asked her to suggest some place where I might get a room for a few weeks of my vacation. And it was this inquiry that had turned her conversation to Ruth West and she thought it very possible that I could get a room from her.

As I went up the patch to the door of the roomy old-fashioned house I had a picture of Ruth West in my mind's eye, a little wisp of a woman, wistful-eyed and with a patient droop to the corners of her mouth. The door swung open in answer to my ring and I fairly blinked as my mental pathetic picture faded out and was replaced by the reality of a wholesome, comfortable looking woman with a friendly face and humorous grey eyes that smiled at me interestedly. In after days I remembered that look when one time she remarked, "It's always like an adventure to me when I meet a new person. I'm sure to find something interesting and like as not a friend. And you can't beat a friend for being an exciting find."

For six weeks I occupied the pleasant little room that opened into the sitting room. I learned to know the woman who was said to have had a narrow life. Her house was the heart of the little town. The doorsill was worn half through by the many feet that through the years had brought their owners' joys and sorrows, problems and experiences over it. Dancing feet of children, light, springing steps of youth, slow, tired tread of age, all had had their share in wearing down that doorsill. And Ruth West entered into every experience that was brought to her. She shared the joys and the sorrows. She brought her fund of practical common sense and the wisdom she had learned through the many experiences she had shared to bear on every new problem. They were her problems, her sorrows, her joys.

And her interests were by no means bounded by the little town, for many of the feet that had helped to wear out her doorsill had since then carried their owners out into the far places of the earth. But those who had gone out did not forget Ruth West. Once when I was looking at the many prints of really good pictures on her walls she explained, "You see, Linda Ross, who grew up in this town, is an artist now and she talks nothing else but pictures when she comes to see me. I tell her I get all the benefit of her course in art. She sent me all these." She opened a book that was full of postcard prints of great pictures.

Then there were her shelves of books, the best books of the day and of former days. Battered and worn many of them were, for this was intruth a "lending library." Every book went the rounds. And many were the discussions on her wide porch of the latest best sellers or of a favorite classic. "Merton Cobb works in a book store in the city and he keeps me posted on the best books to buy," she explained.

And even that was not all. She talked interestingly of foreign countries. She saw them through the eyes of friends who had been there. The countries that had meant so little to Mrs. Van Epps whose life, no matter how far she traveled, was bounded by her own uninteresting self sparkled with romance as Ruth West talked about them.

Ruth West has lived, not one little narrow life, but hundreds of lives in one. Each day is full of interesting, exciting experiences to her. She has the face of one who has lived a full life.

My thoughts turned again to Mrs. Epps. Poor woman! It was she who had led a narrow life.—Mabel Way, in Presbyterian.

Church Union

lower than are theirs. I think that all who have left our church and joined others have found when the budgets were made up for the next year that they had gotten into a communion that paid more to missions and education than they had been accustomed to pay.

Nor can I see much reason for believing that the mere act of changing our name would help us any. It does not usually help people in mind or disposition to change their names. Call us all Congregationalists might sound better to some, but it would be the same old crowd when preaching time and stewards meetings came around. I think it will require more than a change of name to move us up any faster than we are now going.

Finally, I have a hunch that if we would all stop thinking of and discussing church union; if we would stop comparing ourselves with others, as did the ancient Hebrews to their own detriment when spying out the promised land, and cast about us for a man's size job for our churches to get on to, the next generation would certainly have something to talk about besides church union when discussing the Methodist Protestant Church.

Outline for Leader

The word, "service," is perhaps one of the most used words in our language today. Commercial organizations have taken the slogan, "Service With a Smile" and used it for a motto, along with other expressions, as: "It pleases us to serve you," and "Service is our watchword." There is an idea today that every one should return something for the service that they get, but the Christian ideal is on a higher level than that. The goal of life is service and the people who are the greatest are the ones who have served most.

Our topic for this meeting is more definite than that. It is service through the Church. Jesus came into the world to serve and He left the Church behind to do His work.

The Church serves its members through its work and worship to help them cultivate a broader spiritual growth; it aids them physically by the charity in hospitals, and giving food to the poor and needy. Thus it aids the world by bringing the races to a better relationship.

It would be well for each of us as individuals to examine ourselves and see if we are giving the right service to the world through our Church. By serving in the Church we serve ourselves, we serve the world, and above all, we serve our Lord and Master.

Questions to Be Answered

1. What is this Church doing for the world?
2. What can this Society do for our Church?
3. How can we as individuals serve this Church?
4. Does the Church aid in social reform?

Topics to Be Discussed

1. Promoting world peace through the Church.
2. The service of the Church through Christian Education.
3. The Church serving the world through the Missionary enterprise.

Ten-Minute Bible Reading

Helping the needy (Matt. 25:34-40); material help (Jas. 2:14-16); evangelism (Matt. 20:19, 20); good works (Acts 9:36-39); with money (I Cor. 16:1, 2); helpfulness (I Tim. 5:10); humble service (John 13:14-17); Christ-like service (Matt. 20:26-28); helping the poor (Matt. 26:8-11); missionary offerings (Phil. 4:14-17); personal work (Jas. 5:19).—C. E. Quarterly.

Poetry to the Point

We thank Thee for Thy Church unsleeping,
While earth rolls onward into light,
Through all the world her watch is keeping,
And rests not now by day or night.

As o'er each continent and island
The dawn leads on another day,
The voice of prayer is never silent,
Nor dies the strain of praise away.

The sun, that bids us rest, is waking
Our brethren 'neath the western sky,
And hour by hour fresh lips are making
Thy wondrous doings heard on high.

—John Ellerton.

There will be no Christian Endeavor Helps for Sunday, February 3, as each society is urged to observe the "Youth in Service" program which is outlined by the Board of Christian Education in this issue.

DENOMINATIONAL YOUNG PEOPLE'S DAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1929

Youth in Service

(Additional Material)

Almost 5,000 copies of "Youth In Service," a basic pamphlet containing material for our denominational Young People's Day, February 3, 1929, have been mailed to pastors, superintendents, and Christian Endeavor leaders. Much interest is being manifested throughout the entire denomination in this special day, according to the request for additional material!

The purpose and meaning of Young People's Day may be summed up in the word, "Service." It is the purpose of those preparing this service to enlist the interest of the church in the possibilities of the organizations providing opportunities for their "Youth to Serve." Young people, also, are to be brought to realize these opportunities in actual service for their church and their Savior. Also, to help young people to know something of the past history of our own church and to appreciate the sacrifices of those who have given them a place in Kingdom service; to give additional information to the church of the present program for its youth; and to extend the vision of a greater program for the future.

During the past 20 years a special organized interest has been shown in those organizations for training youth. The Board of Young People's Work began as an organization at the Pittsburgh General Conference, May, 1908. Rev. Charles H. Hubbel, of saintly memory, was elected the first General Secretary. His last days were given in untiring effort in establishing the work on a sure foundation. The main emphasis was placed upon the promotion of Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor. Statistics show that 250 Christian Endeavor Societies were organized; 300 Adult Bible Classes were established in the Sunday schools, and 2,000 students were enrolled in teacher training classes. Dr. Hubbell traveled during this first four years 111,063 miles, filled 508 engagements and made 918 addresses. In December, 1914, after giving almost seven years to the work he died of pneumonia. He was succeeded by other great leaders and lovers of youth. Dr. H. L. Feeman, now president of Adrian College, Adrian, Mich. Dr. Feeman was followed by Dr. A. G. Dixon, now Superintendent of the Children's Home, High Point, N. C. Dr. Dixon gave up the work to become President of the North Carolina Conference, November, 1922, and was succeeded by Dr. E. A. Sexsmith, who continued the splendid work of his successors. In 1923 Dr. Sexsmith was succeeded by Rev. Lawrence Little, the present Executive Secretary.

The ever-broadening program of this department of the church led to the adoption of a new name by the General Conference of 1928. Since the department has the oversight and promotion of all the religious education of the entire local church program, the term, "Young People's Work" was discontinued and "Department of Religious Education" was adopted. This department was unified with the Board of Education to form what is now known throughout the Church as the Board of Christian Education with two departments, "Religious Education" and "Institutional Education."

The Department of Religious Education now finds itself providing the following:

1. An office to handle much correspondence regarding the many phases of the work.
2. The following Departments:
 - a. Children's Work.
 - b. Young People's Work.
 - c. Adult Work.
 - d. Rural Church Work.
 - e. Leadership Training.
 - f. Vacation Church Schools.
 - g. Week Day Religious Education.
 - h. Missionary Education and Stewardship.
3. Reading courses for smaller Conferences.
4. Circulating library with up-to-date books on all phases of religious education.
5. Editorial work in Sunday school periodicals.
6. Reorganization and establishment of Conference Unions to be known as "Annual Conference Councils of Religious Education."
7. A constitution unifying the whole program of the department as it relates itself to the work of the Conference Councils of Religious Education, etc.
8. An intensive program of Leadership Training Schools for young people and adults; Local District and Church Standard Leadership Training Schools; and a denominational Training School for denominational leaders and instructors.

9. A meeting of the various Annual Conference presidents and deans of Conference Councils of Religious Education in the Annual Religious Education Advisory Council once a year to plan the year's program and to discuss various problems of the denominational work.

10. Correspondence training courses offered on the International Standard level has been recently added to the scope of our work.

With these many activities and others not mentioned, surely, a great opportunity is being offered through this department to our "Youth in Service."

The future is looked upon with high hopes for even a greater service. During the summer of 1928 19 Conference Leadership Training Schools were conducted, of which 17 were placed upon the International level and 32 Standard Courses were offered; 1,296 students did a constructive piece of work; 128 instructors were used; there was a total attendance of 4,051; 640 young people dedicated their lives to part time and all time religious work. During 1929, 23 Leadership Training Schools are being planned and requests are being made for others. The very best courses are going to be offered by the best faculty that can be secured. Already much interest in being manifested by the various Annual Conferences in these schools.

With our department functioning as a unit throughout the entire denomination and working in correlation with the Board of Christian Education, with the youth of our denomination participating in and backing the entire church program through the New Century Service, the future, indeed, holds promise for our Church in Service.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

THANK-OFFERING FOR WOMAN'S DEPARTMENT OF BOARD OF MISSIONS

The importance of our work in China, Japan and India remains the same, no matter what changes take place in the homeland or in the affairs of non-Christian peoples. In fact, the challenge to the continuance and to the character of the work in foreign lands is greater just now than ever before. We are living in a changing world, but Christ remains the constant factor—the need and inspiration of all peoples.

The Board of Missions is under the necessity of modifying plans and programs in the light of inadequate resources. There is a great gulf between the vision and plans of the missionaries in the field and the resources of your Board of Missions. The men and women on the field know best the needs and opportunities in their particular field and it is the constant temptation of the Board to anticipate receipts from the churches in the light of these requests from the field. This is the reason why every so often the Board finds itself financially embarrassed. It is because opportunities are constantly running ahead of resources.

The Thank-offering service furnishes to every member of the Methodist Protestant Church an opportunity to give a worth-while testimony to his or her gratitude for God's leading and His blessings. Words alone will not do. There must be sacrifices and offerings. There are special needs in each of our three missionary fields which can be met only by the Annual Thank-offering. Your Board of Missions requests that every church in the denomination take an offering for Foreign Missions and forward the same to the constituted authority in your Annual Conference who will forward the amount received to Mrs. Marie Thompson, Associate Executive Secretary, 516 North Charles Street, Baltimore, Md.

GEORGE H. MILLER, President
Board of Missions.

THE MIND OF HOOVER

Hamilton Holt, in the Review of Reviews, writes:

"Early in 1919 Hon. Oscar S. Straus and I were walking down the stairs of the Crillon Hotel in Paris (the French elevators only take up) when we met a plump, personable, boyish-looking gentleman who greeted Mr. Straus most cordially, and whom Mr. Straus introduced to me, though I did not catch his name. He invited us into his private room in the hotel, and then in response to a question from Mr. Straus in regard to the world situation he launched out upon a forty-minute monologue, the like of which I have never heard from any mortal man before or since. Although he spoke with a range and sweep that included armies, nations, and even continents as though they were pawns in a game, yet his knowledge was fortified by fact and details. Never have I been more enthralled by charm of the spoken word or by sheer brilliancy of thought, analysis, and exposition. I was in the presence of a master.

"I had come as a journalist across the Atlantic to get at the inside of the peace settlement, and without asking I was receiving what any one of my professional brothers would have given his all to obtain. A hundred questions coursed through my mind as he spoke that I wished he would further elucidate, but I was afraid to interrupt him lest I break the continuity of his thought or the spell of his eloquence. When he had finished and we had bade him good-by, and were out in the hall again, I seized Mr. Straus by the arm and said: 'Who was that man? That was the most remarkable talk I have ever heard from human lips.' He replied: 'Why, don't you know? That was Herbert Hoover.'

—The longest railroad tunnel in the United States was dedicated and opened for traffic on January 12. It is eight miles long and cuts through the Cascade Mountains in Washington (State). There are but four longer railroad tunnels in the world, all of them in the Alps Mountains. The Cascade tunnel was built by the Great Northern Railroad in three years at a cost of about 14 million dollars. By using the tunnel passenger trains save one hour, and freight trains three hours, in crossing the Cascades.—Current Events.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Midland.—We have been very busy since Conference. We have built a new brick church at Love's Grove, of which we are very proud. The people of Love's Grove are very faithful. When they begin a thing they believe in sticking to it until it is complete. Just a little more work and the church will be finished and paid for. It is of brick-veneer, and is a credit to any country church. We want to have it dedicated this spring.

There has not been very much pounding the preacher this season. The people have been pounding on the new church.

We held our Sunday school and preaching in the new church Sunday for the first time. The congregation was good considering the flu in the community. Every family has been sick, but no deaths in our church have occurred. Brother Yow is very sick.

We want to make this the best year in our ministry. The greatest thing we need is a revival of the old-time religion. If we can have that it will help us raise our budget.

Good wishes to all and a happy and prosperous New Year. Love to the Herald and its readers.
J. W. HULIN, Pastor.

Thomasville to Haw River Circuit.—It is always a source of regret to leave friends and go to another field. You never know how things will be, nor how you will like the place or the folks. It was just such a feeling that was with us when we left our Thomasville friends. And, too, the thing that happened just before we left made this feeling more intense. The week before going to Conference the people took the parsonage by storm and gave the pastor the biggest pounding of the three years' pastorate. This is the first time I have ever heard of a church pounding a pastor, when there was every reason to believe that there would be a change, and both pastor and people were expecting a change. But I am persuaded that it is an evidence of their confidence and regard for their pastor, and proof that this confidence and regard will live regardless of his going or staying. I believe that Brother Powell, the new pastor at First Church Thomasville, will enjoy working with these dear folks. They are loyal and true, and do their best with what they have, and every pastor before me will tell Brother Powell the same. May God bless him and his good people, and prosper them in their efforts in Kingdom service.

When I came to Haw River Circuit, it was in a sense a renewal of old friendships. I had the honor of conducting a meeting at Mizpah five years ago last September during Brother Lowdermilk's pastorate, and from that meeting came a young convert, who is today one of the finest and most promising young ministers of the conference, and a graduate of High Point College. Then, about 18 months before coming as pastor I assisted Brother Reed in a meeting at the old historic Midway church, which by the way is the home of Brother A. G. Dixon. So my coming to these churches was a great pleasure. At one other church are members that were friends of my boyhood and earlier manhood days, and at another church were old friends of Elon College days.

We have been received by these good people in a way that shows they are happy that we came, and they are doing everything in their power to make our life and work pleasant and profitable. Fairly good congregations have greeted us everywhere, and we are confident that when the flu has flown and the people are well again that the congregations will be larger. Even with the flu and much sickness abroad, the congregations are even now on a par with other rural churches.

Speaking of the flu situation, will say that it was so very bad at Christmas that we did not have any exercises except at one church, and there the church and school worked together in preparation, and personnel of the program was changed several times before the day of the exercise.

I am not going to try to give an itemized statement of the many, many things that have been given us to gladden the hearts of the dwellers at the parsonage. Suffice it to say that there has not been a week that someone has not given us good things for the table. Sometimes they have come by twos and threes, and sometimes they have loaded the preacher's car at the church on Sunday. From the very first there has been a continual sprinkle of gifts, not a big pounding all at once, but it has amounted to much more. We are very grateful to the people for them. During the two weeks the preacher had the flu the neighbor boys kept the woodpile in such a condition that the mistress of the manse did not get out of wood.

Surely, the Lord has set our feet in a large room, and by His help, and under His direction we hope to accomplish much this year in Kingdom service. The good men who have preceded me have laid good foundations, and it is my desire to build wisely upon them.

J. L. TROLLINGER, Pastor.

Spring Hill.—The Lord's work is still going on. Sickness is hindering our attendance somewhat. Services are now being conducted in our new church. Although not yet completed it is quite comfortable. Words cannot tell how thankful we are to the One who maketh all things possible.

Rev. T. J. Whitehead filled his appointment Sunday. He always brings good messages.

Our Sunday school officers are: Superintendent, Mr. Colon Haynes; assistant superintendent, Mr. Ernest Johnson; secretary, Miss Glennie Craven; teachers, Mr. Ernest Johnson, Mr. George Craven and Mr. J. D. Collett, Miss Alice Haynes, Mrs. Annie Craven, and Miss Bessie Swain.

Mrs. I. I. York and Mrs. G. L. Sink are some better.

Little Doris Swain has been quite ill with scarlet fever but is now improving.

REPORTER.

Belmont, Mt. Hermon Charge.—We had a Christmas program and tree, which was enjoyed by all. Misses Marie Hargis and Nan-nie Coble deserve much honor for getting up this splendid program.

On Sunday evening our pastor, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, filled his appointment at 7:30. He delivered to us in his splendid way a most excellent sermon. Each sermon he preaches seems to be better. We feel that we are very fortunate in having him back with us again.

Our Sunday school is doing nicely under the supervision of our new superintendent, Mr. Herman Coble. We had a splendid attendance Sunday, the largest we have had in some time. The men's class had charge of the opening exercise and rendered a good program. On next Sunday morning the girls' class will have charge of the opening exercise.

The flu situation in our community has improved very much. Most of our members are able to be out again. Mrs. Julia Sharpe, who has been quite ill for the past few weeks, is much improved, but not able to be out yet. We hope she will soon be able to be with us again, as she is missed.

Our first quarterly conference was held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at Mount Hermon church. We trust more of the official members will be present at the next quarterly conference.
REPORTER.

January 22, 1929.

Love Joy, Why Not Circuit.—One phase of our work that is interesting and progressive is the Sunday school. I noticed in our secretary's report last Sunday that our attendance and offering was 50 per cent more than a year ago. We have organized a junior choir, which helps out and gives variety to the services. We also have a male quartet composed of young men who sing for us each week. We have been handicapped to a certain extent in our services since our church burned down, but we have our new church almost completed. We can hardly wait till it is finished, we are so eager to get into our new Sunday school rooms where we can teach our classes more effectively, and, best of all, I want to say that when it is finished it will just about be paid for.

Our pastor, Rev. Joel B. Trogdon, was on hand last second Sunday morning and gave us another fine sermon; those who are not attending are certainly missing a great deal. We all love our pastor and good wife, and let us show our love and appreciation to them while they are living and can enjoy it.

Last Sunday was prayer meeting day. Our class-leader, Winborn Hulin, and Rev. Wade Sanders had charge of the service. It was a good old-time prayer meeting, about 90 per cent testifying to the saving knowledge of Jesus Christ.

There have been several cases of flu in our community, but it is subsiding now. There have been no deaths so far.

Best wishes.

E. H. REYNOLDS.

High Point.—At the morning hour last Sunday, Rev. R. I. Farmer spoke from the text, "Rise and measure the temple of God, and the altar, and them that worship therein," from Rev. 11:1. He said in part that there have always been standards of measurement of human life, but the trouble is that men measure themselves by other people, and not by God's standard. In a western cemetery an inscription on a monument reads: "He averaged well for this community." Are you satisfied to measure your spiritual life by mine or somebody else's? One reason the church hobbles along year after year is because we have measured up to the standard set several years ago, and give our pennies, nickels and dimes instead of ten dollars and fifty dollars. Some of the most beautiful cathedrals ever erected are barren because the spirit of Christ is not there. Woe unto that people who put the temple before the Spirit! Without the obedience of men to the will of God they are nothing. How much of the life of the worshiper is in the church? How often do we pray for sinful men and women? Measure men by God's standard. Is the church big enough to prove itself by impressing people with their sins? Measure men by the dimensions of sacrificial love. David Livingstone was brought back from Africa to be buried in Westminster Abbey, London, and was identified by the scars made on his body by a lion. How much are we kneeling at family altars? How much are we making people glad that they came to church? The Duke of Wellington said to a hesitant peasant who drew back in his presence at the communion table, "There are no Dukes here." How much soul wealth do we possess? How much are we praying for others? We need to get away from the monotony of home life, and go to church where we may "Be still, and know that I am God." At this service the anthem, "I Will Lift Up Mine Eyes," by Rogers, was beautifully rendered by the choir, and Prof. Ernest B. Stimson sang a lovely solo in his charming voice.

At the Sunday evening service the minister delivered another effective sermon on "Who Is a Christian?" from Matt. 7:21. He said that to be a Christian means that adjustment of life in which God in Christ, and not self, is the center. The basis is Whittier's immortal line, "We test our lives by Thine." Accepting Christ as the center, we must let Him readjust our lives with our co-operation. The soldier submits to his commander, the pupil to his teacher, and the sick man to his physician. Only so can there be progress. Without Christ we are powerless to live the good life. In broadcasting over the radio last Sunday afternoon, Dr. Daniel A. Poling said that the three most most beautiful words in the English language are God, immortality, and duty, and the three are so interwoven and correlated that we cannot think of one without the other.

At the general meeting of the Missionary Societies held at the church on Monday afternoon, there was an attendance of 28 members. Devotionals were conducted by Rev. R. I. Farmer, who spoke particularly of the time spent while on earth by Jesus in healing the sick. An interesting article on India was read by Mrs. John S. Pickett. Mrs. Pickens gave a reading on Bethel Home. The second chapter of the study-book, "Friends of Africa," was presented in a most impressive and concise manner by Mrs. C. L. Whitaker. This chapter is called "The Human Problem," and deals with the people of Africa, whose hearts are open, and want to learn about God. The members of the three circles of the societies have made Mrs. R. T. Pickens a perpetual member of the Home Society. This announcement was made by Mrs. Ben Moore, president, and came as a genuine surprise to the one thus honored, who wishes to take this occasion to thank most gratefully and cordially every member who contributed to make possible this mark of affection and esteem. This interesting meeting was brought to a close with prayer by Rev. E. L. Ballard.

The annual thank-offering service of the Woman's Foreign Society will be held in the church Sunday evening, February 17th. Mrs.

S. S. Coe is secretary of thank-offering, and is planning to present an entertaining program on that occasion. A special letter in regard to this service, which marks the 50th anniversary of the Woman's Foreign Society in our denomination, will be prepared and sent to every family of our membership. We are hoping and praying for a splendid offering on this auspicious occasion.

The executive committee of the Board of Young People's Work held a meeting in the First church on Monday afternoon. Mrs. E. Lester Ballard is secretary, and much important business was transacted. Rev. and Mrs. Fred W. Paschall, of Asheville, were in attendance, and were guests of Rev. and Mrs. Ballard. Mrs. Paschall is most pleasantly remembered by many friends here as Miss Spencer Cutchin, member of the class of 1928 of High Point College.

Arrangements for the High Point Township Sunday School Institute are being made. This body will meet in the First church Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, January 30-February 1, inclusive. Out-of-town speakers appearing on the program will be Dr. Arlo A. Brown, president of the University of Chattanooga, Tenn., and Miss Flora Davis, of Raleigh, General Superintendent of the North Carolina Sunday School Association. Miss Daisy Magee will also speak on some phase of the work.

The topic for the C. E. Society on Monday evening was "Seeing the God in Men Everywhere," which was led by Mrs. L. R. Peacock. The officers of this society for the coming year are as follows: President, Miss Myrtle Davis; vice-president, Mr. C. E. Bulla; recording secretary, Miss Irene Reynolds; corresponding secretary, Miss Nellie Martin; treasurer, Miss Lalah Shepard; assistant treasurer, Miss Margaret Snipes; assistant secretary, Miss Ira McAdams, and pianist, Miss Inez Reynolds; assistants, Carey Davis and Miss Grace Koontz.

Tuesday evening, January 22nd, the Young Women's Auxiliary will meet in monthly session with Mrs. L. J. Harper and Mrs. Spencer Jackson at 220 Montlieu avenue, at 8 o'clock.

At the mid-week prayer meeting on Wednesday evening the minister will begin a series of talks on "Jesus in Prayer."

Sincere condolence is extended to our popular soloist, Clarence Schultheiss, on account of the death of his sister, Miss Ida Schultheiss, which occurred at High Point Hospital Sunday afternoon.

We are sorry to note the illness of highly esteemed members: Mr. H. B. Krieger at his home on Phillip street; Mrs. D. A. Neese, at High Point Hospital; Mr. Furman Auman, who underwent an operation for appendicitis at Guilford General Hospital, and Mr. George T. Penny, who is quite ill at his home on Greensboro road. One of the Children's Home family, Miss Vera Garmon, is resting comfortably after an operation for appendicitis at Guilford General Hospital. The minister, Rev. Mr. Farmer, led in special prayers for the recovery of all our sick members last Sunday morning.

Pleasant Grove.—Our pastor, Rev. D. R. Williams, continues to favor us with his splendid sermons every Sunday morning and night. The one last night from Hebrews 2:3: "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?" was certainly fine.

We have replaced the Deleo lighting plant with electric lights from High Point. This has added much to the night services, as we always have lights now.

The children of our pastor and wife were all with them during Christmas. Ralph D., of the Guarantee Company of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Staley Garrison and children, of Burlington, N. C., and Arnold R., manager of the Montgomery-Ward store of Lynchburg, Virginia.

The monthly meeting of the Brotherhood will be held next Saturday night in the home of Mr. Weldon Burton.

REPORTER.

Draper.—The flu is getting better in our town, but Bro. H. C. Belcher is bad off. It seems that the flu settled in his head. We hope and pray for him a speedy recovery. Sister Adkins, the wife of Bro. R. A. Adkins, passed to God on January 11th. She was loved by all who knew her. She will be missed in our village. We extend to Bro. Adkins our heartfelt sympathy.

Rev. J. S. Riddle preached at our church on Sunday at 11 o'clock. We were glad to have him with us.

Sister Totten doesn't seem to get any better. We are sorry that she has such bad health. We hope God will bless her and heal her body, if it is His will.

LEWIS CRAIG, Reporter.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—The Home and Foreign Missionary Society met with Mrs. T. C. Williams January 15. The devotional and program was conducted by the writer. Our pastor gave us a very interesting talk on our Bethel Home. We are very proud of this home and the work it is doing.

Our society is expecting to give a play soon, also sell the quilt we have been working on for several months. Mrs. Spencer, our president, is serving us faithfully. I do not think we could get a better president.

Several of our people attended services at Union on January 6, and heard Rev. Yoshio Ito, a Japanese minister, preach. They were well pleased with his message.

We are expecting to have a thank-offering service the second Sunday evening in February. We hope to have an interesting program.

The writer has been suffering with a sprained ankle the past week.

The children of Mr. G. L. Knight gave him a surprise birthday dinner last Sunday, January 20. This event celebrated his 83rd birthday. Grandpa attended Sunday school Sunday morning and gave his birthday offering to the Children's Home. He is a regular attendant at Sunday school and church services. We wish Grandpa many more birthdays.

First Church, Winston-Salem.—"We are building, daily building, character on high." There are two kinds of training needed for the construction of this building—mental and spiritual. How one-sided some of our buildings are! Children are sent to school to get mental training, but their spiritual training is forgotten. Parents do not impress upon the children the importance of Sunday school and that is where they get their training to complete their building. If we would do more to impress this upon the minds of all the people our Sunday schools would grow larger and our character-building would become straight.

The Interdenominational Young People's Conference held in Winston-Salem on January 15 met with great success. Several members of our church attended the all-day meeting, (and, of course, stayed for the banquet that night.)

The young people held a very interesting meeting on January 10. We found that we have almost raised our pledge for the year, and twenty dollars was sent into the treasurer with a request that some of it be sent to the Weaver Home, the rest where it was needed most.

Hubert Smothers has been elected president of the Boosters' class, watch them go.

The Calendar Committee has made out the report for the year (but haven't let us in on it yet).

It voted last Sunday that there would be two weeks of evangelistic service preceding Easter Sunday. It was also decided that our pastor, Rev. H. F. Surratt, would conduct these services. By the way, did you read the poem in last week's Herald on the first page, "Wanted—A Pastor?" Well, we have him, but are not ready to give him up.

We are glad to announce that the young people are coming into their own, and we are planning to celebrate this by observing Young People's Day. We have our program near completion and we are anticipating a good one.

The mid-week prayer service will be held Wednesday night after which some songs for the young people's service will be rehearsed.

The Christian Endeavor held its regular monthly business meeting Tuesday at the home of the president, Miss Pearl Sapp. Some very interesting things came up that we think will improve our society.

REPORTER.

Mt. Zion Pinnacle Circuit.—We are very much encouraged by a very decided increase in attendance in Sunday. Last Sunday 85 were present and much interest was shown. The superintendent was very ably assisted by a class of boys and girls conducting the devotional exercise. They brought their Bibles and read the daily readings on the lesson.

Bro. Hunter came with a very strong sermon today. We feel stronger after having heard it. A very impressive part of the service was the responsive reading led by Bro. Hunter, using the reading in the new song-books.

Bro. E. S. Mickey is slowly recovering from a severe attack of influenza, followed by side pleurisy, which has had him confined to his room for six or seven weeks. Last Sunday was his birthday and Bro. Hunter and the writer took dinner with him, which was a very enjoyable occasion.

The influenza situation seems to be getting better in this section.

Ossie Lane, daughter of Brother Kirt Lane, is very low with pneumonia, this being the sixth time she has had this dreadful disease.

Bro. Floyd Culler and family, of Rural Hall, were with us Sunday.

We are glad to have Bro. T. G. Barber and family back with the regulars again in Sunday school.

As we enter this new year under somewhat of a financial pressure throughout the farming section here, caused from a poor season, we are too prone to worry. Let's remember that scripture, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness and all these other things will be added unto you." Do this, remembering to pray. If we do our best, we shall be able to look our destiny in the face at any time with a clear conscience and know "God will take care of us."

Siler City.—We are still alive and doing some good work, we hope. Our Sunday school attendance is not as good as we would like for it to be, yet we feel that the flu has been conflicting with our attendance for the past two months.

We are still without a pastor. President Taylor was with us last Sunday morning and delivered a wonderful message. He also encouraged us somewhat as to our securing the services of a pastor for the remaining part of the year.

A wedding of much interest was solemnized last Wednesday afternoon when Miss Oma Andrew became the bride of Mr. J. B. Turner. For quite a while these two have been very enthusiastic workers in our church. We wish for them many happy and successful years together.

PEARLIE MOORE, Reporter.

From Kannapolis, N. C., to Triplett, Va.—We left Kannapolis on the afternoon of November 15, 1928, came to Greensboro and spent the night, then got on the road early on Friday morning; took breakfast in Burlington, thence on by Durham, Oxford, Henderson, where we had lunch, also had some repairs done to the car, as we had the misfortune to have to be towed into Henderson from near Oxford. After lunch we left Henderson, went to Norlina, and from there to South Hill, Va.; thence on by Lawrenceville to Triplett, reaching the parsonage late in the afternoon.

We had a very delightful trip in spite of the car trouble, and had such a beautiful fall day for the trip, just pleasant weather, not cold and hot.

While filling the car with gas at South Hill, Va., the truck which moved our furniture for us came by on the return trip, having already reached the parsonage and unloaded, and was that far on the way back.

We find ourselves among some of the best people that we have ever met; they are a big-hearted, loyal folk here, and have received us very graciously, and we are delighted with the reception given us, and with the field in general, and especially with the people. We have been greeted by large and attentive congregations at all of the churches, and at all of the appointments; truly, we are among good people, people that are loyal to their church and to their pastor, as has been evidenced by the severe and yet humane poundings by three of the churches. We thank every one and earnestly pray God's blessings upon them all.

The first quarterly conference of the charge has been held, and a spirit of love and harmony prevailed. Some forward steps were taken. The recommendations of the pastor were adopted, and we plan and pray for a great year in Kingdom service. The prospects are very encouraging.

We have been a bit lonely since Brother Powell and family moved out and left us but we are getting better acquainted and meeting new people almost every day.

There has been a great deal of sickness among our people and other as well; we have had two cases of flu in our home. (Mrs. Cowan was in bed for more than three weeks and E. G., Jr., was confined to bed for nearly one week.) Fortunately, I have managed to escape it so far. All those that have been sick seem to be well on the road to recovery now.

Three of our churches had nice Christmas trees and rendered a nice program in each case, showing that the children were well trained. Large congregations were present and the program was greatly enjoyed by all.

Have filled all appointments since arriving; have been called upon to conduct one funeral, (not a member of our church, however) and have also officiated at two weddings; that with visiting the sick has kept me very busy, but seem to be standing up pretty well as I have gained 11 pounds since coming into the state.

We are very glad indeed to be privileged to labor in this part of God's moral vineyard. We know that we are among good folks, big-hearted folks, people who are really the salt of the earth; our prayer is that we may serve them faithfully, capably and well. The church activities for the new year are starting off well along all lines, and we see signs of growth along some lines. The Sunday school at Ebenezer church which was suspended in the late fall has been reorganized and is to begin its work again at once.

A new roof is to be placed on the parsonage at once, and some other needed repairs will be taken care of at once.

We wish to express our thanks for the new furniture which has been placed in the parsonage, also for the many other gifts which have been showered upon us, as well as for the many acts of kindness shown.

E. G. COWAN, Pastor,
Triplett, Va. Greensville Circuit.

Asheville.—The Brotherhood met at the home of Mrs. Y. D. Eller, Tuesday evening. After a most delicious dinner served by members of Mrs. U. S. Miller's circle a very pleasant meeting was enjoyed by Rev. Mr. Paschalls, Messrs. H. L. Hanner, Richard Hanner, E. C. Fawcett, and G. M. Foster.

The Christian Endeavor set the goals for the coming year at the January monthly business meeting. They were, $100 for local and general conference budgets, to increase the attendance by half, to hold a get-together social monthly, to make our Sunday night meetings more interesting, and to extend special invitations to outsiders.

The Business Circle of the Woman's Auxiliary met Monday night at the home of Mildred Younginer. The members present discussed plans for which they could be of the greatest service. They decided to adopt one of the little girls from our Children's Home to clothe.

The Ladies' Auxiliary met Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. H. O. Charnock, 45 Montview Drive. Mrs. F. W. Paschall had charge of the meeting, which was very interesting. Delicious refreshments were served.

We are sorry to report that Brother C. C. McNeill has been quite sick with flu for the past week. We wish for him a speedy recovery.

Rev. and Mrs. Paschall, Misses Nancy Clouse, Mildred and Clarice Younginer, motored down to High Point and Greensboro Monday.

All the young girls between the ages of 11 and 20 who are interested in the Campfire Girls are asked to meet at the parsonage at 7:30 o'clock Friday evening for the purpose of organizing. Mrs. F. W. Paschall will act as leader for the group.

REPORTER.

Burlington, Fountain Place.—Although some reporters fail to function sometimes, and no report from the charge is seen in the paper, we must not infer that there is no life or activity, and, consequently, nothing to report. While we do not believe in consuming valuable space needlessly, we do believe that we should hear from all fields occasionally, at least. It may be of more importance than we think to let others know of our activities and the progress that is being made along different lines.

Fountain Place has commenced the work of the new year with all departments operating very nicely. The Sunday school, with Mr. H. W. Wade as the new superintendent, is very well attended, and we trust the interest will continue to increase.

Our new pastor, Bro. M. P. Chambliss, brought us his first message of the new conference year on the third Sunday in November, using as his subject "The Abundant Life." This was indeed an inspirational sermon, and certainly very appropriate for the occasion. We look forward with a pleasant anticipation for the messages which he brings to us twice each Sunday in the month, except the fourth, on which day he is with the Haw River Mission.

Those of us who were permitted to attend services last Sunday had the opportunity of hearing our pastor preach another splendid sermon from the text: "What think ye of Christ?" We were especially reminded of the fact, that in our daily life it is our grand privilege to crown Him King of kings and Lord of lords.

Several of our people have been kept from services on account of sickness. We were glad to see Mr. R. G. Hornaday out again last Sunday, after having been confined to his home for some time. We truly hope he may soon be with us again.

CHAS. L. JONES, Reporter.

Mebane.—We have not been silent because of any lack of interest in our work, but our reporter was sick and resigned. A new one was elected and has been sick.

Conference saw fit to send us another good preacher and pastor. Rev. W. M. Loy came to us immediately after conference. We were very much pleased with him and his sermons continue to be of the highest type. We are indeed glad to welcome Bro. Loy and his family into membership of our church.

On January 9th James Columbus Loy came to live at the parsonage. Mrs. Loy and son are doing nicely and we have added him to our "Rattle Roll."

Our work is taking on new interest along all lines. We hope for this to be our best year's work. The Woman's Auxiliary is doing splendid work. The uniting of the societies has meant much to us as a church. More of our ladies are working and being informed along lines of church work than ever before.

The Christian Endeavor Society has been re-organized and divided. Miss Pauline Nicholson has charge of the Intermediates; Mrs. F. K. Smith and Mrs. P. N. Thompson have charge of the Juniors. The Seniors, with Miss Bessie Barnette as president. We feel sure these will be a great help in training leaders for our future church.

Our Ladies' Aid Society is one of our real working organizations. The January meeting was held with Mrs. H. C. Nicholson, and a very pleasant social hour followed the business session.

Our prayer meetings have been very interesting and helpful. We are studying the Bible, one book for each prayer service. Parts are assigned to members and then the pastor leads us all out in a very thoughtful and helpful way. Our attendance has increased since beginning the study.

Quite a number of our people have flu and quite a number are out after having had it. Mr. Ab Smith continues quite all. He has been suffering from some disease of the heart since Christmas and it seems that his improvement is doubtful. His sister, Miss Fannie Smith, of Greensboro, is at his bedside. We are praying that Mr. Smith and the other sick of our congregation may soon be restored to health.

The board of stewards will hold their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Nicholson Friday night of this week.

We were glad to see Miss Alta Allen, one of our girls, among the visitors at church Sunday. Miss Allen returned to High Point College Monday to resume her work.

The four children of Mrs. Lewis Shanklin of our church and town were carried to the Children's Home at High Point last week, three boys and one girl. These are bright and attractive children. We are indeed glad that we can have a part in giving these the training that could never have been had at home. We are proud of this home and proud of the good fruit it has been and is bearing. May our prayers and money go out to this great work.

Rev. O. C. Loy, of Saxapahaw Circuit, preached for us the fifth Sunday morning. We enjoyed having him visit us and preach for us. His sermon was very much complimented.

Our pastor preached two splendid sermons Sunday. The morning service was attended by a large congregation; not quite so many were present for the night service.

Dulin's, Mocksville Circuit.—Our Christmas program was very successful considering the practice we gave the children and the sickness in the community.

We were indeed glad to have with us at our entertainment our pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton. He made a splendid talk, which was pleasing to his hearers.

Santa Claus was present and gave treats to the Sunday school pupils and a little present to each member.

We have started the new year off with more members, and a resolution to be on time when possible.

The Sunday school is growing in both number and interest. The old members are trying to manifest more interest in every way possible.

The C. E. Society is moving along; each member performs his or her duty the best they know how. Each member is trying to let his light so shine that others may see what good they are doing and follow after them.

Our pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton, preached an inspiring and forceful sermon Sunday, after which the Lord's Supper was administered to a good number.

We were indeed glad to have with us Mrs. Cecelia Jones, who is almost an invalid, but still she is interested in her church.

We now have Mr. Childress and family living in our parsonage. We are glad to have these people, but they will have to vacate as soon as our pastor needs it.

One of our members got his hand seriously hurt while working at a saw mill.

The sickness among our members and community is clearing away; the congregation is growing in number. We hope by spring we will have a house full. Our aim for this church year is: Better co-operation with our pastor, and the promotion of every church work.

We are planning to hold our youth service program after school closes so our pastor can be with us and help us carry it out well.

We feel it is an honor to us to have for our pastor a young man now in the graduate class at our own college at High Point.

LEONA HENDRIX, Reporter.

West Forsyth.—Ideal weather prevailed last Sunday and there were large congregations, the largest we have had this year, at Pleasant Hill and Tabernacle churches. Splendid attention was given by the people and the pastor was encouraged and inspired as he tried to speak. The Lord's Supper was observed at both services with good responses.

We thank Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Speas and Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Hunter, of Pleasant Hill church, for fresh meat last week.

Mrs. Mollie Hartley and son, Ernest Hartley, of Lexington, members of a former pastorate, worshipped with us at Pleasant Hill last Sunday. Also Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Hunter, and Miss Floy Hunter, of Winston-Salem, members of Pleasant Hill church, were attendants, besides several visitors.

Services next Sunday at Harmony Grove, near Clemmons.

This writer is practicing brevity this week.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Concord.—Our church enjoyed a good day Sunday. The Sunday school attendance, which has been off some owing to influenza for several weeks, was better, there being 261 present.

At the morning hour, our pastor, Mr. Hendry, preached one of the best sermons it has been our privilege to hear him preach, on the "Four Square Life." The Young People's Rally was in session at this time, and Mr. Hendry's sermon was a challenge to youth, as well as older ones, to make their lives count, to be strong, basing his thoughts around the text, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, mind, soul and strength." The church was packed at this service, many young people being in attendance. Another pleasing feature of this service was a duet, "How Matchless His Love," by the Misses Burris. At the afternoon service, Rev. J. R. Anderson, the retiring president, of Albemarle, presided, and the principal address was made by Rev. N. M. Harrison, of Charlotte, which was a masterpiece and thoroughly enjoyed by all.

Five churches were represented, and five pastors present, as follows: Messrs. Harrison, Short, Anderson, Lowdermilk and Hendry. An attendance banner, which goes to the church having the largest attendance at the meetings, and which has been held by Concord, was carried to Albemarle, they having 31 present. The entertaining church is not allowed to compete. The Albemarle choir furnished the music for the afternoon service, and a solo, "Somewhere," was beautifully rendered by Miss Ruth Green of that city.

New officers elected for the year are as follows: D. A. McLaurin, Concord, president; C. L. Hatley, Albemarle, vice-president; Miss Ruth Green, Albemarle, recording secretary; Miss May Aycock, Concord, treasurer; Mrs. D. A. McLaurin, corresponding secretary. This union is composed of the following churches and charges: Albemarle, Charlotte, Concord, Friendship, Roberta, Kannapolis, Midland and Porter. An invitation from Mr. Harrison was accepted to meet with First Church, Charlotte, on Easter Sunday.

On next Friday evening the Sunday school will hold a banquet and social in the dining hall of the Sunday school building. A splendid program of music and snappy speeches will be given, and a general good time. Tickets are being sold and we are expecting between 250 and 300 present. A joint meeting of the Missionary Circles will be held at the church tonight (Monday) and an interesting program will be given.

On Wednesday evening, February 6, at 7:30, Dr. Ira Landrith, LL.D., National Citizenship Superintendent of Christian Endeavor, will speak in our church, and we extend an invitation to all who are in reach of our city to hear him.

MRS. D. A. McLAURIN.

Fairview, Anderson Charge.—Our pastor filled his appointment Sunday with a very inspiring sermon.

It was voted by the Sunday school to send the offering of the third Sunday of each month to our Children's Home at High Point. We have been having very good attendance at Sunday school, although there are many who are confined to their homes by flu.

New teachers for the Sunday school were elected on the fifth Sunday in December, as follows: Men's Bible Class, Mr. J. W. Smith; Adults, Mrs. W. B. Freeman; Seniors, Miss Monty Henderson, with Mr. H. A. Foster as assistant; Intermediates, Miss Mildred Nalley; Juniors, Miss Elizabeth White; Primary, Mrs. G. M. Watson; Beginners, Mrs. Estella Connelly; choir leader, Mr. Tommy Nalley, and pianist, Miss Elizabeth White.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.
B. CONNELLY.

St. Paul.—Although silent for quite a while, we are still active. We started off the new year with 135 present at Sunday school, although there has been much sickness.

First quarterly conference was held the first Saturday night in January. The weather was bad and the crowd was small.

Our pastor, Rev. N. Brittain, gave us a good sermon last night. His subject was "Sin." He always has something worth while to tell us. The congregation is right good for the preaching hour, and is on the increase.

The Christian Endeavor meets every Monday night at 6:45 and has good attendance.

The Willing Worker class held their class meeting last week with Mrs. McCollom. All report a good time. Mr. Ed-ell Oaks is teacher of this class and it is a fine class of young girls and boys.

The Ladies' Aid met with Mrs. Carl Wilson the second Saturday night in this month. They are planning to have a Washington's birthday supper and program. Our Ladies' Aid is not so large in number, but can well be called the faithful few. They are planning to paint the church inside this spring. After the business was over all went to the dining room where sandwiches, cake and hot chocolate was served. The next meeting will be with Mrs. J. S. Wade.

We want to invite those that do not attend Sunday school and preaching elsewhere to come to St. Paul. We have a good Sunday school. C. E. Wilson is superintendent, and he is as good as you will find anywhere and we have classes to suit both young and old, and our preaching is always good. You are always welcome; we invite you to come.

REPORTER.

Orange Charge.—We are planning to put on the Young People's Day program, "Youth in Service," at the following times and places: Union Grove, first Sunday in February at 11 a. m.

Efland, first Sunday in February at 7 p. m.
Rev. Lawrence Little has promised to be with us in the service at Efland. We are hoping he can be with us at Union Grove also.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Palestine, Flat Rock.—Better late than not at all. We were very much pleased to have Rev. and Mrs. J. P. Pegg and baby back with us. We shall look for a good year's work together. With the love and co-operation of each member of our church we are sure that pastor and people will see progress.

Brother Pegg has filled each appointment since Conference except one and Mrs. Pegg's father was ill at that time.

Our Sunday school has continued this far and will go on. The attendance has decreased greatly, especially the teachers. As spring approaches we hope to see pupils and teachers back at their places and the Sunday school progressing again.

REPORTER.

State Street, Lexington. The holidays have come and gone and we are well into the new year with its privileges, problems and opportunities. Our Christmas exercises were good and the offering was liberal.

The attendance, which has been cut off by the flu, has begun to pick up now in all the church services. This is encouraging to all of us as we feel like taking hold with new energy.

The folks here, while not coming in mass attack, many of them remember us in a way that reminds us that all town people have not forgotten how to pound the preacher. The following have given us things that we have enjoyed as well as being helped thereby: Mrs. H. C. Rogers, Mrs. Burkheart, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Cox, Mrs. C. L. Koontz, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Lindsay, H. S. Lanier, H. L. Helms, Mrs. Luther Koontz, Mrs. Ed Workman, Mrs. Harkey, J. C. Hoffman. H. P. Hoffman played the biggest Santa Claus of any one, loading us down with more than a half dozen varieties of confectioneries and good things to eat for Christmas. We have never known just who did it, but a beautiful magazine rack was put into the parsonage as a gift to us from the church and Sunday school. We appreciate this very much, as well as all the other articles given. We would enjoy Christmas coming oftener.

We appreciate the great number of cards and gifts coming to us from other places where we have served and in some instances where we only have acquaintances. If these who sent us these remembrances see these items we want you to know that you are not forgotten in our prayers and good wishes. All the way from California, Texas to Massachusetts we were remembered. Thank you all, good friends.

Our anniversary services the second Sunday were well attended and we are grateful to all who helped to make the day a success. President Taylor's sermon in the morning was helpful indeed, so was the address by Bro. Farmer in the afternoon. Mrs. Maier gave us the climax in the evening service. Bro. Ballard helped to enrich the day by his presence and two helpful solos. The Crescent Quartette sang for us in the morning service and as they could not stay for the afternoon and night the people kept them singing while in the dining room at the noon hour. They are fine. Misses Margarette, Mildred and Willie Veigh Leonard sang for us in the evening. We were glad to have Bro. Bayard Sink to lead for us in the congregational singing at that hour.

Bro. Isley called in his services and brought many of his people with him. Bro. Surratt was here in the afternoon with some of the good brethren from Winston. We were glad to have Captain Rankin and Bro. Tussey from High Point in the services. There were many visitors present and we appreciate their presence.

This was a good day for us and we are hoping that the members here will keep up this practice in the years to come so that those coming in may keep fresh in their minds the history of the local church.

Pray for us, for we have much to do yet to possess the land before us.

N. G. BETHEA.

Kistlers Church, Cleveland Circuit.—The work for a new year has started well. We hope for a much better year than we had last year.

We were very glad to have our pastor, Rev. C. E. Ridge, and family with us Sunday. At 11 o'clock Bro. Ridge brought us a very helpful and interesting sermon. The subject for the service was, "It Is Finished," after which the Lord's Supper was observed. A large congregation, including several visitors, was present and communed.

Our Sunday school is still progressing very nicely.

We are very sorry to learn of the death of one of the members of our church, Mr. Orange Canipe. He will be greatly missed at church and in the community.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

FLORA IVESTER, Reporter.

Shiloh, North Davidson.—The Senior C. E. Society held its regular weekly meeting at the home of P. L. Koontz on Sunday night. The new officers had charge. They are as follows: Mrs. Roy Leatherman, president;

Mr. Ira Koontz, vice-president; Miss Lessie Laning, secretary; Miss Ruth Sink, treasurer; Mrs. P. L. Koontz, reporter, and Rev. R. S. Troxler, critic. We had a real good meeting with Mrs. R. S. Troxler as leader. Every one present seemed to be very much interested in the work for the coming year. We want to make this the best year that we have ever had. We had 33 present at this meeting and on the first Sunday night we also had 33.

We have decided to meet in the homes during the winter months instead of at the church. We seem to have better attendance.

Wishing all C. E. Societies a successful year, and asking that you pray for us in our work.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle Circuit.—The Ladies' Aid and Missionary Society of Mt. Zion met at 11 o'clock, January 13. The president, Mrs. W. E. Jones, read the story of the Great Physician from Luke and the society joined in prayer. Mrs. Ed Jones read a paper on Bethel Home. Mrs. T. G. Barber read "Our Medical Work in India."

Business consisting of some plans for raising finances was discussed. Our goal is one hundred dollars in 1929.

DR. J. C. BROOMFIELD'S REPORT

To the Executive Committee of the General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church:

The following is my report from October 17, 1928, to January 15, 1929:

During the period indicated, it was my privilege to visit the Texas, North Carolina, Alabama, Florida and Mississippi Conferences in their annual sessions. During the same period I participated in group meetings in the Onondaga, Pittsburgh and Maryland Conferences.

It might be of immediate interest to our people, and a matter of record for the future, to give an outline of my itinerary in visiting these conferences as well as in conducting the general work of my office. The following is the order in which I traveled through various sections of the Church:

In New York—Syracuse, North Waleott, Bishopville and Rochester; in Texas—Tehuacana and Wortham; in North Carolina—Winston Salem, High Point and Greensboro; in Alabama—Birmingham; in Georgia—Atlanta; in Florida—Orlando, Orla Vista, Englewood and Boyd; in Ohio—Cambridge; in Pennsylvania—New Brighton, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia; in Mississippi—Meridian and Mosselle; in West Virginia—Fairmont; in Maryland—Deer Park, Westminster, Baltimore and Chestertown; in D. C.—Washington; and in New Jersey—Newark.

These journeys have required over 13,000 miles in travel, and with the exception of Cambridge, Ohio, and Atlanta, Georgia, I preached or delivered addresses in all of the places named. I accompanied Dr. Haddaway to Rochester and counselled with the representatives of the Onondaga Conference, and the Centenary Church, concerning their proposed new church building. On the way from the Alabama to the Florida Conference, I accompanied Drs. Haddaway and Straughn to Atlanta, and surveyed our property and proposed new church in that city.

For the past two years our work in Florida has been giving the Board of Home Missions some concern. My contention was that either we ought to do more for our work there, or withdraw from communities in which work had been recently established.

In order to advise our Florida Mission Conference, as well as the Board of Missions, in company with Drs. Straughn and Haddaway, I visited Orlando, Orla Vista and Englewood. After due consideration we advised the immediate withdrawal from Englewood. Concerning the property there, we advised turning the partially completed church to the local congregation, and Assembly Grounds to the original donor. Because of our visit we shall be able to advise concerning needed adjustments in and about Orlando.

On October 23 I appointed Dr. H. L. Elderidge to represent us in the World Conference on Faith and Order.

On January 2 I recommended Revs. L. B. Smith, of Maryland, and Roby F. Day, of Eastern, for membership in the Commission on Evangelism; and R. Y. Nicholson, of Maryland, for membership in the Committee on Army and Navy Chaplains, of the Federal Council.

December 3-10 I attended the quadrennial meeting of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, held in Rochester, N. Y. While there I served on the Business and Program Committee.

During the quarter I attended the various meetings of the Executive Committees of the Board of Missions and the Board of Christian Education. The special features of the quarter's activities were the group meetings. Three were held in the Onondaga Conference, five in the Pittsburgh Conference, and six in the Maryland Conference. Their value was clearly set forth in the many expressions of appreciation that were freely given in all the gatherings.

These meetings are part of the promotional program being conducted by Dr. Straughn, and along with the other secretaries, I am helping as opportunity affords. It is in Dr. Straughn's plan to conduct these meetings in as many conferences as possible.

Since my last report I have preached 15 times, and delivered 31 addresses.

Everywhere I have gone I have found abundant evidence of a marked willingness to help put across the General Conference program. The outlook is encouraging.

J. C. BROOMFIELD.

—Two women calling themselves palmists swindled 50 farmers of Forsythe County out of sums aggregating $25,000, according to newspaper report. Such creatures should not be licensed to do business, and when they offer their services, such services should be declined. They are shrewd swindlers, preying upon the gullible.

—Miss Ruby Trollinger, 11-year-old daughter of Rev. J. H. Trollinger, has pushed ahead to the seventh grade in Monticello High School. She is looking forward with pleasure to a course in High Point College.

THE COMMUNION SERVICE

What President Taylor said in a recent letter regarding the Lord's Supper was well taken and well expressed. It is difficult for some of us to understand why some of our ministers object to observing this service as often as our church advises. I have not found that the people object to the frequency when the service is made beautiful and effective; but rather under favorable circumstances the people have responded readily and gladly. Wherever I have gone I have found it to be one of the sweetest services of the church. We all have our own views about matters, but I think that when we depart from the old-fashioned way of kneeling at the sacred altar to observe the Lord's Supper we greatly detract from the service. When kneeling we are more apt to draw in the wanderings of our minds and center our thoughts on the one thing. We are less apt to crowd and more apt to be orderly. A Methodist church so built that its altar does not invite one to kneel at the communion service has to me allowed itself to greatly detract from this beautiful service. I also feel that the pastor that encourages his people not to kneel at this sacred service is opening the way to that which is apt to be formal and often careless.

When our church says, "Let those who have scruples concerning receiving the Lord's Supper kneeling, be permitted to receive it either sitting or standing," the inference certainly is that kneeling is recommended. At some of our conference communion services we have allowed ourselves to drift to where there seemed to be little or no reverence. As much as I appreciate this service I have at times almost rather we would not observe it at conference. I think we are improving.

Now, have I said anything that sounds unkind or like fault-finding? I certainly did not mean to. I simply have my deep convictions along these lines. I started out to express my appreciation of what President Taylor said and possibly I have allowed myself to drift.

Our last communion service at Welch Memorial was to me a very beautiful one. The people also seemed to appreciate it very much. As the people knelt at the altar some in the congregation were noticed to bow, giving assent to the sacredness of the occasion. The church is planning to make some changes in the altar so as to make more kneeling room and other conveniences.

In His name,

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

McCrorie

Miss Alice Virginia McCrorie, of Stokesdale, North Carolina, passed to her reward on Sunday, December 16, 1928, after a severe illness of about one week. Her death was rather sudden and brought profound sorrow to the family and a wide circle of friends and relatives.

Miss Alice was the daughter of E. H. and Margaret E. McCrorie, of Stokesdale. She is survived by her mother, three sisters, Mrs. J. S. Gant, of Walkertown; Mrs. A. J. Lemons, of Mayodan, and Miss Lula McCrorie, of Stokesdale; and two brothers, Messrs. C. W. and A. H. McCrorie, of Stokesdale.

She joined the Flat Rock M. P. church at the age of thirteen and was a loyal and devoted member, living a true Christian life. She was widely known, being one of the most influential women of this community. She was a guiding star in the home and a heavenly inspiration to all who knew her.

The funeral services were held on Tuesday, the 18th, in the Stokesdale M. E. church. Rev. J. P. Pegg, the pastor of the deceased, was assisted by Rev. J. C. Preston, Rev. C. F. Tate, Rev. Paul Southard and Rev. G. C. Crutchfield. The beautiful floral presentation was symbolic of the purity of her life and betokened the love and relatives and the esteem of friends.

To the sorrowing family and the saddened friends we give what consolation may be imparted from heart to heart and that glorious hope which comes from a life well lived in the sight of man and in the presence of the Lord.

MRS. J. P. PEGG.

Cashatt

Annie Irene Wilson Cashatt, born February 2, 1899, died December 4th, 1928. She professed faith in Christ at an early age and united with Mitchell's Grove Methodist Protestant church, to which she remained loyal until death. She is survived by her husband and four children; Natalie, Elizabeth, Wilma and Maxine.

All that doctors, nurses and loving hands could do was done to stay the hand of death, but God's finger touched her and she slept. She was released from a body of pain and carried to that home beyond the sky where the weary find rest and suffering is no more. She is not dead, but in the beauty of her spirit and in her good deeds she lives and will live in the hearts of those who knew her best and loved her most. She lives here and in God's summer-land. She lives in all the glory of a life that death can not touch. Her mansion was ready and she had to go and take charge.

"Beautiful twilight at set of sun,
Beautiful goal with race well run,
Beautiful rest with work all done."

Her funeral was conducted at Wesley Memorial M. E. church, High Point, by Rev. Mr. Moore, assisted by her pastor, Rev. J. R. Hutton, and her body was laid to rest in Oakwood cemetery beneath a mound of flowers to await the resurrection morn.

We extend our deepest sympathy to the husband, children and relatives.

"She is gone, our precious mother
To her home beyond the sky;
But we know if we are faithful
We shall see her by and by.

We would not recall our mother
To this world of sin and woe;
Though we loved our mother dearly,
Thou, O Lord, didst love her more.

Farewell, mother; we may never
See thy face on earth again;
Yet we have the Master's promise
Up there sometime we'll under-stand.

ONE WHO KNEW HER.

Willis

Miss Maggie Willis, a very faithful member of the Asheville Methodist Protestant Church, died early Sunday morning, January 6th. Miss Willis had been in failing health for several years. No doubt she had suffered much during that time, but so long as it was at all possible for her to go she never stopped and was confined to her bed only a few days prior to her death.

On Thursday afternoon before her death the following Sunday, she asked the writer to conduct her funeral, for even then she seemed to know that she was going home. There seemed to be no verse of Scripture more applicable to her life, a life so liberal and so faithful to her church, than: "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life." Miss Willis was very liberal in her giving. She was also one of the most devoted and faithful members of our church here. She would often say to her pastor, "I can't do much," still she always did the best she knew how; was ever faithful in all that she could do and, after all, it is that person who is "faithful unto death" who receives the "crown of life."

There are several members of Miss Willis' family who survive her. The writer does not know them very well, having met them only once, as they live some distance from Asheville, but he prays that God may comfort and bless each one.

Dixon

John Dixon died November 29, 1928, being 74 years, seven months, and two days old. He had been in declining health for two years, having suffered two strokes of paralysis prior to the one that was destined to take him away. On Armistice Day he became critically ill with the third stroke, and on Thanksgiving Day he passed away.

The funeral service was conducted Friday afternoon, November 30, at Mt. Hermon M. P. church by his pastor, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, assisted by Rev. M. W. Buck. The many beautiful floral designs and the large audience present were evidences of the high esteem in which he was held by those who knew him.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mattie Patillo Dixon; five grandchildren, Joe, Gladys, Paul, Barbara, and Thomas Dixon, of Roanoke, Va., and one brother, Zeno H. Dixon, of Elkin, N. C.

Mr. Dixon was born in the Cane Creek Community of Alamance County, but moved to near Burlington where he spent the greater part of his life following his trade as a carpenter. He was known in his community as a true Christian character, one who was a friend to every man, a moral leader, and above all an inspiration to the young people of the community who will ever remember him as one who could guide, understand, and encourage. He was a member of Mt. Hermon M. P. church for forty years and very active in church work, having served as Sunday school superintendent for a long time.

Only a short time before his fatal illness he moved to Burlington where declining health prevented him from being as attentive to his local church as he wanted to be, but he always managed when possible to hear a radio sermon on Sunday morning. The same faith that caused him to fight the good fight for forty years was sufficient unto his dying day and shortly before is death he expressed himself as willing to go.

"I would not live always; I would not ask to stay

Where storm after storm rises dark o'er the way;

The few lurid mornings that dawn on us here

Are enough of life's woes, full enough for its cheer."

Hawkins

Mrs. W. W. Hawkins, aged 71 years, five months and 23 days, passed away January 10, 1929, in her home near Hawkins Chapel. She joined Hawkins Chapel church when quite young and remained a faithful member until death called her home, where there are no pain or sorrow.

She leaves a husband, one daughter, five sons, three sisters, 15 grandchildren and other relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

She was well known and every one that knew her said that she was a good, Christian woman. She would always tell her grandchildren that grandmother loves all of you, and would like so much to see her children (which she called them) do what was best to lead a Christian life.

Grandmother's was a place that we grandchildren liked to go, especially at Christmas, because we knew well that Old Santa had been there and left us all a present. Grandmother was always glad to see her children gather in her home.

Funeral services were held in her home January 11th, conducted by Rev. J. B. O'Brian, and her body laid to rest near her home, where she and her husband had planned for their resting place.

"We shall meet but we shall miss her,
There will be a vacant chair,
We shall linger to caress her,
When we breathe our evening prayer.

Sleep today, O early fallen,
In thy green and narrow bed,
Dirges from pine and cedars
Mingle in the tears we shed.

We shall meet but we shall miss her,
There will be one vacant chair,
We will always want to see her,
When we breathe an evening prayer."

Her granddaughter,

MAGGIE HAWKINS.

HIS SERVICE

To give a little from a shining store,
Is that to give? To give and feel no less,
Is that to give as Christ gave on the Cross?
To share the crumbs of happiness we gain
With those who weep apart, to give our best
Of healing sympathy to hearts in pain,
To give our labor when we fain would rest,
This is the charity men knew when He First breathed that word by star-lit Galilee!

—William F. Kirk.

—A marriage of much interest to members of Calvary church took place on January 11. On that day Bro. Floyd Reynolds went into Asheboro Street Baptist Church and bore away a bride, Miss Annie Louise Barnes. They will be at home after January 25 at 926 Bellevue street. They went to Florida on a bridal trip. On their return they will be congratulated by many friends.

—Born, to Rev. and Mrs. W. M. Loy, January 9th, a son, James Columbus.

MARRIED

Turner-Andrew

At the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Andrew in Siler City on January 16 the writer united in holy matrimony Mr. J. B. Turner and Miss Omo Andrew. Mr. Turner was formerly from Burlington, but for the past few months has maintained an insurance agency in Siler City. Mrs. Turner is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Andrew and has lived in Siler City for the past several years.

After a wedding trip of a few days the happy couple will be at home to their friends in Siler City. A host of friends wish them well in their new relationship.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Shell-Pearson

On December 26th, 1928, Richard Allen Shell, of Emporia, Va., and Miss Lillie Bernice Pearson, of near Edgerton, Va., with several relatives and friends motored to the parsonage and were married by the writer. Mr. Shell is a young business man and a farmer of Emporia, while the bride resided near Philadelphia church and is a member there. She is the daughter of Brother R. M. Pearson, who was the delegate to the last annual conference at Winston-Salem.

The young couple will reside in Emporia, Va., and we wish for them smooth sailing along life's matrimonial sea.

Douglas-North

Paul Douglas and Miss Minnie North were united in marriage by the writer Saturday, January 19, 1929, at 2 p. m., at the parsonage of the West Forsyth Charge, located at Dosier. The ceremony was witnessed by W. L. Vogler, brother-in-law of Mr. Douglas, and members of the pastor's family. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William North, of near East Bend, in Yadkin County, and a member of Baltimore Methodist Protestant Church, West Forsyth Charge. Mr. Douglas is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Douglas, of East Bend, Yadkin County, and is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at East Bend. They will reside at the home of W. L. Vogler, in the Dosier community, and may be additions to Pleasant Hill church at a later date.

After the ceremony at the parsonage, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas went to the home of Mr. Vogler, accompanied by the pastor and family, where a sumptuous wedding dinner awaiting them was enjoyed.

We wish them a long life of happiness and prosperity as they journey life's pathway together.

Hammack-Richardson

On January 15th, 1929, young people almost a dozen in number called at the parsonage and asked for the minister. A young couple were wanting to be made one, so I obliged in my best manner, thereby uniting in marriage Mr. John L. Hammack and Miss Ottie Britton Richardson, of Gasburg, Va. We wish for them a happy voyage on the sea of life.

TO PRESERVE NIAGARA'S BEAUTY

The United States and Canada have just made a treaty to preserve and increase the beauty of Niagara Falls. The treaty provides also for the use of more water from the Niagara River for electric power purposes. The treaty calls for the construction of weirs, or dams, in the river above the falls. The cost of the work is estimated at two million dollars.—Current Events.

Blind in One Eye

He can see gold, but he can't see God;
He can see earth, but he can't see Heaven;
This may seem to you wondrously odd,
But he's blind in one eye.

He can see banks, but can't see a church,
Can see the rich, but never the poor.
You might expect more thorough research,
But he's blind in one eye.

He can see matter, he can't see mind;
He sees body, he can't see spirit.
To condemn him you may be inclined,
But he's blind in one eye.

He's surely in a queer state of mind:
Most wretchedly poor, thinks himself rich.
As strange a case as ever you'll find,
But he's blind in one eye.

Let Us Open Our Eyes That We May See

Must God extend creation's bounds—
Add whirling worlds to run their rounds,
That He may show us day and night
The awful grandeur of His might?

Must God in air or sea or land
With touch of His creative hand
Bring forth new products of His will
To show to us His wondrous skill?

Must God do more than He has done
In all the ages through His Son,
On earth beneath, in Heaven above,
To prove to us His matchless love?

Is not our vision more than filled
With God's display already billed?
It's not for God to make more show:
It is for us to see and know.

Creed and Conduct

The connection between what a man believes and what he does is not always seen, but it always exists. You may be sure if his conduct is wrong that his belief is wrong somewhere. Some will tell you that what a man does is determined more by his sentiments than by his conceptions or beliefs. That may be true, but that is not saying that a man's creed is not a factor in determining his actions. The fact is, creed largely determines sentiment which in turn determines conduct. If you believe a man is a bad man, your attitude and action will not be as if you believed him to be a good man. Our belief as to the character of God determines our sentiments and thus our action toward God.

Those who deery creeds as of little or no importance are making a grave mistake. It does matter what a man believes; it matters much, it is of vital importance. "According to your faith be it unto you," said Jesus, and He knew.

Expediency of Jesus' Going Away

It must have astonished Jesus' disciples when they heard him say that it was expedient for them that he go away. How could that be? Was not his presence with them indispensable? How could they get along without him? He quickly proceeds to explain. Unless I go the Comforter will not come; but if I go I will send Him unto you. Much as his presence meant to them, the presence of the Comforter would mean more. Since Jesus' presence was an obstacle to the coming of the Comforter, he must depart for their advantage.

Jesus did not abase himself or exalt the Holy Spirit in declaring that He must be succeeded by the Holy Spirit. The Comforter would mean more to them, not because He was a greater and more powerful person, but because of a more intimate relationship. Jesus had been with them: the Holy Spirit should be in them. He would appeal to them and impress them not through the bodily senses but directly through their inner consciousness. They would feel His power within their souls and be strengthened by it. We see this fulfilled on the Day of Pentecost. Men who two months before, after all their long association with Jesus, were weaklings and cowards, forsaking Him and fleeing, become courageous and stand up in bold proclamation of the truth in the same city in which Jesus was put to death. We now see how much more the Comforter could do than Jesus had done. The facts prove Jesus' word that it was expedient for them that He go away.

Jesus' going away must not be interpreted as indicating a loss of interest in us. He promises to come back and manifest himself to those that love Him; yes, to receive them to Himself. His deepest feeling regarding His people on the earth is perhaps expressed in these words of the intercessory prayer: "Father, I will that they also, whom Thou hast given me, be with me where I am; that they may behold my glory, which Thou hast given me."

Glibly Giving Advice

It is easy to give advice, but hard to give good advice. Giving advice is sometimes taken as an assumption of superiority and an intermeddling in other men's matters and is therefore resented. But sometimes sought advice is given without first examining the case and seeing what is really the wise thing to do. When one is misled to his own hurt by

SIGNS OF PROGRESS IN N. C. CONFERENCE

It is profitable to take inventory of the results of our labors. But especially is this true of the results of church activities. Trusting that the readers of the HERALD may be encouraged by the following comparisons, I submit them.

To the conference of 1898 17,315 was reported; last year 29,110. Raised for all purposes that year, $30,082.94; last year, $329,226.00. Pastors received that year, $14,454.37; last year $110,774.00. Paid for new church buildings and repairs that year, $8,124.17; last year, $62,216.00. All church property was valued that year at $150,598.00; last year, $1,630,750.00. Since then the Children's Home has been built, estimated at $250,000.00. Since then High Point College has been built, valued at $625,000.00. Then our parsonages were valued at $10,045.00; last year, $247,273.00. That year we raised for Home and Foreign Missions, Ministerial Education, Theological Seminary, just $2,024.00; last year we paid into the General Conference Budget, which includes all these items, $18,653.00.

To state it differently, thirty years ago we paid $2.00 per member to all purposes in our church; last year we paid $11.00 per member. At that time we were paying our pastors the average of 83 cents per member; last year $4.00 per member. Upon a percentage basis, the increase would not look so bad.

While it is true we are not yet paying as much per member to the various interests of our church as are most other denominations, but when considered in the light of the achievements of the past decade there is no reason for discouragement.

It is likewise true that we are in debt for much of this progress. That is, we still owe quite a bit on our churches and the college. But this fact should not discredit what was contributed by our people last year. Nor should we forget that there was debt on many of the churches we had in 1898. Most going enterprises are in debt. Nor should we be discouraged because we are numerically small. There is no honor or dishonor attached to size. Largeness is no surer a sign of greatness than smallness. Not all great men were large in stature, nor have all small men been devoid of greatness. Three hundred men chosen of the Lord and led by Gideon were enough to vanquish an army numbering its tens of thousands. Of the twelve men sent to spy out the promised land, only two had the courage to conquer the country, but they were enough to inspire the hosts of Israel to take it.

If there yet remains in the members of the Methodist Protestant Church a yearning for conquest, an insatiable desire to do mighty deeds in the name of our Lord, the field is ours, God is with us and no man can take from us our crown.

We are in a period of readjustment. Many things are changing before our eyes. Certain values attached to church forms have been lost and others are emerging. But in it all the church will surely stand and religion will grip men's souls. The race cannot survive the temptations that come to it without religion, and we cannot have religion without the church. Furthermore, so long as men are different they will worship in different forms, put the emphasis upon different, doctrines and will therefore want different denominations. It is a psychological impossibility to merge the race under one creed, to worship in a single form. Men will continue to differ as to modes of baptism, as to positions in prayer as well as to its form. There will remain those who desire an elaborate ritualism while others want a service without it, etc. So let's get down to business. Let's take what we have and prove its excellence by our hands. R. M. ANDREWS.

CHURCH UNION AGAIN

It may, perhaps, be accounted a co-incidence that one week after publication of my article on "Church Union" there appeared in The Christian Century of January 24th an editorial from which I quote the following paragraph:

"Christian unity will surely be one (outstanding theme). Its difficulty in a prosperous country, able to support the present enormously wasteful and inadequate denominational system, is apparent. Perhaps the ecclesiastical mind will be quite unable to perceive the hollowness of much churchly success so long as the money is so easily available to keep the mechanism running. But over against the illusion of appearances there has developed during the past two decades a body of Christian idealism which demands a more organic expression of the fundamental but hardly visible catholicity of Protestantism than our denominational systems can allow. This idealism will not be easily dissipated by the apparent success of denominations made possible by the availability of great wealth. It dwells in the hearts of men and women whose sophisticated eyes penetrate through the annual show of statistics of church membership, through the vast investments in new church buildings, and through the reports of budgets for denominational enterprises. They see the ethical and spiritual confusion which this institutional affluence tries so bravely to conceal."

The wealth which some denominations possess does not exist in the Methodist Protestant Church. In North Carolina we have erected a few expensive church buildings which by heart-breaking effort we are trying to pay for, and we have built churches where they are not needed. One case comes to mind. In a North Carolina town a new church has been erected for a membership not exceeding forty, in a section of the town already served by three churches. This congregation has before it an extended task of great proportions. How much better if these forty had united with the already existing churches and strengthened them.

Regrettably, our church does not make a highly satisfactory showing, either numerically or financially. After one hundred years of existence, our membership is 194,379. The failure on the part of the denomination fully to raise the $100,000 "Gratitude Gift" suggests a lack of wealth. Is it not reasonable to suggest that a denomination numerically small and financially embarrassed join hands with other denominations, creating an organization financially and numerically strong, to do the work for which it exists?

E. S. WILLS.

(Our recollection is that Bro. Straughn's report showed over $100,000 raised.—Editor.)

Glibly Giving Advice

advice given by a pretended friend, he is likely to have his resentment stirred. To carelessly give unsound advice to people that trust you is a species of imposture. Don't do it. Excuse yourself from advising until you see how to advise wisely. An appeal to you for advice is an appeal for your interest and careful sympathy in the matter about which advice is asked. No one has the right to give advice recklessly.

DENOMINATIONAL ENTERPRISES

MISSIONS COUNCIL

We were privileged to attend the Home Missions Council held in Atlantic City January 8-10, 1929. It was a really helpful conference with no cut and dried program, but where all met and considered together the interests involved. At other times the assembly would break up into commissions to consider special phases of Home Mission work and report their respective findings to the assembled body for action. It was an informal meeting and this added greatly to the interest and profit of all present. Such themes were discussed as Home Missions in rural districts, Home missions in the centers of population, the needs and the best methods of operation in all. One outstanding thought of the conference was that all our seminaries should introduce a course of instruction in Home Mission work. Trained leadership is the imperative need of the times.

We were also privileged to attend the Foreign Missions Council in Detroit, Michigan, January 15-17, 1929. Such subjects were discussed as changed conditions and attitudes in foreign fields relative to missionary work and how to adjust our plans to meet the situation abroad. At times we wondered if there was a letting down of our Christian standards of faith in an effort to give full appreciation for the best that is in all religions. While we keenly feel the need of both human and Christian fellowship the world over, and while appreciating all good in all other religions, Christian teachers and preachers should courageously proclaim the fundamentally essential differences between Christianity and other religions of the day. We believe this is absolutely necessary both to hold and increase our usefulness as Christians and churches in the conquest of the world for Jesus Christ.

It is worth all the cost in time and money to the denominations and denominational representatives to be a part of these national and international movements in behalf of our common Christianity. Churches like individuals get about what recognition they seek in life, and if the Methodist Protestant Church is to take her stand side by side with other Christian denominations in advancing the interests of the Kingdom we must be a part of Christian world movements.

INDIA BUNGALOW

We are glad to state that the appeal for funds with which to build the bungalow in India for our missionaries is being received with considerable interest, and some responses have come in already. We hope the entire church will take up this matter and out of the fullness of our financial liberality crystallize our interest in a financial way that will make possible this home in the very near future. We could do nothing better for either our missionaries or our work in India at this time. Contributions may be sent to the office of the Executive Secretary, 516 North Charles Street, Baltimore, Maryland. Who will be the next to make an offering?

We desire that all of our missionary ladies throughout the denomination may feel the importance of making a large thank-offering in February to our missionary cause, and if desired the offering may be applied to the building of the bungalow in India for Rev. and Mrs. Paul Cassen.

JERUSALEM REPORT

The report of the Jerusalem meeting of the International Missions Council, held last spring, should be read by every missionary leader and pastor of the Methodist Protestant Church, for the Jerusalem conference was the most outstanding missionary gathering in the history of the Christian church. Perhaps confined its thoughts more completely to the personality of Jesus Christ in all His relations and plans concerning the salvation of a lost world than any other religious gathering. This report may be had by sending to the International Missionary Headquarters, 419 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

DR. SHERIDAN DEAD!

A great Christian has fallen. One who had made more than an ordinary impression upon the life of the Methodist Protestant Church. Even before his election to the Executive Secretaryship of the Board of Home Missions, Dr. Sheridan was known beyond the borders of his own conference. Repeatedly chosen by the brethren of the Maryland Conference as a representative to the General Conference, he was known as a man of courage and conviction. Loyalty to conviction sometimes placed him on the side of a question opposite to that of his conference brethren, but his sincerity and integrity were never questioned.

My acquaintance began twenty years ago during seminary days at Westminster when Dr. Sheridan came to the old hill to speak to the seminarians. His unqualified loyalty to the Methodist Protestant Church made a never-to-be-forgotten impression. He always spoke with an earnestness and conviction which in themselves were persuasive. We were proud to have such a man come among us, speak words of encouragement and give us his benediction.

The last two years made it possible for the friendship begun then to ripen into something deeper and sweeter. Whatever may be the reason the denominational executive secretaries usually become the best of friends, sympathizing with each other in the heavy burdens each is compelled to carry, counseling, encouraging, and even defending as the need may require. The writer is deeply obligated to every one holding these positions since his own election close to five years ago. Each has been a delightful companion, a brother and a friend.

None of us have enjoyed each other any more than we enjoyed Dr. Sheridan. Always cheerful, brotherly and companionable, more than ready to do his part, anxious to serve others and especially his church, weighed down but not discouraged by reason of an income wholly inadequate for a great task, entering sympathetically into all the problems facing the brethren in every part of the church—well, it was a benediction to be with him. To have touched such a life is to be brought closer to the Master.

The way our people took him to their hearts throughout the church was beautiful. They admired him, they believed in him, they trusted and loved him. His going out will be felt as a personal loss to hundreds of households throughout the Methodist Protestant Church.

EVANGELISM

*Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit;
so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.*

Conference Districts

The first districting of the conference, according to the plan now in vogue, was done at the Burlington conference in 1921. Eleven districts were set off at that time, and designated in the Journal of that year, page 69. Since that time the number of districts has been increased to fourteen; that is to say, chairmen for fourteen districts have been appointed, but we are unable, so far, to find any relisting of the districts. We hope to have the matter worked out by next week, so as to give a new list of districts as they stand now.

District Meetings

It is our hope that we may have a series of district meetings in the spring, or early summer, and we trust that the chairmen of the different districts will begin in time to work up these meetings and to provide suitable programs. Such assemblies of our people can be made productive of much good, and in some of the large districts it may be found advisable to hold two or more meetings. The Board of Young People's Work will organize the young people in these various districts. We have great confidence in this scheme, and bespeak for it full support and gratifying results. We trust that the Board may be able to put this program on at an early date.

Emphasis on the Spiritual .

A speaker at the recent meeting of newspaper men, held in Chapel Hill, told the editors that the real and lasting values are not material but spiritual, and that they must not fail to give emphasis to that fact through the press. Of course this is true, and it is highly gratifying to find it stressed at a meeting of editors, though it is a bit out of the ordinary. In the church nothing counts but the spiritual. With this to the fore, all things are possible; without it, defeat is inevitable. We all know that this is true, and that it is a fact to which we must adjust our church programs. We are suggesting here a series of protracted meetings in our churches for the express purpose of intensifying the spiritual life of the church. Let them be so announced, so that no one will mistake their purpose, and let them be conducted from beginning to end with a view to building up believers. It seems to us that there is a need for just such meetings, and we believe that they would be owned of God in deepening and making more pronounced the spiritual life of the church.

Prayer

We are again calling upon you, pastors and people, to be much in prayer. Pray daily for our conference and denominational programs and institutions; for distressed pastors and members; for churches and charges with burdens heavy to bear; for strong hearts and unyielding faith; for a united front of all our forces throughout our connection. And just now, let us pray much for our college. It presents the greatest problem for us at this time, but it is not an impossible problem. Definite plans have been made for raising the indebtedness, and the Finance Committee will be giving much time during the next thirty or sixty days in an effort to free the college of debt, and to provide an endowment. Let the entire conference pray during this time that God will bless them and their labors, and give them success, to His glory, in the full measure of the need.

Third Sunday Offering

The reporter from Fairview, Anderson charge, says, "It was voted by the Sunday school to send the offering of the third Sunday in each month to our Children's Home at High Point." Thank you, Fairview, and we trust that this kind of voting may take place in every church that is not already sending a monthly offering to the Home.

Young People's Day

Are you planning to observe this day, Bro. Pastor and Superintendent? We see from the HERALD reports that some charges are. We urge it upon every charge. It will prove a blessing to the church and to the cause of our young people. Put it on, and do not be deterred because you fear your inability. The program is not difficult, and can be adjusted to local conditions. Do your best with it. Angels can't do any better. Be sure to take the offering, and give the local church credit on the G. C. B.

Thank-Offering

February is the month for this offering. We are earnestly urging that every foreign missionary organization in the conference give special attention to this offering this year. The need is urgent, and the conditions otherwise make this necessary. We ask, also, that churches that have no missionary society take an offering—a thank-offering for foreign missions—just give the people a chance to give what they will—and send the money to Mrs. S. W. Taylor, Treasurer, 126 Tate Street, Greensboro, N. C. Designate it "Thank-Offering." You will be given credit on the G. C. B. of the local church for the amount. Now, everybody ready for a big thank-offering!

Roberta—Kannapolis

January 27, Sunday.—We were with these two churches on this date, preaching at Roberta in the morning and Kannapolis at night. The attendance was good at each place, considering the inclement weather, and the membership of the respective churches. The church at Roberta added Sunday school rooms last year, and beautified the interior of the building. This is much to their credit and to the efficiency of their work. We have here a good organization, and the work is going forward under the efficient leadership of Bro. Short, who is serving his third year on this charge. He has the confidence of his people, and is giving earnest and thoughtful attention to his work. We spoke to the people of the Gratitude Gift—their allotment of the balance was $25—and in a very few minutes they raised the entire amount. We are very grateful to them for this generous spirit. This church has a wide field of service, and it is highly gratifying to find with them an earnest desire to cultivate the field. We predict that this will be another good year in their work.

Bro. Lowdermilk has been hindered in his work at Kannapolis by the illness of Sister Lowdermilk. After a long siege in the hospital, and several days of recuperating at her mother's, she returned last Sunday to her home at Kannapolis. She is weak yet, of course, and will not be able for some time to engage in the work with Bro. Lowdermilk. We trust that she will be cautious, and conserve her strength. However, during this short time they have won their way to the hearts of the people, and the work is going forward as well as we can expect in a new field where we are no better established than we are here. Bro. Lowdermilk will give his best service, as pastor of the charge, and we trust that the year may be one of hopeful developments and encouraging progress for our cause. We enjoyed our visit to these churches, despite the rain, and our grateful thanks are hereby extended to those who ministered to our comfort and progress.

Assigned

January 28.—Rev. J. C. Russell was on this day assigned to the pastorate of Liberty-Siler charge. Bro. Russell comes to us from the Maryland Conference, and will enter promptly upon his work. We believe that this relationship will prove a happy one for both Bro. Russell and the Liberty-Siler people. He has our prayers and our brotherly affection as he enters upon his new field of service.

Appointments

FELLOWSHIP WITH ALL A Prayer

O God, we thank Thee for this universe, our great home; for its vastness and its riches, and for the manifoldness of the life which teems upon it and of which we are part. We praise Thee for the arching sky and the blessed winds, for the driving clouds and the constellations on high. We praise Thee for the salt sea and the running water, for the everlasting hills, for the trees, and for the grass under our feet. We thank Thee for our senses by which we can see the splendor of the morning, and hear the jubilant songs of love, and smell the breath of the springtime. Grant us, we pray Thee, a heart wide open to all this joy and beauty, and save our souls from being so steeped in care or so darkened by passion that we pass heedless and unseeing when even the thornbush by the wayside is aflame with the glory of God.—Walter Rauschenbusch.

STRENGTH OF THE CHURCHES

Here are many candles uniting their brilliance. They all hang upon one support, and shine by the same light. May they not represent the church of Christ in its multiplicity, variety, and unity? These candles are all supported upon one stem, they are all giving forth the same light; and yet they are of all manner of sorts, sizes and colors. A great way off they would seem to be but one light. They are many, and yet but one.

I happened one evening to say that nobody could tell which was the "U. P.," and which was the Free Church, or which was the Wesleyan, or the Primitive, or the Salvation Army, or the Baptists, and so on; but one strong old Baptist assured me that the "Dips" gave the best light. Another said the Presbyterians were, on the whole, cast in the best mold; and a third thought the English Church was made of the truest wax. I told them that some of the Baptists would be the better if they had another baptism. The Free Churches might be none the worse for being more established in the faith; and even the Methodists might improve their methods.

The main question is possession of the one light and fire of God, the flame of divine truth. Those who shine by divine grace are all one in Christ JeJesus. What a glory will there be in the one church when all her members shine, and all are one! May such a day come quickly!—Spurgeon.

EARTH'S COMMON THINGS

Seek not afar for beauty. Lo! it glows

In dew-wet grasses all about thy feet;

In birds, in sunshine, childish faces sweet,

In stars and mountain summits topped with snows.

Go not abroad for happiness. For see,

It is a flower that blooms at thy door!

Bring love and justice home, and then no more

Thou'lt wonder in what dwelling joy may be.

Dream not of noble service elsewhere wrought;

The simple duty that awaits thy hand

Is God's voice uttering a divine command,

Life's common deeds build all that saints have thought.

In wonder-workings, or some bush aflame,

Men look for God and fancy Him concealed;

But in earth's common things He stands revealed

While grass and flowers and stars spell out His name.

—Minot J. Savage.

TODAY'S THE DAY

"If I were a boy again!" That cannot be; time carries us on; boyhood for us has gone forever. We can only live our lives over in the backward looking of our minds, in our remembrances. How often in a reminiscent frame of mind do we catch ourselves saying, "I wish I had that to do over" or "How I wish I were young again." As the past unwinds itself in recollection we see things which we wish we had done better. Time permits us to review our own wrong doings and imperfections often with regrets at our foolishness and ignorance and often with a feeling that we would like others to profit by our mistakes. Time comes, then goes and is gone forever. We live our lives moment by moment and the past is like an endless drama of activities observed and brooded over in the mind. The future is builded upon a foundation of the past and today determines the durability and type of both. To wish that we were young again is to wish for yesterday. Tomorrow makes yesterday out of today—a simple thought yet one which, if weighed carefully, would make us more satisfied and content in our memories of the days gone by. Let today's activities make a proud yesterday for all of us.—Cuvahoga Falls.

—Sometimes it seems easier to close people's mouths by force rather than by answering their arguments. Which is the manlier and better way is another question.

OUR STORY PAGE

BUD'S EQUAL

It was time for the tennis season to begin, and I was down on the courts all alone, swinging my racquet as though I'd like to have somebody to play with. I couldn't bring anybody with me, because I was a new fellow in town and didn't know even who the fellows were who passed me on the way to school. I had just swung at a ball, intending to hit it straight up into the air, but the ball hit on the wood of the racquet and went at a crazy angle over into a pile of dry leaves. Just then a boy about my own age turned the corner and saw me.

"It's all right to make a serious tennis mistake like that when you're alone, but when anybody sees you, it's different."

"It must be the racquet," I said, laughing.

Bud—I found out later what his name was—looked at me hard. He has told me since that he really liked my looks, but that he was disgusted because I tried to make excuses. Anybody was liable to hit the wood. Moreover, I made it worse by saying something else.

"It's pretty hard to hit a ball straight up into the air. Did you ever try it?"

"Well," said Bud, and I guess I won't forget in a hurry how he said it. "I've been playing tennis now for four years and I guess I've hit a ball 'most every way one can be hit."

"That's great," I said, like a fool stamping in where an angel would fear to tiptoe. "Maybe you would like to have a little game?"

"I don't believe I'd care to," answered Bud.

The way he said it got me mad.

"What's the matter—'fraid?"

"I guess not. I was tennis champion here last summer and I have to be careful who I play with. These early games ruin a fellow's style, unless he gets an exceptionally good partner."

"That's right," I said, getting a little sense by this time.

"But I'll bat a few over with you, if you want. The practice will do me good."

"Don't bother," I said a little sarcastic, I guess. "Maybe I won't return them just right and you'll lose your stroke."

"I'll take that chance."

So he unbuttoned his case and took out a racquet. We lined up on opposite sides of the net and stood there glaring at each other as though both of us were there against our wills.

He began the play. His first serve was an easy one, as though he wanted to be nice on account of me not knowing much about the game. But I drove on the ball with my racquet, put a little lift on it and placed a zizzer right at his feet.

He was too surprised even to swing.

"Lucky shot," he said.

It wasn't so lucky. I could do it again, any time. But I didn't tell him that.

"It must be my new flannel trousers," I said, laughing.

It was my turn to serve. So I put a good one over and then ran up to the net so I would be in a good position to return Bud's play. It was lucky I did. He caught my serve on the bounce and drove it clean over the net heading for a spot in the back court that I would never have reached had

I started back. As it was, I caught it nicely and deflected it back to Bud's side of the net.

Like a flash of lightning he was across the court, and with the prettiest low backhand I ever saw, he sent the ball whizzing to my side of the court.

It was me who was surprised that time. I forgot all about him being such a high-hat fellow.

"Nice work," I called out.

"Not so bad," he admitted.

Nor was that all he admitted. We batted the ball back and forth for about five minutes, each one of us trying out what the other could do. Bud said later he saw I was a good player, but instead of being glad about it, like he is now, he got mad. As for me, I could see right away that Bud didn't win last year's championship on his looks. He had a good serve, and he knew lots of speedy strokes that were sure point-getters. After about ten minutes of practice, Bud blurted out:

"Well, I guess the only way I can convince you is to play you a set and beat you."

"Sure thing," I agreed.

So we started in just as we were before, only this time we kept a score. Bud must have expected to win, because I could see he didn't like me winning the first three games straight. Then he began to play hard. That changed the score a little, and once it looked as though he would win the set, but a lucky break in the last game gave me the advantage and I won, six to four.

"Play again?" I asked.

I was beginning to like Bud. His playing was great.

"I don't believe I will," he said. "I'm not in such good form today."

"C'mon," I pleaded. "Your playing isn't so bad, seeing it's the first game of the season."

At about this time, something happened to Bud. We wouldn't have been friends unless it had. He came up to the net, and with a different look in his eyes, he held out his hand and said:

"Your playing isn't so bad either. I'm sorry I acted so mean."

"That's all right," I said. "But don't feel so badly about being beaten. This might be your first game this year, but it isn't mine. I've been in Florida all winter and not a day went by that didn't see me down on the tennis courts."

And so we played again. This time Bud wasn't so eager to win, but he won just the same. Then I won, and after that he won. We've been alternating that way ever since, and nobody knows yet who is the better player. Other people may worry about it, but not Bud and I. We're the best of friends. That's all we care about.—Selected.

THE WIDER WORK OF RELIGION

Government affects but a part of the life which we live here and does not deal at all with the life beyond, while religion touches the infinite circle of existence as well as the small arc of that circle which we spend on earth. No greater theme, therefore, can engage our attention. If I discuss questions of government, I must secure the co-operation of a majority before I can put my ideas into practice; but if, in speaking on religion, I can touch one human heart for good, I have not spoken in vain no matter how large the majority may be against me.—William J. Bryan.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

DENOMINATIONAL YOUNG PEOPLE'S DAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1929

In all parts of the denomination there is being shown a marked interest in "Young People's Day." We hope that this will be the beginning of even greater days for the Church and its youth as the years come and go. You can help to make this day a greater success by granting the following requests:

First: Pray that the great host of Methodist Protestant young people that participate in the "Youth in Service" program will be led through this activity to consecrate their lives anew to the task of winning other young people for Christ and the Church. Pray that the various local church leaders will realize more fully that their young people of today will be the ones to carry on the work of the Church of tomorrow, to the extent that they will use every means to encourage their youth in service.

Secondly: Observe the day in some manner and on some suitable day if it is impossible to do so on February 3rd. Some report that they are using the 10th. Some are adapting it to the morning service. The rural churches report that it is easily adapted to its need, and our large city churches find the program acceptable. Your church should be able to observe the day. By all means do not let your church fail to give its young people this opportunity to serve.

Thirdly: Take this opportunity to tell the Church about the "New Century Service," then take the offering. "It counts on the General Conference Budget and the local church sets the credit." This is the first time the young people have been called upon to line up solidly behind the program of the whole church. Let us learn more about the New Century Service and then make the offering as large as possible.

Fourthly: Report the name and forward the amount of the offering of the local church to your Annual Conference Treasurer. Mark it "Young People's Day Offering." The Conference observing the service in the largest per cent of its churches and receiving the largest amount of offering for the General Conference Budget, same to be based upon the membership, will receive special mention in our various church papers. The report must be in the hands of your Conference Treasurer by March 1st, 1929. Help your Conference win this recognition!

Thanking all those who are helping to make this day a success, and with best wishes for the success of "Our Denominational Young People's Day,"

F. L. GIBBS, Assistant Sec'y,

Religious Education.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

The Board of Young People's Work of the North Carolina Conference met at First Church, High Point, Monday, January 21, 1929, 2:30 p. m., elected officers for the coming year, had the new Constitution read and explained, and considered plans for carrying on the work in this department of our church.

There were present the following: Rev. F. W. Paschall, Rev. N. M. Harrison, Rev. L. W. Gerringer, Rev. F. L. Gibbs, Rev. S. W. Taylor, Mrs. H. W. Maier and Mrs. E. L. Ballard. The Board was pleased to have Rev. Lawrence Little, Secretary of the Board of Christian Education, Department of Religious Education, as a visitor, and also as visitors Rev. H. W. Maier and Rev. E. L. Ballard.

All officers were re-elected for the coming year, and are as follows: Rev. F. W. Paschall, Asheville, N. C., president; Rev. N. M. Harrison, Charlotte, N. C., vice-president; Mrs. E. L. Ballard, High Point, N. C., secretary, and Mr. F. R. Stout, Greensboro, N. C., treasurer. Departmental superintendents are: Children's Work, Mrs. J. E. Pritchard, Asheville, N. C.; Young People's Work, Rev. E. L. Ballard, High Point, N. C.; Adult Work, Rev. L. W. Gerringer, Burlington, N. C.; Rural Church Work, Rev. R. C. Stubbins, Reynolda Road, Winston-Salem, N. C.; Christian Endeavor Extension, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, R. F. D., Burlington, N. C.; Teacher Training, Miss Mary Young, High Point College; Missionary Education and Stewardship, Rev. N. G. Bethea, Lexington, N. C.; Life Work Recruit, Mrs. E. L. Ballard, High Point, N. C.; Vacation and Week-day Schools, Mrs. H. W. Maier, Thomasville, N. C.

The new constitution, as outlined by Rev. Lawrence Little, Executive Secretary of the Department of Religious Education, was read and discussed and it was decided to proceed with the work under the new name, Council of Religious Education, instead of Board of Young People's Work, and that the constitution be referred to Annual Conference at its next meeting for ratification.

A motion carried that a challenge, as outlined by Mr. Gibbs, be accepted by the young people of the North Carolina Conference and sent to the other Conferences of our denomination. The challenge is as follows: "We, the members of the Religious Education Council of the North Carolina Conference, heartily endorse the Young People's Day program and challenge all other Conference Councils and Boards of Young People's Work.

First: In the per cent of churches observing this day.

Second: In the largest amount of offering taken on this day for the New Century Service. The winner in both cases to be determined by the largest per cent obtained on the basis of the present membership of the respective Annual Conference.

The time for the coming Leadership Training School was announced, which is July 13 to 20, 1929.

At the close of the meeting Rev. F. W. Paschall was presented with a beautiful silver meat platter, as a token of the appreciation of the Board for his untiring services as president.

The meeting adjourned with prayer by Rev. H. W. Maier.

"METHODIST PROTESTANT HYMNALS IN EVERY M. P. CHURCH"

It would be a profitable thing if such a slogan as the above was adopted by our Conference, and if pastors and members would earnestly strive to put it into practice. We are glad to observe that some have, and we believe that gradually others are falling in line. It will be a happy day when our own church hymnal is used in place of the cheap, meaningless song-books that we find in some of our houses of worship.

Our church hymnal may be used for other services than the regular preaching service, if the church is not financially able to purchase two or more sets of song-books. It is suitable for use at the mid-week prayer meeting, since this service resembles those of the Sabbath day. It can be profitably used in the Sunday school, for it contains many hymns that children like to sing and ought to know. It is useful in revival meetings, for a section of it is devoted to hymns of invitation and salvation, which are unexcelled.

Three of the four recommendations in the report of the committee on church music, adopted by the Annual Conference of 1928, concern us now:

First, that our own Methodist Protestant Hymnal occupy the paramount place in the churches of our Conference District. Second, that a campaign of two weeks be conducted for the purpose of interesting pastors and people in the purchase of our hymnals. Third, that the advice of our book agent, Mr. Charles Reiner, Jr., 516 North Charles Street, Baltimore, Md., be sought in the selection of other hymn-books, and that they be purchased through our own publishing house.

In view of the foregoing, we would suggest:

First, that every church not now using our church hymnal make an earnest effort to purchase a quantity adequate for its use as soon as possible.

Second, that the pastor or representative of each of these stations or circuits make a request in the columns of the Herald or otherwise, for hymnals discarded by stronger churches, if the weaker churches are not able to purchase new books.

Third, that churches having old hymnals on hand that are still usable advertise the fact in the Herald, in order that those needing them may register a request for them.

Please act promptly, lest the matter be laid aside and forgotten.

The price of the Centennial Edition of the Methodist Protestant Church Hymnal is 85 cents each for five or more copies (delivery extra)—a cheap book, considering its value and serviceableness.

E. LESTER BALLARD,
For the Committee on Church Music.

OPPOSED TO BOULDER DAM

The State of Arizona is preparing to bring suit before the Supreme Court of the United States to prevent the building of Boulder Dam. That state charges that the Boulder Dam law would give waters of the Colorado River to California that rightfully belong to Arizona. Either Arizona or Utah must ratify the Colorado River compact before work on the Boulder Dam project can begin. The other live states of the Colorado River basin—California, New Mexico, Colorado, Wyoming, and Nevada—have already ratified.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

ANNUAL THANK-OFFERING SERVICE

I want to emphasize the celebration of the 50th anniversary of the entrance of our church into foreign mission work.

This is the golden jubilee year of the W. F. M. S., and we had planned to reach certain goals. Now since our missionary work has been unified we should put forth even greater efforts to reach these goals. One is a great increase in membership; another a large thank-offering.

In looking over the old copies of the Missionary Record, I found a few articles on our thank-offering that may encourage us to do more ourselves and inspire us to urged others to express their thanks by giving generously to the work of foreign missions, and I quote from several of them.

Dr. Fred C. Klein, who for years was one of our great leaders in missionary work, wrote as follows: "There is nothing modern, up-to-date, about thank-offerings. The act of making an offering in testimony of thankfulness for favors received, deliverance from ills, or other special benefits, has been performed since man recognized his relation to a Supreme Being.

"Under the Mosaic law sacrifice of thanksgiving was to be voluntary. It was to be the best one had, and it was offered unto the Lord. Surely every member of the Methodist Protestant Church can contribute something unto the Lord in the thank-offering service held by the missionary societies."

Just before Miss Olive Hodges left for Japan the last time, she wrote the following message to the men and women of our church: "My visit to America this time has made me realize more than ever before the tremendous responsibility and the wonderful opportunity of the church in America—the opportunity to take hold of the problem of social and national differences, and by teaching the gospel of Christ to destroy racial and national hatreds and bitterness. For your own sakes as well as for the sake of the peoples of other lands you dare not let go your responsibility for making Christ known." To this utterance of Miss Hodges, Mrs. Ely D. Miller adds this comment: "With a splendid thank-offering let us show that we recognize our responsibility and will supply materially the needs of those who are giving themselves so freely and gladly in making Christ known in our fields of foreign service."

Mrs. J. F. McCulloch, who for years was the beloved president of our Conference Branch, and the efficient editor of the Missionary Record, though dead, still speaks to us in the following editorial taken from the Record: "God has packed our lives so full of blessings that He sees we must empty ourselves before He can do more for us, without making us utterly selfish and useless. To keep our lives sweet and pure and wholesome there must be a constant out-flow to correspond with inflow.

"We speak of making ourselves channels of blessings. This can only be done by emptying ourselves of all that hinders the inflow of the spirit of giving. For getting and giving must be equalized before we can be channels of blessings.

"Let us express our gratitude to God for the many blessings we receive by giving an offering from the material things He has placed in our hands to be used for the extension of His kingdom."

Need I say more? The North Carolina Branch will do its best, I am sure, to make an offering with which the Lord will be pleased.

As has been our custom in the past, let those auxiliaries that have prepared a good program give it in nearby churches where there are no missionary auxiliaries, and so increase the thank-offering for the Branch, arouse greater interest in our missionary work and help the pastors of these churches to raise their General Conference budgets.

May nothing cause us to take our eyes off the goal for which we are working—the extension of the Kingdom of Christ—and may we do our utmost, not only to sustain the missionaries we now have, but to send others to represent us in the work of evangelizing all nations.

MRS. GEORGE R. BROWN.

THE CALL TO PRAYER

The world Day of Prayer will be observed February 15 by all Christian women who are interested in missions. Last year was the first time this observance became a world event.

Christian women of all nations know that prayer does accomplish things, and many are quick to testify that they have had speedy answers to individuals prayers. How much more should they believe that God will hear and answer the mighty cry of millions of women who unitedly send up their petitions for the extension of Christ's Kingdom on earth!

No matter what may be our differences in the matter of creeds, methods of work, racial temperaments or national prejudices, if we are truly Christian we are all working and praying for the establishment of Christ's Kingdom—one of righteousness, peace and love.

I want to urge all the women of our church in North Carolina to use every effort toward the observance of this Day of Prayer. Just now, especially, it will mean so much for us to have the spirit of Prayer. Wherever possible a union service is desirable at which a free-will offering should be taken, and prayer made, in behalf of the following objects:

1. For the support of Christian work among that great army of migratory men, women and little children, who harvest our crops, and give to us our supply of canned vegetables and fruits for the winter.

2. For the support of Religious Work Directors in government Indian Schools. Only interdenominational workers are favored by the government. Here again is an opportunity among thousands of Indian youth, of almost limitless possibilities.

3. To provide Christian literature for women and children in non-Christian lands. What would our homes be without books or magazines? That is what millions of homes are in other lands. Literature is being translated and published for the homes of India, Japan, China and Moslem women.

4. For the seven union Christian colleges for women in China, Japan, and India, which have an enrollment of 1,200 students. Many Christian young women have already gone out to serve their own people as Christian workers, teachers, doctors, nurses, etc.

The offering taken at the Day of Prayer service is fulfilling a beautiful and needful service. The objects above represent work which none of our boards could do alone, but together it is possible to accomplish a worthwhile service, and we make their service possible as we contribute of our means.

Programs for the Day of Prayer may be obtained from Mrs. E. J. Bresley, Clio, Michigan, at $1.75 a hundred copies.

The latest Scotch story concerns a member of that race who, desiring to communicate with his folks in Chicago, asked the telegraph clerk how much a telegram would cost. He was told five cents a word for ten words, with no charge for the signature.

"There will be no charge for the signature?" he repeated.

"That's right," said the clerk.

The Scot rubbed his forehead with the pencil.

"Well," he said finally, "suppose you just send my signature."

The clerk grinned.

"All right," he said, "I'll do that for you.

What's your signature?"

Another pause on the part of the Scot.

"Well," he finally murmured, "I may not look it, but I'm an Indian, and my name is 'I-Won't-Be-Home-Till-Friday.'"

—Dr. Dixon's report for the Children's Home, though mailed on Tuesday, has not been received at the time of closing our forms Wednesday afternoon. If received it will appear next week.

—Rev. H. C. Carmichael was called to officiate in the funeral of Mr. Samuel Scott of Almarce Presbyterian Church. Mr. Scott was a near neighbor of our Moriah pastor.

—A joint meeting of the N. C. Board of Education and the Trustees of High Point College was held at the college on Tuesday. Measures were taken looking to the wiping out of all the debts of the college as soon as this can be done. All of us may be given a chance to help, and when it is done it will be a most heartening and helpful achievement.

—Dr. and Mrs. Dixon passed our office on Tuesday morning. Mrs. Dixon had in her arms a very bright and happy little girl, aged two or three. She is Miss Shanklin, of Mebane, the latest to come to the Home.

—Rev. R. C. Stubbins was in Greensboro on Wednesday.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Oak Grove, Cleveland Circuit.—The usual services were observed in our church last Sunday. Our new pastor, Brother C. E. Ridge, was with us Sunday evening and gave to us a wonderful message. He very plainly pointed out to us the "Danger of Walking Too Great a Distance From Christ." I have never heard a better sermon preached. I can't help but believe that it helped every one present in the spirit of doing more for the Master. Brother Ridge has been with us for only a short while, but we have learned to love him, as we did our former pastor, Brother J. D. Morris, who serve us so faithfully for eight years. We are very grateful to the Conference for sending us such splendid preachers. Our Sunday school, which is under the leadership of our good superintendent, P. S. Gettys, is progressing nicely. The attendance is very good, although there has been much sickness in the community.

Mr. Orange Canipe, a friend and neighbor of our community, departed this life January 16, 1929. He lacked only three days of being 25 years old. The funeral was conducted by the pastor the following day, and his body was laid to rest in the Oak Grove Cemetery. He had been sick for only nine days with flu, which developed into pneumonia. This was double sorrow in the Canipe family, as on Christmas day his little brother, Clarence, who was only eight years old, was laid to rest. Orange attended little Clarence's funeral. He was strong and well, with only the deep sorrow which cast a shadow over him, and little did we think that in a few short days he would be laid by his little brother's side. But God works in mysterious ways, therefore we should be ready when He calls us. Brother Canipe said a few days before he died that he was ready and willing to die. His mother, who was constantly at his bed-side, said that all during his sickness he seemed to realize that he was going to be called away, and talked very much of his going. She said that a little while before he died he shouted praises to God.

LOULA PENDLETON, Reporter

Albemarle.—The Ladies' Aid Society has recently purchased a new piano for the church auditorium, a large range for the kitchen and a vacuum cleaner, which shows that they are still on the job. Tables are being built for the dining hall, and we hope to soon be able to serve another of those good suppers, for which our ladies are noted.

Our Women's Class in the Sunday school is very fortunate in securing Mr. S. R. Green as teacher to succeed Mrs. John Whitlock, who resigned as teacher after over two years of services in that capacity. Mr. Green has a very keen insight into the Scriptures, and explains the lesson in such a way that it is very instructive and helpful.

The Junior Department assembly room and several class rooms are having their windows dressed up in new curtains. This will add much to the attractiveness of their appearance.

The pastor has recently had a telephone installed in his study at the church, and anyone may call him there any day between 9 and 12 o'clock.

MRS. JOHN WHITLOCK, Reporter.

Rehoboth, Granville Circuit.—On January 20 we heard a fine sermon by Rev. H. F. Fogleman. He wasn't lacking for anything to say. He preached the gospel as if he was filled with the Holy Spirit. The day being so beautiful, it made everybody feel so happy and we could easily believe that God was in the Heavens and all was right with the world.

Mr. E. C. Harris suggested that we, as a church, support one orphan. This is a fine suggestion and I feel sure it will be carried out.

Quarterly conference met at Rehoboth on January 5th. There were six members from this church present and three from Union Chapel. It being a bad day, Mt. Carmel wasn't represented. Rev. Mr. Fogleman conducted the meeting. Mr. Tom Ellis was re-elected secretary. Pastor's salary paid in amounted to about $200, and same amount paid to college assessment. There will be a little change in the membership assessments for pastor's salary this year. A committee was appointed to attend to this matter, and at the next meeting each church will know their amount.

Miss Sue Harris is on a visit to her sister in Raleigh.

We are glad to report that our girls, Miss Edith Wright at N. C. C. W.; Miss Nellie G. Wilson, Duke University; Miss Delphia Harris, at Meredith College, are doing excellent work and we are proud of them.

The W. H. M. S. met with Mrs. James Floyd on January 23. Mrs. R. W. Harris conducted it. "Eternal Life" was our topic, and it was plainly discussed by the leader. All present took an active part in the lesson. The meeting was closed with prayer, after which we were served delicious hot chocolate and cake.

We were very fortunate to have Mrs. Jewel Floyd Burgeron present on this occasion.

REPORTER.

Rehoboth.—On Friday evening January 11, an entertainment was given by Miss Eva White's primary Sunday school pupils. The church was decorated and a beautiful tree dressed and lighted with candles. Those reciting were little Misses Margie White, Annie Tarkington, William and Edward Tarkington. Music was rendered by the choir and the little class. Miss Eva White read an appropriate treatise. Mr. Herbert Swain spoke on an appropriate subject. Gifts were presented by Superintendent J. B. White.

REPORTER.

Creswell, Creswell Charge.—We have been very busy on the Creswell charge this new conference year. Every one has been making plans and offering suggestions that they think will be helpful to us this year, and we are looking forward with lots of anticipation to see these suggestions put in motion.

The Sunday school gave a Christmas program here the night after Christmas. The program was very successful considering the practice we gave the children and the sickness in the community.

We are planning to put on the young people's program, "Youth in Service," at Mt. Hermon church the first Sunday night in February.

Rev. R. L. Hethecox preached two very inspiring and forceful sermons the past third Sunday.

The first quarterly conference has been held at Rehoboth church. It was well attended and all the churches that were represented showed that they were going to have a successful year if it were possible to have one by the aid of their efforts.

L. LOUISE HATFIELD.

Graham.—Little has been heard from Graham since conference, and possibly little worth writing has happened. But last Sunday at the evening service something worth telling happened. Two young men came forward at the close of the service and began anew the Christian life. And a young lady lifted her hand signifying a desire to get back on the right path.

Our services are well attended now that the flu has about gone its round. There was almost a house full Sunday at the morning service, and eighty returned at the evening hour.

The midweek prayer meetings are not crowded, but the attendance is gradually getting better. We are having forty and fifty with quite a few children. The pictures of our mission fields are interesting the children, too.

We have been most graciously received by the Graham people, and to prove that we are among as good as the best, we must say that we too have been pounded and it keeps on coming. Space will not allow an itemized account of the many things sent. The list contains items from quail and coal and all manner of good things for the pantry. We thank all those who have in any way remembered us.

The good women of the church papered the drawing room and one hall and had a new mattress sent up for the guest room. So now the parsonage is in very good condition and we are enjoying our new home.

The Christmas service was not what we had hoped, but with so many people ill it was impossible to have a crowd. On December 23rd for the evening service we had a White Gift for the King program. Though we had but a few, forty or fifty people present, yet the offering was more than thirty dollars.

A committee is now busy getting ready for the Youth in Service program. It appears that this service will be one of the best of the season.

While the pastorate is a new experience for us, yet we are thoroughly enjoying the practicing on these patient people. They are so kind. The work has started nicely, and we are anticipating a happy stay at Graham.

J. F. MINNIS.

Weaverville to Kernersville Charge.—It is always a source of regret to leave friends and go to another field. You never know how things will be, how you will like the place or the folks. It was just such a feeling with us when we left our Weaverville friends. We left Weaverville November 13th. It was one of those bright, sunny days that made travel fine. The old car rolled along fine until we reached our new home at 8:30; found the parsonage bright with fires, and lots of nice things in the kitchen for supper that had been prepared by some of our ladies.

We have been received by these good people in a way that shows they are happy that we came. Fairly good congregations have greeted us everywhere, and we are confident now that the flu has flown, and the people are well again, that the congregations will increase.

I am not going to trying to give an itemized statement of the many things that have been given us to gladden the hearts of the preacher and family since coming to this work, but will say that there have not been many weeks that someone has not remembered us with nice things for the table.

Kernersville church, while the writer was in bed with flu, visited the parsonage and loaded the dining table with many good things. At Sandy Ridge, while the writer was trying to preach, some one loaded his ear with all kinds of things that would make one's heart feel thankful. Many other things have been given us in our round of visiting.

The first quarterly conference has been held in the spirit of love and harmony. Some forward steps were taken, and we plan and pray for a great year in kingdom service.

A new roof is being placed on Sandy Ridge church; part of it is already on and the rest will soon be put on. Pine Grove is planning to paint the church at that place on the inside in the near future.

We are very glad indeed to be privileged to labor in this part of God's moral vineyard. We know that we are among good folks. Our prayer is that we may serve them faithfully, capably and well.

Surely the Lord has set our feet in a large room, and by His help and under His direction we hope to accomplish much this year in Kingdom service. The good men who have preceded me have laid good foundations and it is my desire to build wisely upon them.

J. D. CRANFORD, Pastor.

Bessemer City Church.—Bro. Henderson preached a very interesting sermon Sunday night. There were 66 at Sunday school. The young ladies' class won the banner for best attendance. Pray for us that we may be at our best for the Master.

Best wishes to the Herald.

REPORTER.

Knob Creek, Fallston Circuit.—Our Sunday school is still up and going. We have had an evergreen Sunday school with a very good attendance considering sickness and weather.

Rev. J. M. Morgan filled his appointment as usual Sunday. He preached a real inspiring sermon. Am sure all enjoyed it.

REPORTER.

Bess Chapel.—We are doing a few things up here but not turning the world over. Our Sunday school attendance has been off some, owing to sickness, but we are moving along fine with the church work.

Our pastor, Rev. M. C. Henderson, is bringing us splendid messages every Sunday.

We have repaired our parsonage by building a wide porch, re-painting two rooms and improving a few other things.

REPORTER.

Union Grove, Orange.—There has been quite an epidemic of flu among our people. Fortunately there have been no deaths, for which we are very thankful.

Our church services have continued as usual. We have continued our Sunday school through the winter.

There are quite a number of our older people who we hope will get the Sunday school habit.

We held our Christmas service Sunday before Christmas. Brother Williams brought us a wonderful message.

We are very grateful to have Mr. Williams serve us another year.

We are planning to observe Young People's Day Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Lloyd are to be congratulated upon the arrival of a granddaughter.

Wishing the Herald and its readers a very happy and prosperous year.

MRS. LUTHER C. DAVIS.

Roberta.—Our church enjoyed a good day Sunday in spite of the inclement weather. There were 120 present and our Sunday school collection was $11.55.

We feel that we had quite a treat at the Sunday morning service to have Rev. S. W. Taylor, the president of our North Carolina Annual Conference, with us. He gave us a very helpful and inspiring sermon. Mr. Taylor took his text from Exodus 14:15: "And the Lord said unto Moses, Wherefore criest thou unto me? Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward." Mr. Taylor said that the Lord was speaking to us, the people of the church, to go forward in the evangelistic work of the church in spite of the discouragements and obstacles that we might have to face. Although if we are one of God's children He will see us through and we will come out victorious in the end, just as Moses did when he led the children of Israel across the Red Sea.

May the Lord bless Brother Taylor in his great work and we sincerely hope that we may have the opportunity of having him with us again.

The people of our church gave Pastor Short and his wife a pounding Friday evening. I think he was very much pleased with the results.

Mrs. G. C. Garmon, one of our members, is very sick with tuberculosis and she requests the prayers of all the Christian people. We hope, if it is the will of our Father, that Sister Garmon will be restored to health.

REPORTER.

Tabernacle Charge.—A good congregation was present at Tabernacle last Sunday for the morning service. Several visitors worshiped with us, among them Mr. and Mrs. Robah Fields, of Greensboro, and Brother C. L. Jones, of Burlington. Bro. Jones made a brief, but instructive, address during the Sunday school period.

Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Garrett and Miss Cora Coble, who have been kept from church because of sickness, again occupied their pews last Sunday.

Both Sunday schools on this charge are rendering splendid service. Bro. Cecil M. Fields, the new superintendent at Tabernacle, is a splendid Christian young man and has the work of the Sunday school and church at heart. The Sunday school at Julian, while not so large, is doing a good work.

Tabernacle church recently re-organized the

C. E. Society, with Miss Mary Emily Jones, president; Mr. Henry Royal, secretary, and Miss Kate Smith, treasurer. Mrs. W. T. Hanner has charge of the Junior C. E. at Julian.

Young People's Day will be observed at both churches on this charge during the month of February. We are hoping to make these services helpful and inspiring.

A beautiful Christmas tree and a very interesting program were given at Tabernacle on the evening of December 24, pastor and wife receiving many beautiful and valuable presents. We desire to thank the following: Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Fields and family, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Coble, Mrs. P. A. Hardin, Mrs. H. L. Whitley, Miss Fannie Coble, and Mrs. W. E. Hackett.

Since the holidays the following have remembered us with many useful things for the pantry: Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Hanner, Mr. and Mrs. I. L. Trogdon, Miss Anna Hardin, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Hanner, Julian church, and Brother E. T. Coble remembered the pastor with cash donations during Christmas. We desire to thank all these people.

Mr. and Mrs. P. R. Blackard and daughter recently joined the Julian church by letter.

All the sick people are improving.

H. L. ISLEY.

Burlington, First Church.—In Sunday school today, 229; offering, $15.65. The superintendent, Bro. W. E. Smith, was on the job after several days' illness. Glad to see him in his place.

Bro. Gerringer brought us two strong and helpful sermons today, and congregations were very large.

Another of our faithful and loyal members has passed away since our last report. Bro. Thomas A. Smith, one of our older members, died in the early morning of the 17th. His death came as a great shock, as he had not been ill. We will certainly miss Bro. Smith. He was in his usual place near the front of the congregation each Sunday. He was a loyal member of the Baraca class also, and could be counted on to be present each Sunday. The widow and loved ones have the sympathy of the entire congregation, and we pray that God will bless each loved on in this trying time.

At a meeting of the local Ministerial Association, it was decided that each church would hold a revival at the same time as that of the other churches, beginning March 17th, and continuing through Easter Sunday. So, of course, our church will co-operate in this matter. Let us begin now to prepare for this great event and pray that many souls will be brought into the fold and that the members will be greatly uplifted and brought closer to our Christ.

Sunday evening, February 10th, will be observed by our church as "Young People's Day" and a special program is to be arranged for this service.

Some of our folks are still on the sick list and we hope that they will soon be out to the services again.

Our Sunday school received an attendance challenge from the Concord, N. C., Sunday school and we voted to accept this challenge. The contest will begin next Sunday. We believe this will prove helpful and interesting to each school, and let each one that can attend regularly, and let's give Concord a "hot chase," even if we lose. Here we go!

L. A. BRAXTON, Reporter.

Gibsonville Church.—Our attendance at Sunday school was off somewhat today, due to cold and sickness. The Intermediate boys' class won the banner again today by being the first class to have their full number present. Last Sunday the Young Men's class won the honor by being the first class to spell their motto, which is "co-operate and Win Today."

A special program is being prepared for next Sunday at 7:30 p. m. by the Senior Christian Endeavor Society. Mrs. Carl Allen is the leader. Anyone who is interested in young folks is cordially invited to attend this meeting. If you are not interested, come anyway; we welcome you.

The many friends of Samuel Whitsell are pleased to learn that he is able to be up again after being confined to his bed for some time with pneumonia. We are hoping that he will be able to attend our C. E. D. program next Sunday. Mr. Whitsell is an active C. E. D. worker and he has been greatly missed by the members of the society.

Rev. P. E. Lindley gave us another splendid sermon in the morning. His subject was "Our Homes and Character." We regret that Mrs. Lindley is not yet able to travel. We trust that she will soon be well again and can come down and worship with us.

O. A. B., Reporter.

Mt. Lebanon, Randleman Charge.—Since my last report all church activities have been held and all appointments filled.

While our pastor has not been very well, while his wife and little son have had influenza, and his daughter at this writing is very ill, yet he has found time to visit the sick and those who are in distress. Brother Williams has known great sorrow, therefore, he is able to sympathize with those who grieve. How glad the people are to have him visit them! How they hunger for his words of sympathy and cheer!

While he so earnestly gives of the best that he has, let us not forget that he also appreciates sympathy and understanding and co-operation.

Our pastor brought us a very helpful message on the third Sunday morning. Sunday evening of the same day, A. J. Daniel, class leader, held the second class meeting of the year. Brother Daniel hopes to hold these meetings once a month.

Our mid-week prayer meeting is growing in interest. The attendance is very good.

The Ladies' Aid Society held a very interesting meeting Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. S. F. Smith. The meeting was opened with Scripture reading by our president, Miss Mattie Julian, and prayer by Mrs. T. A. Williams. After the business session, refreshments were served.

The Home Missionary Society held its regular meeting the fourth Sunday at 11 o'clock. While the membership is not large we feel that we have done, and are doing, a very fine work.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely. The average attendance for the past year was 85.2. Our superintendent hopes to make the average attendance for this year at least 100. If he has the support of every member of the Sunday school he can easily reach that number. Why not work together and make this the biggest and best year in the history of our church?

MAY PARSONS, Reporter.

Hebron, Orange Circuit.—Rev. B. M. Williams filled his appointment yesterday at 11 o'clock. The attendance at church and Sunday school is increasing. The flu has visited almost every home and this has cut the attendance considerably.

The Young People's Day will be observed the second Sunday afternoon. Selections will be read by several of the young people, and this promises to be an inspiring service.

Our Sunday school gave a short Christmas program and also had a tree and a nice treat for all. This was enjoyed by every one.

The "Red and Blue" contest for the first quarter came to a close in December. The Reds won, and last Saturday night were delightfully entertained by the Blues. It was held in the schoolhouse. Games were played and a talk was made by the pastor. After this Mrs. J. G. Jobe, captain of the Blues, assisted by Misses Nannie McAdams and Betty Nelson, served refreshments consisting of sandwiches, cake, ice cream and peanuts. This was enjoyed by all present and we will be glad when the Blues have the opportunity of entertaining us again.

MRS. LELIA GILL, Reporter.

North Davidson Charge.—Last Sunday we had a good day at Mount Pleasant; had a fair congregation. Our people there are very much interested in the work; they are going to meet Wednesday night to organize a workers' council which will mean much to the Sunday school and church. I had reports from nearly all of our Sunday schools, and they all report a good Sunday school last Sunday.

We are expecting Bro. Taylor with us the third Sunday, February 17. Appointments will be announced later. We want to give him a good congregation to preach to.

Sometime ago our flour bin got low and Bro. Ed Waitman came along and filled it again. Also, we want to thank Bro. W. M. Byerly for filling up our tank with gas; Bro. York and Mrs. Jeff Berries for good things to eat.

May the Lord bless these good people and help us to make this our best year.

R. S. TROXLER.

State Street, Lexington.—On January 20 the first quarterly conference was held just after the evening preaching service. This conference was quite a pleasant and harmonious meeting, attended by nearly all the church officials and some others.

We had no preaching service last Sunday because of the illness of our pastor, Bro. Bethea. He has been sick for more than a week, but is improving now, we are glad to state.

The evening service next Sunday will be conducted by the young people of the church.

All departments of the church work are going forward in a gratifying way.

REPORTER.

Flat Rock, Vance.—I have not written a report since Conference, but now we have a pastor I feel we will take on new life.

President Taylor came down and held first quarterly conference January 12, and assigned to our work Rev. J. B. O'Briant. Mr. O'Briant filled the third Sunday appointment and every one seemed to like him very much. He is not wholly a stranger, having assisted in meetings at several churches on Vance. I am sure all will like him.

We have been unable to have any Sunday school for about six weeks. Nearly every member has had flu. Superintendent Reavis hoped to begin again yesterday, but it was rainy, snowy and very cold; only 14 were present.

The Woman's Missionary Society will meet with Mrs. A. E. White on Tuesday afternoon of this week. All the ladies of the church are invited to attend.

Mrs. C. A. Wortham and Mrs. Verona Wilkerson are taking treatment at Maria Parham Hospital. We wish for them a speedy recovery.

REPORTER.

Roberta.—I am not in the habit of indulging in space in this fine paper except in cases where "I just can't help it."

The health conditions of the community are better. Mrs. Dock Cochran has returned from the Charlotte hospital, where she has been for an operation, and is improving. Mrs. Effie Kiser-Linker is still held in bed at the home of her father, to which she was brought from a hospital in Durham, N. C., several weeks ago. Mrs. Cleveland Starns was carried to the hospital yesterday, being very sick. Mrs. Calvin Garman, a very precious woman and much loved, seems to make little gains in health. Will you please remember them in your prayers? They would certainly appreciate it.

January 27 was a very interesting day as well as a busy and rainy one. At 8 a. m. I had the honor of uniting in marriage my first couple of colored folks; at 10:45 met a large Sunday school at our church, notwithstanding the cold rain and muddy roads; at 11 a. m., heard a gracious sermon by the president of our Conference; 2:00 p. m., conducted the funeral of one of our loved and faithful members, Bro. Silvester Kiser, a victim of flu and pneumonia; he leaves a dear wife and four little children to mourn their loss. From this to late P. M. it was our happy lot to enjoy a continual feast of "Manna, that doeth the soul good," and made our hearts burn with new hopes, as we listened to the friendly words of council, which seemed to us keys to our problems, from the rich heart, mind and experience of our noble leader, Rev. S. W. Taylor.

Bro. Taylor occupied the pulpit at the 11 o'clock hour. He began his message with an appeal for careful attention to the child-life in our worship and preaching hours. Then for several minutes he gripped their little hearts, spell-bound, with a story, so well told that I feel we can reasonably hope, awakened desires and ambitions that will tell even down to old age. Had he closed the service here, all might have said, "It was good for us to be here," and "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

After this story a text was announced from Exodus 14:15, and for 45 minutes our hearts were warmed and thrilled by "The gracious words that proceeded from his mouth." His visit to us, to say it mildly, was helpful, inspiring, energizing and edifying, coming like a gentle breeze from the Hills of Hope. Rains, sickness and other causes deprived many who would have heard, and those who did hear are talking it, so you will just have to come again, Brother Taylor. An offering was taken, and our apportionment for Gratitude Gift was paid in full.

If this seems long, put the blame right where it belongs. And you need not lay it to a new set of "women's teeth," neither. The fact is we have just met the climax of a protracted pounding, which culminated in a real beating, (of all former ones) on last Friday night. Why, the stream of smiling faces that filed in was truly amazing. I wondered when they were going to cease emerging from the dark outside. "What of that?" you say. Why, nearly everything. Whole bags of flour, half bags, quarter bags, paper bags, bags of meal, to make mush to go with that milk from the fine Jersey cow they furnish, and partly food, to the parsonage. Hams, half hams, sliced ham, side meat. Fruits, preserves, pickles, prunes, California peaches, lard, sugar, coffee, canned goods of many varieties, and other things, space forbids. Well, I am made to think of the darkies, hungry from the hunt, homeward bound, one telling how he would cook the 'possum, when one could hear no more for his gripping hunger, cried out: "Hush up dar, nigger; dis heah mule's gwine to fling us bofe off."

Church folks, if your preacher is not saying good things about you, try him with a night of earnest prayer to God, bring a face with the shine of heaven to the next service upon it, give him a hearty amen when he says something worth while, invite him to see you and tell him when; show him that you are as interested in him as you want him to be in you. If this doesn't move him, try him with a real big pounding; and if he is still persistent in silence, do it all over. If after all this he is dumb, make him "hie it" from there; then you write something about him so all will know him and not suffer as you have.

ROBERT SHORT.

High Point.—On Sunday morning Pastor Farmer spoke on "The Rank and File," using as his text, "The Lord appointed other seventy also, and sent them. . . . And the seventy returned again with joy, saying, Lord, even the devils are subject to us through Thy name." He made a strong plea for greater consecration and activity among laymen. Jesus called twelve disciples, and gave them power and authority. Soon he called other seventy also, who were quiet, almost unknown men of the rank and file. Every Christian is a herald for Christ. To be charged with the nurture and extension of Christ's message of love is no mean distinction. Christ has no other hands or feet or tongues with which to work than ours. Today's chief need is not a new generation of apostles, but a new generation of apostolic Christians, who labor to reach all men with the gospel. Life's honors come only to those who work. The rewards of service for Christ as well as the honors of this world do not follow inactivity. The joy of the returning seventy unordained laymen was not the fruit of standing aloof. Knowing Christ's love and saving power, one must let others know of His desire in their lives. The hope of the world still very largely lies in the rank and file, the plain, everyday people. The ministry alone cannot accomplish the work of any church or community, but with the loyalty of consecrated men and women, boys and girls, the ministry and laity working together can do much in His name.

At the evening service the minister chose for his subject, "Submerging False Ideals," from the temptation of Jesus on the mountain. He said in part that every crisis is a wave upon which we may ride to safety or down to death. A serious illness is often a crisis, and means a readjustment of life. A crisis spells opportunity when Christ has possession of us. He that cannot bear solitude is a coward. It is a mystery and part of the divine plan that temptations come to us. In the first temptation of Jesus it was an appeal to immediate necessity. Jesus was hungry, for He had fasted forty days and nights, but He overcame the temptation to turn stones into bread. He knew that He must not sacrifice His divinity. Some men think it will be all right to get rich by questionable methods; if they give a large amount to charity or some church. It is true that Jesus turned water into wine at Cana, but He performed this miracle for others. Turning stones into bread would have been selfish and to serve His own end. Jesus never had his ears tickled by promise of power. The world does not belong to the devil, although he offered it to Jesus if He would bow down and worship him. It never pays to take a crooked course to gain a worthy end or a short cut to get prominent members in the church. We must learn that the right way is to walk always with Jesus, refusing to compromise with evil. A young man during the World War rose to a high position with the American government; he was accosted by a German spy, who offered him ten times the amount of his salary if he would only divulge two or three secrets of his office. He answered, "I will not abuse the confidence placed in me by my employers for any amount of money."

Next Sunday evening, "Youth in Service" will be presented by a group of young people.

The first quarterly conference is called for Wednesday, February 6th, following a brief prayer service. Written reports from all officers, heads of organizations, and committee chairmen are expected.

The Lord's Supper will be celebrated next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock.

We are much pleased to announce that Mrs. P. E. Lindley is recovering very satisfactorily from a recent operation for appendicitis at Guilford General Hospital, and is now at her home on Circle Drive.

The critical illness of Mr. W. C. Ferree following an operation for appendicitis last Saturday is giving much concern. Prayers for his recovery are offered daily.

We are much gratified to learn that Mr. F. R. Auman is recovering from his operation for appendicitis, and is now resting comfortably at his home. Mr. Garrell Payne is also recovering from an operation.

Rev. R. I. Farmer and his family went to Thomasville last Friday evening to hear the lecture of the famous missionary to Greenland, Dr. Wilfred Grenfell.

The friends of Mr. Geo. T. Penny will be greatly pleased to learn that he is improving after a rather serious illness at his home on Greensboro road, and expects to be able to get out in a few days.

Pleasant Grove.—The Brotherhood met on the evening of the 26th with Brother W. H. Burton; the meeting was called to order by B. E. Payne, and after the singing of a hymn, Scripture was read by George L. Hilton, prayer by the pastor; after transacting the business we were invited into the dining room and served oysters, ham, coffee, and salad. Then we assembled again in the living room and had an interesting talk by D. R. Williams. I think the Brotherhood is a great help to the church. The next meeting will be held with Bro. B. E. Kennedy.

D. R. WILLIAMS.

Mocksville Charge.—One of the most impressive services we have had was Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock hour when we held our Communion service. Every person present seemed to be praying, and every part on the program seemed to have its place. Among the different numbers on the program was a quartet, sung very beautifully, "Break Thou the Bread of Life," after which the pastor told the story of the Last Supper that Christ ate with His disciples, and how He was crucified for sin.

Bethel Sunday school is doing fine, with Mr. J. W. Cartner as superintendent. Every office is being filled with the best material, and the Sunday school is being built up with interested people. Sunday morning we had 65 members on roll and 61 present.

Bethel's greatest need at present is Sunday school rooms.

Because of the unfavorable weather and a death in the community we did not have a very large congregation at Union Chapel in the afternoon; however, we had a very impressive service.

Liberty Hill Church, Anderson Charge.—We have started our new year's work right well. On the second Sunday in January two members, Mr. and Mrs. Murray, were received into our church.

We are somewhat behind with our pastor's salary. Wish our people could see the need of the every member canvass. It would be so much easier to raise our claims.

Our pastor preached a very interesting sermon Sunday morning to a small but attentive congregation. Only a few braved the sleet and rain. No service was held at night on account of the weather.

Mrs. W. R. Harrison, who underwent an operation a few weeks ago, is slowly improving at her home. We miss Mrs. Harrison at church as she is always present when able.

The young people are planning to observe Young People's Day some time during the month of February.

Friendship, Fallston Charge.—In spite of flu and the weather our attendance has decreased very little in Sunday school. We still have our most able and beloved superintendent, N. J. Wright, whom we have had for about 60 years. Although years are rolling up on him he is still active and makes the Sunday school a very progressive one. He announced last Sunday that a friend of the church had donated $25 to be used for the benefit of it. The church appreciates this gift very much.

Our pastor, Rev. J. M. Morgan, preached a very forceful sermon last Sunday, after which the Lord's Supper was observed. Everybody seems to like the way Bro. Morgan is carrying on this year's work.

The young people are taking a greater interest in the C. E. Society. Several interesting things were discussed at the last meeting that we think will improve our society. We are planning to observe Young People's Day.

Miss Annie Mae Lackey entertained the members of the Christian Endeavor Society and a few invited guests at her home last Friday evening. Interesting contests and games were enjoyed by all present. Fruits, nuts, and candy were served throughout the evening.

REPORTER.

Shiloh, North Davidson.—Our workers' council met at Bro. H. H. Leonard's beautiful new home on last Monday night. The very welcome announcement was made that our Sunday school rooms, of which we are all so proud, are paid for. The next thing to add to our temple of worship is electricity. Bro. Jesse Hill has kindly furnished us lights from his Delco plant for several years, but the time has come when his plant is hardly strong enough to furnish light for his home and the church too. We feel that he has more than done his part already. Let's not impose upon him, but build an independent line that will be a burden to no one.

Influenza has crippled our attendance for several Sundays, but the situation is now improving. We had today, January 27, 222 present. We are so proud of our young people, who come in large numbers. But we are so thankful for our older ones, who also come and almost fill their class rooms. They are the fathers and mothers of Israel, have traveled God's highway many years, and are such an inspiration to those who have had less experience.

On Saturday, January 26, a large number of friends and relatives attended the funeral of Bro. Walter Walser, son of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Walser. What would have been his 26th birthday proved to be his funeral day. For almost six long years he had been a patient and uncomplaining sufferer, but the day came when God said "It's enough; come up higher." So his sufferings are over, but eternal joys have just begun. May God comfort the family, who have so patently ministered unto him these many years.

Another face that we all loved to see will be seen no more at Shiloh, for Mrs. W. B. Yarborough has gone home to visit us no more. Among her last words were these: "I'm so tired; I want to go home. Tell Shiloh folks good-bye for me, and let all meet up yonder." We shall miss her cheery smile and motherly counsel, but we are thankful for a Father whose grace is sufficient when human hands are powerless to render aid. She said she would be waiting for us on the other side, and we feel that she will be waiting close by the gate to welcome us home.

Bro. Troxler gave us a splendid sermon on last third Sunday. He helped us to see the need of seeing our weakness, our temptations, and our opportunities through this coming year, and our privilege of asking our Father's help in our trying time. May God call many lost souls at Shiloh's altar this year. MRS. WILEY L. SHOAF, Reporter.

Calvary, Greensboro.—This report covers some two months. Perhaps something should have appeared before now, but both the pastor and the reporter have been busy—and perhaps have waited for each other before breaking into print.

At the last report the work was making fine progress. Splendid attendance at all services, and renewed interest in all departments. Plans were being made for various activities. And then the flu struck town, and most of the plans went, as the poet put it, "aft aglay."

But for about a month now we have been getting back to normal, or a little above it. Last Sunday week we had the best attendance at a night service since this pastorate began. At the morning service the attendance was especially good, but was accounted for by the special effort made to get the membership out for a vote. More than the required number were present, and authorized the trustees to negotiate a loan with the Pilot Life Insurance Company for the money to pay for the new parsonage. Last Sunday morning, without any special effort, there were only two less present than the Sunday before. Commencement exercises and the rain, reduced our evening attendance.

We have been in our new parsonage for about a month, and are delighted. We have a splendid six-room bungalow, with cemented basement, and space upstairs for three additional rooms. The floors are oak, bathroom has tiled floor; the closets, and there are plenty of them, are cedar-lined. (I shall not go into a detailed description lest some of the brethren become envious and try to take my job away from me this fall.) A number of the Sunday school classes and individuals are helping to furnish the parsonage. The building and lot cost about $4,500.

Now for an item or two about the activities. The Philathea Class was entertained at the parsonage a few nights ago. Some 17 of the members had supper together and, following, elected officers, and made plans for greater activity. Last Friday night Brother Floyd Reynolds and his bride were invited to take supper at the parsonage, and, by prearrangement, at 8:30 the members of the Senior Christian Endeavor Society came in and gave the bride a shower. Brother Reynolds is president of the Society. Last Monday night the Missionary Auxiliary, which combines the Home and Foreign Societies, met with the Misses McCulloch. About 30 women were present, and report a splendid meeting. Mrs. Geo. R. Brown reviewed the study book. The Auxiliary is divided into three circles, one of which, the Business Girls' Circle, was organized last Monday night. The other two circles have gotten up a bit of friendly rivalry that is helping both in attendance and offerings.

Beginning with next Sunday morning, Christian Endeavor Week will be observed. At the morning service the pastor will preach a special sermon to the young folks. At the evening service the program prepared by the Board of Young People's Work will be put on. On Tuesday at 6:30, the Annual Christian Endeavor banquet will be given in the Hut. A good program is being arranged, and every one is looking forward to an enjoyable evening.

The Sunday school is making progress under the leadership of Brother J. W. Dixon. Different classes have charge of the opening exercises, and a good deal of interest is being manifest. The attendance last Sunday was 195, the best in several weeks. Our pressing need is more room, and we are hoping to work out some plan shortly whereby that room can be secured.

The "Calendar Plan" is helping materially in the reduction of our indebtedness. Another hundred dollars was paid last month on our note at the bank. The "Plan" so far, four months, has brought in $192.00. There were 125 contributors last month, and receipts amounted to $41.85. The team captains, Mrs. J. F. Williams and Brother J. A. Cox, also brought in considerable money to help swell the amount raised for debt.

While a great many of our members had the flu, and some of them were quite sick with it, we have not been called upon to give up a single one by death. But the relatives of a number of our members have died. We extend to these bereaved ones our sympathy.

C. W. BATES, Pastor.

We are not taking up much of our corner this week. No, the editor is not to blame. He is anxious for the corner to be filled to overflowing. It is not the treasurer's fault either. He has a way of not reporting what is not reported to him. If you want to know what is the matter, go away back up the creek to its source and you will find that it is suffering from a drought—a financial drought. If you want to know how to get rid of this drought, read the third chapter of the prophecy of Malachi.

Where is Malachi? Oh, it is in the Bible—the last book of the Old Testament. Now since we all know where to find Malachi, suppose all of us read it and then have a season of prayer.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Butner

Bro. George N. Butner died December 18, 1928, aged 76 years, six months and 14 days. He was married to Rebecca Jane Nicholson October, 1878, who preceded him to the great beyond seven years.

Bro. Butner professed faith in Christ in early life and joined the Moravian church, but soon after marriage he and his wife joined the M. P. Church at Mt. Zion, where they both lived consistent and loyal members until death separated them, never being absent from any church services unless providentially hindered. Bro. Butner's health gave way to the extent that was unable to attend church regularly, but he never lost interest in its welfare and ever kept it close to his heart, supporting all its interests to the best of his ability. Indeed, he was a good man and will be greatly missed in his church and community where he lived, but the influence of his good life will live on and on in the lives of his dear children and friends with whom he had mingled most, and no doubt when he has been gone many years the world will be better by his having lived in it so long.

He leaves five daughters: Mrs. N. C. Farlow, Mrs. H. E. Davis, Mrs. H. H. Brown, Mrs. R. C. Burrus and Mrs. A. O. Stewart; three sons, L. N. Butner, D. C. Butner and E. C. Butner; one brother, C. A. Butner, and a host of other relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

May this sad providence serve as stepping stones to higher lives with those who are left behind, and may we strive to be as ready when the call shall come to us, as we believe Bro. Butner was. Then we shall go where all these sad partings are over and where sickness, sorrow, pain and death are felt and feared no more.

Burial services were conducted by the writer, after which the remains were laid to rest in Mt. Zion cemetery to await the resurrection.
A. L. HUNTER.

Sharron

Mrs. Dolly Elizabeth Sharron, or "Aunt Bett," as she was known by young and old, the wife of the late Jem Sharron, was called to her reward on January 16, 1929, at the ripe old age of 75 years.

"Aunt Bett" was the oldest member of Palestine church, having joined the church in early girlhood, and was a faithful attendant at all services when sickness did not prevent her being out. After the death of "Uncle Jem" she made her home with her nephew, Mr. and Mrs. Jem Tucker. After her nephew's death she stayed on with Mrs. Tucker. It was a pleasure to go and spend a few hours with them and listen to those two old ladies tell of their young days, how the young people dressed, entertained, and attended church 60 years ago. The sad part is we shall hear her sweet voice no more; yet her kind words will linger long, she being the only great aunt of this reporter.

Funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. J. P. Pegg, assisted by Rev. Mr. Tate, the Stokesdale M. E. pastor, in a kind, sympathizing way. She, having no children of her own, is survived by one step-son and ten grand-children, and a large number of nieces and nephews, relatives and friends. Yet we mourn not as those having no hope.

GRACE R. TUCKER, Reporter.

Causey

Alephus Carson Causey, one of the oldest members of Tabernacle church, was claimed by death in St. Leo's Hospital, Greensboro, January 16. He had reached the age of 77 years. For several months Brother Causey was a great sufferer, but he bore all of his sufferings with patience, although he was unable to attend church but two or three times during the present pastorate, he was trusting in Jesus for salvation. The writer has never known a man who appreciated his home and family more than did Brother Causey. He has now gone to the home prepared for the people of God.

May grace be multiplied to the widow and daughter, who survive and keep them for his own service. The writer conducted the funeral at Tabernacle, January 17, and the burial took place in the nearby cemetery.

H. L. ISLEY.

Fields

John F. Fields, who lived near Climax, passed from this life Sunday, January 6, being 58 years of age. He was well known and had many friends in this section of the state. On September 17, 1903, he was married to Miss Mary Smith. Only one child came to bless the home, Dwight Fields, of Greensboro. Bro. Fields was a good neighbor and a kind husband and father. The large crowd attending the funeral, which was held at Tabernacle church, showed the esteem in which he was held. Funeral services were conducted by the writer, and the body laid to rest in the church cemetery.

H. L. ISLEY.

Smith

"Watch and pray, for ye know not when the time is." The members and congregation of First Church, Burlington, have had another warning in this particular. Last Thursday morning about 4 o'clock, while most of us were asleep, death slipped into the bed-chamber of Brother T. A. Smith, a member of our Burlington church, and Brother Smith is no longer among the living of earth. Silently, peacefully, without a struggle as far as anyone knows, he slipped away. Sister Smith, his dear wife, awoke only a very few minutes before he was gone. He had not been especially well for some days, but was not thought seriously ill. In fact, was going about his daily work. He went with his wife to visit a next door neighbor until bed time, bade him good-bye for the last time, went home and to sleep to awake in eternity.

The funeral service was conducted at 2:30 Friday afternoon in the church to which he was faithful at the time of his death, and his mortal remains were deposited in the Pine Hill Cemetery at Burlington to await the call of the resurrection morn. Brother S. W. Taylor, president of our Conference, and for seven years his pastor, assisted in the services.

For 12 years Brother Smith had been a faithful member of our Burlington church.

He was among the most faithful. Though I had been pastor here only a little more than a year I had learned to depend on Brother Smith. I could depend on him to be in his regular place in the Baraca class each Sunday morning, just the second seat from the pastor's and where I could reach his hand to say "Good morning." That seat looked strangely empty last Sunday. I could depend on him to be in his regular seat in the preaching services. That seat, too, was strangely vacant last Sunday. I could depend on him also to do what he could in the activities of the church. He was chairman of the parsonage trustees and took delight in looking after any repairs that needed attention about the parsonage. He will be greatly missed by his church.

Brother Smith is survived by his wife, one daughter, Mrs. Fred Montgomery, of Burlington, one son, Charles Smith, of Norfolk, one half brother, of Teer, N. C., and two half-sisters, Mrs. Lou Crutchfield, of Saxapahaw, and Mrs. Tillie Conklin, of Burlington. Of course there are a number of grandchildren and other relatives and friends to mourn the loss. They all have the prayers and sympathy of their pastor and of our church people generally. May God make His grace abound toward them so that even in their bereavement they may be comforted, and may all so live that when the time to go comes to each of us we shall be ready, as we believe he was.
L. W. GERRINGER, Pastor.

Weatherly

On Sunday morning, January 13th, death entered the membership of the Baraca class of the First Methodist Protestant Church of Burlington and took one of the members. Brother Bruce A. Weatherly, whose wife is a member of First Church, but who still held his membership at the Franklinville M. E. Church, died after an illness of about two weeks with pneumonia following an attack of influenza. He was a member of our Baraca class and his church activities were with our church. He leaves besides his wife, two small sons, his father, Professor Weatherly, of Franklinville, and his step-mother, and a great number of relatives and friends who mourn his passing.

The funeral service was conducted in the First Methodist Protestant Church on Monday, the 14th, at 2:00 p. m. by the pastor, assisted by Rev. S. W. Taylor, president of the Conference, after which interment was made in the Pine Hill Cemetery at Burlington.

The widow, the aged father, the dear little boys, and others who mourn his going have our prayers that divine grace may sustain them in this time of sorrow.

L. W. GERRINGER.

Surratt

Sister Mary P. Surratt was born July 9th, 1869, and died January 10th, 1929. She professed faith in Christ in early childhood and joined Pleasant Grove M. P. church. She was one of the most loyal of her church. She loved the Book and spent much time reading from its precious pages. Sister Surratt was never married, preferring to make life's journey alone, making her Savior her constant companion.

Her illness was short, her patience beautiful, and her triumph glorious. The end came as the ending of a perfect day. Her relatives and friends and the church, as well, are poorer because of her going, but heaven is infinitely richer.

Our deepest heart-felt sympathies go out for relatives and friends.

W. D. REED.

Gaddis

Mr. Raymond McLean Gaddis was taken from this life January 4, 1929. He was born in Randolph County September 25, 1893. He had made High Point his home for several years. He leaves to mourn his death his widow, one son, his mother, two brothers, three sisters, and a host of very dear friends. Mr. Gaddis had been afflicted with rheumatism for several years. He told his friends that he knew he must pass on and that he was ready to go. He became a member of the Main Street M. E. Church a short time before his death.

Funeral services were conducted at Mt. Zion church Sunday afternoon, January 6, at 2:30 by the writer, assisted by Rev. C. B. Reavis, pastor of the First M. E. Church of Asheboro.

T. J. WHITEHEAD.

Callis

James Martell Callis was born January 26, 1924, and died December 30, 1928, at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Callis, in Dawson, Ga., after an illness of only five days with influenza. The little boy was taken sick Christmas morning when he got up to see what Santa Claus had brought him, and told his little sister to take him back to bed; he couldn't walk. All was done for him that loving hands could do, but he steadily grew worse until Sunday morning about 7 o'clock he went home to be with Jesus. His mother, who was Miss Sue Glover before her marriage, formerly belonged to Harris Chapel church, but a few years ago when they moved to Georgia took her church letter with her. His father was a member of Poplar Creek Baptist church, where the little body was laid to rest beneath a beautiful mound of flowers by the side of his little sister, who died about nine years ago. The funeral was conducted by Dr. W. R. Cullin, pastor of the church, assisted by Rev. E. R. Nelson of Henderson and a special friend of the family.

Besides his father and mother he leaves to mourn their loss four sisters and four brothers, and a number of other relatives.

Little James was a bright, sweet child, and he will be greatly missed in his home and at Sunday school. But I would say to those who grieve for him that God never makes a mistake and that he is just another link to draw you nearer home.

Dearest son, thou hast left us,
And our loss we deeply feel;
But 'tis God that has bereft us,
He can all our sorrows heal.
Yet again we hope to meet thee
When the day of life is fled,
When in Heaven with joy to greet thee,
Where no farewell tear is shed.

Hawkins

Mrs. Susan Olivia Hawkins passed away January 10, 1929, aged 71 years, five months and 23 days. Mrs. Hawkins was among the best women of Hawkins Chapel community. She was converted while young and joined Hawkins Chapel church and remained a member until death. She and W. W. Hawkins were married while young and reared a family of children and five boys and one girl are living. They have homes near their father, who still lives, but is very feeble and in poor health.

Sister Hawkins loved her church and attended church when she could. Her home was the pastor's home when it was convenient for him to stop there; but she was kind and charitable and did not expect him to go there always and visit no one else.

Her husband, who is well known as "Billy" Hawkins, and all the family have the sympathy of the entire church and community. She had 15 grandchildren.

Funeral services were held in the home on January 11th, conducted by the writer, and her body was laid to rest near the home in a new family burying ground, she being the first one to be placed there.

Sister Hawkins was very much devoted to her husband and children, also her grandchildren, which caused a tender affection for her from these, and the sweet spirit of mother and grandmother has shown all will continue to show in the lives of these young people.

J. B. O'BRIANT.

Isley

Mrs. Barbara Isley was born near Friendship Church, Alamance County, September 13, 1836, and passed away January 10, 1929. She was one of Friendship's oldest members, being over 92 years of age. She is survived by two sons: G. M. Isley, R. F. D. 1, Burlington, and H. B. Isley, Cooleemee; one daughter, Mrs. D. A. Allbright, Mebane; 20 grandchildren, and 38 great-grandchildren.

The funeral was conducted at Friendship Church January 11 at 11 o'clock by Revs. J. Elwood Carroll and D. I. Offman. Interment followed in the church cemetery.

Mrs. Isley was a courageous Christian woman. Up to a few months before her death her health was good. Her spiritual life was a light to anyone who came in contact with her. Due to her age she had not been able to do much church work recently, but her great works of other days still live. Her life ripened more Christ-like as she worked for Him.

J. ELWOOD CARROLL.

Ellington

Mr. W. A. Ellington, of Hollister, N. C., departed this life on the 17th day of November, 1928. Mr. Ellington had been in declining health for several months, and gradually grew worse until the end came. All was done that physicians and human hands could do, but the Lord, who knows best, took him home to rest. Mr. Ellington was a member of the Methodist Protestant Church at Hollister, and he was faithful to his Church and Sunday school. He attended church as long as he was able, and we well remember the last service that he attended. He was very thin and pale, but deeply interested in the message. At the close of the service we had a communion service and he came forward and partook of the elements, and we felt at that time that it would be the last service that he would ever attend, and it was his last time to commune here, but he has no doubt eaten anew in the kingdom of heaven.

During his illness he never complained, he was always cheerful, and he often spoke of his eternal home in heaven, and said he was ready to go. We visited him several times during his illness and prayed with him. He talked much about dying and about his preparation for eternity.

The funeral services were conducted by the writer in Hollister Church, in the presence of a large congregation of friends and relatives. As we entered the church with the remains, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," was played on the piano by Miss Lottie McClenny, after which a solo was sung by Mrs. T. C. Qualls. After the services at the church, the remains were carried to the old family cemetery near Areola, where he was laid to rest beneath a large mound of flowers to await the resurrection morning.

Mr. Ellington left to mourn their loss his faithful wife, one son, W. W. Ellington, of Hollister, one daughter, Mrs. E. T. Melton, of Weldon, and several grandchildren; one sister, Mrs. Annie Hardy, of Littleton; four brothers, E. T. Ellington, and Jimmie Ellington, of Hollister, N. C.; John Ellington, of Vaughn, N. C., and Joe Ellington, of Columbus, Ohio. Let us not sorrow as one that hath no hope, but let us prepare to meet him in the kingdom above where there will be no more separations. C. L. SPENCER.

JOURNAL MONEY WANTED

I suppose all the pastors have received their quota of 1928 Annual Conference Journals, and have disposed of most of them by now. It will help greatly if you will send in the money promptly, so I can settle with the printer. Make your check payable to C. W. Bates, Sec'y, and send it to Rev. C. W. Bates, Box 1501 Asheboro St., Greensboro, N. C.

DRAWING FROM NATURE

The class had been told to bring things to school for drawing lesson, and just as the lesson was about to begin, a small boy was found standing tearfully at his teacher's desk.

"I've swallowed my object," he explained.

"What was it?" asked the teacher anxiously. "A banana," replied the would-be artist.—Pearson's Weekly.

—Bro. R. R. Ross, of Asheboro, is quite sick, having a bronchial trouble. He maintains his usual cheerfulness and it is hoped that his buoyant spirit will tide him through. He is in the hands of a nurse and visitors are not admitted to his room.

An Open Secret

To worldly men the Christian man
Is arrant fool or sage most deep.
They have not sense to understand
How he persists his course to keep.

Strong winds may blow, fierce tempests beat,
But he pursues his upward way.
He turns not back nor fears defeat
Though pressed by foes in dread array.

His life is hid with Christ in God
Is why he does not fail or fall.
Let no one say his case is odd:
The same God Power may hold us all.

The Scriptures of Eternal Truth

Of making books there is no end,
For books express the thoughts of men,
And men keep thinking as they go,
Ever eager new thoughts to show.

But human thought is very prone
To leave the way for ways its own,
And oft is led by error's lure
To turn from truth in wide detour.

The books of men, they come and go
As do the flakes in winter's snow.
They show to us a passing phase
Or vex us with ambiguous phrase.

The Book of God, it passes not Like evanescent human thought.
It shines out clear from age to age
With light divine on every page.

Payers, Partial Payers, Non-Payers

We have three classes in most of our churches: those who contribute to every expense of the church, those who contribute to one or two objects, and those who contribute to no object. We have in Calvary church a woman who says she wishes to contribute only to the pastor's salary. She feels indebted to the pastor and wishes to compensate him. I do not know whether she would come to hear him preach if there were no roof overhead, no floor under her feet, no seat to sit on, and no heat to warm her body. I would hardly expect her to attend church under those conditions, yet she feels that she owes nothing to the men who at great expense of time and material prepared for her comfort. Still we are glad to have her worship with us and be one of us. I have in mind a man that used to sit in front of me in Grace church. I could not but see that he never contributed anything to the church offerings and that he seemed to feel that he was doing just right in doing nothing in a financial way for the church. He was a non-payer. I inquired about him recently and learned that he had drifted to another church. How much he is worth to the church I leave for God to determine. But what sort of a church would that church be whose members were all just like he is?

People who seek the help of the church in a spiritual way are welcome in all Christian churches, even if they are unable to contribute to church budgets, but those who could contribute and do not cannot surely be growing spiritually as they might. Don't be a non-payer unless you must. Be a partial payer if you cannot be a complete payer.

What Are Divine Revelations?

It is common to limit the term to communications that God has made to men through His prophets. A little reflection will show that this conception is too narrow. Anything that reveals God is a revelation of God. God is not limited to the prophets in the revelation of Himself to men. The visible works of God reveal Him. The heavens declare His glory and majesty. The earth shows His handiwork, His marvelous skill. The rose gives us a hint of God. So does the lightning flash and the thunderbolt. The whole material universe is a magnificent revelation of God.

A still higher revelation of God is the soul of man. You may pass from world to world throughout the vast extent of creation and behold marvelous things, but nothing to be compared to the soul of man. Here come to view noble spiritual powers, powers that make us like God Himself. In every human soul God is trying to express Himself, reveal Himself, not only to but also through that soul. But sinful men are like broken mirrors: they show not God in the beauty of His holiness. But there came in the fullness of time a Man who truly expressed God, revealed God in the glory of His spiritual perfection. The only begotten Son of the Father, he hath declared Him. The supreme divine revelation is the person of Jesus Christ. He said: "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." We need look no further. But let us dwell upon this spectacle, this great revelation. It is our privilege to become like Him. We shall be satisfied when we become like Him. We will then know God.

—More important than church union or church division is the work for the church to do, whether united or divided. The problem of denominational relations is the specialty of the ecclesiastical statesman. The real work of the church is given to all to do. Every member has his part. If all individual members will do their part of this work, great will be the achievements of the church, whether united or divided.

—If the writer of the Book of Ecclesiastes were living now he might say that there is a time to write on church union and a time to refrain from writing on church union, and just now is a very good time to refrain. But he is not here, and we will have to leave it to the judgment of those who write to determine whether it will do any good.

BROTHER TAMBLYN WRITES

Dear Mr. Editor:

I have followed with unusual interest the articles on Christian Unity pro and con which have recently appeared in THE METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD. I do not hesitate to express my gratification in the fact that the Methodist Protestant Church possesses at least one layman who has the ability to ask questions and has arrived at certain convictions concerning the futility and waste incurred in perpetuating the unnecessary divisions within the Church of Christ and is willing to write down these convictions for the whole church to read.

We hear so much about the difficulties in the way of Christian unity. What are these difficulties? Surely not a belief in God as the Father of all men; and in the universal brotherhood of man. Belief in Jesus as our spiritual and moral guide, surely this is not the conviction that divides the church into two hundred and more different companies. And one might continue to enumerate the great fundamental ideas of Christianity and still one would not discover the real reason for a continuation of our innumerable sects.

Then, what is it that serves to divide us? It is the institutional aspects of our religion. The church is a going concern. It is a vested interest, with capital and buildings, colleges and seminaries and missionary compounds, with executive officers, traveling agents, promotional experts, editors, presidents and monthly pay-rolls. Denominational loyalty is tremendously effective as a bulwark to certain church offices, so let's insist upon it, say those who profit most through the constant reiteration of our denominational shibboleths. Let us keep our seminaries and supply them with great endowments, says the denominationalist, that we may stem the tide of Christian unity. For, as one has so recently warned us, "unless we train our own sons and daughters in our own institutions, our pulpits will be occupied by those so trained in other schools that they never sound our denominational notes but sometimes seduce (sic) the flock into a community fold." Thus the denominationalist who can see nothing bigger in the Kingdom of God than his own little church is disposed to view the consecrated efforts of men looking toward a wider and richer fellowship in the United Church as a process of seduction. Alas and alas!

I am for Christian unity heart and soul. I thrill to the finger tips when I pass through Canada and find in each little hamlet, village and city, beautiful churches, all of them carrying the legend, "The United Church of Canada." Christian unity is a reality there. If the great Methodist, Presbyterian and Congregational bodies of Canada can unite their forces in one splendid organic fellowship for a more fruitful ministry in the Dominion, what, in the name of sense, prohibits a similar union in America?

One cannot repress the feeling that it is not the worthy side of American Christianity which keeps us apart, but rather such things as self-interest, self-centeredness, sectarian consciousness, fear of absorption and an unwholesome subservience to custom and tradition. Whatever is true and worthwhile in any church is the common possession of all Christendom. Where we agree we are the strongest. When we become more Christ-like, as churches, we shall find less difficulty in the thought of Christian union. Jesus once said, "He that seeketh to save his life shall lose it?" One often wonders if that could possibly apply to the present-day denominational struggle for existence.

How many times must a Methodist Protestant clergyman explain to some questioner the difference which separates his church from the main body of Methodism. What is the difference? We don't have bishops. Whenever I am called upon to so explain the name, "Methodist Protestant," there flashes through my mind such significant names as McConnell, McDowell, Hughes, Blake, Anderson, Fisher and Welch. Oh, yes, we have none of these. Our church is democratic. (Just ask the ladies in Pittsburgh.) We have stationing committees, and some things I have known stationing committees to do would make the most bigoted, episcopal-minded, autocratic bishop on earth blush. One is reminded of Aesop's wolf, who, when he saw the shepherds eating a lamb, said, "If I had done this what an outcry would have been heard."

But, Mr. Editor, this is really not the reason why I am writing you. I have noticed the editorial note at the end of Mr. Wills' article, referring to his statement concerning the failure of the Methodist Protestant Church to raise the Gratitude Gift of $100,000. The editor comments that he is under the impression that Mr. Straughn reported over $100,000 contributed.

As a matter of fact $101,204 were taken to Baltimore last May, but from whence did it come? In North Carolina's Gratitude Gift of $12,000 about $3,000 was borrowed money, the notes being held by a bank in Asheboro. I understand Maryland did the same thing. I should like to know how many others brought their gratitude offering from the banks. Mr. Wills is right. $100,000 was not raised and is not raised yet. Grace Church is raising $150 this year to help North Carolina take up its notes.

A most amazing thing appeared in The Christian Century last July. It was from the pen of Mr. Chauncey C. Day reporting the Centennial Celebration at Baltimore. Concerning the so-called, badly mis-named, "Gratitude Gift" he wrote, "No drive or campaign had been launched, but an offering of $101,204 in cash was received." "No drive or campaign"? Indeed. What was it? Has Webster, too, become old-fashioned and his definitions obsolete? What would you call it, with its campaign manager (pardon, please), its promotion officer, its conference apportionments and the pressure "from above" applied upon conference officials and through them to the pastors and on down to the people. "No drive or campaign"? It is to blush. Perhaps it would have been much better for the Gratitude Gift if the people had not known that the money was needed very badly to liquidate indebtedness incurred by the Boards which had failed to keep their expenditures within the bounds of their income.

Yours very sincerely,

RONALD J. TAMBLYN.

(Our purpose in our brief comment was to guard the reader against the conclusion that the General Conference received less than $100,000 as the denomination's gratitude gift. We thank Bro. Tamblin for stating the exact amount. It is true that part of this was advanced in the faith that it would yet be contributed. The decision to do this was made in the case of North Carolina in a meeting at which Bro. Tamblin was present. We heard no protest or objection from him then as to that course. We believe Grace Church will cheerfully add to its liberal contribution of last year and that Bro. Tamblin will approve their action.—Editor.)

SOME COMPARISONS OF OURSELVES WITH OTHERS

The method of comparison is used sometimes in such a way that people become complacent and cease to struggle. It may also be so used that people will become discouraged and cease to struggle. But I am making a few comparisons of the activities of work with a sister denomination in order that we may see how nearly the results of our labors coincide with those of others doing the same kind of work, to show that the Methodist Protestant Church has not yet reached that state of ecclesiastical senility that some seem to think it is now enjoying. And nothing that I shall say should be construed as in any way criticising what our sister church is doing. The facts are given simply as a basis for a decision.

The denomination selected has just about five times as many members as we have in the N. C. Conference, so the results should be divided by five when considering what they did and multiplied by five when comparing what we did with their work.

The total amount raised by our church last year per member was $11.00 plus; the total amount raised by our sister church for all purposes per member was $16.00 plus.

The total amount raised for the general church work of our church last year was $18,653; the total amount raised by our sister church for the same interests was $85,321. Now divide this by five to make it compare with us; we find that they raised just $17,064 with the same number of members as we have. Or to multiply our membership and contributions by five would mean that our church would have contributed $93,265 to these interests had we had as many members as they and had our people continued to give as they did for the number we now have.

Last year our conference contributed to education about $4,000; five times our present membership giving as we gave would have therefore contributed $20,000 to education. Our sister church contributed $24,622 to Christian education. In this case we fall behind our sister denomination, but when it is considered that our N. C. College is yet under five years of age while our sister denomination has a great number of old, established colleges, there is nothing to be ashamed of.

Last year our sister church paid to her pastors $574,689. Divide this by five because they are five times as numerically strong as we, and we have $114,933. Our church in North Carolina contributed to pastoral support $110,774, a difference of just a little more than $4,000. Of course, we could run these comparisons through the various interests of the church and find about the same results; sometimes falling behind, possibly running ahead in some cases. But in no case would we find ourselves so very far behind.

I have visited all of our churches in the N. C. Conference and I find our people usually compare favorably with the members of the other churches in those communities where we have churches. It is not that we are an inferior people that this idea that we are inferior has blinded some of our leaders to the possibility of our church. Our trouble is more largely psychic than physical. To those who think they can win victory hovers near, while to those who think they can't, victory is never near.

I am not appealing to the membership of our church to be content with what we are doing for the kingdom; surely God would have us do much more than we have done, but I do not want any one to cease to labor because he is discouraged —at least not until he has the facts. Unless we should be changed in mind, heart and purse, no changing of our name would make us very different from what we are today. We did a big thing last decade, let's do better the next.

R. M. ANDREWS.

A PASTOR OFFERS A LITTLE ADVICE

I notice articles on church union. Are we to infer that we have some brethren for whom the Methodist Protestant Church is too small? In that case I would kindly suggest that they quietly move on and leave the rest of us undisturbed under our own vine and figtree.

In one of John's epistles he speaks of one Diotrephes who loved the pre-eminence, and I am inclined to believe that that spirit afflicts some denominations as well as some individuals.

A PASTOR.

(This letter may seem unkind and sarcastic, but knowing the writer, one of our real pastors, as I do, I believe he is sincere in offering this advice as the best way to solve a disturbing problem. We trust that there are none who need this advice.—Editor.)

A STORY AND ITS LESSON

Four years ago a letter came to the office of the Board of Education from a friend in Michigan asking for the privilege of making a contribution to the Student Loan Fund. It was in response to appeals placed in the denominational papers asking for subscriptions on the basis of $10 a year for five years. This pledge was made, the first installments paid and then shortly afterwards the others were received.

A little later there came an inquiry concerning our annuity bonds. This letter was promptly answered and in a few days a check for $500 was received, the first annuity coming to the present Executive Secretary. This was the beginning of a correspondence which revealed the splendid Christian heart of a noble man of God. Humble, quiet, devoted and generous, this good man rejoiced to make what little means he had do all the good possible.

The Board paid the annuities regularly, so much every six months. Then last fall we were asked if we would accept another $500. In a few weeks that was received. But the ink on the bond was hardly dry before word came that our good friend was gone. His sister, whose home is in Chicago, hurried to Colorado. Every possible effort was made to locate him. The local authorities, various fraternal organizations and neighbors gave the fullest and most generous co-operation but no trace of him could be found. The search was given up, the place rented and the sister about ready to come home when the man to whom the place had been rented discovered the frozen body under one of the buildings. He had attempted to raise it, the supports slipped and crushed out the life instantly.

Mr. Burton Matson lived his comparatively short life well. He was interested in every good cause and supported such things to the limit of his resources.

The gifts Mr. Matson made to the Board of Christian Education will be kept inviolate, continuing for an indefinite number of years to minister to the young life of the Methodist Protestant church, helping them to secure the preparation which will make possible a service that is Christian to the world. Only the income from his gift will be used for this purpose. His service to his church will thus go on for many, many years.

There is a moral in this story we are inclined to draw. Many friends plan to do something of this kind, that is, place their funds in the cause or enterprise where they would like to have them after they are gone, before they pass away. Some do this before it is too late but many a great cause is struggling today because some have not done what was in their minds and hearts to do. They keep postponing it and the money they intended, say for Christian Education, is dissipated for other purposes in the settlement of an estate.

F. W. STEPHENSON, Executive Secretary,

Dept. of Educational Institutions.

THE PASTORS' SUMMER CONFERENCE

The Pastors' Summer Conference will convene this year on July 15. This is one week earlier than last year. It was found that this date suited the young people for the Summer Training School and there has been a feeling on the part of some of the pastors that a date just a little earlier would be better. So it is hoped that this date will meet with the approval of all our people. Pastors will please take notice of this and plan their work so that they can attend. It is hoped that no pastor will plan a revival on this date. Let us plan to spend a few days in this summer gathering together. There seems to be a feeling among us that this gathering is not what it once was back in the good old days when most of us went and spent the entire time together. It may be that it will never be in every respect just what it was in those earlier days. But certainly we can make it such a conference that it will serve just as great a purpose as it ever did. Indeed we should make it serve a greater purpose. This can be done with the co-operation of all the pastors. I here and now appeal to every pastor for his hearty full-time co-operation.

Yours for a great conference,

GEO. L. CURRY.

TOBACCO FACTS

J. FRANKLIN KNOTTS

"For there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed; and hid, that shall not be known." A thoughtless public may sneer at these words, but the scientist will accept them. Barber-shop and exclusive-club opinion on the question of the effects of tobacco on the human system would have no more standing in a laboratory than the devil's testimony in a prayer meeting. The method of this article is that of a reporter, and the subject matter is scientific. The data have not been received from the Tobacco Trust or from that type of medical practitioner who every time he has a case of sickness beyond a common cold calls a specialist with whom he splits fees. Rather, it is the finding of the elaborate and laborious experiments of major scientists, professors, and physicians on two continents. For every statement herein made, I have the authority in my possession.

The botanical composition of the tobacco plant is exceedingly complex. One author requires one hundred and one words to describe it, enumerating fourteen constituent elements, some of them poisonous, and nicotine a powerful poison, of which one to three milligrams have produced profound poisoning in man. In the metric system a milligram is the one-thousandth part of a gram. The United States Department of Agriculture states the per cent of nicotine to be from .94 to 5, while the French Department of Agriculture sets it as high as 10.5. This variation depends upon the "brand and the conditions under which it is cultured."

The burning of tobacco decomposes the nicotine, but before this can take place completely the amount in the smoke can be measured. Experiment showed by three different authorities that the per cent of nicotine in the smoke was 3.75 to 97, only one finding it lower than 30 per cent. The smoke containing this poison passing over the mucous membranes of the respiratory organs produces certain physiological effects which medical literature distinctly and minutely describes. With few exceptions, every initiate into smoking knows from experience what they are.

But there are more permanent physiological effects, though imperceptible to the user of tobacco. Alexander Lambert, M.D., says: "Toxic anginas are most frequently brought on by tobacco. . . . Patients who suffer real angina increase the number of their severe attacks by the use of tobacco." Sir William Osler attributed the sudden death of three of his friends who appeared to be strong and in health to the effects of tobacco on the nerves of the heart. Dr. J. H. Kellogg, superintendent of the Battle Creek Sanitarium, made a survey of the effects of tobacco on the heart, considering all the important experiments, and published the results in a volume entitled Tobaccoism; and found that all authorities agree that tobacco is a heart poison. Dr. Janeway, of Johns Hopkins Hospital, was an authority on blood pressure and he leaves this record: "Tobacco, or its alkaloid nicotine, has a powerful action on the circulation." Dr. Robert Lee Bates, of Johns Hopkins University, summarizes an investigation in these words: "The effects on healthy adult reactors, of smoking a cigar or three cigarettes, are to produce a rise in systolic and diastolic blood pressure, and in heart action. This rise varies in amount and rapidity from reactor to reactor, and from day to day for the same reactor." It is useless to continue citations because all authorities agree and they are voluminous.

For the effects of tobacco upon the nervous system we are indebted to Dr. L. Pierce Clark, visiting neurologist to the Randall's Island Hospital and Schools, and consulting neurologist at the Manhattan State Hospital in New York. "Tobacco," he says, "is primarily a cardiovascular poison. Its acute toxic effects on the neuromuscular apparatus are, first, an excitant; second, a motor nerve depressant, and finally a paralyzant of the central peripheral nerves of the heart and lungs. Its chronic effect on the nervous system, as yet so inaccurately studied, appeared to induce toxic congestion of the brain, spinal cord, and peripheral nerves, inducing finally in the latter a mild degenerative neuritis."

Dr. Solley, surgeon of St. Thomas Hospital, England, contributes this striking judgment: "It soothes the excited nervous system at the time to render it more feeble and irritable ultimately. I know of no other cause or agent that so much tends to bring on functional disease, and in the end to lead to organic disease of the brain." Time and space deny me opportunity to catalogue here the long list of authorities on the effects of tobacco on the nervous system.

The effects of tobacco on physical growth are evident from a study covering a period of over three years by Professor Seaver, of Yale. He divided his students into three groups—abstainers, regular users, irregular users. He says: "A compilation of the anthropometric data on this basis shows the first group grows in weight 10.4 per cent more than the second and 6.6 per cent more than the third. In height the first grows 24 per cent more than the second and 11 per cent more than the third. In girth of chest the first grows 26.7 per cent more than the second and 22 per cent more than the third. In lung capacity the first group grows 77 per cent more than the second and 49 per cent more than the third." Dr. E. R. Hitchcock, of Amherst College, made a similar investigation of students and found similar results.

Let us now indicate the effects of tobacco on mental efficiency. Here are the results of an investigation in Clark University: Habitual smokers composed one-fifth of the student body but yielded two-thirds of the "flunkers" and also provided one-half of the men who could not finish the course in three years. Non-smokers furnished one-half of the student body but only one-sixth of the "flunkers" and only one-fourth of the men who could not finish the course in three years. The non-smokers yielded fifty-eight per cent of the honor men both in scholarship and in athletics.

Arthur Dermont Bush, M.D., made a series of one hundred and twenty tests in several different psychic fields of each of fifteen men which showed that smoking produced a 10.5 per cent decrease in mental efficiency. At Ohio Wesleyan University, Dean Hornell made a two-year study which indicated that non-smokers obtained 84 per cent of the high grades and the smokers 16 per cent.

Covering a period of years, Professor Seaver found at Yale that only five per cent of the high-grade men were smokers. Dr. George Lewis is credited with the observation that in fifty years no tobacco user has taken first honors at Harvard. Dr. W. J. Mayo says according to his experiences research scholars who smoke cigarettes have not done well.

Young readers will be interested to know the results of tobacco on athletes. In the educational institutions where tests have been made, the tobacco users are always at a disadvantage. The coaches are against the use of the weed. The famous Hugh Jennings is on record as saying: "The men in the baseball profession who have made the greatest success are those who have abstained from the cigarette." Cobb, Crawford, Mathewson, Johnson, Alexander, are brilliant stars in baseball who never smoked.

And now, to clinch as it were all I have said, consider the impressive fact that every state in the Union has legislation against the sale and use of tobacco for the protection of childhood and youth. The exceptions, Louisiana and New Mexico, have protective legislation against fires from smoking. What is the meaning of this consensus of judgment of the legislative halls of the states?

The economic aspect of the question is alarming. The American people are expending about $2,500,000,000 annually. This is equal to about $21 a year for every man, woman, and child in America, and about $120 for every family in the nation. The business is growing by leaps and bounds. Over the radio it was said last week that the tobacco business had increased the past year 32 per cent. The annual fire loss in the United States is upward of $400,000,000, and Fire Commissioner Johnson, of New York City, says that 15 to 20 per cent of all fires in cities may be attributed to cigarettes. For five years ending 1922, there were 5,694 forest fires in America caused by smokers. It is estimated that the fire loss from careless smokers is about $50,000,000 a year. The tragic fire in the Triangle Shirtwaist Company in New York City in 1910 in which 145 persons lost their lives was a sickly tribute to a cigarette smoker.—Zion's Herald.

DENOMINATIONAL ENTERPRISES

OUR FOREIGN WORK

Our work in Japan, China and India continues to succeed quite well. Perhaps our greatest need at this time and in the near future will be more missionaries to take the place of some who will return to this country on furlough, some of whom may not return to the foreign field because of long time service already rendered.

Our mission fields require the strongest type of men and women the church possesses, persons who are well-trained and are strong leaders. We have in the Methodist Protestant Church as fine a type of young people as are in any church and, we believe, who are willing to consecrate their lives to the missionary cause. We will be glad to hear from any young man or woman upon whose heart the responsibility of this work may rest.

The church at this time should be much in prayer for all of our work at home and abroad, and if the church is to do the work which God requires of her, more workers and more money are necessary.

G. W.H.

OUR EDUCATIONAL INTERESTS

The situation facing the educational interests is not so inspiring unless the contributions for the denominational work are greatly increased. If we make no progress financially during the next few years, if we have reached the limit of our ability to support the causes written into the New Century Service, then the outlook for the work entrusted to the Board of Christian Education is dismal indeed.

In defense of the Finance Committee of the General Conference which had these matters in charge this should be said. They declared quite frankly that the educational interests had been neglected, that they had not been given the consideration they deserved and that justice would not be done until they were permitted to share more largely in the contributions of our people. There was not the least indication of a lack of sympathy or appreciation of the vital importance of these interests or of any desire to "put over" something on the Executive Secretaries or the Educational Boards. They intended fully to do that which would safeguard present achievements and at the same time find a basis of distribution of the New Century Service receipts which would vitalize the entire denominational program and give each agency an opportunity to take full advantage of their growing needs and opportunities. They felt that their first obligation was to find a basis of distribution which would guarantee to the various interests approximately the same income received during recent years. After that they made changes that would increase the usefulness of all. It was a sincere effort to protect the enterprises already established and to inspire the hope of something better.

This explains the percentage arrangement adopted by the General Conference. It explains also the willingness of the educational leaders to accept without protest on the floor of the General Conference the report of the committee. We

Deceased

Death has again invaded the ranks of our ministerial family. On last Saturday, February 2, the wife of Bro. L. S. Helms passed from earth to her eternal home. She had been sick for some weeks, though the end was sudden and unexpected by the family. Her body was laid to rest in the burying ground of Shady Grove church on Connelly Springs charge. We were called to conduct the funeral, and therefore had to cancel our other appointments for the day. We presume that a suitable obituary will appear in the HERALD later, and for that reason we will not enlarge here. Our hearts go out in tender sympathy to the bereaved family and relatives. We commend them to the God of all comfort, and pray that His peace and His care may be abundantly granted unto them.

While in that part of our work, it was our privilege to see two of our old ministers, Bro. H. D. Garmon and Bro. W. P. Martin. Both have been sick recently. Bro. Garmon was better; Bro. Martin is still confined to his bed. Their bodies are frail, but their faith in Christ is vigorous, and their interest in the church unabated. We pray that light may be upon their pathway as they continue on toward the Eternal City.

Coming

Rev. J. H. Straughn, D.D., general church treasurer and promotional secretary of New Century Service, has asked for an itinerary of our conference, March 8-13, in the interest of the work with which the General Conference has charged him. He probably will be accompanied by Dr. Broomfield, the president of the General Conference; Dr. Haddaway, executive secretary of the Board of Missions, and Dr. Stephenson, executive secretary of the Board of Religious Education. We shall be glad to have these brethren come to us on this worthy mission, and a plan of appointments for them is being worked out, by order of our conference New Century Service Commission. Notice of the plan will be given just as soon as it can be prepared. All preparation possible will be made so as to give them every advantage for their work. We trust that the largest possible measure of good may be accomplished by this visit.

Pastor's Report

These go out today. Pastors will observe that we inadvertently omitted on the questionnaire a place for the name of the charge. They will please supply that on returning the report.

Just one other request in regard to this report: Please be prompt in returning it. Thank you! Thank you!

Conference Districts

We shall have to ask for a little more time in preparing this, as we have not been able to get it ready for the report this week. However, the delay will not be protracted longer than next week, we think.

Thank-Offering

The women of the Foreign Missionary Society hold their annual Thank-Offering service in February. Let us give them every possible help in this service, and secure for them a large offering. If you have a church at which there is no missionary society, we urge again that you give the people an opportunity to make an offering for this purpose. If their interest would be aroused by having a specific object for which they would make the offering, tell them that it will be used to build a home for our missionaries in India. When you send in the offering, designate it for that purpose. Send to Mrs. S. W. Taylor, 126 Tate Street, Greensboro. You get credit on the G. C. B. for all you send. Please push this. The need is urgent.

Opportunities

We perhaps have never had more and better opportunities in our conference for expanding our church and for rendering real service than we have today. Our difficulty is in our inability to use, in full measure, the opportunities that are before us. We have in mind just now one community, where a vast and thickly populated territory is open to us, and where we should have in a very few years a thriving church. We already have a nucleus there, and our hope and prayer is that God will lead us into the larger opportunities of service that are there for our church. This is only one illustration of the opportunities that await us. If we only had the means, there are numbers of places where we could establish churches, with every reasonable assurance that they would grow into strong and useful organizations. These open fields are a challenge to our faith and to our perseverance, and for them we "thank God, and take courage."

Appointments

NEW TESTAMENT TRUSTWORTHY

"The longer I study the New Testament, the more convinced I become of its absolute trustworthiness; and also of the care and the faithful study which ought to be given to the reading of it. The books of which it is composed are so wonderfully true to the surroundings and the life and spirit of the time. . . . The Christian religion is not founded on a falsehood, nor on a misapprehension of facts, nor on legend, nor on half-forgotten and exaggerated tales. . . . Christianity is the religion of truth; it is founded on truth, absolute and perfect truth."—Selected.

Theorem.—No sermon is of right length.

Proof.—Uninteresting sermons are too long. Interesting sermons are too short. All sermons are either interesting or uninteresting. Therefore all sermons are too long or too short; that is, no sermon is of right length. Quod erat demonstrandum.

OUR STORY PAGE

MARY NELL'S HAPPY DAY

It was Saturday morning, and Mary Nell's mother was hurrying around getting ready to go to grandmother's. Of all the places Mary Nell knew, she loved most to go to her grandmother's, and when she found out that was where her mother was going, she thought she must go too.

"You can't go this time, dear," her mother told her. "Your grandmother is going to have a lot of company, and she wouldn't have time to talk to you. You may stay with Emma this time."

"I don't want to stay with Emma," Mary Nell declared.

"I'm sorry," said her mother; "but that seems to be the best thing to do, and you must be a good little girl and be as happy as you can."

"It won't be a happy day at all," said Mary Nell.

"Maybe it'll change and be happier than you think," smiled her mother. "If it does, I'll be glad to hear about it."

Mother kissed her goodbye and away she went. Mary Nell sat down and cried. Emma reminded her of her dolls and her story books and numbers of other things, but none of them would do.

"I'm going to cry till mother comes back," said Mary Nell. "I'm going to cry all day and all night!"

"That is not like a nice girl," said Emma.

"I don't want to hear about nice girls," replied Mary Nell.

"Well, do you want to hear about pie?" asked Emma. "Your mother said for me to make a pie, and if you really want to, I might let you make a little pie in your own little pie pan."

Mary Nell's face cleared up at once.

"Oh, Emma, will you?" she cried. "Why that would be almost as nice as going to grandmother's. What kind of a pie will it be?"

"A custard pie," said Emma. "Your mother wanted to send it to Mrs. Bates because she's been sick for a long time and couldn't eat anything."

"Oh, Emma, let me take it to her," begged Mary Nell.

"All right," agreed Emma. "I don't think your mother would care as it's just across the street."

So Mary Nell went into the kitchen and washed her hands all clean and white, and let Emma show her how to make the little pie. And Emma made the large pie, and when they came out of the oven, they looked so nice that Mary Nell could hardly wait for the pie to cool before taking it to Mrs. Bates.

While she was waiting, the grocer boy came with ears of corn. Emma husked them, and Mary Nell took off the silks. Then she helped Emma wash potatoes with a brush till they were ready to bake in the oven.

By that time the pie was cool, and Emma put a pretty cloth on a tray, while Mary Nell gathered some flowers. They put the pie on the tray and Mary Nell placed the flowers beside it. Then Mary Nell carried it across the street while Emma stood on the front porch to see that she got over all right.

Mrs. Bates was so pleased with the pie and the flowers that Mary Nell began to be glad she had stayed at home. She ran back with a smiling face.

"Emma," she said, "isn't there something else I can do?"

"You may eat your little pie if you want it," Emma told her.

Mary Nell clapped her hands as a new thought came. "Oh, Emma, let me take it to Grace Lowe," she begged. "She burnt her hand so she couldn't come to school. May I?"

"If you'll be careful, and hurry back," agreed Emma.

So Mary Nell took the little pie three doors down the street and gave it to Grace. She hurried back and tried to think of something else to do.

"You might write to your grandmother and tell her all about how you made this a happy day," said Emma.

"That's just what I'll do," said Mary Nell.

So she wrote the letter and told her grandmother all about what she had been doing. It took a whole sheet of paper. By the time it was finished and Emma had helped her get it ready, the postman came. She met him on the porch and gave it to him.

"It's for my grandmother," she said. "I wanted to go and see her, but I couldn't."

"That's too bad," smiled the postman.

"Not so very bad," said Mary Nell. "Did you know if you want to do something and don't get to, if you will just do something nice for everybody, you'll have a happy time after all?"

The postman's smile grew still broader. "I'll try it," he promised, "and see how it works."—The Presbyterian.

Our Educational Interests

may have been unnecessarily hopeful but on the whole the plan seemed fair and promising.

Another step taken by the General Conference persuaded us to acquiesce in the new program and that was the election of a promotional secretary, and especially the one chosen for that position. It was the consensus of opinion that a new day for the denominational program had dawned and we believe it has. The progress in the educational field of the church since the Million Dollar Campaign has been remarkable. It will be greater still during the next ten years if the resources necessary are available. We believe in time they will be, especially if the organization of our women on the basis outlined by the General Conference is carried forward. This plan alone offers the greatest opportunity the educational interests have ever had. It means a chance to familiarize the whole church with our work. As they know, they will support. It will be some time before the church is as educationally minded as it is missionary minded, but we have a chance in prospect to try to make it so and we purpose to make the most of it.

F. W. STEPHENSON.

We desire to continue to remind the church of the need of the India bungalow for our missionary workers. We hope the church will feel this great need as do both the workers in the foreign field and the members of the Board of Missions.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By Grover L. Angel

President C. E. Society, High Point College

FEB. 10: "JESUS TEACHING US TO SERVE"

Matt. 20:20-28.

Plans for the Meeting

"Advertise the meeting by sending to each member a summons something like this: 'Your King needs you. You are summoned to appear at (place of meeting) at (hour of meeting) next Sunday evening and receive instructions for His service.' Number each of these notices and have a corresponding number with instructions in a sealed envelope. When the members arrive give them these envelopes, in which they will find instructions as to the part each is to take in the meeting."—C. E. Quarterly.

Points for the Leader

Christ was the greatest teacher of service that the world has ever known. The word, Christian, means one who is engaged in service to our fellow men. The teaching of Jesus was all based on service to God and to man. He tried to teach men to be happy in giving rather than getting. "More of others and less of self" was the central thought of His message. You serve God by serving man. We have been commanded to "Feed the Sheep" of the world. Are we true to our challenge? The purpose of this discussion is to help us to determine just what place service has in a Christian life, and to enable us to become equipped to render in the best possible way the service that is expected of us.

Topics for Discussion

- Ways to serve Jesus:
1. By preaching (Matt. 10:1-8).
 2. By compassion (Matt. 9:35-38).
 3. By comforting (Luke 8:49-56).
 4. By unselfishness (Matt. 5:38-42).
 5. By humility (Matt. 20:25-28).
 6. By sacrifice (Matt. 16:24).

Questions to Be Answered

1. Are Christians under obligation to follow the example of Jesus? (Mark 10:45).
2. How is the best way to bring others to service for Jesus? (II Cor. 3:2, 3).
3. What is the attitude that all should take toward service? (Phil. 2:4).

Appropriate Quotations

"I want to follow Him only, copy His teaching, drink in His spirit, place my feet in His footprints, and measure by shortcomings by Him, and Him only."—Anon.

"Jesus estimated service as one of the highest ideals in life, and made it the kingdom test of true greatness. 'Whosoever will be great among you shall be servant of all.' He sets us an example of service also. It is to be noticed that in Jesus' service there was no thought of reward. He found His reward in the joy He brought into the lives of others. It is a difficult lesson for us to learn."—Williamson and Wallace, in "Stewardship in the Life of Youth."

"Jesus helped the poor with gifts. We can do as much. We can do more. We can help the poor to help themselves. Jesus would do that today."—A. W. Robertson.

Suitable Songs

"It Pays to Serve Jesus."
"Whom Have You Helped Today?"
"Jesus Calls Us, O'er the Tumult."
"Forward! Be Our Watchword."
"Lead on, O King Eternal."
"Onward, Christian Soldiers."
"Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus."
"Lord, Speak to Me, That I May Speak."

Poetry to the Point

I serve.
With unaggressive mien I fit into
The niche designed for me, nor murmuring raise
That in the dull, eventless hours of praise
No fair emoluments to me accrue.

I serve.
I serve the will of God. In my estate
I train my soul contented to abide;
Meseems 'tis nobler thus, than if I tried
With futile efforts to o'erride my fate.

I serve.
Perchance the greater heroes scorn my part;
Seen from their loftier attitude, it may Appear ignoble. Be it so, I say;
Their smiles derisive shall not vex my heart.

I serve.
From my appointed path nor sway nor swerve.
What tho' Eternal Wisdom did accord
Mean use for me? His love is my reward
If in mine own allotted sphere I serve.

NOTICE

In answer to Brother Ballard's request of last week in regard to church hymnals, will say that the people of Kannapolis tabernacle will be much pleased to have a number of Methodist Protestant Hymnals donated to them, either new or old.

Thank you, Brother Ballard, for the suggestion. Hope your suggestion will prove a blessing not only to us but many others.

Kannapolis, N. C.

FROM BRO. E. S. WILLS

Dear Dr. McCulloch:

In reference to your footnote to my article in last week's Herald, please permit me to say that my statement was based upon the fact that the North Carolina Conference, considered, I believe, the second strongest in the church, failed to raise its quota of the Gratitude Gift. I am advised that the treasurer borrowed sufficient money to make up the deficit, and thus our quota was reported to the General Conference as "paid in full." In the Herald of November 22, 1928, on page 4, under the heading "General and Annual Conference Apportionments" is a column reading "Gratitude Gift Deficit," and this column totals $3,360.00. This amount was apportioned among the various churches to be raised this year.

I am not engaging in destructive criticism, but in business we have to face facts, so why not in the church? Amalgamation is proceeding rapidly in the business world. Since the church must be supported by business men and women, should we not employ the most efficient methods in financing the work?

Recently, in a group of laymen, all capable and successful business men as well as good churchmen, the question of church union was under discussion. Every man present who expressed his sentiments was in favor of union, and one man made the following statement: "If it were left to the laymen of the church, we would get together in short order." This should not be construed as a reflection upon the ministry, but merely indicates how the laymen are thinking.

This is a momentous question, not to be lightly dismissed. My hope is that our people will consider it in the light of recent developments, and that consideration may result in action.

Just a few days ago the newspapers reported a movement looking to the union of the Presbyterian Church of the United States and the Methodist Episcopal Church in America. Can we ignore these potent signs of the times as they affect church union? And have we forgotten that the three great Protestant denominations of Canada have already united, only a comparatively small group of the Presbyterians holding aloof?

The spirit of union is abroad, and, while it is working slowly, it is working surely. Men and women will not much longer consent to struggle under the handicaps imposed by denominationalism. The church whose foundation Christ laid, and to which His name was given, was not told to divide itself into as many groups as there were differences of opinion. Divided opinion arose among the disciples, but did not split them into competitive groups. The strength of the Roman Catholic church is its unity, and the Protestant church will in time realize that "in union there is strength."

Sincerely yours,
E. S. WILLS.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Asheboro.—Our Sunday school attendance has improved considerably since the "flu" situation has cleared up. Want to call the attention to the fact that attendance for the third Sunday of last month ran the highest since early last fall, of which we are very proud.

The congregations at the morning services for the last two Sundays have been extra good. Mr. Pritchard is doing some fine preaching which accounts for the large congregations. We are glad to see the people out again after being kept in on account of sickness.

At the seven o'clock hour last Sunday "An Evening of Music" was given by the choir which showed they had done some extra work. Also Mrs. Owsley gave a reading, "The Mansion," by Henry Van Dyke. The people enjoyed this service very much, and we hope they will give a number of these during the year.
EXIE CALICOTT, Reporter.

Grace Church.—Grace Auxiliary held a most interesting meeting at the church on Monday afternoon, with a record-breaking attendance. Mrs. D. S. Colettrane, the newly-elected president, had charge of the meeting. Mrs. Maude Rawlins led the devotional; several prayers were offered for the different phases of our work. Mrs. Fletcher Williams gave the chapter a talk on African conditions which was most instructive. Mrs. E. S. Wills sang "Teach Me, Lord, to Pray." Mrs. W. S. Hornaday gave a talk on China. Mrs. W. C. Ogburn told of our work in India, and Miss Eugenia Hunter of the growth of Bethel Home and its needs. There is much interest manifested in the attendance at the auxiliary meetings. Since there is a cash prize for the circle having the largest number present, each chairman is anxious to have all her circle attend. Mrs. F. R. Brittain, as chairman of Circle No. 1, was the winner of the prize. We congratulate Circle No. 1, and they'll be led a chase next month!

A social hour followed the splendid program. Much credit is due the program committee, Mrs. Maude Jones Rawlins, Mrs. J. M. Millikan, Mrs. J. Norman Wills.

MRS. J. M. STONE.

First Church, Charlotte.—It has been some time since your good readers have had any news from us at Charlotte. We have been so busy planning big things for 1929 that your wonderful paper has been forgotten.

Rev. N. M. Harrison has got settled, and is getting acclimated to his new work, after being out of the active ministry for two years. We felt the "sting" of losing our former pastor and his good wife, Rev. and Mrs. H. Freo Surratt, but we feel that God has called him to a larger field, and we are sure that God does all things for the best.

Plans have been drawn for our new parsonage; we hope to have all the details worked out, and Bro. Harrison in the new parsonage by early summer.

Our church attendance has held up well during the influenza epidemic; a number of our members were sick as long as two and three weeks. Bro. R. S. Garmon, who is acting as superintendent of the Sunday school, is well pleased with the showing that is being made in each of the departments.

Bro. Harrison was sick last Sunday, January 27th, and Bro. Foreman from Davidson College ably supplied in the morning service, and Bro. L. R. Pruett, a retired Baptist clergyman, supplied in the evening.

Miss Winifred Dellinger, superintendent of the Junior Department of the Sunday school, entertained her department on Tuesday night, January 29th. New songs were sung, and a delightful time was had.

W. D. HOOPER, Reporter.

Democrat Church.—We are still alive though we would like to do better. Our congregation is small at the best, and there is much sickness through this section. But our pastor always does his best whether the congregation be large or small. We hope to have a better Sunday school when spring comes. Although people will go to places of amusement in bad weather, they say it is too cold to go to church. May all have better success. Best wishes to the Herald.
REPORTER.

Pleasant Grove.—On Saturday, December 29, at 7:30, the Brotherhood met with Z. B. Morris. It was organized there two years ago. Bro. Walter Burton has been president for the two years. Bro. Ed Pain was elected president for the coming year and Bro. Walter Burton was elected vice-president, and Bro. J. E. Veach was elected secretary. They voted to look after the shrubbery in the cemetery, which was done the following Monday. They also voted to move the sign board from the old road leaving No. 10 to the new road leading to the church. Bro. Morris reported that he had arranged to have more topsoil put on the road from the parsonage to No. 10, also some more topsoil put on the new road leading up to the church, and that is being done this week. Then we were invited in the dining room to a nice turkey dinner with two candles burning on the cake. Then back to the living room where we had some good talks by some of the brethren. We all voted Bro. Morris's was a good place to meet. We were then dismissed with prayer by the pastor.
D. R. WILLIAMS.

(This report was delayed through inadvertence.—Ed.)

English Street.—The Sunday school superintendent is very much encouraged; we have 130 on our new year roll and in spite of rainy weather 127 members and some visitors were present last Sunday. The Sunday school is for the old as well as young and we wish that parents would come and bring their children instead of sending the children alone. Some are faithful to do this but those who don't and can, we hope the children will bring the parents next Sunday.

Our pastor, Rev. George Reynolds, continues to favor us with his splendid sermons each Sunday morning and night, and it was proved last Sunday that his messages have a drawing power, as there was a good attendance both morning and evening, people coming through the cold rain to hear him, and they were not disappointed.

I just wonder how much soul wealth we church members have? How many minutes do we spend praying for others? How much are we making folks glad that they come to church? Let us think on these things.

Tuesday night of this week the young folks are to have a singing at the church led by W. T. Kennedy with Miss Inez Reynolds at the piano. The pastor and board of stewards will also hold their monthly meeting at the church on the same night.

The Ladies' Aid met last week at the home of Mrs. R. F. Goolsby, with the president, Mrs. Goebel, presiding. She has given us all work to do and if you don't want a job when you go to the monthly meeting you'd better be prepared with a good excuse.

The Christian Endeavor at their January meeting elected new officers for the next six months. Much interest was manifested and everything seems to be moving along nicely. The girls are always on the job, but no boys do we have on roll. Tell us how we may impress it upon the minds of young men that they should be Christian Endeavorers too.

The Teachers' Training Class that has been organized and taught by our pastor each week with 19 members already enrolled is something we have long needed at this place, and we know if we will study and do our part we will learn many things that we should know about teaching Sunday school, for we have a splendid teacher to instruct us.

Last Sunday we were favored with a visit from Rev. and Mrs. Morton, who worked with us two years ago. We were glad to have them with us.

Next Sunday morning will be Young People's service at our church. The young folks will conduct the service themselves. Many times young people think they have no place as leaders in church work. But give them a chance and some encouragement and they can do many things for the Master.

The writer thought she would practice brevity this week but could not.

MRS. J. A. LEE, Reporter.

Enfield.—The Enfield Ladies' Aid Society held a very delightful meeting on January 28 at the home of Mrs. Stanley Whitaker. The meeting was opened by singing "Holy, Holy, Holy," followed by Scripture reading by Mrs. Stanley Whitaker and prayer by Mrs. Ralph Rives.

The visiting committee reported an unusually large number of visits made, and a number of trays carried to the sick during the recent influenza epidemic. Mrs. J. C. Auman and Mrs. Cecil Matthews were appointed to serve on the visiting committee during February.

Plans were made for serving Kiwanis suppers a few weeks later. A very gratifying report was read of a luncheon and sale of Japanese articles in December, from which over $50 was cleared. It was decided that the Ladies' Aid would take out two additional shares of building and loan.

A delicious salad course was served by Misses Virginia Whitaker, Dolly Dunn, Annette Beavans and Eula Stallings. While refreshments were being served, a number of red cards were distributed, and each member was asked to write a suggestion for improving the work of the Ladies' Aid. When these were collected and read by the hostess, there were found to be a number of practical suggestions for work, study, and recreation. The president, accordingly, appointed a program committee to work out a program embodying some of these suggestions. It was decided to have a program of mission study at the next meeting. REPORTER.

Harmony.—Our pastor, Rev. D. D. Broom, has filled two appointments for us. He has delivered three good and helpful sermons. He will preach again for us the fourth Sunday in February. We are very grateful to the conference for sending such a splendid pastor to us.

The Woman's Foreign Missions Society met at the home of Mrs. G. B. Taylor Friday evening. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Henry Balentine.

Our Sunday school work is progressing nicely.

GRACE KILLINGSWORTH, Reporter.

Draper.—Bro. Henry C. Betcher was called to meet his God on Monday, January 21. He went in peace. We extend to his wife and children our sympathy in their trouble, but we must look to God and say, Thy will be done. We realize that God must have a good reason for taking our loved ones. He is gone but his life was lived for Jesus.

Brother Totten brought us a good sermon at 11 o'clock January 27th. We are hoping to see our new church built in a few weeks. Sister Maggie Pate, who has been in the hospital for about two weeks, seems to be getting along fine. Our Sunday school is improving every Sunday. We'll have a better place for our church when we get our new church built. Bro. C. C. Adams conducted services Sunday night, January 27th.

LEWIS C. CRAIG, Reporter.

Orange Charge.—We put on "Young People's Day" program yesterday at Union Grove 11 a. m., and Elford 7 p. m. We used some local talent at each place. Rev. Lawrence Little was with us at both places. Each one appearing on the program did well. We were all delighted to have Bro. Little with us. He was at his best, and delivered inspiring messages. We were pleased to have Mrs. Little with us at the services at Elford.

We feel that the day yesterday was well spent by observing the Young People's Day program. Will put on this program at Hebron next Sunday morning.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

West Forsyth.—Services for the past two Sundays have been well attended, appointments at three of the churches having been met since our last report. Last Sunday we were at Baltimore in the morning and Stony Knoll in the afternoon. Since the influenza epidemic has about subsided, the congregations have been larger at all of our churches. After the service at Baltimore church last Sunday we were invited to the splendid, hospitable home of Brother Evans Doub, near the church. Bro. Doub is a member of the Friends church but is a regular attendant at our church and almost the same as one of the members. He is a brother of Rev. Wesley Doub, local preacher of the Baltimore church, and superintendent of the Sunday school.

The Lord's Supper was observed at Baltimore last Sunday morning, which completed the observance of the ordinance for the first quarter at all of the churches on the charge.

A large and attentive congregation met us at Stony Knoll in the afternoon. We were glad to have Brother Martin, a preacher of the Baptist denomination, worship with us and take part in the service.

Since our last report the people of the Pleasant Hill church have continued to remember the pastor and family with useful gifts for the dining table and "poultry yard" of the parsonage. An addition to our flock of poultry was made by Mrs. A. R. Long and Mrs. Junius Long. Other gifts were received from Mrs. Arthur Long, Mrs. S. C. Creech, Mrs. John Hunter, Mrs. Mary Long, and Mrs. Will Long. Our friends at Lexington, our former home, have also remembered us with appropriate gifts.

Our services next Sunday will be with Union Hill church at 11 a. m.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Elbaville, Mocksville Circuit.—The usual services were observed in our church Sunday morning. We have on roll in Sunday school 101 members, of which 77 were present, with $2.15 collection. In spite of the cold weather we feel that we are accomplishing some good. There has been an enormous increase from last year.

Our pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton, gave to us a wonderful message. His subject was, "Christ's Challenge to You." There has never been a more helpful sermon sent out from the pulpit of old Elbaville concerning youth. It seemed to have happened at the right time, because about two-thirds of those present were young people.

The Junior Philathea class has purchased a new oil stove, in order to heat its class room, since last report.

We have decided to contribute to the Children's Home our Sunday school and general collection both every first Sunday morning of the month.

Our pastor is striving to give to his sheep the best God has in store for him. He is loved and admired by all who have heard him. He helps raise the weak to higher ground. Brother Braxton has given us some inspiring and helpful sermons.

REPORTER.

Concord.—An attendance contest started yesterday between our church and First Church, Burlington, in the Sunday school. The schools will telephone each other every Sunday morning, giving the total present, that it may be announced before the schools dismiss. The report yesterday showed Concord had 299 present and Burlington 285.

The usual monthly communion service was held Sunday morning and a large number communed. The pastor, Mr. Hendry, preached an appropriate sermon on the subject, "The Burning Heart." The evening service was given over to the young people and a splendid program, "Youth in Service," was given.

The Ladies' Aid Society will meet tonight (Monday) with Mrs. D. A. McLaurin in their regular monthly meeting, with Mrs. T. F. Newton joint hostess.

On Tuesday night the Workers Council of the Sunday school will meet in an important meeting in the prayer meeting room.

The Wednesday evening service will give way for all to attend the city-wide meeting when Dr. Ira Landrith and Mr. W. Roy Breg will speak. The meeting was scheduled to be held in our church, but the Ministerial Association and Good Citizenship League are co-operating and the place has been changed to the high school auditorium, which seats many more people.

The Men's Brotherhood meeting and banquet will be held in the dining hall of the Sunday school building on Friday night. Team No. 2, D. A. McLaurin, leader, will have charge of the program. REPORTER.

South Lexington Church.—The work is progressing nicely. Our Sunday school is increasing both in number and interest. The young ladies' class, with Miss Lena Hedrick as teacher, is doing good work; also the young boys' class with Mr. Yates as teacher. The two classes have put on a contest. The side which gets the most new members in a period of time is going to entertain the losing side. Let's all get to work and do more for the Master. The C. E. Society is doing a great work also. May we ever encourage these young people to go forward in the work of the Master. The society gave a very interesting program Sunday night on "The Youth of Today." It seems our church has taken on new life. May the Lord help and direct in all we may undertake. Pray for us that we may do more for the Master. Let us all realize that the fields are white unto harvest, and may we help to gather in the grain and lead some one else to come into the harvest field. Yours in His service.

REPORTER.

Graham.—The Lord's Supper was observed last Sunday in the morning service, at which time our pastor, Rev. J. F. Minnis, gave to us a splendid message, and showed, by the aid of a magic lantern, pictures of the Garden of Gethsemane.

In the evening, instead of the usual services, the young people gave the Youth in Service program, which was well rendered, and much credit is due the committee which prepared it. We were also favored with violin music by Misses Lucile Jordan and Lavona Amick.

For the past four weeks Mr. Minnis has been showing pictures of the mission fields in the mid-week prayer meetings. Two more weeks of this study will be given.

The Sunday school is progressing nicely under the leadership of Mr. J. L. Amick. All officers and workers are requested to meet at the parsonage Thursday evening, February 7.

REPORTER.

Dulin's, Mocksville Charge.—We are having fine Sunday school attendance for the last few weeks. We had 49 present Sunday, 30 absent. C. E.'s are planning to meet next Sunday at 2 o'clock.

Our pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton, filled his appointment Sunday afternoon with a splendid and forceful sermon.

He gave the young people inspiration to strive for higher education and advised them to try to reach a higher goal, to give some honorable service to the world.

We had much large and more attentive congregation than usual.

We were indeed glad to have Mr. and Mrs. Summer to worship with us from Mocksville; also Miss Sadie Jones, from Union Chapel, on this charge.

Our revival meeting is to be held the third Sunday in June. Join us in prayer for it.

The greatest need of this community is a good revival.

The stewards met Saturday night with Mr. W. T. Foster. Business matters were straightened out. The stewards revised their list. They are ready for every member canvass.

We are very sorry for Mr. Kermit McCulloch, who had the misfortune of shooting his hand so badly Saturday that he was rushed to the city hospital in Winston-Salem and had it removed.

Best wishes to the Herald.

REPORTER.

Bethany, Randolph Charge.—As I haven't written since conference, I will now report. Bro. A. O. Lindley, who served us long and well, has gone to Alamance charge this year. We regret very much to give him up, and our best wishes go with him in his new field of labor.

Bro. Garner comes to us, and we welcome him into our midst. He brings to us very helpful and inspiring sermons.

Our Home Missionary Society held its regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. R. W. Pugh for January. The meeting was opened with Scripture reading by our president, Mrs. J. M. Aldridge, and prayer by Mrs. J. T. Brown. After a business hour, refreshments were served by Misses Gladys Pugh and Joyce Julian. For February our society meets with Mrs. W. P. Julian.

Our society and Sunday school made a quilt and donated it to the Children's Home as a Thanksgiving offering.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

MRS. C. E. JULIAN.

Kannapolis.—The first quarterly conference of this charge met at the tabernacle on Friday night of January 25th.

The encouraging and interested number who composed this conference endorsed each of the nine recommendations made by pastor.

The roof of the parsonage has been repaired, and the barn has been changed into an automobile house. Bro. D. A. McLaurin, of Concord, made these repairs, for which he has our many thanks.

On Sunday night of January 27th the president, Rev. S. W. Taylor, preached an inspiring sermon for us, and in addition to that made some very encouraging remarks. His visit was much enjoyed.

While there has been right much sickness among our people, we are glad to say there have been no deaths.

On yesterday, Sunday, February 3, nearly twice as many people under the age of 15 as there were above that age remained for the 11 o'clock service. These young people made the pastor glad by so doing.

It is good to have Mrs. Lowdermilk home again, and we are glad to say she is rapidly regaining her strength. In connection with this we thank all of the many friends who remembered us with Christmas and New Year cards, including those also who remembered us with nice gifts.

E. G. LOWDERMILK, Pastor.

Stallings, Mecklenburg Charge.—Our Sunday school is getting along fine. We had a good attendance February 3. Every one seems to take a great interest in Sunday school. Brother Hall delivered us an inspiring sermon, after which the Lord's Supper was observed. We are all pleased that we got our dear pastor back with us for another year. We have prayer meeting every Wednesday night at the homes at 7 p. m. We met with Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Stallings Wednesday night. Our Ladies' Aid Society will meet Thursday with Mrs. Carl Stallings. Great interest is being taken in our society. We have several new members. We are glad to know that Miss Etta Hall will be able to leave the hospital Tuesday, where she has been taking treatment. We ask all the Herald readers to pray for us.

GLADYS KISER, Reporter.

Mt. Pleasant, North Davidson Charge.—The year is our own to use as we choose. Shall we spend our time in building or destroying? The good and the evil are still before us as they have always been, so every man is free to decide whom he will serve during the coming year.

The Christmas holidays passed very quietly in our community. We did not have the usual Christmas program and tree this year. We should strive to do better next year and celebrate the birth of the Saviour in a fitting manner.

At the regular morning service the fourth Sunday our pastor gave us a very splendid sermon.

The young folks of the Sunday school will have charge of the Sunday school the second Sunday in February. Mr. Roy Hilton is superintendent.

Mrs. Ida Bodenheimer has been very sick, but is improving. Miss Liza Clinard has also been under the weather, but is progressing very nicely.

Two of our oldest members, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Shoaf, are very sick. We hope they will all soon be better.

RUTH PAYNE.

Cid, Denton Charge.—Our Sunday school has gone into winter quarters. It is missed very much.

Rev. E. A. Bingham filled his appointment at Cid Sunday evening. We were glad to have Mrs. Bingham and children worship with us Sunday.

Our people are having prayer meetings in the private homes on Sunday afternoons, which is a great help to the spiritual work.

We have been enjoying the good reports in the Herald, especially the Roberta report of last week of Rev. Robert Short's pounding.

Mr. Bob Surratt, son of Mr. Roby Surratt, went to the High Point Hospital last week with appendicitis.

Rev. C. O. Leonard's father was buried at Rich Fork Church Sunday at 11 o'clock. He was a good Christian man and he said he was ready for the summons.

REPORTER.

Bethesda, Halifax Circuit.—Mr. Spencer has been giving us good sermons and is always faithful and prompt. Where there is sickness and need of his help he is ready to give it. Our community has shared the common fate in the way of flu, though the folks at the parsonage have not, so far, been as hard hit as usual.

This church had a rare treat last month in the visit of Mr. Yoshio Ito, a Japanese ministerial student from Westminster, who came with Mr. Auman for Sunday night service. He made a very entertaining talk and sang a solo in his native language, after which he and Mr. Auman sang two duets, also in Japanese. The reporter and family, on account of illness, missed this treat.

Last second Sunday the church here subscribed the fifty dollars apportioned them for running expenses of the college. The greater part of this has been turned in, and the rest will be.

The little band of workers here is trying to keep up the activities of the church, and the Ladies' Aid meets monthly. The membership and attendance are small, but they are hoping to accomplish something.

The Sunday school has received several new members lately from a new family in the neighborhood.

Our superintendent, Mr. Richard Taylor, is usually at his post, though for the past two Sundays he has been kept away by the serious illness of his mother. Our efficient secretary, Frank Taylor, Jr., has recently returned to school at the University, and Mr. J. T. Aycock has been elected to succeed him.

Notwithstanding our timely hint, the church put in the same old reporter again. Perhaps others better qualified would not serve. (We were not present).

REPORTER.

State Street.—Sunday school has been made more interesting the last few Sunday mornings by a change in the program of opening exercise. The different classes have been conducting this part of the service, led by the respective teachers and the change from the regular routine is very pleasing.

Last Sunday night the service was highly interesting and enjoyable, being a fine program given by the young people. All who took part deserve much credit for the efficient way the program was carried out. One pleasing feature was a solo beautifully sung by Mrs. D. C. Potts.

Our pastor is just recovering from a relapse of "flu," but gave us a fine sermon Sunday morning and a short address at the evening hour.

Miss Mary Lou Boggs, of Statesville, who has accepted a position here as stenographer, is living at the parsonage with Mr. and Mrs. Bethea and makes a splendid addition to all departments of the church work. She is leader of the Junior C. E. Society and is doing good work.

The Missionary Society will meet at the parsonage Thursday afternoon of this week.

The C. E. Society is planning a special service Wednesday night, followed by a social hour. The City C. E. Union meets Friday night at the First Presbyterian Church.

REPORTER.

First Church, Winston-Salem.—The time has come, the walrus said, to talk of many things. Do you think our ancestors would be pleased with our church if they could see it as it is today? I think it would take them a long time to get reconciled to the important part the young people play in the churches today.

Last Sunday evening we held our first young people's service. Mr. Paul Minish was the leader, with only young people on the program. Bro. Surratt said that he was as young as anyone taking part; that shows how important youth is to the church. If you have a hard time getting young people interested in the church, put them to work, give them something to do, something hard, and then back them up. I am speaking from a young person's viewpoint. The older people may want us to sit back with folded hands, but that would not last long.

Since we reorganized our Christian Endeavor Society it has taken on new life and is progressing rapidly. At our January business meeting there were 19 present. Mr. Koontz, vice-president of the state organization, was present and gave us several new suggestions to work on.

The series of talks on the ladder of Christian graces has been completed. This was a very interesting series and I wish more people could have heard them.

The Young People's Missionary Society held their meeting last week at the home of Miss Pauline Branson. A good number was present and a very interesting meeting was reported. The society had as its guests Rev. and Mrs. Surratt, who are always more than welcome at any young people's meeting.

The Ladies' Aid Society held its regular meeting Tuesday afternoon at the parsonage with Mrs. Surratt.

We are still awake and moving, although the cold weather has threatened to make some of us crawl back in our shell for the remainder of the winter, but I think we can tough it out with a little more effort.

EVELYN SMOTHERS.

Glen Raven.—The attendance at all services last Sunday was fine. In Sunday school 109 were present, this being the highest record so far this year.

The Ladies' Aid Society will meet at the parsonage Monday night, February 11, for the regular transaction of business pertaining to the society. At the same time and place the stewards and pastor will have a meeting to discuss plans and to lay a plan for their line of work.

The stewards of Fairview church came over in a body a few nights ago seeking information that will aid greatly in raising the finances.

The following persons have our thanks for gifts to the parson's family: Mr. C. C. Garrison, Mr. Joe Troxler, Mrs. E. H. Thompson, Mrs. T. W. Cheek. Wm. H. NEESE.

Burlington, Rt. 4.

Rehoboth.—Quite a number of members from Rehoboth Sunday school attended the young people's meeting at Mount Hermon church Sunday evening. A very interesting program was given by the members of the various churches on the circuit. J. B. White, superintendent of Rehoboth, opened the meeting. Rev. R. L. Hetheox made a very interesting talk. Mr. Herbert Swain on "The Youth of Today," Mr. Walter Hetheox, scripture reading; Miss Matilde Alexander, a splendid talk on "The Youth of Today and Yesterday;" Mrs. Bessie White, Misses Louise Hatfield and Edna Hetheox, music; closed by a piano solo by Miss Louise Hatfield, and offering for the young people's work. REPORTER.

Mixpah, Haw River Charge.—We are pleased with our new pastor, Rev. J. L. Trollinger. He has filled several appointments and made good impressions on all who have heard him.

On last Sunday a special service was held for the young people. The service was very impressive and enjoyed by all who heard it.

The subject for the third Sunday afternoon is "How I Know I'm Backsliding."

Our church has sustained a great loss in the passing of Mrs. R. L. Stanly. She was among our best and will be greatly missed.

Our revival meeting will begin Monday night after the fifth Sunday in March. Let's hope and pray that this may be a great revival.
RUTH HILL, Reporter.

Corinth, Littleton Charge.—Rev. I. C. Smith filled his appointment Sunday at 11 o'clock.

We hope to put on a special C. E. program next Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock, and hope to have a goodly number present. Our society has recently put a new table and rug in the church and hope to purchase some books soon.
DAISIE LEE PORTER,
Secretary and Reporter.

Level Cross, Randleman Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. T. A. Williams, on the fourth Sunday brought us a good sermon.

On January 19 at 8 o'clock a. m., one of our members was called by death, Mr. James M. Rich. He is survived by his wife and two small daughters, Mary Frances and Dortha Mack, and his mother and one brother, all of Level Cross. He was buried there the following day. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. T. A. Williams.

On January 31 Mr. Roddy Fields, of the M. E. Church at Bethlehem, died at Randleman at his daughter's, Mrs. Tom Swain's, and was buried at Level Cross the first day of this month. MRS. T. E. MARLEY, Reporter.

West End, Greensboro.—Perhaps some of the Herald readers think West End members are asleep because we don't blow our horn every week, but some of us have been taught that it was best to be seen and not heard so much. Therefore, we have been working quietly.

Quite a few of our members have been sick, but the flu epidemic is improving and our attendance is better. Sunday, February 3rd, was Pay-Up Sunday. We did not reach the top, but the top is not reached by one single bound; so we will try again.

Monday, February 4th, the Ladies' Aid Society met at the parsonage and held a very interesting meeting and had a good report from the treasurer.

Our ladies' societies have not consolidated with their work yet. We had not thought very much about it until Dr. Williams explained how the meetings should be conducted, and all agreed that we should do that which would be best for the church and have most members interested.

Now if this doesn't get in the editor's wastebasket you may hear the sound of our horn again. Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.
REPORTER.

High Point.—The High Point Township Sunday School Institute was a great success. Nearly every Sunday school in the township was represented. Instructors were Dr. Arlo A. Brown, president of the University of Chattanooga, Tennessee; Misses Daisy Magee and Flora Davis, of Raleigh, and Mr. Edgar Hartley, general secretary of the local Y. M. C. A.

At the 11 o'clock service Sunday morning a sweet and impressive communion service was held. So many young people came forward and renewed their vows to the Lord, and it was an impressive and touching scene when a large number from the Junior church completely filled the altar rail. At this service a special collection was taken for the needy of the city.

At 7:30 p. m. an inspiring service was presented by the young people, over which Miss Claire Douglas presided. Prof. C. R. Hinshaw delivered an address on "Youth's Opportunity for Service in the Church of Today," Mr. Ralph Vance talked about "Youth in Training for Service in the Church of Tomorrow," and the concluding address was delivered by Rev. E. L. Ballard.

At the C. E. meeting Monday evening Mr. C. E. Bulla led the discussion "The Challenge of Christ to Youth of the World." A postponed session of the workers' council of the Sunday school was held later.

The minister is giving a series of thoughtful and helpful talks on Prayer every Wednesday evening, which are greatly enjoyed by those who attend, and that number is growing every week.

Thursday evening the Brotherhood will meet and enjoy a special program and supper served by one of the groups of ladies, of which Mrs. Paul S. Kennett is chairman.

We were much gratified to receive into membership Miss Olive Thomas, who comes to us from Mrs. Hill Baptist church.

Work on the new parsonage is progressing nicely. It is located on a beautiful wooded knoll on Colonial Drive. The house will be of brick veneer, containing eight rooms, and will be modern and convenient.

During the month of February the minister will present a series of sermons on "Power." Next Sunday's subject will be "The Power of Thought," and "The Power of Will."

Last Friday afternoon Mrs. R. R. Blackburn, nee Miss Mary Ogburn, of Summerfield, entertained most delightfully at her home on Montlieu Avenue in honor of her brother's bride, Mrs. Richard Ogburn, who will be pleasantly remember by former Western Maryland College students as Miss Dorothy Holland, of Maryland.

The annual thank-offering service of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society will be held on the evening of February 17th. Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, as president, and Mrs. S. S. Coe, as chairman of the committee, are making plans for an attractive program, and are expecting a generous response to our plea for a liberal offering.

Mrs. D. A. Neese is steadily improving at High Point Hospital, and will go home the latter part of this week.

Draper.—Bro. J. H. Craig on January 30 got badly burned about the head and face. There is not much hope for him, we think, but we believe he is ready to meet God in peace.

Rev. Mr. Morgan preached for us February 3rd. We were glad to have him with us.

Our plans for our new church are going forward and with the help of God we will have a place where we hope we can reach out and get more people to come to Sunday school and preaching.

LEWIS C. CRAIG, Reporter.

English Street.—Our church is moving along very well and the future, we think, is encouraging. When we think of the large unchurched territory in this part of the city and of the start we already have, we see nothing that should keep us from going forward. The plan now is to sell our present property, pay all old debts, and erect a new modern church where we will be away from the noisy street and railroad. All, so far as we know, are willing to do this. The sale will be the latter part of March.

Mrs. J. A. Lee and children were absent from church Sunday on account of sickness. Mrs. Lee is teacher of a large class of girls and is a very proficient and successful teacher. We hope they will soon be at their usual places in church and Sunday school.

Miss Louis Swann has had an operation recently for the removal of tonsils and adenoids. She is getting along nicely.

Last Sunday night, February 3, we put on our young people's program, which was rendered very satisfactorily. The following young ladies took part: Misses Dallas Loflin, Iris Caudle, Tressie Caudle, Myrtle Cafes, Kathleen Embler and Dorothy Michael. These young ladies rendered their parts well. The collection was small but still it represents an interest. We are highly pleased with the interest our young people, especially the girls, take in our church work.

At the close of the service Sunday night Bro. J. A. Robbins seemed to keep his eye on the pastor and finally told him not to leave the church until he saw him in a certain Sunday school room. Of course we were glad to comply with his request, having no idea what he wanted. After nearly all the folks had gone we followed Bro. Robbins and soon found out the reason for his detaining us. On one of the benches we found a great supply of choice eatables, pair ladies' hose, and some cash from Bro. Livingood. We have never received a pounding we more greatly appreciated than this one. We thank all who took part, and especially Mrs. Swann, who conceived the idea and took the lead. We also want to thank Mr. and Mrs. Stone for gifts several weeks ago, and Bro. Boswell for all he has given us from his store. This pastor feels that he has never served a congregation that seemed more appreciative. If all churches would come as near doing to the limit of their ability as those who are now working to carry forward the Lord's work at English Street we believe this would be a great year for Christ and His church. Realizing the inability of the church to pay their pastor what is actually needed for living expenses, one of our S. S. teachers began to think if she and her class could not do something to help along this line. In about two weeks she handed the treasurer of our board of stewards a ten-dollar bill to be applied on pastor's salary. If you want to know how they did it, see or write Mrs. H. L. Swann, High Point, N. C. It is wonderful to see how the Lord can open the way and help those who will allow Him to do so. Paul says in his letter to the Philippians: "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." How many of us really believe it?

GEO. L. REYNOLDS.

—Our types last week made Rev. D. R. Williams say that D. R. Williams made an interesting talk. He did not say that. He said D. K. Williams, but the printer mistook the K for R. We beg pardon. Bro. Williams' reputation for modesty is so well established that we do not believe we did him much harm, but for our own reputation for correctness we wish we had not done it.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

PLANS FOR ANNUAL THANK-OFFERING SERVICE FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS

Plan A—Sunday Morning Thank-Offeing Service

Worship Service:

Prelude.

Hymn, "Holy, Holy, Holy," No. 1, Church Hymnal).

Invocation.

Hymn, "When Morning," (No. 29, Church Hymnal).

Responsive Reading, Selection 44, Page 60, Church Hymnal.

Prayer.

Scripture Reading, Psalm 16:1-19.

Hymn, "Ye Servants of God," (No. 11, Church Hymnal).

Missionary Sermon by Pastor.

"Our Thank-Offering: For What It Is Used," talk by one of the women.

"Why Should We Give a Thank-Offering?" talk by one of the women.

Thank-Offering: Suggestions for Receiving It.

1. If organized by circles, let each circle chairman come forward and report the amount from her circle, the offering having been collected previously.

2. Have a yard square of muslin stretched in the front of the church; call it the missionary quilt. Make an appeal for dollar bills and as the bills are brought, pin them on the muslin. The goal will be to cover the cloth with dollar bills.

3. As quiet music is played, let each person come down the aisle and lay his gift on the altar, which has been made ready before the service.

4. The regular way of receiving an offering, passing the offering plates reverently.

NOTE: Material for the two talks by women may be received from Miss Pearl McCulloch, Greensboro, N. C., and may be reviewed orally or read during the service.

Plan B—Sunday Evening Thank-Offering Service

Worship Service:

Prelude.

Hymn, "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow."

Invocation.

Invocation.

Hymn, "Come, Thou Almighty King," (No. 15, Church Hymnal).

Responsive Reading, Selection 44, Page 60, Church Hymnal.

Hymn, "Ye Servants of God," (No. 11, Church Hymnal).

Scripture Reading, 116th Psalm.

Evening Prayer.

Missionary Sermon by Pastor.

Thank-Offering Received: Suggestions for Receiving It:

1. A table on which has been placed a number of different size candles, all in white, is placed on platform. A white sheet may be used to cover table, which will represent altar. Either pastor or a representative from woman's society will make a simple appeal for those present to make a thank-offering. The women ushers may bring the offerings to the front. As the money is brought, candles are lighted; $10 will light the largest candles; $5 the next size, and $1 the small candles. Offering plates may be passed to receive the rest of the offering.

Offering Prayer.

2. The candles will be used as in suggestion 1, but each person making an offering may come down and light his own candle.

NOTE: Suggestion made under Plan A may be used as substitute for the candle-light suggestion. The two talks suggested in Plan A may be used in Plan B if desired.

Plan C—Sunday Evening Thank-Offering Service With a Short Dramatic Program

Worship Service: Follow worship suggestions under Plan B.

"Our Thank-Offering: For What It Is Used," brief talk. (See Note, Plan A).

Short pageant or drama. One or two of the following may be used:

1. "When Hearts Are Thankful," price five cents, Woman's American Baptist Mission Society, Publication Department, 450 East 30th Street, Chicago. This is a simple drama, three characters, all of whom are women; will take about ten minutes to give it.

2. "Tithes and Offerings," five cents, from Literature Headquarters, Woman's Missionary Society of the United Lutheran Church in America, 723 Muhlenberg Building, 1228 Spruce Street, Philadelphia, Pa. This is also a simple drama, six characters, three women, two girls, one man. Will take about ten minutes to give it. The theme is "Tithes and Offerings Instead of Bazaars and Suppers."

3. "Count Your Blessings," a monologue. Two cents a copy from same address as "Tithes and Offerings."

4. "Two Boxes," five cents per copy from same address as "Tithes and Offerings." Five character, mothers, daughter, and three smaller children. It is mostly made up of dialogue between mother and daughter. Theme, modern club-woman is taught spirit of thanksgiving.

Thank-Offering. (Follow one of the suggestions made in Plans A and B).

Plan D—Sunday Evening Thank-Offering Service With a Heavier Pageant or Drama

Worship Service. (This should be planned to be in keeping with pageant or drama chosen).

Pageant or Drama. Choose one of the following:

1. "The Two Masters." Ten cents per copy, from same address as "When Hearts Are Thankful" in Plan C. Eight characters, four women, and four girls; little costuming. Takes about 45 minutes to give it. It is most impressive. Janet, born in China, is sent to America to be educated. For a while she forgets her call to go back to China; but in the last act when a lecturer repudiates missionary work in China, she once again hears the call; here, too, her aunt realizes that she has been trying to serve two masters, God and mammon. Very easily given.

2. "The Dream That Came True" is a pageant-drama, 40 characters. Price 15 cents from Presbyterian Board of Publication, Philadelphia, Pa. The drama features are woven into a stewardship play. In the pageant the Spirit of Stewardship reveals to a prosperous business man a message in stewardship by presenting to him a series of tableaux, pantomimes and dialogues taken from the Bible stories.

3. "Broken China." This is also a pageant-drama of 25 characters. Chinese setting; 15 cents from Baptist Board of Education, Department of Missionary Education, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Very spectacular.

4. "Unto One of the Least of These." Six characters, five women and one man. Eldridge Publishing Co., Franklin, Ohio. Requires about 45 minutes to give it.

Thank-Offering. Any of the suggestions offered under Plans A and B may be used for receiving the offering.

PROGRAM FOR DAY OF PRAYER

All those desiring programs for the Day of Prayer may secure them by writing Miss Pearl McCulloch, 1011 Martin Street, Greensboro, N. C.

It was learned at the last executive meeting of the missionary societies that the services of Miss Mildred Miskimen, our returned missionary from India, will be available for a part if not all of the month of March, and a motion carried that she be asked to visit the North Carolina Branch. Auxiliaries wishing to use Miss Miskimen are requested to get in touch with Mrs. C. W. Bates, Box 1501, Asheboro Street, Greensboro, N. C., and it is hoped that a large number of our people over the state will have the privilege of hearing Miss Miskimen give first-hand information concerning our missionary work in India.

—Dr. Clarence Cook Little has resigned the presidency of the University of Michigan and his resignation has been accepted unanimously by the board of regents of the university. He had previously been president of the University of Maine.

—Dr. S. Parkes Cadman has been invited to deliver the sermon at the opening of the League of Nations conference at Geneva on August 25.

—The U. S. Senate has adopted the Cruiser bill by a vote of 68 to 12. The date set for completion of building was 1931. President Coolidge recommended that the date be left indefinite, thinking that some of the ships might be found unnecessary, but his recommendation was not accepted.

Mrs. Rosa Chambliss, mother of Rev. M. P. Chambliss, has been taken to a hospital in Richmond for an operation.

—Rev. E. C. Cowan, of Triplet, Va., reports considerable damage from the freezing of auto radiators.

Gifts of Food and Other Supplies

The Philathea class, Siler City church, two pair of splendid woollen blankets and one towel.

Rhodes Auxiliary, W. M. S., Rhodes, Iowa, one quilt.

Union Chapel, Mocksville charge, one piece of pork about 12 pounds, one package of corn flakes, one three-pound package of Quaker Oats, two half-gallon cans of corn, one half-gallon can of peaches, and fifteen pounds of sugar.

We extend a hearty thank you for these gifts as well as for the contributions of money reported herewith.

Increase in Family

Our family has materially increased during the last two weeks. We have received four children from Mebane, Walter, James, Claude and Alice Shanklin. Have also received three boys from Asheboro, Millard, Hebron and Elvan Coble. And two more are expected this week. That makes nine more to be fed and clothed and cared for. These are bright, interesting children and are as much yours as they are ours, except that we have the responsibility and the joy of caring for them personally and you don't. But you have the responsibility and joy of furnishing the money with which to care for them.

Our Supplies

Those who were kind enough to give us chickens in the fall will be glad to know that we are now getting about four dozen eggs per day, and will soon be getting twice that number. We have our own pork. Our milk supply is limited just now, and we are having to buy all the butter we use. Will soon have an abundance of milk. But all other supplies must be bought.

Our Funds

We have paid all back bills with your help, and the help of our banker, to the extent of $1,800. Right now we are perilously near the end of our bank account. By the time you read this it will be the first of February, and the January bills will be due. Many of you take your offerings for the Home on the first Sunday in each month. Will you please stress the need this time and ask your folks to do their best for us, and send to us at once.

Clothing for Children

Mrs. F. W. Paschall and three of her girls from Asheville came to see us one evening last week and took Margaret Crickmore to clothe. They will enjoy this so much and Margaret is happy over it.

Miss Juanita Crowder, from Calvary church, dropped in to see about her Sunday school class taking one of our girls and we have suggested to them the name of one just about the same age of Margaret. We hope to report next week that they have taken her. Individuals or Sunday school classes or Christian Endeavor societies can so easily do this. It helps the Home, blesses you, and always makes a child happy.

We have some fine boys and girls just waiting to be adopted. Who will be the next? Five dollars per month clothes one, and ten dollars per month feeds and clothes one.

That Goal

Please get your Sunday school and church, and perhaps your Philathea and Baraca classes, to set definite goals for each month for the Home.

Last Sunday the Baraca class, First Church, High Point, voted to continue its gift of $25.00 per month to the Home. Asheboro has just sent in her monthly offering of $35.00. Concord sends $25.00 per month. Others send stated amounts. Let others still fall in line. Thank you and God bless you.

Faithfully yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

Other Gifts

Mr. W. M. Sexton, Denton, one book for the library, "Three Boy Scouts in Africa." This is a very acceptable gift, for a number of new books or well-preserved second-hand books are needed. A number of the ragged books we have must be scrapped because we hope to teach our children to love books, and no one loves a ragged book. This one by Bro. Sexton is a brand new book, and a fine one for our children to read.

We are sorry our report did not reach the editor in time for last week's Herald, for we wanted you to read our notes before taking your first Sunday offering for the Home.

A letter goes this week to each pastor and to each Sunday school superintendent explaining our financial condition here. We believe they will faithfully present this to our Sunday schools, and when our Sunday school people know our needs they will respond.

We now have an even 80 children here to feed and clothe, for we went to Greensboro Saturday afternoon and brought back with us Harley and Ernest Ingold. That completely fills our boys' dormitory for the present.

Faithfully yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

THE CHURCH A FAILURE

A bunch of city bums,
Their feet upon the rail;
A bar-man goes and comes
With brandy, gin, and ale.

They drink and drink and drink
And grow most wondrous wise;
They think that what they think
Is truth without disguise.

They talk and talk and talk—
They have so much to say.
They neither balk nor walk,
They fairly run away.

No theme's too low or high,
Too sacred or profane.
They curse, they swear, they lie,
They take God's name in vain.

They choose themselves a name,
"The Seven Wisest Men."
On further in the game
They'll change their name to Ten.

Mere myths are heaven and hell;
They give no thought to these:
Expect on earth to dwell
As long as they "d— please."

With dreadful wrath they turn
Against the Christian church:
They would its buildings burn,
Its name would they besmirch.

"The shameless sham, the church,
With all its show and fuss!
If through its ranks you search,
Yoh'll find no men like us."

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Mrs. D. D. Hamill

Roxie Lee Bellamy, born August 20, 1890, died January 11, 1929. When only a little girl she professed faith in Christ and united with the Eden Methodist Protestant church, to which she remained loyal until her death. When she was seventeen years of age she was married to D. D. Hamill. To this union were born three children. She is survived by her husband and three children, Mrs. S. G. Willey, Norfolk, Va.; Lillian and Sam Clinton Hamill, of Enfield, N. C.; her mother, two brothers and six sisters and a host of relatives and friends.

All that doctors, nurse and loving hands could do was done to stay the hand of death but God saw fit to take her. She was in bad health for several months and she bore her sufferings with patience. On her twenty-first wedding anniversary she was released from a body of pain and carried to that home beyond the skies where the weary find rest and suffering is no more. In the beauty of her spirit and in her good deeds she will live in the hearts of those who knew her best and loved her most.

Her funeral was conducted at her home by her pastor, Rev. C. L. Spencer, and her body was laid to rest in the Eden cemetery beneath a large mound of flowers to await the resurrection morn.

Kennedy

Mrs. Annie L. Kennedy, who died at her home in the Oakhill section on December 23, was buried on December 24 at Pleasant Grove M. P. church. The funeral was conducted by her pastor, assisted by Rev. G. L. Reynolds and Rev. Edward Suits. Mrs. Kennedy died as the result of influenza followed by heart complications. She had been ill for the past two months. She was the wife of J. Maynard Kennedy, who survives her, and was the mother of 14 children, nine of whom survive. Mrs. Kennedy was born in Forsyth county in 1887 and at the time of her death was 41 years of age.

D. R. WILLIAMS.

Kennedy

Alvin Clayton Kennedy, three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Alvin Kennedy, died on the evening of the 20th of December. Death was due to pneumonia. The child was born in Davidson county August 11, 1928. Surviving are the parents, two brothers and six sisters. Funeral services were conducted on the morning of the 21st at 10 o'clock at Pleasant Grove M. P. church by the pastor, assisted by Rev. G. L. Reynolds.

D. R. WILLIAMS.

Canipe

Thomas Orange Canipe died January 15, 1929, age 24 years, 11 months, 25 days. He was married to Minnie Hoyle in August, 1925; to this union were born two children. The widow, two children, father, mother, three brothers and one sister survive.

Bro. Canipe was converted and joined the church at Oak Grove at the age of 15 years, and later moved his membership to Kistler's church, where he remained a member until death. He was a highly respected young man and one who will be missed in his church and community. The funeral was held by the writer on January 17 at Oak Grove church at 11 o'clock, and burial took place in the church cemetery. May the Heavenly Father comfort the grief-stricken family and may they have grace to sustain them in this hour of gloom and sorrow.

C. E. RIDGE.

Kestler

Joseph J. Kestler died January 21, 1929, aged 87 years, 5 months, 4 days. He leaves behind two sons, one daughter, four grandchildren and a large circle of friends. His wife preceded him in death about one year ago.

Bro. Kestler was a highly respected citizen and a consecrated Christian. He was faithful to his church and always ready to do his part in carrying out the church program. His funeral was held at Pleasant Hill M. P. church in January 22, at 2 p. m., by the writer, assisted by Bro. E. M. Ivester, and the body was buried in the church cemetery beneath a mound of beautiful flowers.

In the passing of Bro. Kestler the community has lost a good neighbor, Pleasant Hill church has lost one of its faithful members, and Cleveland circuit has lost the oldest church member on the charge. The bereaved ones have our sympathy.

C. E. RIDGE.

Clifton

Pennie Woodley died January 26, 1929, aged 65 years, 3 months and 18 days. She was married to R. L. Clifton at the age of 42. Mrs. Clifton was a Christian from childhood. She joined the church first in what was known as the Holy Grove school house. After some time old Beulah church was built largely through her efforts. This church was afterwards moved, and was called Woodley's Chapel, which is still a part of Creswell charge. In this church she spent most of her life in unselfish service. Here she was the means of bringing her father, brother and sister, and afterwards her husband, into the kingdom.

Her church was always dear to her, and she always had something for her pastor and his family. But the most impressive thing about her life was her love for Jesus.

She leaves one brother, W. H. Woodley, and one sister, Mrs. Alexander Davenport. Her husband died August 12, 1928.

Funeral services were held at the home of her sister on January 27, conducted by her pastor, and her body was laid to rest beside that of her husband at the old home place.

R. L. HETHCOX.

Berrier

Mrs. Julia R. Berrier died December 28, 1928, aged 51 years, 2 months and 5 days. She was married to Mr. D. T. Berrier. She was buried at Union Grove M. P. church, of which she was a member.

Her pastor, Rev. P. L. Kinnamon, preached her funeral, assisted by Rev. Geo. L. Curry and Rev. R. C. Stubbins.

By her beautiful testimony she was ready to meet God and we feel assured that she is at rest.

There are left to mourn her departure the husband, eight children and three grandchildren and a host of relatives and friends.

We have balanced our books for the first quarter, and shall publish an itemized report of all receipts and disbursements as soon as we can. In the meantime keep the money rolling into the treasury.

In order to keep some of our churches and pastors from embarrassment, if not from actual need, it was necessary for some of our boards to borrow money. For example, the Board of Church Extension was forced to borrow a little money in order to keep the work going on some of our charges. This money must be paid; but it can't be done unless the receipts for A. C. B. are materially increased. So far your treasurer has not received enough on this budget to meet our president's salary, and nothing for these other urgent demands.

EASTER SERVICE NOW READY

A beautiful Easter service, prepared by the Board of Missions, is now ready for distribution among all the churches and Sunday schools of the Methodist Protestant Church to be used on Easter Sunday. With them is furnished self-denial offering envelopes for use during Passion Week by all of our people; also a large supply of decision cards to be used during Lent in the work of soul-winning to Christ and to church membership.

All of these supplies are furnished free. Please send in your orders at once. Let us have the best Easter services this year and the largest Easter offering for Missions in the history of our denomination.

—Rev. C. W. Bates has been given another secretaryship, that of Greensboro Ministerial Union. Dr. Spahr also has an office as a member of the committee on Interracial Relations, while Bros. Tamblin and Williams are members of the committee on Interdenominational Activities.

—Calvary C. E.'s had a banquet Tuesday night, to which they invited some prospective members. There were addresses by Rev. Mr. Hinkle, Friend, Mr. Rawlings, State C. E. President, by Pastor Bates and Miss Margaret Causey. A pleasant evening was enjoyed and we trust the cause of Christian Endeavor promoted. Bro. Floyd Reynolds, president of the Calvary Society, presided. All present were decorated with paper caps.

—Professor William J. Thompson, of Drew University, will occupy the pulpit of Wesley Methodist Episcopal Church, Worcester, on Sunday morning, March 10. Dr. Thompson is a former pastor of the old Grace Church, Worcester, and also of the Newtonville Church.

—Leon Trotzky of Russian fame is reported missing. He has been reported dead, but has been found to be very much alive. It need not surprise us to learn that he is intensely present somewhere.

VOLUME XXXV

GREENSBORO, N. C., FEBRUARY 14, 1929

NUMBER 15

"Who Do Men Say I Am?"

John the Baptist:

"Behold, behold the Lamb of God!"
And rapt in thought the prophet stood
With eyes upon that fateful day
The Lamb should bear our sins away.

Nicodemus:

"Thou art a teacher come from God!"
Not all the signs of Moses' rod
Were greater proof of God's command
Than are the works of thy own hand.

Herod Antipas:

"Thou art the Baptist whom I slew!"
Confessing grief and murder too,
With keen remorse's dreadful pangs
Like terrible bite of serpent's fangs.

Others:

"Thou art Elias with flaming soul,
Abruptly come like days of old,
Denouncing wrong with words of doom
And causing kings to fret and fume."

Others still:

"Thou art Jeremiah, the weeping seer,
Who saw the evils far and near
And wept because he could not heal
The troubles of the commonweal."

Peter:

"Thou art the Christ, the Son of God,"
With deep conviction he avowed.
The highest, deepest, truest thought—
No truer view need e'er be sought!

Why Peter Succeeded Where Jesus Failed

Peter addressed himself on the Day of Pentecost to the men of Judea and all that dwelt in Jerusalem, and three thousand of them were converted. Jesus had repeatedly spoken in the Temple to the same people with the result that a few became disciples but the many became enemies. What is the explanation of this remarkable fact? Was Peter a better speaker than Jesus? We have no reason to believe that he was in an elocutionary sense, and certainly Peter's sermon does not compare in literary style or in spiritual quality with the recorded discourses of Jesus. We must look further to find the explanation.

Jesus predicted that His disciples would do greater works than He had done and intimated the reason. They were just on the verge of a new era, a new dispensation of grace, a new outburst of divine power upon the consciousness of men. Jesus preached to dead-souled men. His disciples would preach to spiritually quickened men, men convinced by the Holy Spirit of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment.

When the Holy Spirit came on the Day of Pentecost to empower the disciples to speak, He must have come also to prepare the minds and hearts of the multitude to hear. Jesus labored alone. Peter had the mighty witness of the Spirit to impress the truth with irresistible power upon the souls that heard. The effect of Peter's preaching was due most largely to the power of the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit helps both those who speak and those who hear.

Then also Peter was greatly helped by a mighty fact that came too late to strengthen Jesus' preaching but just in time to make Peter's preaching most effective: the fact of Jesus' resurrection. This great fact could not be hid or done away by denial. It was a fact of stupendous import, and both Peter and many who heard him speak were aware of both the fact and its importance. Peter had the advantage of position such as Jesus did not have.

Another Papal State

In former times the Pope of Rome ruled over a number of European states, known as papal states. Political upheavals resulted in the loss of this power by the Pope. In 1870 came the complete collapse of the Pope's temporal power. Of course there was protest against the snatching of power from the Pope, and he has called himself a prisoner in the Vatican. But the world has not greatly pitied him, as he was only a voluntary prisoner, free to go and come as he chose. Recently, however, for diplomatic reasons the Italian government has conceded to the Pope the temporal rule of a little territory surrounding the Vatican. This will be called the Vatican State or the Vatican City, and will be an independent state ruled by the Pope or at least by the Roman Catholic Church. The situation affords quite a contrast with that which existed when the Pope was recognized as temporal ruler of almost all Europe.

—There are men who would cut down the trees to save the forest.

—Rev. Edw. Suits received three members into Lebanon Church last Sunday, making eight received since Conference.

—The Church of Latter Day Saints maintains a radio broadcasting station near Kansas City. They report nearly a half million members in the United States.

—If the same amount of zeal employed in propagating religious error were used in behalf of the spread of truth, would not the Christian church grow faster?

—There is a religious denomination called "Apostolic Overcoming Holy Church of God." It has about a thousand members of the African race. It was first reported in 1926. Its title has been changed from Ethiopian to Apostolic.

CHURCH UNION

I am not opposed to Christian unity—let brotherly love continue. But I am opposed to the profitless discussion of organic church union. Those who are acquainted with the history of the M. P. Church know how greatly it has suffered from the agitation of this question. Nearly all of the Virginia Conference was lost to the church because of it; likewise that of Tennessee, of South Carolina, of Georgia, of Texas, and other conferences of the southwest.

I well remember the meetings of the commissioners appointed to consider the union of our church with the U. B. and the Congregational churches, and later of the M. E. Church and the M. E. Church, South. I also recall that union failed in all the particulars, not because the M. P. Church was unwilling to join any form of church union that conserved her interests and allowed her to maintain her denominational self-respect, but because the other denominations did not meet the conditions.

It was a source of genuine pleasure to every loyal member of the Methodist Protestant Church that our own Doctor Lewis so eloquently presented the organic union of all Methodism that the members of the General Conference of M. E. Church assembled rose to their feet in recognition of the sanity of the appeal, and notwithstanding the fact that the members of the General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, did the same thing a year later, no union of the churches followed. Yet during all these years of the discussion of church union our denomination lost members and morale. But during the eight years when Doctor Lewis was president of the General Conference and there was no discussion of church union our church really reported a net gain in membership.

In America today the denominations that are making the most substantial gains are those who have nothing to say about church union. And I maintain that their growth is due to this fact. Personally I could not advise one to join a church whose leaders were so thoroughly dissatisfied with its clientele that they had to put it on the bargain counter every time some little flurry over church union arose, were I among that number. Regardless of how well church union may work in Canada, it has yet to be seen that our churches in this country are ready for it. I believe in learning some things by observation, we have had our experience on this matter; let us now wait and see the thing worked out to the benefit of both denominations by some other churches before we make another plunge.

Surely we all have our work to do, regardless of the denomination of which we are members. We work for the uplift of the races, for the glory of our Lord and Master and to save our own souls. Would we not be doing the same thing were we members of the largest denomination in the world? Our list of friends is by no means made up entirely of our own church. Brotherly love binds us to Quaker, to Presbyterian, to Catholic, to Hebrew, and all the rest. The shibboleth is forgotten as we enjoy the fellowship of these men and women. We do not have to be members of their churches, lodges, homes and social clubs to hold them as our friends in bonds of finest fellowship. It is as we accentuate the church names that we realize the difference between us. They are indeed small, small enough to be forgotten for the most part, and ought to be forgotten.

I have a profound sympathy for those struggling churches where the membership is small and the finances hard to raise, but if you will produce a denomination that does not have them, you will show a rare thing in church activities. I also sympathize with those members of a struggling church who feel that they are socially of a higher circle than are the members with whom they worship on Sunday. But there are members in our largest churches who suffer the same way day after day. Churches were never designed to have all their members meet the social standards of the eclat of the community. In the days of the apostles, converted thieves worshipped with the bishops at the altar of our Lord.

Again, talk with the real leaders of any denomination you may select and you will find them bemoaning the lack of funds to carry on the work of the church. Truly, we are hard pressed for money, have a serious lack of leaders in our church, need more consecrated, loyal members to her, but in all this we share the experiences common to all others. Oh, there is here and there a little church that carries its finances without an effort, whose members are socially upon equality and whose pastor preaches just the sort of sermon they want every Sunday, but such a church is rare, it is abnormal; the normal church seems to need all these hardships to perfect her in those graces required for every candidate for heaven.

The experiences of life have taught me not to despise a thing because it is small, not to think less of one because he is of humble birth. In my contacts with church people for the past twenty years I have been most cordially received by members of every Protestant denomination that is common to our section of the country as well as in other sections. I have yet to be made to feel that I was rated by the number of members our church had except by members of the Methodist Protestant Church. I passed at par everywhere else. When Theodore Roosevelt attended his own church in Washington City, notwithstanding the fact it was not so large as others, and the fact that Herbert Hoover will attend services in a church of a small denomination when he goes to Washington as president of our great country, evidences the fact that being a member of a little church cannot keep a man from being his best and of rendering the greatest services possible for him to render.

Finally, as a member of the M. P. Church, I want to express the hope that all who love our church will let this question of union rest until there is an occasion for reviving it.

YOUTH IN TRAINING FOR SERVICE IN THE CHURCH OF TOMORROW

I don't think that any topic upon which I have put much thought has ever struck me as forcefully as this one, "Youth in Training for Service in the Church of Tomorrow." The youth of today is in training for some purpose, there's no doubt about that. Hardly can we find a boy or girl, of age, who does not have a high school education. Every year the number who graduate from college is more and more. Our colleges all over the country today are literally filled with students, yet I wonder how many of them are preparing for service in the church of God. The youth of today are in training, all right, but for what? Is it for the service in the church or the world?

As we think about this topic for a few minutes, I want us to try to find some reasons why young people should go into training for the special purpose of serving in the church of tomorrow.

First, I would say, is because of the great and ever-increasing need of trained leadership in the church. Every friend of religious education must recognize the fact that other things being equal, a trained teacher or superintendent is more efficient and consequently more valuable to the cause than one who is not trained. The success or failure of the present continent-wide movement for an adequate program of religious education will depend largely, in every church and community, upon whether or not a supply of trained leaders and teachers is developed. In our public school systems millions of dollars are expended annually in the training of teachers, supervisors, administrators and specialists, and it is conceded that no expenditures bring larger returns.

It is encouraging to note that the churches are awakening to the fact that trained leaders are necessary and hence are placing more emphasis on the importance of training for leadership. Then if the need of leaders causes the task of training for leadership to be taken up seriously, and if it is to be carried out effectively, it must be begun with the youth. The lives of those who are carrying on the work of the church today are molded and made and will always remain practically what they are. They must carry on the work of the church with what training they have, be it much, little, or none. But what about tomorrow? When it comes, many of the leaders of today will have gone to their eternal reward, and some one else will have to take up their work. Will it be necessary for untrained men and women to take the place as workers and leaders in the church? We hope not. In this progressive 20th century when everything else is making such rapid progress, we would have to hang our heads in shame if the church did not progress also, and demand trained workers. Then it is up to the youth of today to train and prepare themselves for the great unfinished task which awaits them.

Another reason why young people should go into training for the definite purpose of service in the church is because what a person trains himself for is what he is going to do. It would be foolish for a young girl to complete the nurse's course and then enter into some other profession. And for a young man to train himself for a lawyer or doctor and then not practice law or medicine. The same rule holds good in other professions of life. So if we are going to have a sufficient number of church workers for tomorrow we must have a sufficient number who go into training for the purpose.

Will the youth of today have to make a sacrifice if they train themselves for the work of the church? An emphatic yes is the only reply. They will have to give up many things including, possibly, a position with a large salary. There are many opportunities in the world for young people to enter into business and make money today. But if the voice of God calls one to His service, then every weight which would hinder must be laid aside, although it may mean much of what the world has to offer.

A story is told of the president of a railroad company who was going on a long trip. His private car was attached to the rear end of the train. One night there was a terrible wreck, but the president happened to escape uninjured. As he walked around observing the situation he discovered the engineer lying flat on his back, dying. Hearing him mumbling something, the president stooped and caught these words: "I know whom I have believed and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day." The president said, "I'd give the world if I could say that." As the engineer closed his eyes he replied, "That's exactly what it will cost you."

Even though the world has to be sacrificed, young people, nothing is lost in the end, and everything gained.

Now in closing I want you to picture with me if you can two groups of young people. I wish they could march side by side before us this afternoon as we think about them. Both groups have been in training for service. Both are skilled, enthusiastic, willing to give their best, even their very lives, for victory. The first group is an army of soldiers prepared for service for the government and country. The other group is a band of Christians prepared for service in the church and for God. The purpose of the first group is to wound and scar the body, wreck the homes, lay waste the country and even take the very human life. But how different is the purpose of the other group! Its purpose is to heal and mend broken hearts, build up the happiness of the home by enthroning Jesus there, helping the downcast and discouraged to find a new life in God, bringing comfort and cheer to the lonely and sad, and pointing the way to Jesus to those who have never found Him. What a contrast!

It is needless to say that this group is the more noble, the more worthy and the more to be praised.

Young people of today, as you prepare yourself for your life work, will you not listen and see if God does not want to use you in His church? If He does, then train yourself for that special purpose. Take advantage of the Leadership Training School which is held at High Point each summer, and all other opportunities you may have to train yourself for the great task which the church of tomorrow must lay upon your shoulders!

"THE SAINTS OF CAESAR'S HOUSEHOLD"

REV. W. A. LEDFORD

The term "saints," to many, suggests heavenly beings and angelic characters: thoughts far too exalted and extramundane to be attained unto by Christians here. There were no such ideas associated with the term in New Testament times. The Apostle Paul used it synonymously with Christian, disciple, believer, or any other terms referring to the followers of Christ. When Paul sent the greetings from the "saints of Caesar's household" to the church at Philippi, he was sending the greetings from one group of Christians to another. "Caesar's household" was an inclusive designation, and may have included some of distinguished rank, won to Christ by Paul while he was a prisoner in the Praetorian barrack attached to the imperial palace; most likely they were converts from among the vast body of slaves and freedmen, who were attendants at the court of Nero.

From this lone and incidental reference some interesting and helpful facts are learned. We learn that the gospel, at the time of the writing of the Epistle to the Philippians, had reached to those who were in high or lower capacity about the emperor's person. Nero was emperor, and has gone down in history as the worst man that ever lived. The history of his reign is a dreadful tale of cruelty, crime, and brutal excess. He murdered his own wife and mother, and fiddled while Rome burned for seven days, and falsely accused and unmercifully persecuted the Christians for burning Rome. John Calvin, commenting on the greetings from Caesar's household, said, "The Gospel had penetrated into that abyss of crime and infamy." The light was shining into earth's dark places and leavening society. History has few stranger contrasts than when it shows us Paul preaching Christ under the imperial walls of Nero's palace. Converts in Caesar's household was a marvelous achievement for the Gospel in those stormy days.

The fact that the saints of Caesar's household were willing to risk their all for the cause of Christ stands an everlasting monument to their courage, bravery, consecration and devotion. No harder place in all the world to stand for Christ. In the bloody, tainted, corrupted atmosphere of Caesar's household only the bravest and noblest dared to own their Lord. In Nero's time Christians were tarred and feathered and burned; also cast into the arena among wild beasts for the emperor's amusement. Surely they placed their all on the altar when they accepted Christ in Caesar's household. The example set there in Rome in that early day should make all weak-kneed men and women today, who excuse themselves for not being Christians, on the ground that they can not live the Christian life in the atmosphere of their home, school, places of work and associations, hang their heads in shame. The Christian life can be lived anywhere and under any circumstances.

Why the saints of Caesar's household sent their greetings to the church at Philippi makes an interesting study. Rome, the mother city, would naturally be interested in Philippi, the Roman colony. The Christians, many of both churches, had been won by Paul during his imprisonments in the two cities. The Christians at Rome had heard Paul tell so many good things about this first Christian church in Europe. Perhaps he told them about "The Riverside Prayer Meeting" and of his miraculous deliverance from prison, together with the conversion of the jailer and his household. He told them how that he and Silas had sung and prayed under great pressure, before the deliverance came. Since the good reports from former charges had such salutary effects in the ministry of Paul, the Methodist itinerant may be pardoned for occasionally telling his new congregation some of the commendable things of his former charges. Often the Thessalonians object to being told that the Bereans were more noble than they. That may not be necessary.

Since Satan entered the garden of Eden and saints were found in Caesar's household, there is no neutral ground in the war between light and darkness. There are no hopeless ones from Satan's point of view, and there should be none from the Christian's. Paul demonstrated that the Gospel is the power of God unto salvation wherever it is faithfully and honestly proclaimed. Perhaps the lessons of perseverance and holy daring, which brought Paul victory in so many places, need re-emphasizing today.

Since Joseph triumphed over all the vicissitudes that befell him during his earthly pilgrimage—Moses espoused the cause of God amidst the heathen custom of Pharaoh's court—Daniel, beset by the idolatries of Babylon, prayed three times a day with his face toward Jerusalem—saints remained steadfast in Caesar's household, surely Christians everywhere and in all ages can say with Paul, "I can do all things through Christ, who strengtheneth me." The greatest achievement known to this world is the living of a good, godly life under pressure, and at the same time letting one's light so shine that others may see his good works and be led

EASTER SERVICE NOW READY

A beautiful Easter service, prepared by the Board of Missions, is now ready for distribution among all the churches and Sunday schools of the Methodist Protestant Church, to be used on Easter Sunday. With them is furnished self-denial envelopes for use during Passion Week by all of our people; also a large supply of decision cards to be used during Lent in the work of soul-winning to Christ and to church membership.

Because of being new in this field of activity, and the multiplied duties of the position, we have not been able this year to prepare a pageant nor to publish an extra recitation sheet. We trust the church will be satisfied with our effort and we promise to do better next time.

All of these supplies are furnished free. Please send in your orders at once. Let us have the best Easter services this year and the largest Easter offering for missions in the history of our denomination.

INDIA BUNGALOW

Don't forget our appeal for the bungalow in India. We have no greater need at this time than a new home for our missionaries in the said field. We are much encouraged by the responses thus far. We have a long way to go yet before we reach the $6,000 mark, which will be the minimum cost of the building. We are very glad to have you note what the editor of the Methodist Protestant has to say concerning this bungalow in the present issue of this paper.

"WHERE HIS GLORY DWELLETH"

"I love the place where thy glory dwelleth," sang the Hebrew poet in Psalm 26:8. This was his blessed description of the temple as the house of God. It is the sentiment and not the place that we will think about now. Everything possible had been done to enrich the temple until it was a place of splendor, and it was not difficult to imagine that God was there in the midst of the beauty. The supreme fact, however, was not the material riches and beauty of the house, but rather that the glory of God was to be sensed there.

We need particular places in order to aid us in coming into contact with the Divine. God is everywhere; of that we are most certain. But just as there are places where the air is finer and sweeter than it is elsewhere, so there are places where we are more sensitive to the nearness of God than we are in other spots. And this is one of the reasons why we attend church and worship in the place that has been made beautiful for that purpose. We sense the glory of God there more quickly and surely than we do in other places. The most beautiful places in the world are the temples of the gods. Why is that? Because men have felt that they must make shrines for the glory of their deity to be the more easily revealed and appropriated by needy human souls.—Zions Herald.

West End Merges

In keeping with the new order of women's work, as provided by the last General Conference, the missionary and Aid Societies of West End Church held a merger meeting last night and effected the new organization according to the constitution for local auxiliaries. The meeting was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Holden, and was well attended. The meeting was characterized by a fixed and united purpose toward unification. An enthusiastic spirit prevailed, as well as an intelligent comprehension of the plans and purposes of the new order; and above all, and best of all, there was in the meeting a spirit of earnest consecration to Christ and to His church. In every way this initial meeting was auspicious, and we predict for these women continued happiness and increasing success in their work through the new order.

The New Church Law in Regard to Dropping Members

This is not the time of year when we revise our rolls, yet an understanding of the law may forestall a misapprehension later.

The revised discipline is not out yet, but the new law may be found on page 69 of the Journal of the last General Conference.

This law provides that no member shall be dropped until he has been derelict in his religious life and church duties for at least twelve months. It further provides that such members shall not be dropped until they have been appealed to for six months by the pastor, such appeals to be made either by letter or in person. They shall not then be dropped until the quarterly conference has addressed a letter to them urging them to renew their faithfulness to Christ and to the church, and telling them that unless they do this within six months the church will be compelled to understand that they wish their names stricken from the roll. After the expiration of this time it shall be the duty of the pastor to report to the congregation all persons that make no response to these appeals, and to inform the congregation that the requirements of the law in regard to them have been met. The congregation may then vote on whether or not such persons shall be retained as members of the church.

The law provides that in stations this report may be made to the quarterly conference and the vote taken by that body. The law is briefly stated thus: No member can be dropped from the church roll until he has been a derelict for at least twelve months. He can not be dropped then until he has been earnestly admonished by the pastor for six months, and by the quarterly conference for another six months.

It is our opinion that the observance of this law will mean the redemption of many unfaithful church members. When they are admonished as this law provides, many of them will renew their allegiance to the church. If they do not, the church would seem to be thoroughly justified in discontinuing their membership.

(It is to be understood, of course, that this law does not deal with members who may be cited for trial, as provided by the constitution.)

Conference Districts

The only districting of the conference that we are able to find listed is that which was made in 1921—the first. There were eleven districts set off at that time. Since then the number has been increased to fourteen, but we do not find any record of the charges embraced in the three new districts, or any readjusting of the districts, made necessary by the three new ones. We are publishing this week a re-districting of the conference in which we follow, as much as possible, the original districting, but in several instances there will of necessity be found deviations from the original plans. This districting is not official, of course, but is made out of the necessity of a working plan for this year. We will ask the next annual conference to make a re-districting of the field. We have retained all of the duly appointed chairmen, but the shifting has made it necessary to give to a few districts two chairmen instead of one. In such cases the district will have a committee of two instead of one to plan the programs, and the work, we trust, will thereby be facilitated. It is our hope to have considerable special activities in these districts during the year, and it is our purpose to begin arrangements for this at a very early date.

March Eight to Thirteen

Rev. J. H. Straughn, promotional secretary of New Century Service, is to be with us on this date. He will be accompanied by Dr. Broomfield, the president of the General Conference; Dr. Haddaway, the executive secretary of the Board of Missions; and probably Dr. Stephenson, the executive secretary of the Board of Christian Education. We are publishing their appointments this week, as per order of our conference New Century Service Commission, and are hereby calling upon pastors to give wide publicity to these meetings, and to secure the largest possible attendance. We want these brethren to have the ear of our people, and we shall hope, plan, and pray for the best possible results to attend their coming.

Pastors are expected to attend the all-day meetings nearest them, and to induce their people to attend with them. If pastors will write us at once, confirming the program on their respective charges, and giving us the names of churches that they are to supply, we shall be greatly helped in completing the arrangements for the coming of these brethren. Please do that, pastors, by early next week. Thank you!

Flat Rock

February 10, Sunday.—At 11 a. m. we were at Gideon's Grove, and preached to a congregation encouraging in numbers and helpful in their response to our message. This was our first visit ever to this church. We found a new and attractive church building, situated on the public highway two miles north of Stokesdale. The church is beautiful for situation, and we doubt not that it is a joy to the sturdy and intelligent citizens of the community that make up its membership. We were glad to find a marker by the roadside indicating to the passerby the name of the church. We enjoyed meeting the people at this place and worshipping with them.

After dinner, which was enjoyed with the parsonage family, we went to Flat Rock Church for a 3 o'clock service. Here we met a congregation of encouraging size, and was glad to find among them friends that we learned to know and appreciate in other days. Here we found another new church building—well and attractively constructed out of stone quarried from the nearby "flat rock." This church is also on a much-traveled highway and makes a pleasing appearance beneath the oaks that tower about it. We trust that an attractive marker may soon be placed to indicate that it is "Flat Rock Methodist Protestant Church." This is the most historic church in our conference and perhaps in our entire connection, from the standpoint of ministers which it has furnished. Ten have gone out from it, some of whom distinguished themselves as leaders in the conference and the denomination. So far as we know, only two of the number are now living—Rev. J. S. Williams, the Good Samaritan of Asheville, and Prof. Paul S. Kennett, Lit.D., the popular head of the department of history at High Point College. We trust that this church, with its new building, is starting on a new career of service and that many more ministers may come forth from its holy precincts. Pastor Pegg is popular with his people, and is applying himself thoughtfully and earnestly to his tasks. We believe that the year will be one of increasing success for this charge. We were accompanied on this visit by Rev. W. F. Kennett, and enjoyed his fellowship, and likewise our visit to each of the churches.

Day of Prayer

Friday, February 15, is woman's day of universal prayer for missions. Some of our women will meet at stated places for prayer on that day. We trust that all who can will do so. Some, however, may not be able to do this for various reasons. But all can pray, and we trust that it may be a day of very earnest prayer throughout our conference for the blessings of God upon our efforts, and upon the efforts of all his people, to establish his kingdom in the earth.

thereby to glorify the Father in heaven. There is no greater service before mankind than to be the salt of the earth, and the light of the world. Paul was both to Caesar's household, regardless of obstacles. He, like his Master, instead of enduring many things, used them for the glory of God. God grant that the readers of this paper may do the same. That is the opportunity and privilege of all God's children.

SOME EXAMPLES OF PRAYING

There are many men in history who have prayed, and their prayers have mightily affected the world. All the outstanding characters of the Bible were people of prayer. Abraham prayed and founded a race from whence came the Redeemer; Moses prayed and became the deliverer of a race from bondage; Joshua prayed and gave a nation a country for a home; Hannah prayed and raised up a faithful priest in the midst of decline and apostasy; Samuel prayed and was the anointer of two kings; David prayed and established the kingdom in power; Elijah prayed and shut and opened heaven; and thus we might review the Old Testament.

Jesus Christ was often engaged in prayer for long periods, and taught His disciples to pray. Paul is recorded as praying, and often mentions in his Epistles how he prays for the churches to which he wrote. He exhorts also to much prayer on the part of his readers.

Men since New Testament times who have been influential for good have been men of prayer. Martin Luther, who did penance in Romanism, brought into the Reformation a genuine spirit of prevailing prayer. John Knox is said to have prayed until the Queen was made to tremble and say she feared John Knox's prayers more than armies, or to that effect. George Fox is said by William Penn to have been a most solemn figure in prayer. John Wesley had his prayer room just off his study. George Muller is noted for his prevailing prayers. David Livingston closed his remarkable life on his knees. John G. Paton acknowledged in his work many remarkable results from prayer. William Carey was also a man of prayer. J. Hudson Taylor was an ardent man of prayer through his long and eventful missionary career.—Selected.

MY STEWARDSHIP CREED

1. I believe that God is the Maker and Owner of all life and property and that man, the only part of his creative genius to whom he gave intellect, is God's steward both of life and of property.

2. I believe that man is duty bound to acknowledge this responsibility placed upon him by an all-wise God and Creator, and that the smallest material evidence of this acknowledgment is the tithe given in the spirit of undying love for God and in the interest of His kingdom.

3. I believe that stewardship is all inclusive, having regard to life, physical strength, mental powers, heart motives, the use of all talents, all ten-tenths of one's material possessions, and that God holds man responsible for the manner in which he uses all these gifts intrusted to his keeping for a time.

4. I further believe that I am responsible for others in this matter until I have done my best to instruct them in the principles of Christian Stewardship.—W. B. Garrett, in the Methodist Layman.

AN EFFECTIVE ANSWER

Dr. George Pentecost, a great American preacher, once met an infidel who claimed he could not believe the Bible because the authorship of some parts was not known. The preacher asked him the author of the multiplication table, and he answered he did not know. After a serious thought he replied to the minister's further argument by saying, "But the multiplication table works." "So does the Bible," said Dr. Pentecost, "have you tried it?"

OUR STORY PAGE

ELIZABETH'S BLUE HAT

"W-o-o, W-o-o," came the boat whistle far down the river. "Mother is coming!" Elizabeth called to her two small brothers and the three raced down to the wharf to see the boat.

"How I wish I could go somewhere," Elizabeth mused. "I have been so lonesome here all winter and spring without my sister Sophia. I wish I had been old enough to go away to school. I wonder what Sophia's school is like.

The big boat drew nearer and nearer and they could see the people on board. Elizabeth was first to spy her mother and waved to her. Elizabeth's father came from his store and a number of other people gathered on the wharf, for the weekly coming of the boat was a great event in the neighborhood.

"George," Elizabeth's mother said as soon as the boat landed, "I met Cousin Blanche Green in Johnsonville and she is going to Daleville to see her sister graduate. She offered to take Elizabeth if we could get her ready by the time this boat comes back. I asked the captain and he says he will be up the river about an hour and a half and will stop for Elizabeth if we decide to let her go. Don't you think the trip will be fine for both girls," the father said.

"I do not mind rushing," Elizabeth's mother laughed.

The next hour and a half were the busiest Elizabeth had ever known. Bathing, shampooing, sewing on buttons, packing, kept the whole family moving.

"I bought you a beautiful hat," her mother told her. "It is still down at the wharf. Do not forget to get it when you are ready to get on the boat. It matches your new blue dress exactly."

Just then, as the last strap on the suit case was being fastened, the boat's whistle blew and all ran down to the wharf to see Elizabeth off.

As Elizabeth stepped upon the gangplank she remembered the new hat. "Where is my hat, mother," she asked, and her mother took a striped band box from a heap of parcels on the wharf and handed it to her.

When the boat rounded the bend in the river and Elizabeth could no longer wave to those left behind, she decided to look at the new hat, but just then the captain called her to come to lunch.

She had barely finished eating her ice cream when the boat stopped to load calves. Elizabeth knew a good deal about calves, for she had two of her own at home. At the next stop hogs were loaded and still farther down the river great barrels called hogsheads filled with tobacco were brought on board.

How glad Sophia and Elizabeth were to see each other! They talked and talked as Sophia showed her the wonderful buildings and the great green campus of the school.

At last Sophia said, "Mother sent me the dearest pink hat last week! She wrote me in her letter that she had bought you one very much like it, except yours is blue."

"Oh," exclaimed Elizabeth, "I have not looked at my hat. Let's go to your room now and see both of them."

Away they went to Sophia's room, and while Elizabeth struggled with the string on the band box, Sophia brought out the most adorable pink hat that Elizabeth had ever seen.

"It is beautiful!" exclaimed Elizabeth. "That hat in blue is just the thing I should like to have. Blue is my color."

She began lifting the tissue paper from the band box and the dark spot in the box became darker and darker. "Sophia, come here and look!" Elizabeth said, with tragedy in her voice.

She and Sophia lifted the last piece of tissue paper together.

There in the box a quaint little bonnet of black straw trimmed in curling tips and black jet!

Sophia grabbed the band box top. "Mrs. George Dunn," she read. "That is mother's name all right."

"What else does it say?" Elizabeth asked.

"Wallaceville," Sophia read.

"This is great-aunt Harriet's bonnet," Elizabeth announced. "Maybe the boxes were alike and as mother and great-aunt Harriet have the same name the boxes were put off the boat at the wrong landings."

"How do you suppose she will look in that light blue hat of yours?" Sophia giggled.

"Every bit as well as I shall look in this old-timey black bonnet," said Elizabeth, trying hard not to show how disappointed she felt.

Just then a maid knocked on the door. "A lady to see you," she announced, "and she wants to know if you have seen anything of her bonnet."

"That sounds just like great-aunt Harriet," Sophia laughed. "We shall go right down," she added, and helped Elizabeth put the bonnet back into the box.

"I ordered that bonnet by mail," great-aunt Harriet told the girls after greetings were said, "for I wanted to come here to see two of my great-nieces get their diplomas. When the box came and I found the hat addressed to your mother I called her up right away. She said Elizabeth must have my bonnet, so I brought Elizabeth's blue hat along. Here it is," she added, and got the other band box from the corner of the room. "The exchange makes everything right."

Great-aunt Harriet tied her beloved bonnet up in its box and left. Sophia and Elizabeth hastened back to Sophia's room to try on their new hats and to rejoice that the blue one arrived in time for the graduation exercises.—The Presbyterian.

WHY HE SUCCEEDED

Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman asked General Booth, "Tell me, what has been the secret of your success?" Hesitatingly, with tears in his eyes, he said, "Chapman, I will tell you the secret. God has had all there was of me. There have been men with greater brains than I, men with greater opportunities, but from the day I got the poor of London on my heart, and a vision of what Jesus Christ could do for them, I made up my mind that God could have all there was of William Booth."

"Then," said Chapman, "I learned another secret, for immediately the great man knelt and prayed, and as I listened to him pleading for the outcasts of London, and of New York, the lost of China, and for the great world itself, cursed by the wicked one, pleading with sobs and tears, I understood that his success was measured by his surrender."—*The Wesleyan Methodist, Syracuse, N. STANDARD LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL, HIGH POINT, MARCH 3-8

All church and Sunday school workers are invited to attend a Standard Leadership Training School to be conducted under the auspices of the denominational Board of Christian Education at First Church, High Point, beginning Sunday afternoon, March 3, and to be held each night from 7 to 9:30 o'clock, Monday to Friday, inclusive, March 3-8, 1929.

The faculty will include Prof. P. E. Lindley, of High Point College; Rev. F. L. Gibbs, assistant secretary of the Department of Religious Education; Mrs. H. W. Maier, of our Thomasville church; Rev. Roy I. Farmer and Rev. E. Lester Ballard, of First Church, High Point, and Rev. Lawrence Little, executive secretary of the Department of Religious Education.

Only units of the International Standard Leadership curriculum will be offered and full credit toward the Standard Diploma will be granted for each unit completed. A full outline of courses will appear in a later issue of the Herald. Watch for it!

Any worker over 18 years of age will be welcomed and will receive great benefit from the course.

A registration fee of $1.00 will be charged to help defray expenses of the school.

Plan now to be with us!

LAWRENCE LITTLE,
Executive Secretary.

Durham, N. C.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATIONAL LEADERS AVAILABLE

A number of our churches will be planning, no doubt, for special religious educational activities during the summer months. I trust that a large number will plan to put on Vacation Church Schools, summer camps for their young people and other leadership enterprises.

Our department will be glad to co-operate with such churches by suggesting leaders who might be secured for this type of work during the summer months. I have on my desk two letters from very capable workers asking for employment during the summer season. Both of them are experienced in teaching and in church work and are life-long Methodist Protestants. One, a young lady, has received her Master of Arts Degree from Boston University in Religious Education. The other, one of our young ministers, is doing graduate work in religious education at the present time. Any church in our denomination would be fortunate in securing either of these workers for service during the summer or as full time directors of religious education.

PARENTAL EDUCATION INSTITUTE

The purpose of the second state-wide Institute on Parental Education is to make available to parents seeking help the information and knowledge gathered by these agencies which are capable of making a contribution to the greatest of all vocations, the rearing of healthy, happy, intelligent and socially efficient boys and girls for North Carolina homes. It meets in Raleigh February 13-15, 1929.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

Mrs. H. W. Maier, secretary of Missionary Education in the Sunday School for the North Carolina Woman's Missionary Societies, on request, presents a series of programs for use in Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor societies. These programs have been welcomed by some of the leaders of our denomination and judged by them admirably suited to meet a real need. We think they may be adopted with assurance.

THE SPIRIT OF THE NEW CENTURY Program 1

(Mrs. Anthony is seated in her home, reading the Methodist Protestant. Telephone rings. She lays the paper down on table to right; answers the phone).

Mrs. Anthony: Yes . . . Quite all right, Rev. Hawkins; I hope your family are well today . . . Why, yes, I am sure I can go about two-thirty. You say they all live close together? . . . I can make the three calls and be back by the time the children are home from school. . . . No, you won't need to bring the names over; I will stop for them as I pass . . . It is only my duty; I am glad to do it . . . Good-bye.

(Mrs. Anthony starts back to her chair when door-bell rings; she greets Mrs. Lawrence cordially).

Mrs. Anthony: Come in, Mrs. Lawrence; haven't seen you for a day or so.

Mrs. Lawrence: Good afternoon, Mrs. Anthony; can't stay but a minute; just came in to ask you about this New Century Service we've been reading about in the Herald. Don't quite understand what it is all about. Does it have something to do with the budget?

Mrs. Anthony: Oh, I am so sorry you missed prayer meeting last night; Rev. Hawkins made it so plain to all of us. He read . . . let me see . . . where did he say it was found? In Isaiah, I believe . . . but which chapter? Sit down, Mrs. Lawrence; I can find it in a minute. (Mrs. Lawrence takes chair; Mrs. Anthony leafs through her Bible, which has been on her table, talking as she does.) The New Century Service is the name given to the whole denominational program after the meeting of General Conference last May. You see, we are just beginning the new century of our existence as a church. New Century Service means that through the channels of the denomination we have an opportunity to render Kingdom service in this new century. Oh, here it is . . . may I read it, please? (Reads Isaiah, 6th chapter). I can't make it as plain as our pastor did last night, but it means this: We are no longer thinking of home missions and foreign missions, nor of religious education by themselves; but we are seeing our denominational program as a whole; all of it is important, and none of it is more important than the rest. Our church boards are our agents, through which it is our privilege and opportunity to do Kingdom service.

Mrs. Lawrence: They tell me we have but one Board of Missions now instead of four.

credited to the W. H. M. S. and to the W. F. M. S. They are given here for information. The amounts named, however, are credited on the budgets. It ought to be said, also, that the Woman's Home Missionary Society has raised $1,390.28 in addition to the amount reported above; but as it all goes to institutions in North Carolina, can not be credited on the G. C. B., nor on the local church budget. This is the decision of the Mission Board of the General Conference.

We hope the brethren will check over items in this report, and if any mistake is found, call our attention to it immediately.

GEO. R. BROWN, Treas.

are very timely.

Letters went out last week to all pastors and to all Sunday school superintendents explaining our condition here, and asking for your immediate and continued help. And we are happy in the fact that your help will be forthcoming.

We also believe that every Sunday school in the conference will soon begin to help regularly. Many are already helping regularly, and what we are trying to say is that all those which have not helped regularly will soon be doing so. So mote it be! Thank you and God bless you.

Faithfully yours,

A. G. DIXON.

Note: We keep hearing of those who are talking of adopting a child, and pay $5.00 per month for clothing, or $10 per month for food and clothing. Come on with your request and let us make the assignment.

Mrs. Anthony: Yes, and the Board of Education and the Board of Young People's Work are united under the Board of Christian Education.

Mrs. Lawrence: Does that mean that we have just two boards now?

Mrs. Anthony: No, we have three boards; the third one is the Board of Publication, which has charge of our Sunday School literature, and our church papers. These three boards carry forward our denominational program and raise the money for carrying on the work.

Mrs. Lawrence: I have heard it several times, but somehow I seem to forget it; but how much does it take to run the denomination for one year?

Mrs. Anthony: The budget is $500,000—not so large by the time it is distributed among all the conferences and churches. You see, with this we carry on missionary work in India, China and Japan, besides our work in Kentucky, and our Americanization work in Ohio and Pittsburgh. Out of this, we build and maintain churches in unchurched communities; we support four denominational colleges and one seminary; and attempt to direct the work of religious education in all our churches and conferences.

Mrs. Lawrence: I wish I knew as much about the church as you do, Mrs. Anthony.

Mrs. Anthony: I try not to lose an opportunity to learn. Our pastor usually has something new for us about the denominational program at every quarterly conference meeting; and I could not live without my several church papers.

Mrs. Lawrence: Tell me, Mrs. Anthony, is $500,000 sufficient to carry on all of the work of the church?

Mrs. Anthony: Of course, our boards could do so much more with more money, but if we could just get that amount, the work would go forward splendidly.

Mrs. Lawrence: Do you mean to say that they don't even have the $500,000? Why don't the conferences and churches pay their assessments?

Mrs. Anthony: Well, of course, some do; but many do not. The New Century Service is to give us all a different point of view. We are not to look upon our apportionment as an assessment, but as an opportunity to do Kingdom service. All Christians must do missionary work if they are followers of the Christ. We cannot each one carry on our own, so our boards are our agents through which we do our missionary work.

Mrs. Lawrence: I see it all now. God calls some to go; but He calls others to pay. "Here am I, send me," means all of us, doesn't it?

Mrs. Anthony: Yes, with my prayers and my money, I am a missionary wherever my church has a station. With my prayers and my money, I can help to provide Christian Education for all the young people in our four colleges and seminary. . . . By the way, Mrs. Lawrence, you are planning to be in our meeting tomorrow?

Mrs. Lawrence: Oh, yes; let me see. Is that the home or foreign society?

Mrs. Anthony: Oh, it is a joint meeting of the two societies and the ladies' aid for the purpose of uniting all into a Woman's Auxiliary or missionary society. People who have had the joint society say they would not go back to three different societies for anything.

Mrs. Lawrence: Well, I must be going. Rev. Hawkins called and asked me to do some calling this afternoon, but I told him that I would not have time. Mrs. Anthony, you almost make me feel ashamed of myself. I almost wish I had told him that I would go.

Mrs. Anthony: I am calling on three families this afternoon. Can't you go with me? I will be leaving in about 15 minutes?

Mrs. Lawrence: Yes, I will be glad to go; shall I come over?

Mrs. Anthony: No, I will stop for you, Mrs. Lawrence.

Mrs. Lawrence: Good-bye.

Mrs. Anthony: Good-bye.

REPORT OF EXECUTIVE MEETING OF HOME AND FOREIGN MISSION- ARY SOCIETIES

Joint Session

The executive meeting of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary societies had a delightful business session Thursday, January 21, at the home of Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, High Point, N. C. A good attendance and a beautiful spirit of fellowship was manifested throughout the meeting and much business was attended to.

Mrs. H. W. Maier led the devotional service, basing her thoughts on the first part of the Lord's prayer and declaring that prayer is the foundation of Kingdom extension.

Mrs. C. W. Bates, district chairman, presided over the joint session and gave a verbal report of the work she had done.

The question of awards for the societies doing the best work this year was discussed and it was decided that leaving out the answering of the questions in the Question Box would not bar the societies from getting the awards, provided they meet the other requirements and provided they answer all questions which have already appeared in the Missionary Record. It was pointed out that since the Missionary Record was not published in January and would probably be further delayed for several months, the societies could not meet this part of the requirements.

In an effort to find just how far-reaching and how much good has been accomplished from the programs outlined and sent to the auxiliaries, the corresponding secretaries were asked to add that question to their report blanks for branch meeting. The corresponding secretaries of the auxiliaries are asked to state whether or not they have used these programs when they send in their reports for next quarter.

It is interesting to know that the programs outlined by the committee in the North Carolina Branch were adopted by the Board of Missions and are being used throughout the entire denomination.

An invitation from the Asheboro auxiliary to hold the next Branch meeting there was given by Mrs. W. C. Hammer, and was gratefully accepted. The date of branch meeting was set for April 16-18, 1929. A motion carried that Mrs. Marie Thompson, assistant executive secretary of the Board of Missions, be invited to attend our next branch meeting. The program committee for the branch meeting is composed of Mrs. W. C. Hammer, Mrs. George R. Brown and Mrs. H. W. Maier.

Foreign Session

Mrs. George R. Brown, president, presided over the foreign session. Mrs. M. P. Harrell had an interesting report, but quite a number of auxiliaries failed to send in reports to Mrs. Harrell. Among those reporting it was found that Asheville, Calvary, Community Church, Thomasville, Mebane and Concord had united their home and foreign auxiliaries and liked the new system. It is gratifying to learn that the merger is meeting with marked success in all auxiliaries where it is being tried out.

The treasurer reported that less than half of the budget for the year has been raised, and the auxiliaries are asked to do their utmost in these remaining two months.

It was learned that the services of Miss Mildred Miskimen, our returned missionary from India, will be available for a part if not all of the month of March, and a motion carried that she be asked to visit the North Carolina Branch. Auxiliaries wishing to use Miss Miskimen are requested to get in touch with Mrs. C. W. Bates, Box 1501, Asheboro Street, Greensboro, N. C., and it is hoped that a large number of our people over the state will have the privilege of hearing Miss Miskimen give first-hand information concerning our missionary work in India.

The resignation of Mrs. C. C. McNeill, Jubilee Secretary, was presented and reluctantly accepted. We regret to learn that Mrs. McNeill is having to give up all active work on account of ill health, and we are praying that she may soon recover. Mrs. S. W. Taylor was requested to take charge of the birthday money in Mrs. McNeill's place.

MRS. E. LESTER BALLARD, Sec'y.

MISS MISKIMEN COMING

Miss Mildred Miskimen, returned missionary from India, who is now on furlough, will be in North Carolina the entire month of March, provided arrangements can be made for her to speak in our churches. Please let me know at once so I can arrange her itinerary. First come, first serve. If you want her, please write and tell me when and where you want her.

MRS. C. W. BATES.

VISION

(Written for the Blind)

God is my sight,
Through Him I see;
He holds my hand
And leadeth me.

God is my sight,
He makes all clear;
In light I walk
Since He is here.

God is my sight,
He knows the way;
In His dear love
I cannot stray.

God is my sight,
He guides me right;
I'll rest in peace,
Secure tonight.

—Grenville Kleiser.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

High Point.—A delightful get-together meeting and supper were enjoyed last Thursday evening by the Brotherhood. The 20-piece orchestra of High Point College under the direction of Mr. Ernest Stimson, rendered beautiful music during the evening. The new president, Mr. L. R. Johnston, principal of High Point High School, was toastmaster, and outlined plans for the future of the organization. Dr. R. M. Andrews returned thanks, and a delicious menu was served to about 70 members by a group of ladies, of which Mrs. Paul S. Kennett was chairman. Rev. Herman T. Stevens, pastor of Green Street Baptist Church, delivered his humorous and highly entertaining lecture, "Down on the Farm," in which he imitated the calls and cries of numerous birds and animals, and described many of their habits. Precious memories of the days of boyhood spent on the old farm, when "Heaven lies about us in our infancy," were vividly recalled by those who listened to this pleasing lecture.

"I remember, I remember
The fir-trees dark and high;
I used to think their slender tops
Were close against the sky;
It was a childish ignorance,
But now 'tis little joy
To know I'm farther off from Heav'n
Than when I was a boy."

The news of the passing of Mrs. Andrew M. Adams on Sunday morning brought sadness to our congregation. She had been ill for only three months. Born Miss Ella Saunders in Stokes County, near Pilot Mountain, April 12, 1868, she was approaching her 61st birthday. She was a highly esteemed member of the church, and a woman of beautiful faith and Christian character. An unusually devoted wife and mother, she will be sadly missed in the home. Funeral services will be conducted in First Church on Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, preceded by a short service at her late residence. She is survived by her husband, A. M. Adams, and an only daughter, Miss Mary, who is a student in High Point College. A suitable obituary will appear later.

A very harmonious and interesting quarterly conference, the first of this Conference year, was held last Wednesday evening after a brief prayer service. The superintendent of the Sabbath school, Mr. E. L. Douglas, gave a splendid and encouraging report of its activities, as did also the president of the Christian Endeavor Society. Rev. R. I. Farmer made an interesting resume of this work for the quarter, and reported that he has made an average of four addresses each week for 16 weeks past, and while he loves this kind of service, there is danger of running out of something to say. There has been a net gain of 20 members. His report shows the work is in splendid shape. Rev. E. Lester Ballard, director of religious education, gave an interesting report of the Junior church, which keeps up active interest and attendance in a remarkable manner.

Last Sunday morning the minister delivered the first of a series of sermon on Power, his theme being "The Power of Thought." At this service Mr. H. E. Jones, of High Point College, sang a lovely solo, and the choir rendered a beautiful anthem. At the evening hour for worship the subject of the minister's discourse was "The Power of Will." He said in part that the majority of people know more about the Christian life than we put in practice. The power of will is the freedom to act as we ought or ought not. There are some limitations over which we have no control; our parents we cannot choose, nor our constitutions, whether robust or weak and subject to disease, but we have the power to repel whatever part of our environment that is objectionable or accept that which is pleasing to us. Shakespeare reasons thus: "The will of man is by his reason swayed." The same world becomes different to two persons. If we pay attention to something long enough we will have interest in that particular thing. Faith in God is a continuous endeavor to do His will. God cannot do anything with us until we surrender our wills to Him. There are too many courteous, suave men in the world, honest in business, affectionate husbands and fathers, but they have no place for Jesus in their hearts and lives. Jesus stands at the door and knocks and if we will but only let Him, He will come into our hearts and abide there, bringing the peace "which passes all understanding."

A very interesting meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society was held at the church Monday afternoon. Mrs. C. R. Hinshaw was in charge of the devotionals and announced that the theme was Love. The invocation was made by Mrs. R. M. Andrews. The business session was held, and Mrs. C. L. Gray, the treasurer, reported that our monthly pledge of $50 has been paid to the building fund with a good balance in the treasury. Mrs. P. S. Kennett reported that her circle realized the sum of $12.50 from the Brotherhood supper. Tempting refreshments were served by the associate hostesses.

At the Senior C. E. meeting on Monday evening after discussion of the topic, "Jesus Teaching Us to Serve," which was ably led by the pastors' wives, a delightful Valentine social was enjoyed by the young people. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman says that he heartily favors the custom of sending Valentines every February 14th, for thereby the spice of romance is injected into our prosaic and monotonous lives.

The splendid talks on the general subject of the Lord's Prayer will be continued next Wednesday evening, and they are proving most helpful to all who attend. The Lenten season begins tomorrow and a very spiritual little pamphlet, "The Fellowship of Prayer," is being distributed, this containing devotional selections for every day.

The time of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Thank-offering has been changed, and it will be observed next Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock service, when Rev. Mr. Farmer will present an appropriate message, and the offering for this cause will be taken.

Two weeks ago when Mrs. R. M. Andrews, who has done a wonderful and beautiful work with the children of the Junior Mission Circle for the past four years, relinquished her post and turned it over to Mrs. John Whitesell, the members of the circle surprised her with a handkerchief shower, when she was presented 29 dainty handkerchiefs besides other pretty gifts.

Mrs. W. P. Pickett and Mrs. J. C. Welch are guests of Mrs. H. S. Meredith in Tampa, Fla.

Dr. and Mrs. George R. Brown, of Reidsville, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Boyles and family, of Thomasville, and Mrs. Ruth Boyles Dudley, of Danville, Va., were here today to attend the funeral services for Mrs. A. M. Adams.

Mebane.—Our church enjoyed a good day Sunday. Our Sunday school attendance was about as usual. Our pastor, Rev. W. M. Loy, preached a very good sermon at the morning hour. At 7:30 we had a union service at the school auditorium in behalf of Near East Relief. Rev. David Chalabie, a noted Persian Christian, made it very plain to us what our money is doing to save these orphans.

Monday evening at 7:30 our auxiliary met at the church with good attendance, Circle No. 2 having charge of the program, Mrs. G. E. Wyatte, leader. They gave a little play, "Why the Missionary Society Was a Failure." This was very impressive. They showed us why many of our societies are failures.

Last Monday afternoon the Ladies' Aid Society met with Mrs. R. F. Dunn. After the business was transacted the ladies went over to the parsonage and showered the new baby, James Columbus, with lots of nice and useful things.

Next Sunday night the young people of the church will have charge of the service, this being the three Christian Endeavor Societies.
REPORTER.

Graham.—On Sunday afternoon the ladies of the church enjoyed a very interesting and instructive talk on mission work by Mrs. H. C. Nicholson, of Mebane.

There will be no prayer meeting this week due to the absence of Mr. Minnis, who has been called before the Board of Missions in Baltimore.

The Ladies' and Foreign Missionary Societies met jointly on the first Monday in the afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. R. Goley.

On Tuesday evening of this week the church trustees and stewards will meet at the home of S. S. Holt, for a discussion of plans for church work.

The children of the Primary Department will be given a Valentine party on Thursday afternoon in their Sunday school room by the superintendent and teachers.

REPORTER.

Denton Church.—On our last preaching day, February 3rd, our pastor, Rev. E. A. Bingham, brought us a wonderful message on "How to Keep the Sabbath." This was one of the best sermons our pastor has delivered, very practical; we could all apply it to our own lives with profit.

At the evening hour the pastor turned the service over to the young people, who presented a very interesting service. Miss Margie Cranford read the Scripture lesson. This was followed with prayer by the pastor. Mr. Clinard Sexton made a short talk on "The Meaning of Young People's Day."

Following this, Misses Jewell Lanier and Sallie Mae Frank rendered a beautiful duet, "Give of Your Best to the Master." Mr. Arthur Lanier made a short talk on "Youth and the Church of Yesterday." Following this talk, the Junior choir rendered, "Little Hands."

Miss Blanche Hoover, president of the C. E. Society, made a talk on "Youth's Opportunity for Service in the Church of Today."

The young men's quartet, composed of Messrs. Ronald Hill, Colon Cranford, Arthur Lanier and Edward Hill, delighted all with a number, "Happy All the Time."

Our pastor delivered a good talk on "Youth and the New Century Service." Mr. Edward Hill made the final talk on the topic, "Youth in Training for Service in the Church of Tomorrow." The choir rendered softly, "I'll Go Where You Want Me to Go."

Miss Ruth Lanier, who is undergoing treatment in a Charlotte hospital, is improving rapidly, we are glad to report.

REPORTER.

Enfield Charge.—On January 30 the first quarterly conference convened at the Enfield church. At this conference Miss Mary Collins was re-elected secretary of the conference. Miss Collins has been secretary for a number of years and due to her very efficient service in this office and notwithstanding her request to be relieved, the members of the conference were reluctant to give her up. Miss Collins is also teacher of the Adult Bible Class at the Enfield church. Recently a new-comer in our town told the writer that he chose the M. P. church Sunday school due largely to the teaching ability of Miss Collins. We are glad we are so endowed. We have a number of splendid workers here whom our general church ought to know more about.

On Thursday night preceding the conference there was a business and get-together meeting of the Enfield church. After the business of the church was transacted, those present entertained themselves with the parching of corn. It is our hope to have one of these meetings at the end of each quarter.

On the first Sunday night in this month the young people were in charge of the service. Those present were so pleased with the service that it was decided to have a similar service every first Sunday night.

Miss Ruth Bellamy has been asked to be reporter of the church activities for the coming year. Bro. Eli Bellamy is to make the announcements and take the offering at each service during the year.

We are glad to report that Bro. George Parker is able to be out again after undergoing an operation at the Parkview Hospital. A number of our people have had the flu. At this writing Mrs. Blanch Whitaker, and daughter, Virginia, are in bed with the flu.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

First Church, Thomasville.—Our Sunday school is moving along very nicely. We are very proud of it because it is growing both in number and in the spirit of the Lord Jesus Christ. Mr. D. R. Connell, our superintendent, has proven himself capable of superintending the Sunday school.

Our new pastor, Rev. H. L. Powell, has been all that we could have hoped for. He has delivered some very soul-stirring sermons since his arrival among us. The church is well pleased with him and we believe this is going to be one of the best years we have ever experienced. Brother Powell has conducted two Communion services, with a very good number participating.

Our Christian Endeavor Society is growing. The young people are becoming more interested in Christian work and are taking part in the programs of the church.

On last Sunday night the Christian Endeavor Society put on a special program at the church hour. "Youth in Service" was the theme of the program. We were glad to see an increase in the congregation and we hope that we will continue to grow.

JUANITA DORSETT, Reporter.

Rehoboth.—The members of the Sunday school met last Sunday morning with quite a number present; also, some visitors among them—Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Blount and family, of Raper. The offering was $1.76.

Rev. R. L. Hethcox preached for us the morning service.

Mr. G. J. Cherry, of Charleston, S. C., was here as a guest at the home of his sister, Mrs. Guilford Davenport, the past week-end.

Mr. Herbert Swain, assistant superintendent of Rehoboth Sunday school and a professor of Creswell school, was a visitor at Chapel Hill the past week-end. He was a student there a while back.

As the Young People's Christian Endeavor didn't meet on Sunday we are looking forward for a good meeting the second Sunday evening in March.

REPORTER.

Laurel Hill.—The first quarterly conference of this charge was held at Hebron church December 22, at 11 o'clock. An impressive sermon was preached by Bro. Ridge, of Cleveland charge. This sermon will be long remembered by those who heard it. A number of important matters pertaining to the work of the church were attended to. The next conference will be held at Laurel Hill.

We are looking forward to the special lectures that are to be given by the young men and young women in our Sunday school. Our superintendent has planned it so that each Sunday morning at Sunday school some one will have some interesting subject selected on which to talk to the Sunday school. This will continue until each one has had a chance to express himself.

We now have preaching services at Laurel Hill twice a month; every second Sunday morning at 11 o'clock and every third Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Our good pastor, Rev. J. M. Morgan, has arranged his work so he can give us a message every third Sunday night.

Pray for us that we may flourish as a band of workers.

Wishing for our church and all other churches a successful year's work in our Master's vineyard.

LOIS WILLIS, Reporter.

Kistlers Church, Cleveland Circuit.—As last Sunday was our regular preaching day, Brother Ridge delivered a most interesting and instructive sermon.

Our Sunday school, under our good superintendent, Seth Ivester, is progressing very nicely. Our number seems to be as large as ever now, as 'most all are over the flu. Although our crowd is small, we are trying to do our best. We will welcome any visitors or any one who would like to join our group. We also have preaching every first Sunday and we welcome all.

We wish to thank conference for sending us such a good preacher this year. I don't see how they could have sent a better one. I am sure he is loved by all, although we have not forgotten Bro. J. D. Morris, who served us for eight years, and we welcome him to visit us at any time.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

FLORA IVESTER, Reporter.

Moriah.—Our attendance at Sunday school is getting better and we hope to continue growing.

The Missionary Societies met with Mrs. John Sharpe, Sr., on Thursday of last week. At this meeting the Home and Foreign Societies came together and the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Ethel Sharpe; vice-president, Mrs. E. P. Sharpe; secretary, Mrs. J. S. Wood; treasurer, Mrs. Van Kirkman; secretary of literature, Mrs. Lowe Lewis. We planned to have our Thank-offering service the fourth Sunday morning, the Missionary Society to have charge.

Our Christian Endeavor Society went visiting last Sunday evening. We met with the First Reformed C. E. Society in Greensboro. We enjoyed the meeting and received some very helpful suggestions.

The stewards are planning to do some work on the church grounds this spring.

Our church and community were saddened by the sudden death recently of Mr. Samuel Scott. In the passing of Mr. Scott the community has lost a good neighbor. The bereaved ones have our deepest sympathy.

MRS. J. S. WOOD, Reporter.

Union Grove, Orange Charge.—The young people's day service was observed the first Sunday at which time Mr. Lawrence Little, of Durham, was with us. He delivered a very forceful message, which was very much enjoyed. We hope to have him with us again soon.

Our Sunday school superintendent gave a splendid talk, also Mr. W. A. Davies. Others taking part were Misses Janey Blackwood, Gladys Snipes and Eleanor Craig. These young people did well. They take a very active part in our Sunday school and church work.

Our Sunday school attendance is very good, but there are quite a number yet we would be glad to have join us.

We were glad to have Mr. Cicero Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Riley, of Hillsboro, worship with us.

MRS. L. C. DAVIS, Reporter.

Spring Valley, Vance Circuit.—Since Conference the flu has visited nearly every home in the community, yet none was claimed by death. Our Sunday school is getting back to normal, and attendance very good, but could be better.

The first two months of the Conference year we were without a pastor, but we note with gladness that Bro. O'Brient was willing to accept Vance Circuit, and also thank Bro. Taylor for the assignment.

On Sunday afternoon, February 3, the "Youth in Service" program was rendered. C. B. Baskett presided. Miss Hicks read the 10th chapter of Romans. Miss Elizabeth Fox and Mr. Polk Garrett, of Henderson, sang two very appropriate selections, which were enjoyed by all. Mr. F. M. Harward, of the Christian Church, spoke forcibly on "Youth's Opportunity for Service in the Church of Today." Bro. O'Brient, our pastor, talked a few minutes on "Youth and the New Century Service." Miss Kathleen Paschall, of New Hope, read a paper on "Youth in Training for Service in the Church of Tomorrow," and by special request I am sending it to the editor to be published.

With best wishes and much success to the Herald readers.
C. B. BASKETT.

From English Street to Randolph Charge.—It is late, perhaps, to write about the church first mentioned. However, there is an old saying that it is better late than never.

I regretted very much that it was necessary for me to leave them as pastor, having only served them one year. It was no fault of theirs or mine that made it necessary that I move on. I never served a more loyal charge than the English Street charge, and we bespeak for them a good year's work under the wise leadership of their good and efficient new pastor. We will always remember the kindness of these good people.

We began our work on the Randolph charge the second Sunday in November. We have been kindly received by all the churches. This is a strong charge numerically. And we find a large number of good folks who are loyal to the church and to Christ. We have held our first quarterly conference. The business of the conference was transacted in the spirit of love. The conference ordered the trustees of the parsonage to repair and paint the parsonage inside and out. So the carpenter and painter are busy. When they get through with their work the pastor will take possession of it.

All of the churches have paid some on college running expenses. Bethel church has paid its full quota.

I am hoping for a good year and believe we will have it.

D. I. GARNER, Pastor.

Lebanon Church, High Point.—We are "living and glad of it." Several who have been sick have been restored to health again and are back in their respective places. Our attendance has been good considering the weather and sickness.

We are doing a little remodeling to our church on the inside and are all gratified with the result because it not only looks better but it makes us all feel better.

Last Sunday morning our pastor, Rev. Edw. Suits, brought a most appropriate and much enjoyed message to the young women of our church on the subject, "A wise woman buildeth her house, but a foolish one teareth it down," and we were all reminded that if we would be a wise woman we would build our house of character with a room of industry, a room of modesty, a room of influence and a room of happiness. At the close of the service three new members were added to our church.

This was the opening service of the Young People's Week combined with Christian Endeavor Week. We are a little behind in observing this week but on account of our church being remodeled it was impossible to do so earlier. The young people will have different services during the week and on next Sunday at the 11 o'clock hour Rev. Mr. Suits will bring a message to the young men of the church. At the evening church hour the young people will have charge and will present a pageant at which time an offering will be taken which will apply on our general conference budget.

On account of the bad weather the Missionary Societies had to postpone their meetings until Wednesday of this week, at which time the thank-offering boxes will be opened.

ASSISTANT REPORTER.

Mathews Chapel, Greensville Circuit.—Rev. E. G. Cowan delivered a good message February 3rd.

We look forward to our preaching Sundays. Our pastor brings to us very helpful and inspiring sermons.

Our Sunday school is very good, but we hope to have a better one when spring comes.

The C. E. Society has been closed for a few weeks, though we expect to begin again soon, with a larger attendance and better service.

We are sorry to report that Mr. Jesse Moore of Roanoke Rapids, N. C., was instantly killed at a grade crossing January 24. His body was brought to his old home near Brunswick for burial.

REPORTER.

Mt. Pleasant.—Since our last report our sick have improved. Bros. Peter Grrett and John Lineberry are very much improved.

Again we have received gifts from Mrs. R. C. Causey, Mrs. L. L. Bowman, Mrs. Thomas Smith, Miss Fern Amick and Mrs. S. E. Soots. We appreciate these people and their gifts.

G. F. MILLAWAY.

Liberty, N. C., Route 2.

Orange Charge, Hebron Church.—The young people's program was put on yesterday p. m. at this place. This program was gotten up by local talent. Each number on the program was well rendered. Think all present enjoyed the exercises.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Asheboro.—One week ago at the evening service the young people had charge of the program and gave a good account of themselves.

Yesterday we had 196 in Sunday school and good congregations both morning and evening. At the evening hour the sermon was by Brother Robert Lloyd of our church here and all who heard him were well pleased with the sermon.

Our second monthly letter has gone out to our out-of-town members and we have had some very gracious acknowledgements. The members living away seem to enjoy the monthly letter from the church back home. The pastor runs them off on the Rotospeed, so the cost of printing and mailing amount to only about a dollar and a quarter.

We have had a number of cases of rather serious sickness for the past few weeks. Brother R. R. Ross is some better today and Mrs. John Swaim and Mr. Elmer Rich both seem to be pulling up again.

Miss Edna Holder, who was a student at High Point College before undergoing an operation several weeks ago, is beginning to get out again now.

Early yesterday morning, February 10, many people in Asheboro were deeply grieved to know that Mrs. W. J. Scarboro has passed away during the night. Mrs. Scarboro before her marriage was Miss Nella Hammer, daughter of the late Rev. and Mrs. W. C. Hammer, and was 60 years of age. She was a Methodist Protestant all her life until 1910, when she joined the Asheboro M. E. church with her husband. She was a fine Christian woman and will be greatly missed. The funeral will be held this (Monday) afternoon at the Asheboro M. E. church. She is survived by her husband and two daughters, Miss Bera Scarboro and Mrs. Thomas Myett, of Asheboro; by three sisters, Mrs. W. F. Redding, Mrs. Louella Lovett, of Asheboro, and Mrs. Ivey Clark, of California; two brothers, Bolliver Hammer, of Lynchburg, Va., and the Hon. W. C. Hammer, Congressman from North Carolina.

Methodist Protestants in different parts of North Carolina where the Rev. W. C. Hammer served churches will sympathize deeply with these relatives.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Draper.—Everything is going along fine. The flu is dying out. Mrs. Maggie Pate, who has been in the hospital, is about well again. Bro. J. H. Craig, the father of the undersigned, is improving nicely. His burns are healing nicely.

Bro. J. S. Riddle brought us a fine sermon at the 11 o'clock service today. We were glad to have him with us. He always brings us a message which does us good.

Our plans for our new church are still going forward very well.

Sister Totten does not get much better. We are hoping to see her improve.

LEWIS C. CRAIG.

THE CHAMPION ECONOMIST

In ages past the world has seen
Far-sighted men with vision keen,
Their minds made up, their purpose tense
With maddened zeal to save expense.

They've shouted loud their varied plans,
Among all nations, in all lands;
They've made some converts here and there,
They've failed to win men ev'rywhere.

Undaunted still, they've persevered,
Determined that they shall be heard.
With foam and furor they expound
Their noble creed to all around.

To make all rich and make none poor
Is their problem in broad contour.
To save o'er head, o'er foot as well,
Affords them great delight to tell.

The housing problem would they solve
In way least labor would involve:
They'd build one house where all would thrive
Like one great swarm of bees in hive.

To feed them all would not perplex,
For all would eat in great annex
At public board with bounty spread,
And troubling thought in no man's head.

For transportation they'd provide
A mighty car, both long and wide,
And all who will would ride away
To spend together a joyful day.

To cap the climax comes a man
To present to us a clothing plan.
He'd robe us all from hat to boot
In all-inclusive plural suit.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Taylor

Mrs. Martha E. Taylor, mother of J. R. and F. M. Taylor, died at the home of J. R. Taylor near Enfield, N. C., Monday morning, February 4, at the age of 77 years, after a lingering illness caused by rheumatism and complications.

The deceased, who was the daughter of Georgianna McWilliams and J. C. Marks, was born May 10, 1851, in Edgecombe county, near Tarboro. She became the wife of J. R. Taylor in 1875 and moved to Halifax county where she lived the rest of her life. She supported her three small sons by sewing after the death of her husband in 1884. One of the sons, Phillip, died at the age of 19 years.

Mrs. Taylor was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South from her early youth. She had been a semi-invalid for several years and was confined to her bed for four months prior to her death Monday morning.

She is survived by two sons, J. R. and F. M. Taylor, both of Enfield; nine grandchildren, and a number of relatives and friends.

Interment took place February 5 in the family burying ground with Rev. C. L. Spencer, of the Methodist Protestant Church, conducting the service. Relatives of the deceased acted as pallbearers, and granddaughters and friends bore the flowers.

Stanley

It is with hearts full of sadness that we, the members of the Mizpah Philathea Class record the death of one of our most consecrated and faithful members, Mrs. R. L. Stanley. In her death we have lost a true friend, one who was faithful in all interests of the church. Whereas, her death has brought sorrow to her family, and to her church;

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to His divine will.
2. That we extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved family, and commend them to the Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well.
3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, a copy be spread upon the minutes of the Philathea class, a copy be sent to the Reidsville Review and to the Methodist Protestant Herald for publication.

MRS. GEORGE HARRISON,
MRS. M. L. WAGONER,
MISS RUTH HILL,

Committee.

Neal

Henry Mason Neal, the son of Henry and Nora Neal, passed to his reward on January 17, 1929. He lacked just a few weeks of being 21 years of age. He was called from this life in the bloom of his young manhood. Just why God saw fit to call him so early will probably not be understood by us. He was ill only a very few days, having contracted pneumonia after a case of the "flu." In childhood he united with the Whitaker's Chapel M. P. Church, moving his membership to the Enfield M. P. church a few years ago. In later years he had got away from the influence of the church, which made his passing so much more difficult to those who loved him most. The singing of parts of the little song, "Jesus loves me, this I know, for the Bible tells me so," just before he passed made us all hope that all had been righted between him and his God. He has passed from us and we trust to join his mother who preceded him just a few years ago.

The funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Revs. Anderson and Martin, of the Baptist and Methodist churches.

"Therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh."
J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Bonkemeyer

Mrs. Nancy Jane Hendricks Bonkemeyer, daughter of the late Penuel and Susannah Hendricks, and wife of Thomas J. Bonkemeyer, fell asleep in Christ on Wednesday, February 6, 1929, at the age of sixty-one years, nine months and five days. Mrs. Bonkemeyer was brought up on the Hendricks farm about three miles northeast of Asheboro, but at the time of her death was living about two miles southeast of Asheboro. She was united in marriage to Mr. Bonkemeyer on December 25, 1880. In early life she united with Giles' Chapel Methodist Protestant Church and remained a faithful member until her death. For the past several years she has been in poor health and not able to go to church, but she still loved her Lord. The writer has known her all his lifetime and has seen her grow in grace and ripen for eternity. Just a few hours before she went away the writer prayed with her and then she prayed a remarkable prayer. After this she gave a strong testimony of her faith in Christ and her readiness to go, then said she wanted Rev. G. F. Millaway and Rev. C. H. Miller to assist the writer in her funeral. The funeral was held at Giles' Chapel on February 8 and was in accordance with her wishes as stated above. She lived in fellowship with her Lord and died in the faith.

She is survived by her husband and by four children, Mrs. A. J. Craven, Talmadge Bonkemeyer, Mrs. Carson Winningham and Mrs. J. Frank Jones, all of near Asheboro, and by two brothers, George and Madison Hendricks, of Asheboro, Route 1, and by eight grandchildren.
J. E. PRITCHARD.

Boger

Mrs. Mollie Markland Boger, aged 75 years, 4 months and 6 days, passed to her reward Sunday morning, January 27, 1929. She had been a faithful member of Union Chapel M. P. church for many years. Although she had not been able to be out of the house for three years, she did not forget her church.

Mrs. Boger leaves to mourn her death her loving companion, Mr. J. W. Boger, who has stood by her side through health and sickness with an undying love; one daughter, Mrs. E. B. Barney, of Mocksville, N. C.; two sons, Messrs. L. P. Boger, of Winston-Salem, N. C., and E. C. Boger, of Martinsville, Va. Two children which died in infancy have gone on before her. She also leaves one brother, Mr. George Markland, of Advance, N. C.; one sister, Mrs. Emma Eaton, of Salisbury, N. C., and five grandchildren.

Those who have lived by her side for years have said of her that "never a better woman lived."

The funeral service was conducted at Union Chapel church January 28, 1929, by her pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton, assisted by Rev. H. T. Penry, of Southmont, and Rev. Mr. Templeton, of Winston-Salem. The love that Mrs. Boger's friends had for her was very beautifully expressed in the large and beautiful floral offering which covers her grave.

Mann

On January 28, 1929, Orange Chapel Church, of Saxapahaw charge, as well as the entire community, met with a great loss when the angel of death visited the home of Brother Warden W. Mann and took away the soul of his beloved wife, Mrs. Daisy Thompson Mann.

Sister Mann gave her heart to Christ in early life and joined Orange Chapel Methodist Protestant Church. To this church she proved a faithful member until death.

Besides her husband she leaves six children to mourn the loss of a good mother. To them we extend our sympathy. May God our Father enable them to bear their sorrow and heal their broken hearts in our prayer.

The body was laid to rest under a beautiful blanket of flowers in Orange Chapel cemetery, the service being conducted by her pastor.
O. C. LOY, Pastor.

Nelson

Annie Nelson, the 11-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Nelson, died January 21, 1929. She had been ill several months, having been carried to a Greensboro hospital a few months ago. All that medical aid and loving hands could do was done. The funeral service was conducted January 22 by Rev. J. D. Cranford at Pine Grove church, and the body laid to rest in the church cemetery.

Annie was a sweet, lovable, bright girl, having endeared herself not only to her mother and father and little sisters and brothers, but to all who knew her. For to know her was to love her. She always met her friends with a smile. I knew her well before the hand of affliction laid its finger upon her and I visited her in the days of affliction.

Her young life is gone but will not be forgotten. So we think the Master has added a choice flower to His bouquet.

We extend to the bereaved family, relatives and friends our heart-felt sympathy in their great sorrow, and we commend them to our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well. When we reach that Home above, O, then we'll understand it all.
A FRIEND.

Judge Adamson

The passing of Judge William Charles Adamson during Christmas week is a distinct loss to the Methodist Protestant church, not only in his native state of Georgia, but to the entire denomination. His forbears were lifelong Methodist Protestants, and, though many of his eventful years were spent away from his church, he never left her fellowship and never lost interest in her activities.

He was a prominent lawyer, a distinguished statesman, and a noted judge. He served for 22 years in the Congress of the United States. He was the author of the famous Adamson Railway Bill. He was the chairman of the powerful committee on interstate and foreign commerce during the late war. As an expression of his appreciation of the worth and character of Judge Adamson, President Wilson appointed him an associate judge of the customs court of New York, an office of life tenure and fine compensation. He occupied the position with distinguished ability for ten years. About one year ago he retired on full pay. He leaves a wife and three sons.

He was an uncle of Mrs. Geo. R. Brown, of Reidsville, N. C.

Clifton

Mrs. Pennie Etta Clifton died January 26, 1929, "God touched her finger and she fell asleep." She was born October 8, 1864, She professed faith in Christ at an early age and united with Woodley's Chapel Methodist Protestant church to which she remained loyal until death. She is survived by her sister, Mrs. Malissa Davenport, and brother, Mr. Hardie Woodley, and lots of nieces and nephews, also many friends. She was released from a body of pain and carried to that home beyond the sky where the weary find rest and suffering is no more. She is not dead, but in the beauty of her spirit and in her good deeds she lives and will live in the hearts of those who knew her best and loved her most. She lives here and in God's summer land. She lives in all the glory of a life that death can not touch. Her mansion was ready and she had to go and take charge.

Her funeral was conducted at the home of her sister by Rev. R. L. Hethcox, and a large crowd was present. Her body was laid to rest near her home, where she and her husband had planned for their resting place, where they were both buried. She was well known, and every one that knew her said that she was a good Christian woman. She would always tell us to be good and always remain loyal to her church, and God would bless us all. To her sorrowing people and saddened friends we give what consolation may be imparted from heart to heart and that glorious hope which comes from a life well lived in the light of man and in the presence of the Lord.

MARRIED

Cox-Reis

Announcement has just been made of a wedding of great interest to a large circle of relatives and friends, which was solemnized January 3rd last at Folkstone, Ga., when Mr. Fletcher Cox, of High Point, and Miss Aline Reis, of Tampa, Fla., plighted their troth. The groom, who is well known here, is the older son of Mrs. H. S. Meredith, nee Miss Jessie Pickett, and is a grandson of the late Mr. O. R. Cox, of Asheboro, and also of the late Mr. William P. Pickett and Mrs. Pickett, of High Point. He was graduated from Oak Ridge Institute, and at present holds a position with his uncle, Mr. John S. Pickett, in Welch Furniture Company, of this city. His young bride is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Reis, of Tampa, Fla., and received her education at Florida State Woman's College, Tallahassee. Mr. and Mrs. Cox are at home for the present with Mr. and Mrs. John H. Walker, Jr., on Colonial Drive, Mrs. Walker being an aunt of the groom. A large number of friends join in extending congratulations and best wishes to this happy young pair.

High Point, Feb. 11.

A LITTLE GIRL'S QUESTIONS

How long, how wide, how deep, how high
Is Father's House beyond the sky?
Can it be told in yards and feet
Like Uncle's House on Market street?

How many rooms does it contain,
And will they all keep out the rain?
And are there many easy chairs
And el'vators 'stead of stairs?

What colored tints upon its walls;
What music rings throughout its halls?
What language do its people speak—
Chinese or English, French or Greek?

And will be know each other there?
Will Kate know me, will I know her?
Will Grandma still be Grandma there
And sit and knit in rocking-chair?

Will little girls there play with dolls
And little boys with bats and balls?
And will we have to go to school
And stay in if we break a rule?

On one sleety, icy day
Pastor Bates made bulletin say:
"Let him that thinketh he standeth Take heed lest he fall."

AGED MOTHER HONORED

A delightful birthday dinner was served at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stamey Mendenhall, Deep River section, High Point, Route No. 1, on last Monday, in honor of Mrs. M. J. Mendenhall, who had reached for 80th birthday on that day.

The table, laden with a large and plenteous variety of good things to eat, was spread in the yard in front of the home, where the aged mother could view the repast from her position on the porch.

GREENSBORO :: :: NORTH CAROLINA

After the meal, Rev. E. Lester Ballard, associate pastor of First Methodist Protestant Church, High Point, responded to a request to make a few remarks appropriate to the occasion. Among other things, he stated that the "hoary head" mentioned in the Bible represented age, experience, and glory, all of which "Mother" Mendenhall possessed. The talk was closed with prayer.

The only brother present was Mr. G. L. Hilton, with his wife, Mrs. Hilton. The children in attendance, with husbands and wives, were: Mr. and Mrs. Stamey Mendenhall, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Burton, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Myers, and Mrs. L. W. Johnson. The grandchildren, with their husbands, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Turner and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Payne; other grandchildren: Miss Grace Burton, Misses Zettie, Delphia, Alberta, Lila, and Messrs. Beecher, Calvin, and Nolan Johnson; Misses Bertha, Edith, and Mary Myers; Masters Paul and Samuel Mendenhall. The neighbors: Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Kimmey, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Gordon and daughter, Alma Jane, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Gordon and grandson, Odell Carmichael, Mrs. J. A. Bolling, Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Ballard.

REBIRTH

Mother earth is waiting
 For Springtime's gentle rain,
 To hasten the renaissance
 Of tree and flower again.

The human heart is waiting
 For Christ to come again,
 To heal mankind of selfishness
 And free them from all pain—

To open wide the door of Love
 That they may enter in To harmony and holiness
 Freed from sense of sin—

Where purity and honesty
 Will transform humankind,
 Where humility and goodness
 Enthroned the Christlike mind.

Christ, so full of selflessness,
 So full of Love divine,
 Help us pray: "Thy kingdom come,"
 Make Love our only shrine.

—Elizabeth Kleiser.

—Miss Ruth Monnett was at Calvary church last Sunday. Her friends were glad to see her so much improved in health.

"The Old Paths"

Jeremiah represents the Lord as exhorting men to ask for the old paths wherein is the good way. But there were in that day as in this those who would not hearken, who had a contempt for the old and wished to try new ways. But the old paths were trodden ways, they had been tried by many travelers and men knew whither they led, whereas the new ways may lead to unsuspected and dreadful evil. Both human experience and divine wisdom recommended the old paths. There was nothing but youthful fancy to lead out in the new ways. But then as now there were those who put their own fancy, perverted by evil passion, up against all the wisdom of men and the wisdom of God

In our own day the urge of youth against the wisdom of the past and in favor of the folly of the present is said to be unusually strong. Certain it is that some of the new generation are in confusion, under the influence of diverse teaching. Angels of darkness are posing as angels of light. The eternal truths of morality are being represented as merely fashions of an age. The divinity of the moral law is being questioned. In the name of personal liberty the just restraints of Heaven are being thrown off. Men who believe in God and the law of God are being represented as enemies of the race.

The prejudice wrought in youthful minds makes it harder to convince them of the truth. Many will learn only by tragic experience. It is a time to pray for young souls. They know so little and think they know so much and are so under the influence of those who would lead them to ruin. Father, deliver them from the evil one!

The True Objective in Religious Work

Many different points may take our attention in the work we do or try to do for the church. We may aim first of all and last of all at the sense of duty done. We may be content with the feeling that we have done our part, and settle down in easy complacency, quite willing to leave all concern about consequences to the Lord. But we may well doubt whether we have done our part if we have no regard for the consequences of our doing. That is the attitude of a slave rather than the attitude of a friend. Jesus called His disciples friends and He expects His disciples to be friends of God. Instead of leaving the consequences to the Lord, pleasing or displeasing as they may be, we should rather be much concerned to make the consequences such that God may find pleasure in them. We must not be content merely to work, but we must work to produce good results. It is not enough to satisfy our own consciences unless our consciences are linked up with the conscience of God.

Then we may make it our chief aim to meet the requirements of our position in the church, minister or layman. To preach so many sermons, lead so many prayer-meetings, pay so many dollars, attend so many services, raise our budgets, keep open house at the church, do what men expect of us, this may satisfy us because it satisfies men. But should it be so? Are we not still missing the main point of interest? Are we not losing sight of the end for which the church was founded and its work assigned? The church may be and is a training school, but it should be much more than that. It should be a great workshop, fashioning the lives of men, other men than those who compose its membership. It is not enough for the church to be putting forth effort: it must be doing work, it must be affecting lives, it must be inspiring and leading souls. The church that is a mere gymnasium, that merely provides exercise, is falling altogether short of its mission. It needs to lift up its eyes to the whitened fields.

The end to be kept in view lies out in the hearts and lives of men. O to save men, men, men! To bring men into God's great Kingdom, to lead them to the Holy Christ, to make them see and feel the beauty and glory of the life hid with Christ in God!

Immeasurable Love

Is there somewhere a shoreless sea
Whose waves roll on unceasingly,
Whose waters deep no sounding line
Can ever fathom or define?

Is there somewhere a mountain high
With towering peak above the sky,
Whose lofty height no man e'er scaled,
Though countless men have tried and failed?

Is there somewhere in boundless space
A field where worlds can run their race,
A track sublimely long and wide,
Requiring years from side to side?

No sea or mount or vast extent
Is great enough to represent
That mighty thing, that infinite love
Poured out on men by God above.

—We trust our people will take advantage of the opportunity to see and hear the representatives of the General Conference scheduled to be in some of our churches soon. It is due our church as a whole that we give earnest attention to the work it is trying to do, and these men who come are sacrificing their own ease that they may go through the church and talk about that work. They want our people to be intelligently interested so that they will voluntarily and joyfully do their part in furthering our Lord's work as He honors us by committing it to our hands.

WHY NOT GO ALL THE WAY?

By PHILOMATH

I have read with more or less interest the articles appearing in the HERALD from time to time on the subject of Church Union.

First, no new arguments have been used in favor of the proposition, and those used have been few and unconvincing.

Second, the proponents imply, if they do not positively aver, that they are not happy in their present church affiliations.

In their discussion of the question, our friends are not careful to distinguish between Church Union and Church Unity. There is a difference that ought not to be overlooked, for this difference is vital to the issue.

Union is the act of joining two or more things into one, while unity expresses a condition of harmony, concord, agreement. The one is mechanical; the other is spiritual. On one occasion the Psalmist exclaimed: "Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." No one, I suppose, will contend that the Psalmist was remarking about the oneness of the brethren, for it is plain that he was speaking of the spirit of harmony existing among them.

If unity, the spirit of concord, of harmony, of agreement, is what my brethren are pleading for, I shall not be averse to joining them in an endeavor to bring it about among the churches; but if they mean union, the bringing together of all churches into one, I hope I may not be too severely censured if I decline to join in the effort.

But why spend so much time discussing Church Union? Are the churches the only organizations in the world affecting human relationships? I think not. What about them?

If a union of the churches would be a good thing for the community, why would not a union of other organizations, made up as they are in large part of members of the various churches, be a good thing for the community also? From an economic point of view such a union might be urged. Why not in a city like High Point have only one real estate and insurance company? By such a union the cost of administration might be materially reduced. Under the present plan of doing business some of these concerns are flourishing while others of them are struggling most desperately to save themselves from financial ruin. Why permit this when union with other concerns would save them from anxiety and poverty?

The same thing would apply to bookstores. Why have a half dozen such stores in a small city when one could take care of all the book and stationery business at a great saving, if not to the consumer, at least to the dealer?

And then there are a multiplicity of homes in the city and in the country, all of them carrying on in pretty much the same way with the same object in view. Why such a waste in administration when all the people might be housed in one gigantic building, eat their meals in one room, be warmed by the same fuel, and clothed by the same tailor. At a tremendous saving in cost of buildings and administration? And thus we might go on with illustrations ad nauseam, ad infinitum.

What we need, it seems to me, is the spirit of unity among the churches. When this is realized, and it ought to be realized, the world will note "how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." Such a spirit of unity without doubt would be the means of bringing many churches and some denominations together in one blessed fellowship.

If our laymen would only succeed in working out a better way of doing business than they have now, such a way as would do away with so much bitter, even cruel, competition and insure a better spirit of unity among business interests, then it would be a most gracious thing if they would show the preachers and churches how to obtain a like spirit. But until that time comes would it not be the Christian thing for all of us to work like Trojans to more nearly approximate the great Spirit of our Lord Jesus Christ?

If we are to have union, if nothing else will satisfy us, why not go all the way and unite everything similar and dissimilar into one vast whole?

THEY ARE GOING TOO FAR

The women of the country give birth to its babies. These babies are fed through long months by the blood of the mother. Any drug in the blood of the mother circulates in the blood of the unborn child, for the child has no circulatory system of its own. How much of an evil the smoking of cigarettes by an adult woman is, we are not prepared to say. How much of an evil the smoking of a cigarette by a baby, born or unborn, is, every reasonable man knows. Thousands of men who have themselves used tobacco all of their lives are becoming incensed because of the advertising campaign intended to induce their wives and daughters to smoke cigarettes.

The Michigan Christian Advocate of January 24, 1929, denouncing the radio and newspaper advertising by which the tobacco trust is coining the blood of babies into dividends says: "The trust has overstepped in its greed." It quotes from the United Restaurant Owners' Association, which appeared before the Radio Commission protesting against the statement of an announcer who said:

"Helen Hayes is truly typical of the young dramatic stars; she is pretty, vivacious and with her genuine artistic style will make a great name. She realizes the value of a trim, slender figure. She cannot afford to nibble a fattening sweet. Instead, she lights a Lucky Strike and that is undoubtedly one reason she is called healthy. Here is what she writes: .

" 'Smoke a Lucky; snub a sweet with a disdainful glance. The first time is the hardest, but after you have smoked a Lucky the longing for a sweet disappears in smoke.' "

The Advocate will find in the ranks of its allies uncounted thousands of unchurched men who are not "anti-tobacco" as a general proposition, but who are decidedly against baby killing.—Contributed.

TOBACCO PROPAGANDA PENETRATES HOMES.

WILL H. BROWN

One of the big tobacco companies has been advertising cigarettes, over the radio, in a national hook-up. This should be protested by tens of thousands of owners of radios in the homes. To quote one editor: "This tobacco company, by way of the radio, is stealing into the sacred confines of our homes and advising our boys and girls to become users of cigarettes. Their programs are carefully worked out by highly paid men, who use every trick and smooth suggestion whereby they can lead the young to think it is manly, womanly to smoke cigarettes. They recommend cigarettes instead of candy. They tell of men and women in the limelight who use their brand. It is clearly a program of deception. They do not tell that the tobacco trust is giving those whom they quote large sums of money to use their names in order to victimize unsuspecting youth."

The school officials of Whittier, California, have taken sensible action by barring from the school library there all magazines containing advertisements of cigarettes or tobacco of any kind. Such action should be taken by school boards everywhere.

It is gratifying to learn, in face of the greed of the tobacco men to capture the youth of the land, that they frequently run up against stolid resistance to their efforts on the part of the great middle class of young people themselves. Miss Jane Addams, head of Hull House, Chicago, denies that they are going to the bad. She says that there is not as much smoking and drinking among them as among the so-called upper class of society.

The Post-Gazette says: "Quiet, forceful young men and women, who will be found at the helm of affairs by the time they reach middle years, are not being diverted from their missions in life by noise or notoriety."

The Boston Post says that of 250 students composing the freshman class at Tufts College in the fall of 1928, only 82 were smokers—less than one-third.

MY PURPOSE FOR THE NEW YEAR

To be a little kinder with the passing of each day,
To leave but happy memories as I go along the way;
To use possessions that are mine in service full and free,
To sacrifice trivial things for larger good to be;
To give of love in lavish way that friendship true may live,
To be less quick to criticize, more ready to forgive,
To use such talents as I have that happiness may grow,
To take the bitter with the sweet, assured 'tis better so;
To be quite free from self-intent whate'er the task I do,
To help the world's faith stronger grow in all that's good and true;
To keep my faith in God and right no matter how things run,
To work and play and pray and trust until the journey's done;
God grant to me the strength of heart, of motive, and of will,
To do my part, and falter not, this purpose to fulfill.

PERSONAL RELIGION

There is really no other kind. In the strict sense there is no such thing as a national religion. Jesus showed in the parable of the Ten Virgins that there can be no proxy in religion. One must be religious for himself or he has no religion. Hugh Elmer Brown stated the thought in modern business terms in The Congregationalist thus: "You can hire a man to do your breathing for you as easily as you can hire a man to do your praying for you." Yet a good many try to do this. But it "will not work."—Selected.

—Dr. Lyman E. Davis, editor of the Methodist Recorder, recently made a trip to California and refers to it as "Two Weeks in Wonderland." On his return he spent a Sunday in Kansas City, preaching in two of our churches. The church formerly known as the University church is now called the Stephens Memorial Church, perpetuating the memory of that self-sacrificing pioneer, Dr. D. S. Stephens.

THE CHURCH

The church is the noblest and best organization in the world. It furnishes the best examples of righteous living. It produces the finest specimens of character of which this world has any knowledge. It exercises the largest influence in the work of reform. It is one sure and steadfast promoter and supporter of reform. Whatever good is in the world has come through the avenues of the church. Both directly and indirectly it promotes and safeguards public morals. It started all the stir that there has been in China. It was the awakening power in India and Japan. It conserves the peace and happiness of the community. It promotes honest, progressive and beneficent government. It does the most to promote the sentiments of love, brotherly kindness and good neighborhood. It does the most to promote clean, strong, brave, self-sacrificing and efficient citizens and public servants. It does the most to make and maintain the home as a place of virtue, love, righteousness, comfort and happiness. It sympathizes with the weak, the wronged and oppressed and pleads for social justice more than any other institution. It stands almost universally and uncompromisingly for the right and against the wrong. It brings to all classes and conditions of people the best and most comforting and hope-inspiring messages regarding their sorrows, their sufferings and what all must face—death. The aim of the church is to proclaim the gospel throughout the whole world. Give the church your best service. Christ loved the church and gave Himself for it. Live by the church, stand by the church and die by the church.—Selected.

MISSIONS

The greatest thing in the world is Christian missions. The same is not only co-equal with the Christian religion, but is the real spirit of religion. Therefore the spirit of Christianity is the spirit of missions and the spirit of missions is the spirit of Christianity.

A person has no more of the Christian religion than he possesses of the missionary spirit and missionary endeavor. Hence, missions are fundamental and foundational to the church life, and not a foundation of sand either, but that of solid rock.

Missions are both the divine spirit and the divine method. The very first thing Andrew did after conversion was missionary work in the interest of his brother, Simon Peter, and he won him to Jesus, and immediately after conversion Phillip found Nathaniel and led him to Christ. Jesus said to His disciples, "Go, ye, into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," and again, "Ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem and in Judea and in Samaria and unto the uttermost parts of the earth." Can you find anywhere in all the world a greater authority for missions, home and foreign? And can there be any misunderstanding as to the work of missions and the authority for the same? Could there be any stronger missionary spirit and a plainer method of operation than found in these words of Jesus. Missions are the divine command, therefore, as set forth in the scriptures. Early converts carried out the spirit and injunction of our Lord, so did their successors and theirs, to the newly discovered world, even our own America. All we are today or ever will be is and must be by the missionary enterprise. We have carried this same gospel to the uttermost parts of the earth practically, and today the liveliest interest and greatest responsibility of the church is missions—domestic and foreign.

Our own Methodist Protestant Church at the last General Conference made the cause of missions our dominant note and greatest responsibility by declaring that 73 per cent of all General Conference monies raised shall be devoted to the missionary work at home and abroad. What a challenge to every church missionary society and individual member of the church. What will Methodist Protestants do with this challenge and obligation? Meet it or decline it, and in the latter instance who is willing to assume the responsibility for failure or even neglect?

But after all is said and done, have we the real missionary spirit today in our churches from the pastor down? A prominent minister of the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church said to the writer recently that since being out of the active pastorate he had visited many of their churches on Sunday to worship, and in ten years he had not heard a real missionary sermon from the pulpit. Is this true with Methodist Protestant preachers? "Like priest, like people." When the pulpit rings true and missionary sermons are frequently preached by pastors—when they urge their people to become active in the cause of missions the missionary tide will rise rapidly and both indifference and opposition to missions will soon be transformed into enthusiastic effort in the worldwide conquest for Christ and all humanity.

Methodist Protestant churches and peoples have a supreme opportunity in which to share their missionary spirit and meet their missionary obligations to their fellowmen at the coming Easter season. There can be no more fitting way in which to celebrate the resurrection of our Lord—whose resurrection guarantees the final resurrection of every human being—than to catch the missionary spirit to the extent of our best endeavor in a sacrificial offering with which to meet our missionary responsibility and obligation to Christ and His church and through which to help Christianize those souls equally precious in the sight of God. To assist in this endeavor an attractive Easter program with Passion Week offering envelope and decision cards are ready to be furnished free to all churches and church organizations. Please send in your order at once to the Board of Missions, 516 North Charles Street, Baltimore, Md., or 613 West Diamond Street, N. S., Pittsburgh, Pa.

May every church and Sunday school in the denomination use the denominational Easter program this year. Send in your orders with a rush and they will be filled immediately. We are much in prayer for the greatest Easter season in the history of our church. Let every one join us in this prayer and all will be well.

GEO. W. HADDAWAY, Secretary.

EASTER ORDERS ARE COMING IN

The beautiful Easter service prepared by the Board of Missions is now ready for distribution among our churches and Sunday schools of the Methodist Protestant Church. With this service is furnished Passion Week self-denial offering envelopes and decision cards to be used during Lent in the work of soul-winning for Christ and the church membership. All of these supplies are furnished free.

Orders are pouring into the office daily and are being filled just as rapidly as they come.

By the way, brother pastor and Sunday school superintendent, have you sent in your order for supplies? If not, why not at once. There is no time for delay between now and Easter if the denomination is to enjoy the most successful Easter occasion yet observed.

Our slogan is, "Every church and Sunday school using the denominational Easter program this year."

Send your order by return mail to G. W. Haddaway, Executive Secretary, Board of Missions, 516 North Charles Street, Baltimore, Md.

ANNUITIES

Why not give your money to the Board of Missions while you live and enjoy the income therefrom the rest of your life without any responsibility or management on your part? We pay interest from four per cent to eight per cent, according to age.

G. W. H.

Our spirit and we trust that of every member of the Methodist Protestant Church is to lend full co-operation in all General Conference legislation. This is the way to a well regulated and prosperous church as well as the advancement of the interests of the Kingdom.

OPTIMISM

The President's Letter

EVANGELISM

*Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit;
so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.*

“At Your Best”

“Always represent your company at your best,” was the advice given by an experienced and successful sales manager to a young man who was trying to be a salesman, but who seemed totally ignorant of the essentials of salesmanship. We do not pretend to be wise in the ways of trade, but we can readily see that this was sound advice. How much more so, then, for the minister of Jesus Christ. Surely he should represent his business at its best. And this involves his personal integrity; it involves his personal appearance; it involves his attitude towards folks; it involves his understanding of the Bible that he teaches; it involves his ability to plan and execute church programs; it involves his working tendencies; it involves his intelligent understanding of the history, doctrine, and polity of the church which he represents; it involves his personal knowledge of Jesus Christ and the saving power of his gospel. Surely this is enough to stir any minister with a profound sense of his high calling, and to move him to an unflagging purpose to represent his business at its best.

Change of Program

Owing to information that the committee did not have when the schedule was made out for Dr. Straughn and his co-laborers, we have found it necessary to make changes in the plan of appointments. Instead of four simultaneous meetings a day, as we had originally planned, there will be only two. This has also necessitated other changes. But there is yet sufficient time to make these corrections so that no confusion or misunderstanding will follow.

We are publishing the revised and final program this week. Please, pastors, acquaint yourselves with it, and give it the widest possible publicity among your people. We want these brethren to have the ear of just as many of our people as possible. The larger the hearing, the greater the good, of course.

Thank-Offering

We are still calling upon our churches for this offering. We expect the women to look after this in churches where there is a missionary society; but so many of our churches do not have a society. We are urging the pastors of these churches to present the matter, and give the people an opportunity to give, as they are disposed in their hearts. The money may be used for a much-needed missionary home in India. Tell the people that, and ask them to contribute for that definite purpose. February is the month for this offering.

Treasurer's Report

In the HERALD of last week Treasurer Brown gives us his report, covering all money received during the first quarter of this conference year. The total receipts amount to $4,802.59. This is not a bad total showing, though some causes are considerably short of what we would like to have to their credit. Forty-nine charges have contributed to High Point College maintenance fund. Seventeen charges have credits on the A. C. B.; 28 on the G. C. B.; and seven on the G. G. Of the total 90 charges, 69 have budget credits;

21 have no credits. As was expected, High Point College has received the lion's share of receipts up to this time. We only wish that the total $10,000 had been paid; but we have the remainder of the year in which to get the balance. The Gratitude Gift deficit has claimed special attention during this quarter, but we trust that enough has been raised to meet the obligation on account of this deficit that will have to be paid in a short time. The balance will not be pressing for a few months. We must put the budgets on the main line now. We have an A. C. B. obligation that must be met within the next few weeks, and this can be done if all charges will send in even small amounts to be credited to this budget. Let us have no charge, brethren, at the end of this, the second quarter, without budget credits.

Please help us to realize our goal, “Something on the budgets each month.” If we will do this, our credits will be much larger at the end of the year. And for what you have done, brethren, and for what you have wanted to do for all of these causes, and intend to do, we assure you of our grateful thanks. The Lord bless you and reward you for all of your efforts to provide the financial necessities for His Kingdom.

North Davidson

February 17, Sunday.—This day was given to this charge in three services as follows: 11 a. m., Shiloh; 3 p. m., Friendship; 7 p. m., Bethesda. This was home territory and we, of course, knew each of these churches years ago. But we did not know then the churches that we found on this visit. All three of them had been completely changed, beautified, enlarged, and equipped for modern Sunday school work. We found the Sunday school in session upon our arrival at Shiloh. The attendance was a little short of 300, about 270, we believe. It is our opinion that this is the largest rural Sunday school in the conference. We were greatly impressed with both the number and the spirit of the school. Each of these churches has a good all-the-year Sunday school. The school was just over upon our arrival at Friendship, so we did not get to see it in session. At both Shiloh and Friendship we found congregations that filled the churches; the attendance at Bethesda was not so large, owing to the bad roads and the night hour, though quite a number were present. It was at this church that we were licensed to preach, and at Shiloh we attempted our first sermon. We enjoyed worshipping with these homefolks again, and were not unmoved by the cordial reception which they gave us. At Shiloh $30 was raised for the G. G., and $10.50 at Friendship—the total allotment for each church. The people at Shiloh are talking “station.” This is a strong church, and could, we think, easily maintain themselves as a station. We trust that it may be made a matter of prayer, and that they may be led to a wise decision. Our day with Pastor Troxler and his people was greatly enjoyed, and we are grateful to them for their kindnesses to us and for their generous response to our efforts. Bro. Troxler is serving his fifth year on this charge, and is very popular with his people. The indications are that this year will be one of excellent progress for the charge.

April 27, Sunday.—Orange charge.

"And we beseech you, brethren, to know them which labor among you, and are over you in the Lord, and admonish you;

"And to esteem them very highly in love for their work's sake."
S. W. TAYLOR.

THY HOME IS WITH THE HUMBLE

Thy home is with the humble, Lord!

The simplest are the best;

Thy lodging is in child-like hearts;

Thou makest there Thy rest.

Dear Comforter! Eternal Love!

If Thou wilt stay with me,

Of lowly thoughts and simple ways,

I'll build a house for Thee.

Who made this beating heart of mine

But Thou, my heavenly Guest?

Let no one have it then but Thee,

And let it be Thy rest.

Thy sweetness hath betrayed Thee, Lord!

Great Spirit, is it Thou?

Deeper and deeper in my heart

I feel Thee resting now.

—F. W. Faber.

TIMELY ADVICE

If you are impatient, sit down quietly and talk with Job.

If you are headstrong, see Moses.

If you are getting weak-kneed, take a good look at Elijah.

If there is no song in your heart, listen to David.

If you are a policy man, read Daniel.

If you are getting sordid, spend a while with Isaiah.

If you feel spiritually chilly, get the beloved disciple to put his arms around you.

If faith is below par, read Paul.

If you are getting lazy, commune with James.

If you are losing sight of the future, climb up the stairs of Revelation, and get a glimpse of the Promised Land.—Christian Workers' Magazine.

HELPFUL INFLUENCE OF PRAYER

If a sorrow comes upon you, and you omit prayer, you fall out of God's testing into the devil's temptation; you get angry, hard of heart, reckless. But meet the dreadful hour with prayer, cast your care on God, claim Him as your Father, though He seem cruel—and the degrading, paralyzing, embittering effects of pain and sorrow pass away, a stream of sanctifying and softening thought pours into the soul, and that which might have wrought your fall but works in you the peaceable fruits of righteousness. You pass from bitterness into the courage of endurance, and from endurance into battle, and from battle into victory, till at last the trial dignifies and blesses your life.—S. Brooke.

THE INFLUENCE OF EXAMPLE

An atheist who spent a few days with the saintly Fenelon said: "If I stay here much longer, I shall become a Christian in spite of myself." Fenelon had used no word of solicitation. It was but the quiet, convincing argument of a holy life, a consistent walk and conversation.

"I tried to be a skeptic when I was a young man," said Cecil, "but my mother's life was too much for me."

"My brethren," said an old African preacher, "a good example is the tallest kind of preaching." And he was right!

"There is an energy of moral suasion in a good man's life," said Dr. Chalmers, "passing the highest efforts of the orator's genius. The seen beauty of holiness speaks more eloquently of God and duty than the tongues of men and angels."—Selected.

A RULE OF LIFE

"I will try this day to live a simple, sincere and serene life, repelling promptly every thought of discontent, anxiety, discouragement, impurity, self-seeking; cultivating cheerfulness, magnanimity, charity, and the habit of holy silence; exercising economy in expenditure, generosity in giving, carefulness in conversation, diligence in appointed service, fidelity to every trust, and a childlike faith in God.

"In particular I will try to be faithful in those habits of prayer, work, study, physical exercise, eating and sleep, which I believe the Holy Spirit has shown me to be right.

"That all my powers with all their might

To God's sole glory may unite."

—George Eliot.

THE FAULTFINDING HABIT

The chronic faultfinder is but a step from the growler and the growler is headed toward cynicism. And the cynic is of no value to himself or any one else. The world has no place for him because his mind has become twisted and his heart has become sour. No greater tragedy can overtake a man than for his heart to become a vinegar jug.

It is the part of wisdom and safety to avoid the very beginning of all these by refusing to become a faultfinder. On the contrary, learn to think beautiful thoughts and to speak pleasant words. Carry sunshine in your soul and a smile upon your face. The end of such a man is happiness and peace.—N. C. Advocate.

A JEWISH FOLKTALE

One day a certain old rich man, of a miserly disposition, visited a rabbi, who took the rich man by the hand and led him to a window.

"Look out there," he said.

The rich man looked out into the street.

"What do you see?" asked the rabbi.

"I see men and women and little children," answered the rich man.

Again the rabbi took him by the hand, and this time led him to a mirror. "What do you see now?"

"Now I see myself," the rich man replied.

Then the rabbi said: "Behold, in the window there is glass, and in the mirror there is glass! But the glass of the mirror is covered with a little silver, and no sooner is the silver added than you cease to see others, but see only yourself!"—Record of Christian Work.

OUR STORY PAGE

THE DIAMOND SMUGGLER

It was Jimmy Turner who discovered the secret panel and found the vase, not me. But it was me who saw the detectives in the Captain's cabin and heard the Captain say that he knew nothing about the famous diamonds that were being smuggled into the country.

"Listen here," said one of the detectives. "Those diamonds are on board this ship and we're going to find them. You're the Captain and so we're going to hold you as our prisoner until we find them."

At the mention of prisoners, I shuddered and moved away from the suit of armor near which I was standing. It wasn't really a suit of armor. It was an instrument of torture, with spikes inside that could be screwed into the convict who was condemned to the "Iron Maiden" for punishment. It dated away back to the day of the English prison trade. So did the ship for that matter, but just at present she was a floating museum with everything fixed up horrible just as it was in the old days.

"Let's go down to the dock and watch her come in," Jimmy had said, never dreaming what would happen.

"All right," I agreed. "Maybe we'll get a chance to see something for nothing."

I was only joking at the time, but what I said came true. We saw the ex-convict ship sail up the harbor looking like Old Ironsides going into battle, and when she got close to the dock we helped the men throw the ropes over the bollards. Bollards are like hitching posts, only they are for ships and not for horses.

The Captain must have liked how we helped around, because he leaned over the side of the ship and called us on board.

"You look like two willing boys," he said. "How would you like a job for about three hours or so?"

We jumped at the chance, and it was down in what they call the "Rat's Hole" that Jimmy discovered the vase.

The Captain said: "This is where the old prison traders used to keep the men who were condemned to death. If these four walls could weep, they would run rivers of tears for the suffering they have seen. I want you to shine the brass name plates on the instruments of torture."

I took the rag and began rubbing the sign which told about the whipping post and how many lashes a prisoner used to get every day, while Jimmy started in on a salt water "bath tub." We hadn't been working more than ten minutes when I heard a sound like a folding door going easily into its place followed by a cry from Jimmie.

"Ral!"

"What's the matter?"

"A hole in the wall! A secret passage or something."

"How'd you do it?"

"I don't know. I must have pressed a hidden button by accident."

"Where did you have your hand?"

"Near the top of this chain."

I put my hand where he pointed and began feeling around. Soon one of my fingers hit a soft spot so I held it there and pressed. The panel slid back into place.

"It's a secret passage all right!" gasped Jimmie. "I wonder where it leads?"

"We'll find out," I said, pressing the wall again at the right spot. But we didn't find out after all, because when Jimmie stooped down to go in, he found out that it wasn't a passage at all, but just a cupboard. He put in his hand and pulled out this vase.

"Funniest vase I ever saw," he said. "Wonder what's inside?"

While Jimmy tried to get the lid off, I pressed the button again and closed up the hole in the wall; which was lucky, for a half-second later a dark man whom I wouldn't trust with a nickel came into the "Rat's Hole" and snatched the vase out of Jimmie's hand.

He spoke to us angrily.

"You two boys shine the brass like the Captain told you to do, and don't touch things that belong to somebody else."

Jimmy felt badly and so did I. We apologized and started to work again. The man frowned at us for a minute or so, and then left the room, taking the vase with him.

In about twenty minutes we had finished all the brass plates in the "Rat's Hole," and so Jimmy sent me to look for the Captain and find out what else we had to do. That was how I happened to be in the cabin while he was being cross-questioned by the two detectives.

"There is a secret closet on this ship somewhere," said the first detective, "and we have a tip that it is full of contraband jewels from India. Do you know of any such closet?"

"No," replied the Captain. "I don't."

Then I spoke up and told them what I knew. I told them about the button and the sliding panel and about the man who had taken the vase, and I had no sooner finished when the chief of the detectives began to give orders:

"Jack, I want you to stay here and guard the Captain. Don't let him move from this room. We've got two men at the gangway, so the smuggler can't escape that way. I'll go with this boy to the 'Rat's Hole' and examine this secret panel."

But when we got to the door of the room where we had been working, it was locked!

I yelled for Jimmie but got no answer. We shook the door, pounded on it, demanded to be let in. Then the chief found an axe and broke it down.

There was Jimmie strapped against the whipping post, with irons rapped around his feet, and a gag in his mouth! As soon as he was freed, he told us what had happened:

"The man who took the vase came back, slammed the door, locked it and put the key into his pocket. Then he gagged me and tied me to this post. 'If you tell them where I've gone, I'll kill you,' he said. Then he pressed the button, opened the secret panel and disappeared."

"But he couldn't disappear," said Chief Rowllins, looking into the hole. "This is only a cupboard. A man could scarcely get his body in here."

He stooped down and stepped over the ledge of the low closet. Then he gave a cry of surprise and alarm. He clutched at the ledge in an effort to save himself, but he was too late. We saw him go down through the floor of the cupboard, and a moment later heard an ominous splash as he fell into the water.

"It's a chute!" cried Jimmie. "It dropped him over the side!"

"Come on!" I yelled. "He's a detective and he's looking for the man who tied you up!"

We ran out on deck and threw over a lifebuoy to the Chief. Then I went to get the two men who were guarding the gangway. They helped us to rescue the Chief and then we all got in a small motorboat and began to search the bay for the smuggler, whom we were sure was in the water somewhere.

We were right. After looking for about half an hour, we found him underneath the dock about a mile away from the ex-convict ship. In the pockets of his pants the detectives found handfuls of rough, unpolished diamonds, which he was trying to bring into the United States without paying duty on them.

"Worth about half a million dollars, I guess," commented Chief Rowlin. "It is the biggest haul that we've ever made. And I guess we've got these two young boys to thank for helping us to get our man."

Both Jimmie and I laughed and said we were proud to help Uncle Sam catch anybody who was breaking the laws.

"That's the right spirit. Now any time you two boys want any advice or anything done in the detective line, come over to headquarters and I'll do what I can for you."

"Thanks, Mr. Rowlin," answered Jimmie. "Some day I'll be around looking for a job. I've always wanted to be a detective."

And so that is what Jimmie and I have to look forward to. In the meantime, though, we're working on the ex-convict ship showing people around. We've got blue uniforms and everything, and every time we take people down into the "Rat Hole" we tell them the story of the diamonds, and when they don't believe it, we press the button and show them the chute leading down into the water. That proves everything and we got along fine until one day a man with thick glasses who didn't hear very well asked us why we needed such a big hole for so small an animal as a rat!—Selected.

THE POTTER'S WHEEL

Let us make no mistake about it. God's purpose for us is more beautiful and more wonderful than any dream we have ever dreamed for ourselves. "Eye hath not seen, ear hath not heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man to conceive the things which God hath prepared for those who love him."

The wheel that shapes us is life itself. The circumstances upon which our characters are fashioned. The wheel is hard and merciless. It is no respecter of persons. Under its cruel tyranny men are beaten and broken. Under its pressure men are fashioned and made. It is morally neutral. It sends one to college and another to prison. It bestows upon one an intolerable handicap and upon another a price-less inheritance; and upon the wheel the vessel that the potter held in his hand was marred and broken; and yet it was upon that same wheel that the vessel was re-fashioned and formed into a vessel of honor.

We cannot escape the swift-turning process of the inexorable wheel, but upon this same wheel one life is fashioned into success and another into failure. I have just read Senator Beveridge's revealing life of Lincoln. The wheel upon which Abraham Lincoln was fashioned was more cruel and heartless and hard than I had even thought. The life out of which he came was narrow and restricted. He was handicapped by circumstances in which poverty and ignorance and vulgarity abounded and yet upon that wheel he was fashioned into the noblest character which America immortalizes in her hall of fame.

Side by side with this life of Lincoln, I would like to put John Morley's life of William E. Gladstone, who ranks among the immortals of British history. Gladstone's life was formed in kindlier circumstances. He administered wealth from youth to age. He possessed everything that the colleges and schools of England could contribute. And yet upon that wheel of fortune the character of Gladstone was fashioned into a vessel of honor, an example of integrity and sincerity which has been an ideal to multitudes of men who never met him. Circumstances are only plastic clay in the hands of character; and rich and poor, learned and unlearned, those born into handicaps and those born into an inheritance, may have their characters moulded and fashioned after the model of the Master himself.—Banner.

THE BIBLE

Lamp of our feet, whereby we trace
Our path when wont to stray;
Stream of the fount of heavenly grace,
Brook by the traveler's way!

Bread of our souls, whereon we feed,
True manna from on high;
Our guide and chart, wherein we read
Of realms beyond the sky!

Pillar of fire through watches dark,
Or radiant cloud by day;
When waves would 'whelm our tossing bark,
Our anchor and our stay!

Riches in poverty—our aid
In every needful hour;
Unshaken rock, the pilgrim's shade,
The soldiers' fortress tower!

Our shield and buckler in the fight,
Victory's triumphant palm;
Comfort in grief, in weakness might;
In sickness Gilead's balm!

Childhood's preceptor, manhood's trust,
Old age's firm ally;
Our hope, when we go down to dust,
Of immortality!

Word of the ever-living God,
Will of His glorious Son,
Without thee how could earth be trod,
Or Heaven itself be won?

Debate

Resolved, That we should aim to have Christianity supplant all other religions.

Topics for Discussion

1. The spiritual needs of man.
2. The relation between man's religion and his conduct.
3. Some leading religions—their foundations.

Questions to Be Answered

1. What do we mean by adequate religion?
2. How does Christianity surpass other religions in moral teaching?
3. How do results show the superiority of Christianity over other religions?

Outline for Leader's Talk

There are many religions existing in the world. Some of them include crude superstition, idolatry, and others the highest form of purity and truth. The followers of the different religions are trying to make each of them suit the needs of their lives. But every religion, we will find after making a complete study, falls short of these needs except Christianity. Christianity came to the world as a "Gospel" or "good news," and it is up to us to tell this "good news" to all the world.

Ten-Minute Bible Reading

Adequate worship (John 4:22-24); adequate revelation of God (John 1:18); spirit and life (John 6:63); a Saviour (Matt. 5:20); adequate love (Matt. 6:43-46); adequate future (John 14:1, 2); adequate peace (John 14:27); adequate hope (Heb. 6:18, 19).—C. E. Quarterly.

Appropriate Quotations

"The distinction between Christianity and all other systems of religion consists largely in this, that these others men are found seeking after God, while Christianity is seeking after man."—Thomas Arnold.

"Every other faith in India is decaying. Christianity alone is beginning to run its course."—Sir Herbert Edwards.

Poetry to the Point

"Worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness,
Bow down before Him, His glory proclaim;
With gold of obedience, and incense of lowliness,

Kneel and adore Him,—the Lord is His name.

"Low at His feet lay the burden of carefulness,

High on His heart He will bear it for thee;
Comfort thy sorrow, and answer thy prayerfulness,

Guiding thy steps as may best be for thee.

"Truth in its beauty, and love in its tenderness,

These are the offerings we lay on His shrine;
These, tho' we bring them in trembling and fearfulness,

He will accept in the Name all divine."

—John S. B. Monsell.

THE MAIN POINT

It is to be regretted that, in the discussion of so important a matter as union of the religious denominations, the main point is being lost sight of, and issues being brought in that have no place in the question. The point which it has been sought to stress is a greater and more efficient church work by eliminating competitive and overlapping effort. Likewise, easing the financial strain involved in maintaining the denominational system of organization.

Such things as pre-eminence, social standing, association with larger and wealthier congregations, and other unworthy ambitions have no place in the discussion of this subject. I challenge anyone to find a finer body of people than the congregation of Grace Church, in Greensboro. In this church I find some of my finest and most valued friendships.

A minister of our church—not a resident of Greensboro—said to me a few days ago that there is in our Conference a great undercurrent of approval of denominational union. What prevents this undercurrent from coming to the surface I do not undertake to say.

I hope further discussion of this subject may be held to the main issue.

In his article last week, my good friend, Dr. Andrews, says:

"Regardless of how well church union may work in Canada, it has yet to be seen that our churches in this country are ready for it."

A start has already been made, and will gather momentum as the churches realize that a state of mind is its greatest hindrance.

If the denominational union works in Canada, and there is evidence that it does work, and has worked for several years, why will it not work in the United States? Is the Christian spirit of the Canadians superior to that of the people of this country? Are the Canadians more inclined to give and take than we are? Should not the same spirit of co-operation actuate all Christian people? Is it possible that we are allowing our view of the greatest good to all to be obscured by denominational consciousness?

The churches have found that in the foreign field denominational lines must be relegated to the background because the people we are trying to convert to Christianity could not understand why, worshipping the same God, there are so many divisions among us. Furthermore, it was found that the very thing I am contending against—competition and overlapping—was hindering the work. If this is the case in foreign lands, why not at home?

E. S. WILLS.

GOING TO SCHOOL

Since I have had a growing desire, for 15 or 20 years, to visit schools, I think it reasonable to make an appeal; to urge for a special privilege to visit schools. (I was born, February 17, 1848). My age does not seem to hinder me from the effort to go to school. I intend this paper in order to ask school superintendents and teachers to arrange, when they can, to allow me to speak in their schools about half an hour before one o'clock. Where there are several hundred in a school we see numbers not seeming to care to run out on the playground. I have learned this by being treated a few times as I now propose. The treatment in this was safe on both sides, as I can reasonably suppose. I think that I have more friends amongst the schools now than I had eight or ten years ago. There may be an idea that there is only room for the officials when they must call in. However, I have been to a few district schools, with two teachers, where they would have allowed me to have several hours time. They gave me an hour numbers of time. I try for a half hour. I try to visit a school once a year.

Before I got in the way of "going to school" I noticed that any schoolhouse that I happened to be in (it empty) seemed to have a "charm." I have had favorable reference to my school going by those having the authority.

I have been on the farm all my life, a thing that is safe, however. I have had occasion to tell stories and recite poems in only a few schools in the city, and interest was near the same as in the country. I have "served" in the Children's Home, in the school at High Point; have been there several times.

WOMAN'S WORK IN NORTH CAROLINA

At the quarterly meeting of the executive committees of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of the North Carolina branch, in joint session, I was appointed to give to the church, through the church papers, the status of our women's work in North Carolina.

The spirit of the new program and the new century seems to have been working like a spirit through the hearts and minds of our women. As far as I know, no special propaganda has been afloat. While our leaders have been in the spirit of the new program they have forced nothing; and have not intensely promoted the union idea. Subtly the spirit of the new program has descended upon us.

The quarterly meeting of the two executive committees of the branches was a joy to all of us. We had a full attendance and splendid reports, which revealed that the women were working joyously; but even more important than these was the fact that a perfectly beautiful spirit of harmony and progress prevailed; we stood united on the new program for women.

Out of the 26 societies reporting, 11 had already united their societies and were working in harmony with the action of General Conference. This has been accomplished without any special effort in this direction on the part of the branch officers. More important than anything I can write will be the extracts from reports of some of these union organizations in our branches which are doing such splendid work and so happy in their work:

"Asheboro is working well through their Woman's Auxiliary; have one set of officers, except treasurer; have two treasurers; they have four circles. Regular meetings are held and are better attended. It is easier to raise money. In fact, the new plan has been a success with them."

Asheville: Mrs. J. C. Williams writes: "We have organized our two missionary societies and Ladies' Aid Society into a Woman's Missionary Society. We have sent in to our branch treasurers $51.52."

Concord: "We have a Woman's Auxiliary with five circles and all the women are interested. We have regular meetings and good attendance. This new plan is an ideal way to work for missions."

Calvary, Greensboro: "We are working as an auxiliary and have three circles. Each member makes a pledge. Regular meetings are held with a good attendance."

Mebane: "We are working as a Woman's Auxiliary; every woman of the church is a member. We are divided into four circles with an interested leader for each. We have no dues, but at each circle meeting, we take a free-will offering, and have this far received more than dues would have been. The circles are each responsible for the program at the auxiliary meeting in their turn. In this way, we work new people into public service each month. We have only been working thus for the past quarter, but we think it better and many of our women who had never been in our societies now are active. We have sent $115.50 to branch treasurers."

Siler City: "We are working as an auxiliary; have two circles; hold regular meetings. The interest is better and think this is a good way to work. When we learn a little more about it I feel sure we can make it go."

Thomasville, Community: "We have been working as a Woman's Auxiliary for two years; have three circles, all of which hold regular meetings with fine attendance and interesting programs. We have had a most interesting and successful year, and have raised three times as much money as under the old plan; we like the new plan so much better than the old. Our receipts for December were $360.00. In January we had the largest attendance ever, 26 being present; January receipts were $58.00. We can't see why all should not work the auxiliary plan."

Burlington: "We have 100 members, and are working the circle plan."

Reidsville: "We are working as an auxiliary; regular meetings and good attendance."

Grace Church, Greensboro: "We have six circles in our Woman's Auxiliary; we are having the largest attendance ever."

The above extracts taken from the reports of the corresponding secretaries of the branches reveal the spirit of the North Carolina women with reference to the new program. While the branch meetings will be held in April, we are looking forward to a complete merger of our branches in the early summer.

ALL-DAY MISSION STUDY CLASS

All the churches in the Eighth District are invited to join with Maple Springs Church in an all-day mission study class, beginning at 10 o'clock, February 28. The Home book will be taught by Rev. R. C. Stubbins and the Foreign by Mrs. C. W. Bates, our district chairman of the N. C. Branch.

Part of the day will be given to our district work. We are very anxious for all of our missionary societies to be there who have not had the study books this year. We are depending on you. Please do not fail us; just bring a lunch with you and hot coffee will be served by the Maple Spring ladies.

MORNING PRAYER

Now I wake and see the light.

O God, who kept me through the night,

To Thee I raise my voice, and pray

That Thou wilt keep me safe today.

—It's not well to boast. Al Smith declared in a recent speech that by a change of 420,000 votes properly scattered through the states he would have been elected. Somebody comes back at him with the remark: "By a change of only 204,016 votes from Smith to Hoover, Smith would not have received a single electoral vote."

—Dr. Roger Ogburn, son of Rev. T. J. Ogburn, lost his life by accident while he was on duty in New York in the service of Bellevue Hospital. His high character and fidelity to duty so impressed his associates that they have placed a memorial tablet bearing the following inscription: "In memory of Roger Wendell Ogburn, M. D., Cornell University Medical College, 1926, interne second surgical division, Bellevue Hospital. Died in the discharge of his duty at the age of 28, July 24, 1927. Erected by the house staff to perpetuate the memory of a man who was imbued with untiring energy and tender sympathy and was an inspiration to all who knew him."

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Rehoboth, Creswell Circuit.—Sunday school convention was held at Holly Neck Church. Quite a number were present.

We are mighty sorry to hear of the death of Mr. Eddie Snell. His people have the sympathy of Rehoboth's members.

The people of Rehoboth church are very sorry to think Capt. N. W. Tarkington's wife, children and also Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Tarkington are going to move to Suffolk and leave their church.

Mr. Joe Snell is very ill with pneumonia. We are very sorry and hope for him a speedy recovery.

Rehoboth has stopped prayer meeting until better weather.

Mrs. John W. Nancy is now staying with her mother, Mrs. Mary Snell, since the death of her brother, Mr. Eddie Snell.

REPORTER.

Gibsonville Church.—Much interest is being manifested in our Sunday school work. Our superintendent is a man of new thoughts and ideas and with the co-operation of the teachers and scholars he is putting some of them across.

Our Intermediate Christian Endeavor is progressing rapidly. Last Sunday we had a lot of visitors and several of them expressed a desire to join our society.

Dr. Lindley brought us a splendid sermon, the subject being "The Paths That Lead to God." Mr. Lindley explained that suffering, saintly associations, the churches, and opportunities to serve were paths leading to God.

A missionary program by the Ladies' Missionary Society was enjoyed Sunday night by a large audience. Rev. Mr. Minnis was with us and gave a splendid talk on the work of our church and the needs in India. Mr. Minnis was at one time a worker here in our Sunday school and church activities and is kindly remembered here by all who knew him.

REPORTER.

Tabernacle Charge.—One of the largest congregations during the present pastorate was at Tabernacle church last Sunday for the preaching service, the large auditorium being almost filled with attentive worshippers. Mrs. Emeline Whiteley and Mrs. Arthur Coble, who have been sick for two months, were in the audience. We were also delighted to have a number of visitors present from Greensboro.

Young People's Day has been observed at both churches on this charge with appropriate exercises, and we believe the services were helpful. Our young people who took part on the program rendered their parts well. Two young men from High Point College delivered splendid addresses—Mr. W. B. Wood at Tabernacle and Mr. Grover Angel at Julian.

The pastor attended a birthday dinner last Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Jones, celebrating the 72nd birthday of Mrs. Mattie Lowe, an aunt of Mrs. Jones, who lives with them. We trust the Lord will add many more years to the life of this splendid woman.

Mrs. H. L. Whitely, who teaches one of the children's classes at Tabernacle, has introduced into her class the catechism prepared by Dr. Lewis with gratifying results.

One of our splendid young men, Mr. Glenn Stencil, sowed one acre in beans last year for the church, known as "Lord's Acre." He has recently sold the hay for $25.00, which he will give to Tabernacle church, besides his regular church dues. May his tribe increase.

Miss Lizzie Hardin, of Julian, who is a patient at Dr. Long's Hospital, Greensboro, does not improve very much.

Among the recent visitors at the pastor's home were Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Hanner, of Julian.

Mr. Arthur Garrett has the thanks of the pastor for motor oil for the Ford.

H. L. ISLEY.

Draper.—Bro. J. H. Craig, who was burned about two weeks ago, is getting along nicely. Our Sunday school is coming along fine.

Our plans for our new church are going very well.

Sister W. T. Totten doesn't seem to get any better. We are sorry she has no better health, but we are still praying for her recovery.

LOUIS B. CRAIG, Reporter.

Burlington, First Church.—The attendance contest between Concord Sunday school and our school has been in progress for the past three Sundays. We are hoping that this contest will prove helpful and upbuilding for both schools. The attendance records are exchanged with each school over the telephone each Sunday before the schools are dismissed. We understand that Burlington is just a little ahead at this time, but we are in no wise boasting, as we realize that it will take some real effort to win over such a live school as Concord has.

The Baracas are still enjoying the splendid teaching of Bro. C. C. Lindley. Attendance in this class today stood at 75, showing a gain of seven over the previous Sunday's attendance record.

At the morning preaching hour, Rev. L. W. Gerringer brought us a splendid and helpful sermon. At the evening service the Burlington pastors exchanged pulpits and we had Rev. M. P. Chambliss of our Fountain Place church preach for us, and, of course, he gave an inspiring message. We welcome him back.

The regular monthly business meeting of the church was held Wednesday evening, the 15th, with a fairly good number present. A number of important matters of the church were attended to at this meeting. Among other things, it was decided that a new furnace be installed, as the old one is just about worn out.

The Senior Christian Endeavor Society is to hold a banquet and get-together meeting Friday evening of this week at 7:30 p. m. A small charge of 25 cents per plate is to be charged for the supper tickets to help pay the expense of the occasion but, of course, that does not mean that this small amount will pay for the good supper that will be given. Rev. Lawrence C. Little and Rev. F. L. Gibbs, one of our own boys, will be present for this gathering and will each deliver an address to the young people especially. Let all the young people of the church plan to come to this meeting.

L. A. BRAXTON, Reporter.

Dulins, Mocksville Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton, is an eloquent speaker. He seems to be real interesting in every phase of the church work; he tries to do his best in helping to put things across. Our Christian Endeavor society met at 2 o'clock with Miss Flossie Foster as the leader.

We have made a definite plan to raise money to get our church hymnals. We are glad indeed to state that Rev. J. Elwood Carroll will be the pulpit help in our revival the third Sunday in June. He helped here once before, and has won the friendship of our people. Let us pray that we will have a great revival.

We are glad that Mr. Kermit McCulloch, who shot his hand almost off, had it removed at the City Hospital in Winston-Salem came home last week, and is able to be out again. Some of our people are thinking about attending the Sunday school training school at High Point.

Best wishes to the Herald and its many readers.

LEONA HENDRIX, Reporter.

Kannapolis.—Our Sunday school attendance is getting back to normal again since the epidemic of influenza has subsided. There were 56 present Sunday. We are hoping to make our attendance better yet.

The congregation was very good at the preaching services also, and our pastor brought splendid messages at each service.

We have organized a Junior C. E. Society with 21 members. We think this is a fine beginning.

We are planning to observe Young People's Day next Sunday.

The Ladies' Aid Society will meet Monday night at the parsonage with Mrs. Lowdermilk.

We were delighted to have Mrs. Lowdermilk worship with us in the Sunday morning service. Her health is improving, we are glad to report.

We regret to note that our Sunday school superintendent, Mr. M. W. Henderson, also Mr. J. M. Gordon were kept away from church today because of illness.

MRS. C. B. PRICE, Reporter.

West Forsyth.—Our services at Pleasant Hill and Tabernacle last Sunday were largely attended. The day was a pleasant and beautiful one and the attendance at both churches was larger than usual. We were pleased to have Prof. H. G. Easley, of Burlington, a blind musician, with us at both services. He sang a solo, "The Holy City," at Pleasant Hill church. He rendered two solos at Tabernacle church, both of which were very impressive. The rendering of "The Holy City" at Pleasant Hill was deeply inspiring and appreciated.

The service at Union Hill church on the second Sunday was conducted by Rev. D. C. Norman, a local preacher of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The pastor was called away for that Sunday by the serious illness of his wife's sister.

Our second quarterly conference will be held at Stony Knoll Church on Saturday before the third Sunday in April. The order of the conference will be: Preaching at 11 o'clock in the morning and the session of the business at 1:30 in the afternoon. Dinner will be served at the church during the noon hour. We are delighted to announce that Rev. S. W. Taylor, president of our conference, will be with us and preach at 11 o'clock. He will preside over the business session in the afternoon.

We are glad to announce that President Taylor will preach at Pleasant Hill church on the third Sunday in April at 11 o'clock and at Tabernacle church in the afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

There is not much sickness among the people of this charge, and those who have been sick are either much improved or have recovered. The youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Whitman, of the Tabernacle church, is sick. Also Mrs. Joe Marler, a member of Stony Knoll church, who lives near Pleasant Hill church, has been sick for several days.

Our services next Sunday will be with Harmony Grove church at 11 a. m.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Asheboro.—In enumerating the many things in my letter last week I failed to mention the fact that two new members were received by letter on the first Sunday in February. They are Mrs. Manley Williams and her mother, Mrs. L. E. Cole, who came to us from New Hope M. P. church on Why Not Circuit. Both have lived in Asheboro for some years and we are glad to have them as a part of our church life.

Yesterday was a good day for us, both in Sunday school and church services. At the morning hour the pastor preached on Missions and at the evening hour the services were in the hands of the Foreign Missionary Society, who put on a splendid program of readings in regard to the mission work of the church. The offering amounted to $46.25.

Mrs. John Swaim, president of our Ladies' Aid, is critically ill in the High Point Hospital after having undergone a serious operation there last Friday morning. She is making a brave fight and so far the results have been fairly satisfactory. Special prayer was offered for her in the services yesterday morning.

Brother R. R. Ross improved last week to the extent that the nurse was dismissed; however, since then he has not been so well.

Mrs. Elmer Rich is able to be out again. I do not keep a carbon copy of letters for publication in the Herald; however, I think if the editor will look at the manuscript of the obituary of Mrs. Bonkemeyer, he will see that I said Rev. C. H. Hill and not Rev. C. H. Miller assisted in the service.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

(Last week's manuscripts are hard to find. We take it that you are right and beg pardon.—Editor).

Kannapolis.—On the evening of February 10, 1929, we met at the tabernacle to organize a Junior C. E. Society. Mr. D. A. McLauren, of Concord, who is the new district president of the Northwestern C. E. Union, was present and took the lead in organizing this society.

The following were elected as officers: Superintendent, Mrs. C. B. Price; assistant superintendent, Mrs. E. G. Lowdermilk; president, Leonard Henderson; vice-president, Bruce Allen; secretary, Johnnie Patterson; assistant secretary, William McCommons; corresponding secretary, Era Allen, and treasurer, Mamie Chandler. Twenty-one young people gave their names for membership. It was encouraging to the young people to have so many mothers and fathers present for this meeting.

We are glad to have this society organized and believe it will help much in training workers for our church.

We held our first meeting today, February 17. All members were present but two, and we had a very interesting meeting.

ERA ALLEN, Cor. Sec'y.

Siler City.—Our new pastor, Rev. Mr. Russell, filled his first appointments here last Sunday morning and evening. We have been without a pastor so long it seems good to know that we again have a shepherd.

Prayer meeting will be resumed again upon our pastor's arrival to take charge, which will be next Wednesday night.

Miss Minnie Cooper very beautifully entertained the Senior Christian Endeavor Society with a social last Monday evening in the Philathea class room, which was artistically decorated with material commemorating the birthday of George Washington. A number of the younger people enjoyed the many interesting games and contests directed by Miss Cooper. At the close of the evening, delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses, consisting of sandwiches, hot chocolate and cake.

Among those sick in our community are Mrs. Will Teague and Mr. Phil Siler. However, we hope they will soon be well again.

REPORTER.

Burlington, Fountain Place.—Sunday was another very good day for us. Attendance at both Sunday school and preaching was very good. Our pastor, Bro. Chambliss, preached a very inspiring and helpful sermon again as usual. He has just returned from Richmond, Va., where his mother is a patient in a hospital, having undergone a very serious operation. According to last report, she is recovering very satisfactorily.

In the absence of the pastor his appointment on the first Sunday was filled by Rev. Mr. Crutchfield, and on the second Sunday by Rev. W. F. Ashburn. We were glad to have these visiting brethren with us.

Several of our people have been confined to their homes for some time on account of sickness. Mrs. Egbert Greeson has pneumonia, and is very ill. She is being attended by two trained nurses, and we are hoping and praying for her early recovery. A special prayer service in her behalf was observed at the morning church service Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Amick are both confined to their home at this time. We trust they may soon be out again.

Mr. G. L. Amick, our efficient choir director, is able to be out again after an extended illness. Also, Mrs. H. M. Scott was in her place again Sunday.

All who are kept from attendance at church services by circumstances which are beyond their control have our sincere sympathy and prayers.

On February 5th Mr. Albert Ingle, father of Mrs. Charles L. Jones, died at the home of his son, Mr. L. S. Ingle, near Gibsonville. He was one of the few remaining veterans of the Civil War in this community, having reached the age of 86 years and six months. Burial was at Springwood Presbyterian church, at which place he had been a ruling elder for many years.

Very best wishes to all who in any way whatever, are trying to carry on the Master's work. CHAS. L. JONES, Reporter.

First Church, Winston-Salem.—Pots, pans and coffee pots, clean dishes, dirty dishes, more potatoes, please, every body in everybody else's way; please hurry, others are waiting. Do you recognize the scene? If not, it is the Ladies' Missionary Society serving a dinner.

The ladies served a chicken dinner two weeks ago (when a budget is not raised they fall back on a dinner; they know how to reach the men's pocketbooks). Everything was covered in snow and ice, but they cleared about $80. We hand it to them.

Last Monday night the teachers and officers from the Beginners Department to the Junior Department met with Mrs. R. A. Shouse to discuss plans for increasing the departments and getting the children more interested.

The Christian Endeavor Society is still at work and is having some very interesting meetings.

Tuesday night Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Hauser entertained the Baraca class and the teachers and officers of the Sunday school at a delightful supper at the Robert E. Lee Hotel. While supper was being served, yells, jokes and songs were enjoyed. After the social hour the Baracas held a short business session. Mr. Frank Voss was elected president. It was then voted that the Baracas would finance the printing of Sunday bulletins for the church. The teachers and officers then held a short business session and decided to form a workers' council to meet once a month. When the meeting ended everybody's sentiments were:

Two, four six eight,
Whom do we appreciate?
The Hausers!

Wednesday night, Rev. H. F. Surratt started a series of talks on Prayer prior to the evangelistic services coming two weeks before Easter. After the prayer service the second quarterly conference was held.

Thursday night the young people held their regular monthly meeting at the home of Miss Ellen Wakefield.

We have been hearing some very interesting forceful sermons from our pastor.

EVELYN SMOTHERS.

Glen Raven, Fairview-Glen Raven.—Sunday, February 17, was another good day for our church and Sunday school. There were 118 present in Sunday school besides a number of visitors. Our school seems to be taking on new life since the flu has abated and the weather improved. A right good-sized congregation for the 11 o'clock preaching service. Several new faces were seen in the audience. One noticeable feature about the 11 o'clock services here is the number of young folks that stay for the service. Not near all stay, of course, but a goodly number. We hope this number may increase.

On Monday night, February 11, the Ladies' Aid met at the parsonage, and the regular business of the society was transacted. It was a very interesting meeting. Ways and means were discussed whereby we might be able to raise funds for improvement of the parsonage.

On last Friday afternoon while it was raining hard a telephone call came for the parson to come over in the mill village to Mr. T. W. Cheek's store. When the parson arrived he found a nice pounding valued at $4. This was given by two of our good lady members, Mesdames T. W. Cheek and Mary Rumbley. One doesn't know how they had found out that our groceries were getting low. They have our thanks.

Mrs. P. E. Troxler brought us a box of nice honey, which was appreciated very much.

Mr. George Garrison, father of Mr. C. C. Garrison, our church treasurer, is very ill.
MRS. WILLIAM H. NEESE.

Shiloh, North Davidson.—My, but Sunday was a good day for Shiloh folks! Brother Sam W. Taylor was with us and his sermon was a feast for the soul. I wish that I could give it to you, but even if I could write down all the words, I would be unable to give you his earnestness and emotional appeal. The Kingdom of God means much to us because it was founded by God, not man. The Holy Ghost sends forth the workers. We all need the kingdom, for it keeps us in the right relation to God, to our family, and to our neighbors. What would we take for our religion when we come to die? Not one million worlds would we take, said Bro. Taylor.

Then, if we love God's Kingdom, we must support it, for did we not take a solemn vow to do so? Our love leads us to give to it the best we have, our time, our talents and our service.

But what will be our reward? We will get peace and joy here, and then when we cross over, He whom we love will say, "Come, I know you; I've talked to you before and walked with you down at old Shiloh. You've been faithful; come and receive your crown."

So, I've tried to give you readers just a few of the crumbs that fell from our table of spiritual good things Sunday.

It was suggested that we provide more song-books for the church, also racks for them. We hope to do that soon.

Our C. E. Society is one of our most prized organizations. They are active, enthusiastic and faithful in service. More than 30 young people were present Sunday night and all take an active part when called upon. No one says, "I can't; let someone else do it." The future leadership of the church is assured.

Our Sunday school is steadily growing. The number present Sunday was 278, with an offering of $21.50.

Bro. Taylor was very complimentary concerning the progress of Shiloh since he preached his first sermon there many years ago. He suggested that the time may not be far distant when Shiloh will be made a station and have an all-time pastor. If God sees fit to spread His kingdom in this community in this way we shall rejoice and desire that our beloved pastor, Bro. Troxler, stay with us as our pastor until he places his name on the supernuminate list.

MRS. WILEY SHOAF, Reporter.

Corinth, Little Circuit.—I guess you would like to know how Corinth is progressing these days. Corinth is a church that does things, even if she is small in number.

Our pastor, I. C. Smith, has filled all appointments to date. We feel very fortunate in having him and his good wife to work with us and hope that this will be the best year yet in our work. He has recently moved to Littleton, where he can do more efficient work.

Since the Christmas holidays our Sunday school and Christian Endeavor have been at a standstill on account of so much sickness. We hope to do more and better work. We are glad to see our superintendent and his wife out again.

One of our little Sunday school pupils, Katherine Carter, had the misfortune to meet with an accident Saturday that necessitated the doctor taking a stitch in her head. We hope she soon recovers.

We have missed Bro. H. S. B. Thompson and his family from our Sunday school, they having moved to another community. We wish for them much happiness in their new home.

We are hoping to have President S. W. Taylor with us in the near future at a circuit rally.

Our pianist, Mrs. Hettie Carter, has accepted a position at Aurelian Springs high school. We wish her much success.

Our sympathy goes out to Mr. Sampson Walker in the death of his wife at Emporia, Va., on January 5.

We regret to lose by letter one of our very faithful members, Mrs. Fannie Barnes Glasgow. She moves to Winston-Salem Presbyterian church.

On December 13th, 1928, at 7:30 p. m., the male members of this church were called together for a business meeting. After the business was disposed of they enjoyed a delightful social hour. M. J. MORRIS.

February 16th, 1929.

Henderson.—There are many encouraging features about the work here, a few of which I wish to mention.

The young people are taking more interest in the work of the church than heretofore. We held a young people's service Sunday night, February 3rd, which was largely attended and the young people gave a program that was a credit to the church. The Christian Endeavor Society, under the supervision of Mrs. L. R. Gooch, is having interesting meetings every Sunday evening preceding the preaching service. The attendance and interest in on the increase. These young people held a social in the Sunday school auditorium last Tuesday evening. A large number were present and their interest and enthusiasm gave us much encouragement.

At a recent joint meeting of the Missionary Societies and Ladies' Aid Society the women voted to merge the three organizations into one. This action is in keeping with the suggestion of the General Conference and is in line with what many other churches throughout the denomination are doing. We are expecting greater things from the women in the future, although they have not failed to do fine work in the past. The annual thank-offering service of the Foreign society will be held next Sunday evening. A splendid program is being arranged and it is hoped that the attendance and offering will be large.

On last Thursday evening the Baraca class had a supper in the basement of the church in honor of one of the members who is soon to leave for his new work in Baltimore. The Philatheas served the supper and a general good time was had. At this meeting the pastor asked for an expression from the membership of the class as to their feeling in regard to organizing a Men's Brotherhood. A vote was taken and every member voted in favor of the proposition. A meeting of all the men of the church will be called soon and an organization formed. More about the Henderson Brotherhood later.

We are delighted to report that the choir, under the joint leadership of Mrs. F. R. Harris and Mrs. R. S. Watson, is showing marked improvement and is furnishing some real music for our church services. The weekly rehearsals at present are being held at the home of Mrs. Harris.

The Young Ladies' League, of which Mrs. H. A. Jordan is president, has been divided into two circles and is putting on a contest which is increasing the attendance at the monthly meetings, enlarging the membership and adding much to the treasury. This is one of the liveliest organizations of the church.

The flu epidemic seems to have passed and our congregations are again normal. Yesterday we had two splendid congregations and the attendance at Sunday school was encouraging.

Of course there are some discouraging features of the work also, as we find in all churches, but, taking the church as a whole, we doubt that a better one could be found within the bounds of the Conference. From this report I think you can see that we have reason to "thank God and take courage."

R. L. HUNTER.

Spring Hill, West Thomasville Charge.—Our Sunday school is moving on very nicely, but we hope for a larger attendance in the spring.

Rev. T. J. Whitehead was with us at the 11 o'clock service February 17. At the opening of the service he made a special talk to the children, which they seemed to enjoy very much. The remainder of his message was extremely inspiring to all. At this time the Lord's Supper was celebrated.

Our pastor takes an interesting part in the Sunday school, which we appreciate. We think we are very fortunate to have so talented a young man on the work.

We are planning to organize a Christian Endeavor Society soon. Through this we hope to accomplish much good. We must remember that the church of tomorrow depends on the training of the young people today.

We are very sorry that Mrs. I. I. York has not been able to be with us lately. She is missed by all, but we hope she may be permitted to be with us soon.

ALICE HAYNES, Reporter.

North Davidson Charge.—Last Sunday was a good day for North Davidson charge. President Taylor was with us: at Shiloh, 11 o'clock; Friendship, 3 o'clock; Bethesda, 7 o'clock. He brought us inspiring messages and everybody enjoyed them. We were glad to have him; he is the first president to visit this charge since I came here. Shiloh and Friendship raised their quota on the C. G. G. The workers' council of Shiloh church met at the home of Bro. H. A. Leonard, Sunday school superintendent, Monday night, February 18; good attendance, plenty of business, everybody enjoyed it. After a few remarks by Mrs. Wiley Shoaf, urging fervent prayer for each other and the church, we sang "Blest Be the Tie That Binds." Bros. J. B. Leonard and R. B. Smith offered prayer for the church and Kingdom. All went home feeling good.

Now, close your eyes, whet up your appetite, open your ears, and listen: A few days ago Bro. Jeff Berrier came driving his two big, white mules up the road to the parsonage, and unloaded a 98-pound sack of our, one of his big hams, and a sack of potatoes—a real pounding within itself. Mrs. Jeff Berrier sent a bucket of lard and other good things to eat; Bro. Fred Koonts, one sack of potatoes; Miss Emma Berrier, $1.00. A preacher would never suffer among these good people. They show that they appreciate him. May the good Lord richly bless them in all their work.

R. S. TROXLER.

High Point.—Last Sunday morning the 50th anniversary of the founding of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society was observed. Rev. R. I. Farmer brought a timely and forceful message from the subject, "Taking the World for Christ." He said that he cannot conceive of a church that is not missionary, and the church that is alive to the missionary cause away from home is most alive at home. Mark said, "The gospel must first be published among all nations." The objective is reached when all peoples hear the Word. There is no other purpose or reason for our existence as the Methodist Protestant church. None of us has a right to do less for others than what Jesus has done for us. Has "the everlasting gospel of Jesus Christ" been published to all nations? Our task is to announce the Word to all peoples, then we are not responsible for results, but God will take care of that. When we talk about taking the world for Christ, if each Christian would win one soul to Christ each year, the world would be evangelized in one generation. What one of you cannot bring one soul to Christ if you are determined enough? It is enough to make one's heart bleed to think that after 2,000 years the world is not yet evangelized. The individual has power only by prayer. You cannot make a golden age out of the leaden instincts. A man in Ohio asked another what a certain farm was worth; he answered, "I do not know, but I can tell you what it cost—the souls of the old father and his three sons." In Salisbury, N. C., there is a Federal cemetery, where are pointed out to visitors two graves, one being that of a general, the other a lad of 19 years, on whose tombstone is the inscription, "He died for the cause that he loved." Throughout China, Japan, India, Korea, Africa and the islands of the sea there are scattered here and there lonely, forgotten, and neglected graves, which might bear the same legend; those missionaries who have gone out from home and loved ones to labor, agonize and die for the cause they loved. We cannot all go to the foreign field, but surely there is no one who cannot give his mite, influence and prayers to send others, and to support those who have already gone. The offering at this time amounted to $89, and it is expected that this amount will be increased to $100.

At the evening hour for worship the pastor delivered the third in the series of splendid sermons on Power, his subject being "The Power of Truth." These sermons are practical, helpful, and pleasing.

On Monday afternoon the general meeting of the two Missionary Societies convened in monthly session at 3 o'clock at the church. There was a fine attendance, and after brief business sessions of both societies, Rev. E. L. Ballard introduced as the speaker of the hour Rev. J. F. Minnis, of Graham, who spent five and one-half years as a missionary of our denomination in India. In a most pleasing manner he described the modes of life and costumes among these foreign people, and exhibited several interesting mementoes of his stay among them, including an idol, hats, shoes, and different articles of clothing. He told us many things about this far-away land that were surprising; for instance, it has a splendid railway system and electric lights. Dhulia is a city almost as large as High Point, having a population of 30,000. Our girls' school there has a good building and ranks high in comparison to others in the city, but the boys' school, although larger in number of pupils, is handicapped because their building is old, antiquated, and leaks badly during the three months' rainy season. There is no church building, but the congregation of 150 worshippers under the shade of the trees in front of the pastor's bungalow. They need a house of worship badly, and another pressing want is a new bungalow for the minister in charge, who is at present Rev. Paul Cassen. There are about 29 different languages heard in Dhulia, which is a great handicap to an American, who must attend a language school for at least a year when going out to do missionary work. Our work in India comprises educational, evangelistic, and medical phases. The nurse, Miss Grace Perley, and Dr. Edith Lacey, are doing a wonderful work of healing in Dhulia. Mr. Minnis says that the people of India, though dirty and lazy, are kind, sympathetic and eager to learn about Jesus. They are trying to gain the light and are burdened by sin just as we are. He has been in a crowd of 1,000 or 1,500 natives, and he the only white man there, yet he felt no fear whatever. Mr. Minnis' lecture was instructive and entertaining in a marked degree, and the members of the society listened to him with eager interest and attention. They are deeply appreciative of his kindness in coming and speaking for us.

At this meeting the merger of the two societies into one Auxiliary was discussed and a committee of four, Mesdames Diffie, Pickens, Coe, and Walker, was appointed to determine the place and time of a meeting, when all our members may get together and discuss this union, and elect officers.

After the C. E. meeting Monday evening, Dr. M. G. Kyle, president of Xenia (Ohio) Theological Seminary, delivered an illustrated lecture on "The Story of Ancient Sodom in the Light of Modern Science" in the church. Dr. Kyle was in Winston-Salem delivering a series of lectures at Salem College.

The Boy Scouts Troop has been re-organized and Holt McPherson, who is an efficient leader, has promised to take charge.

Capt. A. M. Rankin had an operation for removal of tonsils, but he is resting very comfortably at home.

Halifax.—Our faithful reporter, Miss Kathleen Shearin, at Hollister, has been faithful to report to the Herald. She is one of the most faithful reporter we have ever had, and we have learned to depend on her to write up all of the church news. But Miss Shearin asked me to write the news for this issue.

We had a thank-offering service for Sunday night, February 10. The program was gotten up by Miss Kathleen Shearin. We had a few recitations and special songs by the choir and a duet by Miss Kathleen Shearin and Miss Mary Davis Alston, and a talk by the pastor. This missionary society is doing good work, and they are planning to pay their budget in full.

The church at Harmony has recently made some repairs which add much to its comfort and appearance. We are planning to do some work on the inside in the near future.

Bethesda, Eden, and Union churches have subscribed their full allotment to High Point College.

The Woman's society of Bethesda church is doing good work; this society is a little over one year old. They contributed much to the G. C. B. last year and have recently put $52.50 worth of furniture in the parsonage. We have a faithful band here that is willing to its best.

Eden Ladies' Aid is doing good work. They are giving $50 a year to the Children's Home and are giving about the same each year for local interests as well as to other interests, High Point College Bethel Home, etc. The Eden society is planning now to put some furniture in the parsonage. We are going to give all of the churches an opportunity to help improve the interior of the parsonage and I think all the churches will help.

At this writing one of our members, Mr. Andrew Hardy, of Hollister church, is very ill.

We want to thank Mr. F. S. Thomas, Mr. Frank Taylor and Mrs. J. R. Taylor for table supplies.

C. L. SPENCER, Pastor.

Pleasant Hill, West Forsyth Sharge.—Our Sunday school is doing fine, increasing both in number and interest.

We were glad to have at service Sunday Mr. Easley, a blind man from Burlington, the guest of Rev. C. B. Way. Mr. Easley played and sang a number for us.

The Junior choir of the Sunday school also gave some special music. Rev. C. B. Way delivered an inspiring sermon. I don't think the Conference could have sent anyone who could have pleased us more than the pastor and family they sent to us.

The Christian Endeavor Society met last Sunday evening at the church. The meeting was led by Mr. R. G. Holder.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies met on Tuesday night at the home of Mrs. C. G. Hunter. The next meeting will be held at the home of the president of the Home society, Mrs. J. F. Hunter.

MRS. ARZIA DAVIS, Reporter.

Tabernacle, Tabernacle Charge.—Pastor Isley gave us a very helpful sermon Sunday afternoon. Attendance was good and several visitors worshipped with us.

Young People's Day was observed the second Sunday with a good program at 11 o'clock. Mr. Wood, a High Point College student, made the principal talk. Others taking part were Misses Bertha Reynolds and Irene McCulloch, Worth Trogdon, Glen Stancil, and Cecil Fields.

Since last report another one of our older members has passed away. Brother A. C. Causey died at St. Leo's Hospital, where he had been a patient for several weeks.

We miss Brother P. A. Hardin in all our services now. He is in very ill health. We hope for him a speedy recovery.

REPORTER.

Mount Zion, Pinnacle Charge.—Bro. Hunter came to us Sunday with a very uplifting sermon, after which the Lord's Supper was taken, and a goodly number partook.

Literature has been ordered for an Easter service.

Next Sunday immediately after Sunday school the Ladies' Aid Society will meet; the officers ask that every member be present.

Bro. Tom Barber will move his family to Winston-Salem, where he holds a position on the police force of that city.

Mrs. Dalt Whit continues very ill at her home.

Mrs. Thelma (Kallam) Rierson is sick.

Mrs. W. E. Jones continues ill but, we are glad to report some improvement in her case.

C. W. ALLEN, Reporter.

Concord, Saxapahaw Circuit.—We were glad to have a number of visitors for the afternoon service Sunday. We are always glad to have visitors worship with us. Mr. Loy used as his subject for the afternoon, "Reconstruction of the Churches."

The church has recently purchased a piano. We hope that our choir will show some improvement now that they have a new instrument.

The ladies of the church are making plans for an oyster supper at the church. They are also working on a quilt, which is to be sold as soon as it is completed.

Mr. Minnis, of Graham, a returned missionary, will be at our church next Sunday afternoon, the 24th of February. The public is cordially invited to come with a well-filled purse, as there will be a thank-offering taken at this time.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

TWO CHURCHES

There was a church in our town
Which thought 'twas wondrous wise;
It tried to pay expenses
By selling cakes and pies;
But after years of trying
That plan to raise the cash,
The folks got tired of buying,
And the whole thing went to smash.

There was a church in our town,
And it WAS wondrous wise:
It always paid expenses
By simply paying tithes.
For when 'twas found the tithe did pay,
It seemed so very plain,
Forthwith 'twould have no other way,
No, never once again.

GETTING OUT THE HERALD

Pens dash like mad across the sheet,
Typewriters click and pencils fleet
Are making marks no man can read.
Why all this rush and frantic speed?
(They're writing for the Herald).

The letters are mailed, the mail comes flying,
Reaching our sanctum ere day is dying.
Of good report, of ill report,
The things we have to quickly sort.

Three groups are made and duly labeled:
"This week," "Sometime," "Forever tabled."
The last is swiftly swept aside—
In basket huge enjoys free ride.

"This week" to printshop quickly goes
To meet what fate it scarcely knows.
It meets strange men with stranger tools,
It wonders if wise men or fools.

Who are the silent men who sit
Machine-gun-armed with lamps well lit,
With faces of flint e'er looking ahead,
And words of ink make words of lead?
(Those are the mighty linotypers of the Herald shop).

Who are the men who quickly spread
On table top the words of lead,
Then square all up and lock all tight
In columns and pages from left to right?
(Form-makers, printshop cooks, makers of pi).

And who the men with aprons on,
The men who take the tight-locked forms,
Who take the paper and the ink
And by their jugglery make millions think?
(They are the real printers and their devil).

And that machine of lightning speed
That runs so fast you can't take heed,
What under heaven can it be doing,
Its reckless course on earth pursuing?
(That's a Cleveland Folder folding the Herald).

The little machine that sews with wire,
With larger wire if you desire,
What does it here in this array
Of print-equipment on display?
(That's a Boston Wire Stitcher to bind the Herald).

And that machine, aluminum cased,
Handled with such impetuous haste,
With list of names on narrow strip,
What good can come from such a slip?
(That's a mailer, addressing Herald's).

That crew of people 'round a table,
All taking part as they are able,
Displaying speed and also care,
We wonder much what they do there.
(They wrap the Herald in bundles).

At last we reach the final act:
The Herald's into bag are packed
And placed in care of Uncle Sam.
If he should fail, O what a slam!

—I have found that if the murders and manslaughters, the burglaries and robberies, the riots and tumults, the adulteries, fornications, rapes, and other enormities that have happened in that time (twenty years) were divided into five parts, four of them have been the issue and product of excessive drinking.—Sir Mathew Hale, Chief Justice of England, 1670.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Bowman

Early Monday morning, February 11, death entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. Grady Bowman and took away the soul of their infant son, Thomas Grady, Jr. The funeral was held in Pleasant Union M. P. church Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock, conducted by the writer. Music was furnished by Mrs. J. T. Bowman, of Liberty, and Mrs. J. Ray, of Gibsonville. Interment was in the church cemetery. The floral designs were many and beautiful.

May the Lord abundantly bless the parents and may they be able to say: "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord."

J. D. WILLIAMS.

Voncanon

Jacob Voncanon died January 25, 1929, at the age of 78 years and five days. He was married to Kizzie Brown in September, 1872. To this union were born 11 children, seven boys and four girls. Five children are dead and six living. The living to mourn their loss are H. T., J. T., and E. L. Voncanon, of Cabarrus County, and W. D. and J. W. Voncanon and Mrs. Will York, of Randolph County.

He was married twice. His first wife died and he was married to Adaline Davis, March, 1912. She died January 15, 1928. He leaves 35 grandchildren, five great-grandchildren and a host of friends.

He joined the Methodist Protestant church in early manhood, and remained a faithful member until his death. He was a devoted father and a loving husband. He never grew tired of his church duties. Even in his declining years he was often found at the church when his physical body was not able to be away from his home.

He will be greatly missed in his home, church, and community. While we feel our loss we realize that our loss is heaven's gain.

A. FRIEND.

Hinshaw

Lee Hinshaw died at his home in Randleman January 30th, 1929, aged 66 years, eight months and 28 days.

Mr. Hinshaw had been in ill health for a number of years, yet, throughout his entire illness he bore his suffering patiently.

He professed faith in Christ 12 years ago and attended church as long as his health permitted.

A quiet, unassuming man has passed; a kind friend and neighbor, a man who will be missed, not only by his own immediate family, but by many friends as well. He leaves a wife and one son.

The funeral service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. T. A. Williams, assisted by Rev. J. W. Parker.

TO MEMBERS OF CONFERENCE CLASS

Rev. G. L. Reynolds was elected last Conference to examine on Psychology. He informs me that he has a plan to help those who expect to be examined next Conference and that if such members of the class will write him at High Point he will be glad to inform them of his plans. Be sure and do this, for Bro. Reynolds is too good in teaching to pass one up who simply says, "I have read the book," without knowing anything about it. So, young men, it will be to your interest to get in touch with Bro. Reynolds at once.

I opened my door on my bended knee
I beg your pardon for this said he
But 'tis true when told as it ought to be
'Tis a puzzle in punctuation you see.

Your Choice

Eve had her choice—of life or death,
The best of all, the worst of all.
And now they tell with bated breath,
She failed to stand and chose to fall!

Cain had his choice—to save or kill,
To be a foe or be a friend.
He acted out his own free will
And brought his brother's life to end.

Noah had his choice—to build or drown,
To save his home or yield his breath.
He chose to build and not go down
With all the world to fearful death.

Moses had his choice—high place or low;
To rule the strong or help the weak.
The way of loss he chose to go,
The meekest man among the meek.

Joshua had his choice of God or gods,
The God of right, the God of power,
Or helpless god who sleeps and nods.
He chose aright that very hour.

Ruth had her choice—Chemosh or God.
Forsaking all her alien race,
She clave to Mara and Mara's God,
And came to fill exalted place.

Solomon had his choice—wisdom or wealth,
Service of all or service for self.
The wiser choice to him brought health
And blessings rare not bought with pelf.

Mary had her choice—one needful thing
Or many things of doubtful worth.
So wise her choice, her praises ring
And will yet ring in all the earth.

Judas had his choice—be true or traitor!
With blinded eyes he chose amiss,
Met shameful death a little later,
And now his name all nations hiss!

You have your choice—are bound to choose,
Are choosing now the way of death
Or way of life. You've all to lose
Or gain! The thought quite takes the breath!

"On This Rock I Will Build My Church"

What did Jesus mean when in response to Peter's confession he said, "Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church"?

The meaning of this passage has been in century-long dispute. Books have been written upon it. Roman Catholics and Protestants are divided over it. The Catholics see in this verse authority for the papal system of ecclesiastical government. Peter was designated as the first pope. He was given the unique position of supreme authority in the Christian church.

Are the Roman Catholics justified in their interpretation? Did Jesus intend to exalt Peter in authority as they contend?

A number of considerations render this view exceedingly improbable. When a man is to exercise authority over his fellow men, he needs credentials of no doubtful character. Men must be able to believe in the legitimacy of his claim to the right to rule over them. Pretension and imposture are easy. If Peter was invested with such authority as is claimed for him, the fact should have been made evident to those over whom Peter was to rule. We see no evidence that his fellow-workers in the early church recognized in Peter any right to exercise high authority. Certainly Paul did not recognize the primacy of Peter in the church of Christ. He did not regard Peter as the foundation of the church. "Other foundation can no man lay than that which is laid, which is Jesus Christ." Again he writes: "Ye are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone." Peter's recorded speeches and his epistles indicate no feeling in Peter's heart that he was placed at the head of the church. Peter was not naturally qualified for such a responsibility. Had Jesus approved such an office as that of pope in the church, is it probable that he would have made such a man as Peter its first incumbent? It does not seem so. When Peter was called, he was told that he would be prepared to be a fisher of men. No hint was given that he would be promoted to highest office. And can we believe that Jesus approved of the papal office in view of his plain words: "One is your master, even Christ, and all ye are brethren. And call no man your father upon the earth."

But if Jesus did not mean to make Peter pope, what did he mean when he said, "Upon this rock will I build my church?"

The common Protestant answer to this question is that Jesus meant that upon Peter's confession of Him as the Son of God would He build His church.

Jesus' thought may have been too deep for us to follow the course of it. We believe it was far too deep to be correctly represented by the simple superficial Roman Catholic interpretation. He did not mean to found His church on an uncertain foundation, certainly not on a rolling stone. No

THE SPIRITUAL CONDITION OF THE CHURCH

(From President's Report to Annual Conference)

A prominent educator of the state said, in a recent address, as quoted by the press, that the church no longer holds the place of influence and power over the mind and the life of the people as it once did. However much it may embarrass us to do so, I fear that we must admit that the speaker's statement is true to the facts. And if so, why? Is it because of an increased antipathy to the ideals and purposes of the church on the part of the people? Or is it because the spiritual substance of the church, that once gripped the people and moved them to a fuller conformity in heart and life, has been lost or submerged to other aspects of the church that are less appealing and less powerful to command confidence and loyalty? I doubt not that some of both explain the fact. I fear, however, that a good part of the explanation is to be found in the church itself.

It must be admitted that the church was never so strong in numbers; in attractive and well-appointed houses of worship; in money; in a school-trained ministry; and in big programs. Why, then, its loss of compelling power on the hearts and lives of the people? It is the opinion of your speaker that the answer is to be found in the failure of the church to put the emphasis on spiritual necessities, and to hold before the people the eternal verities of the life that now is, and of that which is to be. Sin is not such a sinful thing any more, and the consequences of sin, here and hereafter, are so minimized that they have but little deterrent force upon the evil-doer. In the apostolic days when there was testifying "both to the Jews and also to the Greeks, repentance toward God and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ," the church had power, both with God and with man. It was so in the days of Luther, of the Wesleys, of Whitfield, of Finney. It is ever so when the church remembers that, "It is not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, said the Lord."

The following clipping, with the caption, "When He Succeeded Most," referring to Dr. Henry Ward Beecher, taken recently by the HERALD from The Presbyterian of Philadelphia, is in point:

"In referring to Dr. Henry Ward Beecher, The Presbyterian of Philadelphia, among other things, says:

"This much is distinctly definite in the chronology of his years, while he was preaching his rich gospel message of the love of God in Christ for the saving of men, souls like doves to their windows flocked about the Plymouth altars and found there the rest they sought. When the great truths which range themselves about evangelical religion began to be spoken of with less assurance and the Bible was no longer the ultimate and final court of appeal, then the days of wonders at Plymouth ceased and the years of sunshine were followed by the sad, tragic years of shadows."

This says so well what I am trying to say that I am sure you can't miss my point. If the church has lost her grip on the mind and the heart of men, it is because she has permitted herself to become impoverished in spiritual substance, and has ceased to emphasize the heaven-born truths that range themselves about evangelical religion and evangelical preaching.

But there is a remedy, and the only merit in dwelling upon the condition is to awaken hope in this fact. Jesus has said that the forces of darkness shall not prevail against his church. To his apostles he said, "Go—and lo I am with you." Our Lord never meant that his church should grope in spiritual darkness, or do its work in spiritual weakness. The upper room of appointment is still accessible to his saints, and God is only waiting for his church to assemble there that he may send the power.

"Awake, Jerusalem, awake!

No longer in thy sins lie down:

The garment of salvation take;

Thy beauty and thy strength put on.

"Shake off the dust that blinds thy sight,

And hides the promise from thine eyes;

Arise, and struggle into light;

The great Deliverer calls, 'Arise!'"

WHICH?—WHY?

From what I can learn from all this discussion of church union, it seems to me that we are preaching more of the man-made doctrine of "Churchianity" than we are of the blessed doctrine Christ gave which we choose to call "Christianity."

It seems to me that it would be worth more to us and to all our people if we would tell more reasons why I am a Christian than it will to tell why I belong to a certain denomination. We are cumbered about with too much serving the whims and prejudices of a jazz-mad generation, when we should be thinking and preaching the Gospel of Salvation to the many thousands who, like the Philippian jailor, are crying out, "What must I do to be saved?" The heart of a lost sinner is not concerned about creeds and cults, neither does he care why we believe certain doctrines. He doesn't cry out, "Show us your belief," or "Publish your statistics," but the cry coming from the lost is, "Sirs, we would see Jesus!"

Zacchaeus sought to see Jesus, who he was, and he could not because of the press. I wonder if, while we are arguing our figures of comparison, and lauding our reasons for believing certain creeds, if there are not many Zacchaeuses in our congregations, or reading our masterful compositions that are seeking to see Jesus, and can not because of our forgetfulness of their needs?

We read somewhere in the Book that people were added to the church daily, and if we would increase our membership and make our statistics show larger figures, we must begin by preaching more sermons that have for their aim the sole purpose of saving souls. In later years I have become convinced that the preacher, or pastor, or minister, which you may choose to call him, must preach more sermons with the evangelistic appeal. No man has any right to preach a sermon unless his aim is to reach a soul and bring it back to God. The need of our church is not more money, but more meditation on the things spiritual. The great underlying secret of the success of Paul's ministry lay in the fact that the driving force resolved itself in these words, "Woe is me if I preach not the gospel." Brethren, if we will but preach with the purpose of winning men to God and Christ, then when we have done that our statistics will show up like we want them, and deserve them, and the right thinking man will decide upon his creed.

If the Methodist Protestant ministers of North Carolina would begin next Sunday morning and for six months preach evangelistic sermons in their pulpits twice each Sunday, and would give their thought and effort to the one purpose of evangelism, I venture the prophecy that at the end of those six months a revival would break out, if not already broken out, that would sweep our church from the Atlantic to the Blue Ridge. Brethren, we must be about our Father's business, and that business is not counting noses but winning men. When we have failed in this, the one great business of the church, we have failed in all. "CLOD HOPPER."

SOMETHING TO PROVOKE SERIOUS THOUGHT

By PHILOMATH

I have been trying to imagine what kind of a town my town would be without the Christian church. Have you ever tried to imagine such a thing? If you have you have not found it an easy thing to do.

I have never lived where there was not a church. All the years of my life have been spent directly or indirectly under the influence of this great organization. With few exceptions, all of my friends and acquaintances have been members of the church, or sympathetically inclined to it. In my travels, and I have traveled rather extensively, I have seen the church in every hamlet, village and city in this great country of ours where it has been my pleasure to go. On the wide plains of the far west and in the mountain regions miles from any railroad I have found the church.

Have you ever thought of the persistency of the Christian church? Down through the ages it has come despite the fact that it as been persecuted and abused and neglected by men and devils, and it stands before us today a thing of beauty and a joy forever.

Is there nothing in this significant fact to arrest my attention, to excite my admiration, and to inspire reverence in me for such an incomparable institution? Does it not stand as a perpetual challenge to my loyalty and devotion; to my sense of fairness and justice, and to my support and patronage?

When I call to mind the fact that the church stands for civic righteousness, and for personal purity and holiness, can I afford to treat it lightly or indifferently? Can I afford to neglect its kindly ministries and to spurn its blessings and privileges? Is it the part of common honesty for me to accept the benefits of this divine institution, appropriate its rich blessings to my own selfish use, and refuse to co-operate in its program of human redemption?

For me to refuse to attend church services or to unite with the church on the ground that it has its faults is puerile in the extreme. I ought not to allow myself to be blinded to the fact that where there is one fault to be found in the church there are a thousand faults to be found in my own heart and life. If I insist on living in a glass house, I ought to exercise some caution in throwing stones.

Christ recognized the fact that the church is not without fault. Paul in speaking of the church said: "Christ loved the church and gave himself for it, that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word, that he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish." Am I making it easy for him to do this? Can he depend upon me to use my influence and power to the end that the church may be made all that he desires it to be? If not, then what right have I to criticise the church; and upon what grounds can I hope to justify my life of indifference and unconcern towards the church?

The fact is, I owe it to myself, to my family, to my community and to my God to attend church twice every Sunday; to worship as devoutly as I know how, and to live in the fear and favor of a loving heavenly Father to the end of my earthly pilgrimage. To do more, I cannot; to do less, I must not.

TWO KINDS OF TOBACCO AUTOMATONS

WILL H. BROWN

Machines called automatons that appear to imitate the movements of men in selling cigarettes can also say "Thank you."

The dictionary gives another definition of the word "automaton" as follows: "A person who follows a routine without active intelligence."

Thousands of the latter walk the streets, hang around cigar stands and puff smoke from cigarettes, cigars or pipes, with no more thought of their actions than the automaton made of metal. The slaves to the habit become but little more than machines, fouling pure air with the odor that many dislike, not realizing or not caring whether or not their actions cause discomfort to those who prefer pure air.

Occasionally one of these human automatons comes to life and realizes the seriousness of his condition. Practically every physician who writes on health topics for the daily papers receive scores of letters from men who say they want to quit tobacco, but haven't the will power to do so. The nicotine with which they have filled their systems keeps pressing little buttons calling for more nicotine.

"Doctor, how can I quit this terrible habit?" is a common question.

One physician advised a reader to set aside every Thursday to abstain entirely from tobacco. The man wrote back:

"I tried it, fell down, and felt maddened. Finally I resolved to go through twenty-four hours without smoking. I succeeded, and have not smoked for the last seven years."

The doctor quoted says: "When the smoker discovers he can't worry along 24 hours without his drug—well, it is time for him to ask why?"

Notice that the doctor calls nicotine a drug. And it is.

AN OPEN LETTER

Dear Doctor McCulloch:

I have already taken more space in the HERALD to discuss church union than I am entitled to. But since I have ventured to write at all, I do want to say just a few more things.

I am quite conscious of the weaknesses of our church, but a consideration of them does not discourage me. I believe it is possible to make some improvement in anything we desire to improve.

The trouble in the Methodist Protestant Church is not in the form of the organization; it is in the way the organization is run or not run. There is too much lost motion, there are too many loops which have become veritable cul-de-sacs where a progressive movement is slipped and forgotten. In other words, it is too hard to get a thing from the head of the church to its extremities. The vital nerves of motion are paralyzed or dulled by propaganda, and notwithstanding groups may meet here and there and propose some brilliant improvements, they too rarely materialize. Now all this happens, not because we do not have the machinery to carry out any scheme men might propose, but because the machinery is too often in the hands of those not interested enough to run it. So it has been suggested that we scrap the whole church because it is not properly run—because we do not always get good results from our proposed plans. But we should not forget that other denominations are like us in their wail about insufficient results. Talk with any group of leaders of any church and you will hear them speak of their disappointments of this or that measure in church activities.

Interest in church affairs has lessened, the old attitude towards the church seems to have changed. The complexity of our industrial, social and commercial life has involved our thinking about the church. There is a gap, or a difference of emphasis, between us and our predecessors when it comes to the church. Men may be loyal to business, to our country, and never seem to make a mistake, but for one to get enthused over his church doctrines or polity and to talk or preach these would cause furore in most communities. It would be contended that a very undiplomatic or senseless thing had been done. Doctrinal sermons are obsolete, denominationalism is tabooed with many and we are to contemplate our churches in silence lest we offend those who differ from us on these things.

A FASCINATING HOBBY

Grenville Kleiser, author of many helpful books for speakers and writers, is a believer in hobbies. "I commend to those looking for a new hobby," he says, "that of gathering felicitous and striking sentences from their general reading. These should be recorded in a notebook kept exclusively for this purpose. Personally, I have derived great pleasure from this delightful pastime. Incidentally it is, I believe, a practical way of enlarging one's vocabulary and improving one's English style." Then he goes on to quote some of the gems he has found, including these:

A flood of pride rose in him.

Repentance bludgeoned me.

For weeks the rain scarce relented.

Slumber was coy with me that night.

She was cloaked in prim pretense.

God's word is an impregnable rock.

Her tongue stumbled and was silent.

Slang tends to slovenliness in speech.

He never wears an argument to tatters.

The thought smote him like a hammer.

Anxiety followed her like a ghost.

A gesture stemmed the tide of words.

An immense pity gripped his throat.

The London School of Printing, in its official organ, urges its students to put this suggestion into practice, adding: "Grenville Kleiser's works on public speaking, authorship, and English rank among the classics, and are widely known in the literary circles of the United States and England." Mr. Kleiser's publishers are the Funk & Wagnalls Company, New York, and his latest books are Similes and Their Use, a collection of over 4,500 of the most apt phrases, and Training for Authorship, a complete course in the writer's art.—Authors and Books.

INDIA BUNGALOW

We are still receiving subscriptions toward the new bungalow which is so much needed by our missionaries. A number of very generous contributions have also been sent to the editor of The Methodist Protestant. He is ready to receive any funds any one feels constrained to contribute to this worthy cause, as well as is the office of the Board of Missions, at 516 North Charles Street, Baltimore, Md. We hope this matter will not drag, but that those who feel constrained to give may do so at once. "What thou doest, do quickly."

DENOMINATIONAL ENTERPRISES

REPORTS FROM THE HOME FIELD

While the work in foreign fields all in all is quite encouraging, notwithstanding they have their problems, the work in the home field also has its encouraging spots. The churches in Seattle are doing well under the leadership of Pastors Roberts, Hoffman and Betschler. We enjoy receiving communications from them. Also in Kansas City, under the leadership of Brothers Snyder and Reed. Logansport, Ind., Brother Kerlin, pastor, expects to begin the erection of a fine church this spring. His people are much enthused over the prospect.

Calvary Church, Parkland, Fla., Brother Hartridge, pastor, has recently made decided improvements. Trinity Church, also in Florida, a new building, has just been completed, under the leadership of Dr. Goss, pastor.

A new Century church is being erected at Rochester, N. Y., at a cost of $35,000; Brother Weaver, pastor.

Emmanuel Church, Philadelphia, which seemed sure to close its doors about a year ago, has not only continued but has taken on new life. Things there are growing brighter every day under the efficient pastorate of Brother Brown. There is much success in other churches which we cannot mention in this short article. For all of which we thank God and the loyal people of the Methodist Protestant Church.

CHINA FAMINE

According to the report from the Foreign Missions Conference of North America, there is no question about a real famine existing in certain provinces of China. It is stated that at least twenty millions of people are seriously affected thereby. The causes given for this widespread famine are three years of short crops, drought, army worm, locusts, bandits and in many sections war conditions. There has been organized a Chinese Relief Committee to work with the Red Cross in an effort to relieve the situation. It is reported that $2,000,000 have been granted by the Chinese government and $2,000,000 more already raised by the people themselves in certain sections, as well as more than $200,000 to date sent from this country. It is estimated that it would require $40,000,000 of Chinese currency to take care of 20,000,000 suffering people and an appeal has come to the United States and other foreign countries to supply at least $12,000,000 in gold. If millions of people are to be saved from death and starvation the American people must give and give liberally and that at once to meet the winter emergency that is upon the suffering Chinese. Let us all do our best for our sorely afflicted neighbors.

GOOD NEWS FROM JAPAN

Extracts from Japan reports reveal that recently fifteen persons were received into church membership at Atsuta under the leadership of Miss Williams. The Nagoya School under the direction of Brother Layman had three hundred students to sign cards as seekers of religion. Fifty-five were baptized. The work at the college is in fine shape.

Brother Paul Warner reports thirteen baptisms; eight adults and five children; 2,485 tracts distributed; 429 calls made and 187 homes visited with more money contributed by the natives than usual. In Kamezaki, a difficult field to work, under the leadership of Bro. Banno, a former Buddhist priest, there were seven baptisms, an entire household, the husband, wife and five children, and eight others applied for baptism. He says, "I have saved the best for the last." That is, "We have 'lost' another mission. 'Lost' in the same way that we 'lost' Kuwana mission last September. That is another mission has grown into a conference church. This is the second mission this year that has become a full-fledged church and has joined the Japan Conference." What is meant by a full-fledged church is that it meets all its current expenses and pays not less than 30 yen per month on the pastor's salary. The Japanese Methodist Protestants are very happy with these recent results, to say nothing about many other encouraging features of the work in that great field, and we all rejoice with our missionaries and native workers and Methodist Protestant Christians in Japan.

METHODIST PROTESTANT STANDARD LEADERSHIP SCHOOL

High Point, March 3-8, 1929

The Methodist Protestant Standard Leadership School, announced through the HERALD a few weeks ago, will be held in First M. P. Church, High Point, beginning next Sunday afternoon, March 3, at 3 p. m. This first session will be devoted to registration, enrollment in classes, and in preliminary class discussions. It is important that all who wish credit for their courses attend this first session. The remaining sessions of the school will be held each night, Monday to Friday, inclusive, from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m.

The following courses will be given:

1. "The Principles of Teaching," Prof. P. E. Lindley.
2. "Organization and Administration of the Church School," Rev. F. L. Gibbs.
3. "Training in Worship and the Devotional Life," Rev. Lawrence Little.

Full credit will be given for each unit completed toward the Standard Leadership Training Diploma of the Board of Christian Education, and, if desired, toward the diploma of the International Council of Religious Education. Workers of other denominations are invited and will be given credit by their own denominational boards for work completed.

A registration fee of $1.00 per student will be charged to cover the cost of the school.

The work of the school will be maintained on the highest level and all church and Sunday school workers are invited to attend.

LAWRENCE LITTLE, Dean.

EASTER

Easter Sunday will be here before we are ready for it. We trust that all the preparations for the same on the part of pastor and people may result gloriously in the largest number of accessions to the churches and the largest Easter offering ever made in the history of our denomination. Let us make this so.

OPTIMISM

The President's Letter

EVANGELISM

*Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit;
so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.*

March 8-13

Please, pastors, keep this date before the people. Dr. Straughn, with his corps of assistants, Haddaway, Stephenson, and Gibbs, is to be with us at this time for a number of meetings throughout the conference. We want these meetings well advertised and well attended, so we are publishing the program again this week, and calling upon Sunday school superintendents to make announcements in Sunday schools. Of course, pastors will keep the matter before the people at their preaching appointments. We want to do our best to give these men a good hearing.

March 31

Easter Sunday, one of the happiest and most significant church seasons of the year. A profound Bible scholar said recently that the greatest fact in all history is the resurrection of Jesus. Easter commemorates this event. Surely we should make much of it. The Easter programs are now ready and will be sent free of charge. We urge all pastors and superintendents to plan for an Easter program in every Sunday school. Ask Rev. G. W. Haddaway, Executive Secretary of the Board of Missions, for the program. Address him at 516 North Charles Street, Baltimore, Md. Orders should go in at once, so there may be no delay in getting supplies. Plan early and plan well for inspiring and spiritual Easter services.

Stewardship Month—Pay-Up Month

April is the time for this, so designated by the conference. Pastors will be expected to preach much on the subject during the month. All that we have—life, time, talents, money—belong to God, and we are his stewards in the use of these things. We do well, therefore, to appoint a time when this matter is to be brought pointedly before the people. All of us, pastors and people alike, need to be kept alive to the fact that we are God's stewards and that the interests of His kingdom are committed to us. He is counting on us; we dare not disappoint him. Stewards throughout the conference will co-operate, we believe, in this plan and make special and earnest effort to bring the finances up to date. The success of the program will depend in great measure upon their efforts and their zeal.

Let us begin now to plan and pray that God may accomplish much for His kingdom during Stewardship Month.

Children's Home

Superintendent Dixon and his helpers are entering heartily and wisely upon their duties at the Home, and they merit our fullest support. We rejoice that the Home is growing, but we must not lose sight of the fact that the expense increases with the growth. The money necessary to run the Home some years ago will not meet the expense now. Many of our churches have been regular contributors to the Home for years, perhaps since its beginning. We want and need other churches in this list. Bro. Pastors and Superintendents, help us in this matter. Give every church on your charge an opportunity once a month to contribute to this cause. The Home will be helped by this, and there will be a reflex action that will bless the church. Last year the Sunday school gave to the Home $7,491. How much more, if every school had shared in the offering!

High Point College

We are nearing the season now when colleges will be enrolling students for next year. If you know of prospective students, please inform President Andrews, so the claims of the college may be brought to their attention by catalog and personal visit by a representative of the college. And let us continue to pray for the blessings of God upon the efforts of the Finance Committee. The financing of the institution is a big undertaking, but God can, and we believe He will, provide a way by which it can be done. Let us keep our faith strong and our zeal warm, and support the committee with our prayers and our means until the good work that they are doing is crowned with abundant success.

Haw River Charge

February 24, Sunday.—The Lord blessed us with another beautiful bright Sabbath, and we enjoyed spending it with Bro. Trollinger and the people of Haw River charge. We were at Midway church in the morning at 11 a. m.; Fairgrove, 3 p. m., and Brown Summit at night. The congregations were not large at either place, but enough were present to give inspiration to the services, and the interest of the people and their response to our efforts were very pleasing and encouraging. The new church at Midway, built last year, is brick-veneered, and is attractive and commodious. Several Sunday school rooms are provided in the front of the building. This church is a credit to the community and to the entire conference as well. We heartily congratulate the congregation upon this splendid achievement.

Fairgrove church is old and historic in our conference. We are told that in the earlier years of the church three sessions of the annual conference were held there. We noted improvements on the interior of the building. New ceiling had been put on, and other parts painted. Many old heads that were leaders in the church in other days have passed on, and other churches have made further drains upon those who are left, so that the church today is not so strong as it was earlier in its history. However, it still has a good nucleus of faithful members who are earnestly and loyally supporting the church.

At Brown Summit we had our last service for the day. Here we have had a church for many years, and we found in the congregation some of our most loyal folks. The people were worshipful, and indicated a pleasing interest in our visit to them. We found a C. E. meeting in progress when we arrived at the church, and understood from the pastor that it was an active and well established organization.

The G. G. deficit was presented at each appointment, and the total for each church was raised, except at Midway. A small balance was unprovided there, but this will come later, no doubt. Fairgrove paid $20; Brown Summit, $7.80; Midway, $11. It should be said to the credit of this charge that they paid last year, as per Journal, $5.94 more per member for local and general benevolences than the average paid by the entire conference. Every church on the charge contributes monthly to the Children's Home. Every church on the charge is to be designated by a suitable marker. It was a delight to find that each of these churches holds to the old way of congregational singing. Thank God for that! And may their number multiply.

We enjoyed the day with these churches, and found at each of them a hearty response to our mission. These churches are in the community where Mrs. Taylor spent her childhood and youth. It was a delight to her to worship there again. We are grateful to every one who in any wise contributed to our comfort and pleasure during the day. Bro. Trollinger and his family have been cordially received, and the work of the year is starting well. We predict for Haw River charge a gratifying report for 1929.

"On This Rock I Will Build My Church"

human personality, however distinguished, could answer the purpose. We believe Jesus was thinking, not so much of Peter as of what had made him what for the time being he had become. Jesus in the first interview with Simon had honored him by predicting that he would become a man of great firmness of character, a stone. When Peter utters the great confession, Jesus said to him: "Thou art Peter," a stone; my prediction is being fulfilled. But how had this great advance in Peter's character been brought about? Not by flesh and blood, not by Peter's own effort nor by any school of men, but my Father in heaven has wrought upon thee. Peter, thou art a rock, but here is exposed to view a much greater rock, that of divine revelation. On this (greater) rock will I build my church. My church will be made up of those who have received Heaven's revelation of my divinity. This revelation will make adamant character in men everywhere, if they really accept it.

We believe there was in Jesus' mind the thought of the great contrast between the human rock in Peter and the ever-enduring rock of God's revealed truth. Not Peter but revealed truth is the foundation of the church of Christ, we believe.

—Newell Dwight Hillis is dead at the age of 71. He preached in the Brooklyn pulpit made famous by Henry Ward Beecher. We heard him preach in 1905. He wrote a number of books, one on German atrocities in the World War.

SIN

God created man a perfect moral being, enduing him with intelligence, sensibility and will, and investing him with the power of free choice. By disobedience he lost his innocence and became corrupt in heart. From a corrupt heart proceed actual transgressions. Men take pleasure in sin because they have the wrong attitude toward God. Sin is the expression of a wrong attitude. Sin is the natural consequence of a corrupt heart.

The Bible treats sin as the most serious matter in human history. The historical records of the Bible point out a trail which has been blazed by the sins of men through all the centuries. "Thou shalt not" is thundered with mighty vehemence at the spiritually deaf because there is no other way to cure the disease. If the fact of sin were left out of the Bible, there would be no reason for its existence.

Sin remains the same in all ages. It makes slippery places for the low at every turn, and those who are deceived fall thereon; it brings low the heads of the mighty in every generation and sends them to the grave in disrepute. Men cannot evolve sin out of their natures. Sin entered into the world through the disobedience of Adam and Eve; and they being the root of all mankind, transmitted it to the whole human family, hence "all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God." Deep down in his heart every man knows by his own experience that sin is a fact in human life, and that however much the fact may disagree with his inclinations, it is never at variance with his conscience.

Sir Oliver Lodge is reported to have said that the modern man is not worrying about his sins. We think it is a mistake to say that the present generation is not concerned about sin; but, if Mr. Lodge is right in his statement, it is time for the church to wake up and declare to the modern man by the authority of God, as revealed in the Bible, that sin is deeply rooted in the lives of men today and that it is as treacherous as ever. We shall fail in our duty to God, and to the modern man, if we do not cry aloud against sin and point it out as the most serious matter in present-day life.—Selected.

OLD METHOD OF MULTIPLICATION

From Nature, in a review of a book on Egyptian mathematics: "Save in a few exceptional cases of multiplication by 3 to 10, the Egyptian performed his multiplications by successive doubling. He first wrote down the multiplicand, and then below it, successively, twice, four times, eight times, sixteen times it, and so on, writing 1, 2, 4, 8, 16—in a column alongside the products; lastly, he selected powers of 2 which (with or without the addition of 1) made up the multiplier and added the corresponding products. This method of multiplication by successive doubling persisted through the centuries; Michael Stifel used it (1525); and it is still worth while to point out that the "Russian peasant" system of multiplication which came up as a curiosity a few years ago is only a very handy way of carrying out precisely the same process."

—We asked a Congregationalist minister recently what he thought of the effort to unite the Presbyterian and M. E. churches. His reply was: "They will probably be at it for fifty years and then may fail."

OUR STORY PAGE

THE GOSPEL DOLL

There was a new addition to the doll family; it came to Hilda printed and draped in flags which represented the nations of the world. Hilda thought this was the nicest doll in the family, Auntie thought he was the most interesting doll, at least, and she told Hilda what she could about his flags and the countries for which they stood. At her suggestion Hilda named him Patriot (and he was called the Patriot doll).

One day, while talking about Patriot's flags, they noticed the Chinese flag. "Oh, Jili, come here," cried Hilda, "and make your salute. This is your flag, makes you homesick, Bias Eyes, don't it?"

"He seems to be very well satisfied," smiled Auntie, "and I think he should be; he is much better off than many of the boys and girls in China." Then Auntie went on to tell how the missionaries were trying to teach the boys and girls in China the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ.

"Auntie, where is China?"

"On the other side of the world."

"How do you get there?"

"By ocean steamer—across the Pacific."

"Does the world turn around?"

"Yes, dear, it turns over."

"Well, if the world turns over, why couldn't anybody go up in an aeroplane and wait 'til the earth turns and come down in China, like that man that visited our teacher said?"

"Now, my dear, we had better get our gourds for we are getting in deep water."

A few days later, Auntie had forgotten, but Hilda had not. "Auntie, where does our creek go to?"

"It flows into the Mississippi River and the Mississippi goes to the gulf and the ocean."

"Oh, goody," cried Hilda and danced from the room.

Later in the day—"Oh, Auntie, won't you please do something 'portant for me?"

"Gladly, what may the important thing be?"

"I wish you to write the gospel on Jili. He is going to be a missionary and preach to the heathen. Write all the things our preacher says, like 'God is love,' you know." Auntie did not reply, but she took the Chinese doll and began printing verses of scripture on his yellow body.

"Just write the e'vertin' things, Auntie."

"Yes, dear, just the things most needful," and she did. She printed all verses such as "God so loved the world that he gave his only Son, that whosoever believes on Him shall have everlasting life," "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and you shall be saved," "Repent, believe and be baptized and you shall be saved," "All things are possible to him that believes," "He that comes to Christ will in no wise be cast out," "Come unto Christ, all you ends of the earth and be saved," "Love one another," "Pray without ceasing," "Whatsoever you ask in prayer, believing, you shall receive," "He that overcometh shall inherit all things and I will be his God and he shall be my son," "Thou shalt have no other Gods before me," "Thou shalt not kill," "Thou shalt not steal," and all the other "shall nots." "Blessed are the pure in heart," and all the other Beatitudes. "The Lord is my shepherd," and the rest of the 23rd Psalm; and so on until the doll's body was covered with the verses.

"Now bless him, Auntie."

"Bless you, Jilidoll," smiled Auntie, patting him on the head, "may you carry the message of salvation to the little girls and boys who play with you."

"Thank you with a kiss, Auntie, and bless you too," and again Hilda danced out of the room.

Next day the Gospel doll was missing; Auntie noticed it but she was too busy searching for her washtub to hunt him up.

Several days later two men in a canoe were out in the Mississippi River. "Look how that little stream yonder comes pouring in," said one. "Just as muddy as it can be. It must have a swift current."

"Yes," said the other, "but look yonder, Bill! What is that odd-looking thing bobbing along among the drifts?"

"Appears to be a flag, Jim. Queer, ain't it, let's see what it can be," and rowing over to the drift he drew the queer looking thing, which was a tub with hoisted flag. Inside the tub they found a wooden box, and on the lid of the box was written in a childish hand:

"Don't nobody bother Jillie, he is a gospel doll, goin' to be a missionary and preach to them heathens in Chiny. He is sailin' under the United States flag."

"Well, I'll be blowed, Bill," said Jim, taking off the lid and lifting the Rev. Jili out. "Oh, har, har, har!" Jili did look funny with his tilted eyes and yellow complexion but Bill did not laugh, he was trying to read a letter which he found tied around the doll's neck: "Say, Jim, listen here—" Dear Littel Heethen in Chiny:

I luv you so much I am sendin' my doll, Jillie, to teach you about our God. Tak gud kare ov Jillie and kiss him sometimes for Yure friend,

HILDA ALLEN.

A week or more after Jili's disappearance, Auntie came down to the playhouse with a letter, "For you, Hilda," she said, "shall I read it?"

"Oh, Auntie, it's from Jili! Wait! Oh, Mattie, bring Bella! Here, Mademoiselle! Irmine! Lady Beth! Patriot! Booker! Mammy! All you dolls—I want you to hear Jili's letter." And Auntie (entirely forgetful of her lost tub) read the letter:

Dear Hilda:

Your gospel doll, Jili, arrived safely here today. A gentleman who was out on the river found him in his tub boat among the drifts and brought him to me. I am president of the missionary society here and as we are sending a missionary barrel to China tomorrow, your doll will go with it. Trusting that Jili will help to Christianize the children who play with him, I am

Sincerely, your friend,

S. MARY SMYTHE.

"Dear Hilda:

"Arhu, a little girl who attends mission school, received your doll and wishes to thank you. She brings Jili to school and all the children play with him. They never tire of having me tell them what he says—what he has written on him. I tell them the verses over and over, and they write them down in the Chinese language. I think Arlu knows the verses by heart. This is what she has written to you:

"Dear little American Girl:

"Arlu sends much thanks for Jili. We all love him and learn what he says about your God. He looks happy. Here are kisses—xxxxxxX. The small ones are from Jili, the big one from me.

"Arlu much love American girl.

"ARLU."

As the letter ended, Hilda said happily, "Well, Jili is a real gospel doll, isn't he?" And her aunt readily agreed. —Advance.

THE ST. VALENTINE WIND

Ruth had quarreled with Rosalie for the first time since they had been playmates. And now St. Valentine's Day was coming, and she could not send her the valentine that she had bought so joyfully a few days before.

"I don't care," Ruth said, as she put other valentines into envelopes. But she knew that she did care a great deal. She sat and gazed at the valentine that had been intended for Rosalie. What should she do with it?

"I know what I'll do," she decided. "I'll just take it with me when I go out to carry the other valentines, and perhaps I shall think of some one to give it to."

She and Rosalie had always carried valentines around together, and she felt queer and lonesome now as she started off alone. It would not be nearly so much fun, she knew, to ring bells all day by herself and then run and hide. She gave a deep sigh.

As she passed Rosalie's house she looked toward it out of the corner of her eye. Was Rosalie there, or was she, too, going forlornly around alone, carrying valentines?

By the time Ruth had finished running up and down the village streets, slipping her valentines under doors and ringing bells, she was quite out of breath. There was only one valentine left—the one that had been intended for Rosalie.

"I suppose I might just as well take it home," Ruth said sorrowfully.

The second time she passed Rosalie's house she tried to go by, but somehow her feet lagged. What would happen if she ran up the walk and rang the bell? Would the door fly open, she wondered, and some one shout, "Valentine, I caught you!"

Ruth hesitated a moment, then, as she started to walk on again, something unexpected happened. The wind, which as night fell had been blowing harder and harder, came swirling around the corner of the house and snatched the envelope from her hand. Away it went, high into the air, whirling and circling. It flew straight over the fence and into the yard of Rosalie's house. Up into the air it went, then down again it fluttered and landed right at Rosalie's door!

Ruth was so astonished that she stood stock-still in surprise. Then she pushed the gates open quickly. She must get back that envelope, and in a hurry, too!

There it lay right on the doorstep. Somehow it seemed to be in just the right place, but it must not stay there.

As she stooped to snatch it up the door flew open. "Valentine!" a voice cried joyfully. "I caught you!" some one seized her and drew her into the hall. It was Rosalie.

"I saw you pass," Rosalie said, "and I hid behind the curtain and watched. How I hoped you had brought a valentine for me! Then when you came into the yard I knew you had."

"But I hadn't," Ruth said, though she did not want to say it. "That is, I had a valentine for you, but I wasn't going to give it to you. The wind snatched it out of my hand."

"There!" said Rosalie, laughing. "I had a valentine for you, too, and I couldn't make up my mind what to do with it. I'm glad the wind was blowing tonight."

The next minute Ruth was running home to ask if she might stay to supper at Rosalie's house. When she came back the wind was roaring down the chimney and rattling the windows.

"Blow, wind," said Ruth; "we don't mind."

"Yes, blow," echoed Rosalie. "You are just a St. Valentine wind—full of fun."—Selected.

THE DUTY OF PUBLIC WORSHIP

We need the helpful services of the sanctuary more than some people seem to think. If we carelessly absent ourselves from the house of God, we do ourselves a great injustice, even sin against our own souls. Yet men who are thoughtful enough about other things are so thoughtless as to think it matters not as to their church attendance. Yet most of us know that we ought to go to church. James says, "To him that knoweth to do good and doeth it not, to him it is sin."

To neglect the services of the sanctuary is a sin against Him who warns us against "forsaking the assembling of ourselves, as the manner of some is." It is a sin against others who are more or less influenced by our example. And it is a sin against ourselves, because we need the inspiration and the uplift that come from sincerely waiting upon God.

And this is true, not only of the average man, but also of every man, however great and strong he may be. For example, at one time Wilberforce was almost overwhelmed with work and anxiety in behalf of the slaves. And he declared that he owed the continuance of his mental powers to the periodic return of Sunday and attending upon the services of God's house. In writing to a friend, he gave this wise word of warning, "If you do not observe the Sabbath and the Lord's house, you will either kill yourself or your mind."

Reader, if you deliberately and persistently ignore the worship of God in His sanctuary you are making a great mistake and also are committing a serious sin.—Daniel J. Currie.

OUR STORY PAGE

THE GOSPEL DOLL

There was a new addition to the doll family; it came to Hilda printed and draped in flags which represented the nations of the world. Hilda thought this was the nicest doll in the family, Auntie thought he was the most interesting doll, at least, and she told Hilda what she could about his flags and the countries for which they stood. At her suggestion Hilda named him Patriot (and he was called the Patriot doll).

One day, while talking about Patriot's flags, they noticed the Chinese flag. "Oh, Jili, come here," cried Hilda, "and make your salute. This is your flag, makes you homesick, Bias Eyes, don't it?"

"He seems to be very well satisfied," smiled Auntie, "and I think he should be; he is much better off than many of the boys and girls in China." Then Auntie went on to tell how the missionaries were trying to teach the boys and girls in China the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ.

"Auntie, where is China?"

"On the other side of the world."

"How do you get there?"

"By ocean steamer—across the Pacific."

"Does the world turn around?"

"Yes, dear, it turns over."

"Well, if the world turns over, why couldn't anybody go up in an aeroplane and wait 'til the earth turns and come down in China, like that man that visited our teacher said?"

"Now, my dear, we had better get our gourds for we are getting in deep water."

A few days later, Auntie had forgotten, but Hilda had not. "Auntie, where does our creek go to?"

"It flows into the Mississippi River and the Mississippi goes to the gulf and the ocean."

"Oh, goody," cried Hilda and danced from the room.

Later in the day—"Oh, Auntie, won't you please do something 'portant for me?"

"Gladly, what may the important thing be?"

"I wish you to write the gospel on Jili. He is going to be a missionary and preach to the heathen. Write all the things our preacher says, like 'God is love,' you know." Auntie did not reply, but she took the Chinese doll and began printing verses of scripture on his yellow body.

"Just write the e'vertin' things, Auntie."

"Yes, dear, just the things most needful," and she did. She printed all verses such as "God so loved the world that he gave his only Son, that whosoever believes on Him shall have everlasting life," "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and you shall be saved," "Repent, believe and be baptized and you shall be saved," "All things are possible to him that believes," "He that comes to Christ will in no wise be cast out," "Come unto Christ, all you ends of the earth and be saved," "Love one another," "Pray without ceasing," "Whatsoever you ask in prayer, believing, you shall receive," "He that overcometh shall inherit all things and I will be his God and he shall be my son," "Thou shalt have no other Gods before me," "Thou shalt not kill," "Thou shalt not steal," and all the other "shall nots." "Blessed are the pure in heart," and all the other Beatitudes. "The Lord is my shepherd," and the rest of the 23rd Psalm; and so on until the doll's body was covered with the verses.

"Now bless him, Auntie."

"Bless you, Jilidoll," smiled Auntie, patting him on the head, "may you carry the message of salvation to the little girls and boys who play with you."

"Thank you with a kiss, Auntie, and bless you too," and again Hilda danced out of the room.

Next day the Gospel doll was missing; Auntie noticed it but she was too busy searching for her washtub to hunt him up.

Several days later two men in a canoe were out in the Mississippi River. "Look how that little stream yonder comes pouring in," said one. "Just as muddy as it can be. It must have a swift current."

"Yes," said the other, "but look yonder, Bill! What is that odd-looking thing bobbing along among the drifts?"

"Appears to be a flag, Jim. Queer, ain't it, let's see what it can be," and rowing over to the drift he drew the queer looking thing, which was a tub with hoisted flag. Inside the tub they found a wooden box, and on the lid of the box was written in a childish hand:

"Don't nobody bother Jillie, he is a gospel doll, goin' to be a missionary and preach to them heathens in Chiny. He is sailin' under the United States flag."

"Well, I'll be blowed, Bill," said Jim, taking off the lid and lifting the Rev. Jili out. "Oh, har, har, har!" Jili did look funny with his tilted eyes and yellow complexion but Bill did not laugh, he was trying to read a letter which he found tied around the doll's neck: "Say, Jim, listen here—" Dear Littel Heethen in Chiny:

I luv you so mucche I am sendin' my doll, Jillie, to teach you about our God. Tak gud kare ov Jillie and kiss him sometimes for Yure friend,

HILDA ALLEN.

A week or more after Jili's disappearance, Auntie came down to the playhouse with a letter, "For you, Hilda," she said, "shall I read it?"

"Oh, Auntie, it's from Jili! Wait! Oh, Mattie, bring Bella! Here, Mademoiselle! Irmine! Lady Beth! Patriot! Booker! Mammy! All you dolls—I want you to hear Jili's letter." And Auntie (entirely forgetful of her lost tub) read the letter:

Dear Hilda:

Your gospel doll, Jili, arrived safely here today. A gentleman who was out on the river found him in his tub boat among the drifts and brought him to me. I am president of the missionary society here and as we are sending a missionary barrel to China tomorrow, your doll will go with it. Trusting that Jili will help to Christianize the children who play with him, I am

Sincerely, your friend,

S. MARY SMYTHE.

"Dear Hilda:

"Arлу, a little girl who attends mission school, received your doll and wishes to thank you. She brings Jili to school and all the children play with him. They never tire of having me tell them what he says—what he has written on him. I tell them the verses over and over, and they write them down in the Chinese language. I think Arlu knows the verses by heart. This is what she has written to you:

"Dear little American Girl:

"Arlu sends much thanks for Jili. We all love him and learn what he says about your God. He looks happy. Here are kisses—xxxxxxX. The small ones are from Jili, the big one from me.

"Arlu much love American girl.

"ARLU."

As the letter ended, Hilda said happily, "Well, Jili is a real gospel doll, isn't he?" And her aunt readily agreed. —Advance.

THE ST. VALENTINE WIND

Ruth had quarreled with Rosalie for the first time since they had been playmates. And now St. Valentine's Day was coming, and she could not send her the valentine that she had bought so joyfully a few days before.

"I don't care," Ruth said, as she put other valentines into envelopes. But she knew that she did care a great deal. She sat and gazed at the valentine that had been intended for Rosalie. What should she do with it?

"I know what I'll do," she decided. "I'll just take it with me when I go out to carry the other valentines, and perhaps I shall think of some one to give it to."

She and Rosalie had always carried valentines around together, and she felt queer and lonesome now as she started off alone. It would not be nearly so much fun, she knew, to ring bells all day by herself and then run and hide. She gave a deep sigh.

As she passed Rosalie's house she looked toward it out of the corner of her eye. Was Rosalie there, or was she, too, going forlornly around alone, carrying valentines?

By the time Ruth had finished running up and down the village streets, slipping her valentines under doors and ringing bells, she was quite out of breath. There was only one valentine left—the one that had been intended for Rosalie.

"I suppose I might just as well take it home," Ruth said sorrowfully.

The second time she passed Rosalie's house she tried to go by, but somehow her feet lagged. What would happen if she ran up the walk and rang the bell? Would the door fly open, she wondered, and some one shout, "Valentine, I caught you!"

Ruth hesitated a moment, then, as she started to walk on again, something unexpected happened. The wind, which as night fell had been blowing harder and harder, came swirling around the corner of the house and snatched the envelope from her hand. Away it went, high into the air, whirling and circling. It flew straight over the fence and into the yard of Rosalie's house. Up into the air it went, then down again it fluttered and landed right at Rosalie's door!

Ruth was so astonished that she stood stock-still in surprise. Then she pushed the gates open quickly. She must get back that envelope, and in a hurry, too!

There it lay right on the doorstep. Somehow it seemed to be in just the right place, but it must not stay there.

As she stooped to snatch it up the door flew open. "Valentine!" a voice cried joyfully. "I caught you!" some one seized her and drew her into the hall. It was Rosalie.

"I saw you pass," Rosalie said, "and I hid behind the curtain and watched. How I hoped you had brought a valentine for me! Then when you came into the yard I knew you had."

"But I hadn't," Ruth said, though she did not want to say it. "That is, I had a valentine for you, but I wasn't going to give it to you. The wind snatched it out of my hand."

"There!" said Rosalie, laughing. "I had a valentine for you, too, and I couldn't make up my mind what to do with it. I'm glad the wind was blowing tonight."

The next minute Ruth was running home to ask if she might stay to supper at Rosalie's house. When she came back the wind was roaring down the chimney and rattling the windows.

"Blow, wind," said Ruth; "we don't mind."

"Yes, blow," echoed Rosalie. "You are just a St. Valentine wind—full of fun." —Selected.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By Grover L. Angel

President C. E. Society, High Point College

March 3: "RECRUITING FOR CHRIST"

Matt. 9: 35-38

(Consecration Meeting)

Plans for the Meeting

"Have the members of the society meet at the church some time before C. E. meeting hour. The time will depend on the community. It may be an hour, two hours, or in the afternoon. All are to go from this preliminary meeting and each one bring another person to the evening meeting."

Points for the Leader

Every Christian should be a recruiter for Christ. Christianity is a recruiting religion. It does not wait for someone to knock and ask for admittance; it reaches out in obedience to Christ's command to preach the Gospel to every living creature and draws men into the fold. Christianity is therefore an evangelistic religion.

Evangelism does not necessarily mean a revival; it can be made even more effective at times when carried on in a personal manner. In fact, there is a danger of us depending too much on the evangelist and not paying enough attention to the personal responsibility of winning souls to Christ.

Every organization in the church and church school are recruiting forces. Perhaps the largest per cent of people that are brought into the church are brought in by the church school. There we learn the facts concerning and the best methods of how to present the Christ in the most appealing manner. One of the most outstanding things is to make the people believe that we are sincere and that our lives back up the Gospel we are offering to them. Thus we hope that this discussion of the topic will aid each member of this society to be better recruiters for Christ.

Suitable Songs

"I Love to Tell the Story."

"Love Divine, All Love Excelling."

"Must Jesus Bear the Cross Alone?"

"The Son of God Goes Forth to War."

Topics for Discussion

1. The World's Greatest Need.
2. Christianity's Greatest Need.
3. Christ's Greatest Plan.
4. The Christian's Greatest Opportunity.
5. A Christian's Natural Expression.
6. How to Recruit for Christ.

Questions to Be Answered

1. How were you won to Christ?
2. Why must a successful soul-winner be sincere?
3. How can our society be better recruiters?
4. How does a knowledge of the Bible aid us in recruiting for Christ?
5. What is the strongest motive in recruiting for Christ?
6. Do you think that our society should organize a personal worker's class?

Appropriate Quotations

"My life shall touch a dozen lives before this day is done;
Leave countless marks for good or ill ere sets this evening's sun.

Shall fair or foul its imprint prove on those my life shall hail?

Shall benison my impress be, or shall a blight prevail?"

—Selected.

"I need not shout my faith. Thrice eloquent
Are quiet trees and the green listening sod;

Hushed are the stars, whose power is never spent;

The hills are mute, yet how they speak of God!"

—Charles Hanson Towne.

"I have a Friend so precious, so very dear to me,

He loves me with such tender love, He loves me faithfully,

I could not live without Him; I love to feel
Him nigh,

And so we dwell together, my Lord and I.

He knows how I am longing some weary soul to win,

And so He bids me go and speak the loving word for Him,

He bids me tell His wondrous love, and how
He came to die,

And so we work together, my Lord and I."

—Author Unknown.

"O, Christian, live your life so true,

As on through life you speed,

That others, as they're watching you,

Shall say, 'Thus Christ doth lead,

I'll try to be His follower too.'

Be careful. Men are watching you."

—Alice May Morey.

THE WORLD'S BIBLE

Christ has no hands but our hands
To do His work today;

He has no feet but our feet
To lead men in His way.

He has no tongue but our tongues
To tell men how He died;
He has no help but our help
To bring them to His side.

We are the only Bible
The careless world will read;
We are the sinner's Gospel;
We are the scoffer's creed.

We are the Lord's last message
Given in deed or word;
What if the type is crooked?
What if the print is blurred?

What if our hands are busy
With other things than His?
What if our feet are walking
Where sin's allurements is?

What if our tongues are speaking
Of things His lips would spurn?
How can we hope to help Him
And hasten His return?

HEALING PRAYER

Healing Mind of Christ supreme,
Be thy thoughts my daily theme;
Teach me how to do thy will,
Know the Truth and just be still.

Healing Power of Christ profound,
More and more in me abound;
From self-seeking make me free,
Build my life alone in Thee.

Healing Love of Christ divine,
I would make Thee fully mine;
Dwell within me now I pray,
Keep me strong and brave today.

Healing Word of Christ so dear,
Speak to me that I may hear;
Let my daily life express
Truth and Love and Righteousness.

CORNSTALK PAPER NOW USED

In its issue of December 16, The Commercial News, daily newspaper of Danville, Ill., used newsprint paper from cornstalks, the pulp for which was furnished by the Cornstalk Products Company of Danville. The paper was manufactured by the Kalamazoo Vegetable Parchment Company.

In addition to newsprint, book papers are also being manufactured from cornstalks. A book, "Farm Products in Industry," by Geo. F. Rommel, has been printed on it by the Rae D. Henkle Company, publishers of New York.

Clothing and Other Gifts

One quilt from Gray's Chapel, Randolph.

Mrs. W. S. Jones, Mrs. Paul Rawlins and Miss Mattie Lucas, of Greensboro, brought a box containing eight dresses and one coat for girls. Some of these Miss Mattie Lucas had made herself.

Mrs. R. M. Cox, Hickory Ridge, Forsyth, sent one dozen good wash-cloths for children.

Mrs. F. W. Paschall and some of her young ladies of Asheville sent a box of clothing. This is the greater part of the spring outfit for the girl they are clothing.

The Belmont C. E. society sent representatives to select a girl to dress. They were assigned one and will soon be sending clothing for her, or the money to buy clothing. Others are talking of taking a child. Let us hear definitely and we will make the assignment.

Not many of our boys have been taken yet. We have been looking and listening for some of our boys' classes or men's classes or some individuals or some C. E. societies to take one of our boys. A man sent us word some time ago: "Please assign me one of your boys to clothe, and let me have the homeliest, most neglected, most unpromising boy you have." We have none of that kind, but we assigned him a boy, and now both he and the boy both seem happy in the arrangement.

With all our hearts we appreciate your thoughtfulness of and helpfulness toward us. It is fine to have such good friends all over the conference. What is needed most of all just now is to get EVERY Sunday school in the conference to make its monthly offering to the Home.

Just now some of us have had to go without our salaries for two months in order to pay current expenses.

Two weeks ago we sent out letters to all our pastors and to all our Sunday school superintendents explaining our financial condition, and asking for an increased offering during February because of our pressing needs.

The first of March will be here before this week goes out, and unless relief comes from some source we cannot meet our obligations. Our bank account at present is $81.87.

This is the most beautiful work the conference is doing, and it is your work and ours together.

We thank you for your faithful responses in the past, and pray God's richest blessings upon you while you heed His call for the present and the future.

We are soon going to ask some individual, or some family, or some church, or some of God's servants somewhere to build a baby cottage here. A baby cottage is a real need and the services rendered by it would be the most blessed service done by the church. "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Good reader, will you build a baby cottage at the Children's Home? We need it and we believe God will help us to get it.

Faithfully yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

WHAT THE INFALLIBLE SCIENTISTS ARE SAYING

The human race is bound to die!

We see the portent in the sky

Where worlds and suns go rushing by.

On some obscure highway of space,

In some most rapid, thrilling race,

The earth is sure to lose her place,

Into the jaws of death be hurled,

A wholly dead or dying world.

The human race is doomed to go!

We see the signs of coming woe

And will to you our vision show.

We see the ocean drying up,

The time when men must cease to sup,

No water left to fill a cup,

When men must all lie down and die

With burning faces toward the sky.

The human race will surely end

In way not strange to thinking men.

The time is surely coming when

The sun our earth will fail to warm,

When men will rush in frantic swarm

And seek escape from blizzard storm.

And yet in spite of all device

The race will end in age of ice.

The human race will cease to be,

As you may now most quickly see,

For you with me must quite agree:

A battle fierce is now put on

And dreadful foes their armor don,

All ready to fight till strength is gone:

Decisive war 'twixt man and bug,

And man will sleep in grave new dug.

—J. F. M.

ORDER EASTER PROGRAMS NOW

Brother Ministers and Sunday School Superintendents:

Don't forget to order Easter programs, envelopes and decision cards, and don't delay. Easter will be here before you know it. Order at once and make more of Easter than ever.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

MISSIONARY SOCIETIES, PLEASE NOTICE

Miss Mildred Miskimen, our missionary from India, will arrive in Greensboro the night of February 27, and will be in North Carolina until March 20. The following appointments have been made to date: Maple Springs, Forsyth charge, February 28, in a district rally. She will visit the churches in and about Winston-Salem until Monday. She will be at Lebanon church, High Point, on Wednesday night, March 6; Welch Memorial, High Point, Sunday night, March 10; Rehoboth, Granville circuit, Sunday morning, March 17.

Miss Miskimen is in North Carolina to help us in our missionary work. She is fresh from the field. We ought to take advantage of her visit, and hear what she has to say, and give our people an opportunity both to see her and to hear her.

I am anxious that all the dates in between those already filled shall be taken. Please write me that you want her to come to your church. A free-will offering is to be taken at each place she visits to help cover the expense of transportation to North Carolina.

If you want her, please notify me at once. Address Mrs. C. W. Bates, Box 1501, Ashboro street, Greensboro, N. C.

FLAT ROCK MISSIONARY SOCIETY

The W. H. M. S. of Flat Rock church, Vance charge, held their regular monthly meeting in the home of Mrs. W. B. Reavis Monday afternoon, February 18. Devotions were conducted by Mrs. W. B. Reavis, roll called by secretary, seven members present. Then came the reports.

The plans for the Washington's birthday party, which was to be held at the home of Mrs. T. P. Hester February 22 were discontinued, due to illness in her family.

The program was omitted, as members on the program were absent. The society adjourned, after which fruits were served by the hostess.

We were glad to have Mrs. Henry Satterwhite and Miss Dowlin as guests of the society.

On January 29 the society met in the home of Mrs. A. E. White. Quite an interesting business session was held, and a final discussion of the new consolidation; the society having made no progress in organizing new members for the auxiliary, will continue as in the past.

The program was then taken up: Medical Work in India, Mrs. A. E. White; Medical Work in China, Mrs. F. B. Wade; Bethel Home, Mrs. W. B. Reavis.

After the society adjourned the hostess served delicious refreshments.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Asheville.—It is a pleasure to report that our faithful and beloved friend, Miss Novella McIntire, is rapidly regaining her health. We are delighted that she can walk and for two Sundays has presided at the piano for the morning worship.

We are having quite a number of visitors from service to service.

Mr. and Mrs. Alva McIntire worshiped with us Sunday. Mr. McIntire is quite recovered after several weeks in Norburn Hospital. We are all so glad.

Rev. F. W. Paschall certainly gives us fine sermons. Those who do not come are certainly missing much this is inspiring and helpful.

Last Sunday night's service was given over to the young people for observance of Young People's Day. Rev. F. W. Paschall gave the principal talk, "Youth and the New Century Service;" Clarice Younginer, "The Meaning of Young People's Day;" Nancy Clouse, "The Youth and the Church of Yesterday;" Verda McIntire, "Youth and the Church of Today;" Mrs. Paschall, "Youth and the Church of the Future." Each one assisting the pastor gave very interesting and helpful talks. It was evident that much time and study had been given the subjects assigned. Special music for the occasion was rendered by Miss Novella McIntire, piano, and a quartet, Rev. F. W. Paschall, E. H. Pratt, Mildred Younginer and James Bailey.

The Brotherhood met Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. E. C. Fawcett, the president; dinner at 6:30, served by Mrs. Fawcett's circle. The class met immediately after for business session. Twelve men were present for the meeting.

Thursday of last week the ladies of the church and a few friends met with Mrs. Shaw on Mitchell Avenue for an all-day quilting. Several ladies present had never quilted, but they learned. Mrs. Shaw prepared lunch, each one paying; this was turned into the treasury.

The ladies are realizing quite a little for the treasury, quilting and having a jolly good time, too. Rev. Mr. Paschall was a quilter, too.

The ladies' auxiliary will meet with Mrs. F. W. Paschall Thursday. This is a live, busy organization.

Mrs. J. R. Moore has been sick for several weeks.

Mr. Waco Miller and Mrs. Aileen Davis McKenzie are but little improved. Let us pray the Lord to show Himself very close to them.

(Written for last week's Herald, but received too late.—Ed.)

Bethel, Alamance.—On last Sunday our pastor, Rev. J. A. Burgess, gave us a wonderful sermon from the text, "In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk." All of his sermons are good and we think that each one gets better.

Our Sunday school has adopted Little's Cross and Crown system, and our attendance is steadily increasing.

The Woman's Missionary Society met at the home of Mrs. J. M. Foust the first Sunday in February. A very interesting meeting was held. The next meeting will be held the first Sunday in March at the home of Mrs. R. W. Lindley.

On the third Sunday morning in March the annual Thank-offering service will be held at Bethel church. For this occasion Rev. J. F. Minnis, returned Missionary from India, will be present and give us a talk on India.

Plans are being made for an Easter service on Easter Sunday.

On last Tuesday, Mrs. Lon McPherson, teacher of the Mothers' class of our Sunday school, entertained the class in a very delightful manner at her home. She was assisted by Mrs. R. W. Lindley, assistant teacher of the class. Every one enjoyed the well-prepared program, which consisted of music, contests, and delicious refreshments. There was manifest the spirit of Christian fellowship and all went away feeling that it had been an uplifting and profitable occasion.

Why Not Circuit.—The second Sunday in February our hearts were filled with praise and gratitude to God and the loyal and faithful servants of God around Love Joy when we entered into our new brick church, with four Sunday school rooms almost completed, except the new pews. God has blessed this people and they have gone far beyond their own expectation and God will still lead them on if they will just follow as they have been and they will soon have their new pews and they will have a church modern in every respect. They have an average of about one hundred in Sunday school and great interest is manifested in the study of the Word.

All the other churches have good, interesting Sunday schools, but not so large in number. God does not place His value on numbers but on souls, so perhaps the smaller schools are doing as much to please God as the larger.

It is a little late to speak about things of a month ago, but will say that New Hope church and Seagrove put on Christmas programs and had a tree, giving treats to the school. This writer was not able to be there but they did not forget their pastor and family. We received many nice presents from New Hope and also Seagrove.

Bro. W. R. Williams gave the writer a nice pair of shoes, but I did not catch up with the other givers; however, we thank them all and God knows and will bless you.

On the first Sunday night of this month the Fairgrove church put on the educational program for the young people. The young people had charge and did their parts well. That afternoon I drove my car in front of Bro. L. A. King's home, as I was to take supper with them. Then we walked out to the church where they were making ready for the evening service. There I was persuaded to go over to Sister Stewart's for supper, with the consent of Bro. and Sister King. During the time some trespassers drove my car up in Bro. King's yard. After the service we went out to their home. Bro. King got a light and went with me to my car. When I went to get in I found that somebody had placed it under a burden. But I did not remove the burden there, but I drove home and moved the burden from the car and placed it in the dining room, and his family was turned to joy, for the wolf was driven from the door. I don't know all the folks who did this but God does and may He bless them all and make us a blessing to them. There is more I would like to say, but space will not permit.

Our second quarterly conference will meet at New Hope church on Saturday before the third Sunday in March. Preaching at 11 a. m., conference at 1:30 p. m. Brethren, take time to attend to the business of the Lord's kingdom and He will reward you for it.

JOEL B. TROGDON, Pastor.

February 18, 1929.

Shiloh, Randolph Charge.—We are getting along nicely, though the flu affected us for a while. We had a good-sized congregation Sunday and our pastor, Rev. Garner, had another good sermon for us. He doesn't seem to have any other kind. His subject Sunday was "Labor With God."

The work on the parsonage is almost completed now and we will be glad to have the pastor as a neighbor as well as pastor.

The ladies of this church have made four quilts for the Children's Home this winter.

We are sorry that one of our members, Mrs. W. P. Pickett, is not getting along so well. She has been sick for over a year and we miss her very much at church as she was always a willing and active worker. We pray that the Lord will help her in her suffering.

We were glad to see several visitors out to worship with us Sunday and we hope they will come back again, as we are always glad to see them.

REPORTER.

Alleghany, Davidson Charge.—Brother W. D. Reed on the fourth Sunday helped out in Sunday school, after which he preached a good sermon on the Lord's Supper and administered the Lord's Supper.

Preaching the second Sunday in March at 11 in the morning, and on the fourth Sunday in the evening. The pastor wants the children and young folks to come out; he wants to give a little talk to them before preaching.

ABIGAIL COGGIN.

Reidsville.—Just because we are located on the outer edge of the conference does not argue that we are not worth much to the conference. A hub without a rim would be useless. In fact, the rim gives symmetry and dignity and utility to the hub. And so we flatter ourselves that our little segment of the rim is essential to the progress of the denominational machine. Hence our endeavor to keep fit; to keep put, and to keep turning.

Just recently the women of our church gave a chicken-pie dinner to the Rotary club, which was a success. It couldn't have been anything else, as the chicken-pies were made by Mrs. Mary Hopkins, who is a past-master at the art. The pastor was in Leaksville, where he delivered an address to the Rotary club at noon, to the Kiwanis club at night, and later in the evening to a mass meeting in the public school auditorium, and had to miss the chicken-pie.

The day of prayer for world-wide missions was observed by our church, the Baptist and the Elon Christian churches co-operating. The service was well attended, and good will result from the meeting.

The Philathea class entertained the Christian Endeavor society at a delightful social a little while ago. The occasion was enjoyed by all who attended. The Philatheas are to be commended for their splendid work for the church and the Sunday school.

At our Thank-Offering service the women gave a playlet entitled "Unto the Least of These." The offering amounted to $20.00.

After spending a week in Greensboro, Mrs. Mary Hopkins has returned to her home here very much improved in health.

Owing to the continued illness of his wife's father, our Sunday school superintendent, Mr. F. W. Easter, has to be away from the city a great deal and we miss him from the school. The work is carried on in his absence by Mr. C. J. Roberts, the assistant.

Our members are co-operating with the members of the other churches in entertaining the Older Boys' conference which meets here on March 8, 9 and 10.

Mrs. S. J. Kernodle and Mrs. G. M. Thompson, two of our oldest and most highly respected members, have been confined to their homes all the winter on account of sickness. They are some better, we are glad to say.

Mrs. Bertha McCollum, the president of our Ladies' Aid Society, has been visiting friends in High Point for the past two weeks.

GEO. R. BROWN.

Salem.—In the absence of our pastor, Rev. O. C. Loy, his brother, W. M. Loy of Mebane, filled the appointment and delivered an able sermon on the "Span of Life."

Every one enjoyed the fine style of Mr. Loy and his remarks against apeism and the so-called theory of evolution.

He stuck to the Bible story of the creation of all living things and anyone could plainly see that he didn't claim kin with the monkey race.

You were welcome, Bro. Loy; come again.

Some of our members are quite sick at this writing. Mrs. Ernest Jenkins is ill with pneumonia at the home of her father, Mr. J. M. Paris. Her mother, Mrs. Dora Paris, has been in a Salisbury hospital for several weeks, but is expected home the latter part of this week.

Miss Etta Crutchfield has been a patient at Rainey Hospital, but has been removed to the home of her sister, Mrs. Gurney Right, of Burlington. She is reported to be improving.

Our Sunday school is gaining some headway now, and with the approaching spring weather we hope to have a 100 per cent attendance. Let's all start going to Sunday school and get this spiritual food that is so essential to our Christian growth.

REPORTER.

Lexington, State Street.—The opening programs grow more interesting each Sunday, it seems. A week ago Sunday, Mrs. Harkey and her class of young ladies rendered a delightful and helpful exercise. Mrs. Potts sang an appropriate and impressive solo in her efficient way.

Last Sunday Dr. Brannock's class had charge of the program and it was very interesting and good. Mr. August Rouf, of the First Presbyterian church, sang a solo which was much enjoyed.

The preaching Sunday morning and evening by the pastor was splendid, as usual.

Next Sunday evening at 7:30 the Missionary Society will give a Thank-Offering service.

Mrs. Harkey is leader of the program and she always brings something good.

The ladies of the church are planning to seive an oyster supper in the church dining room next Friday night. These suppers are always a success in every way, and we are expecting a large number.

It is only a short while now until our revival meeting, beginning April 7 and continuing to the 21st. We are hoping for great results from this meeting and ask your prayers to this end.

The workers' council met last Sunday evening a week ago, just after the evening preaching service. Mr. F. J. Cox was leader. Much business was transacted and plans for advancement along several lines were made.

REPORTER.

Haw River Mission.—Our Sunday school isn't as good as it once was, on account of the bad weather and sickness. We have 89 on roll, with 72 present today. But we are hoping for a large attendance in the future.

Our pastor, Rev. M. P. Chambliss, was with us at the 11 o'clock service, February 24. He preached a special sermon to the young people. His sermon was greatly enjoyed by all. He will preach again at 7:30 p. m.

There has been much sickness and several deaths in our community lately and our sympathy goes out to the bereaved ones. We pray that the sick may soon be well and out to church with us again.

Very best wishes to all who in any way whatever are trying to carry on the Master's work.

REPORTER.

Wetaverville Charge.—The second quarterly conference of this charge was held at Weaverville church February 22, 1929. A number of important matters pertaining to the church were discussed and favored by all. We hope to increase more in our work during this year.

Our Sunday school attendance is increasing very rapidly, and we are getting along very nicely. Although our attendance would be much more were it not for the sickness in the community.

The Ladies' Missionary Society has been meeting regularly and has been having some interesting meetings. They seem to be very enthusiastic and willing to do anything that is in their power to help their work. The last meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Fred Edwards. Many members were absent on account of sickness.

The young people have faithfully consented to strive to do all they can to organize our C. E. society. We hope to make it a great success and do much more work for our Master.

We always try to prepare something special for our preaching Sundays. Our pastor brings to us very inspiring sermons that are helpful to us in our daily living.

Wishing for our church and all other churches, as well, a successful year's work in our Master's vineyard.

REPORTER.

Graham.—At the regular morning services Sunday, Rev. J. F. Minnis addressed a very attentive audience. Since Friday was George Washington's birthday, he used as his text: "It is well," the dying words of Washington, and painted a word picture of the beautiful character of the Father of our country.

The women of the W. F. M. S., dressed in Hindu costumes, gave the Thank-Offering program Sunday evening. The talk by Mrs. J. F. Minnis on the great need of help for missions should have opened a heart of stone and the tightest string to any pocketbook.

The offering, which was given for the new India bungalow fund, was taken while the picture of the old bungalow was thrown on a screen so all could see its dilapidated condition. It amounted to $43.50.

Due to inclement weather, the last of the missions pictures were not shown on last Wednesday evening but will be shown at prayer meeting this week.

Our pastor, who is helping in the Thank-Offering services, will speak in Burlington First church Sunday evening.

MRS. J. H. M., Reporter.

Harmony.—Our Sunday school superintendent is very much encouraged by the good attendance we have had in Sunday school the past month.

Our pastor, Rev. D. D. Broom, continues to favor us with his splendid sermons each fourth Sunday morning and evening. It was proved last Sunday that his messages have a drawing power, as there was a good attendance, both morning and evening. During his stay in this community, Rev. Mr. Broom has visited many homes and has made many friends.

The usual communion service was held Sunday morning and a large number communed.

The first quarterly conference was held at Yarborough's Chapel the second Sunday in February.

The young people met Sunday evening at 7 o'clock to organize a Christian Endeavor Society. The following officers were elected:

President, Grace Killingsworth; vice-president, Willie Crawford; secretary, Edna Hughes; treasurer, Clarence Killingsworth; program committee, Misses Bessie Reeves, Julia Medlock, and Nancy Crawford; social committee, Miss Alma Bryant, Mrs. W. H. Balentine, and Lawrence Balentine; look-out committee, Miss Sudie Medlock, Washie Balentine and Rachel Davis.

We will hold our meetings the fourth and second Sunday evenings at 7 o'clock. We expect our pastor to be with us as much as possible.

Plans are being carried out among some of the members for an Easter service.

Sunday morning we raised money to furnish the church with electric lights. Twelve dollars was raised immediately.

After much hard work we have at last succeeded in paying for our church piano.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society met Saturday afternoon at four o'clock at the church. Quite a number were present. An interesting program was rendered, after which our pastor gave a very interesting talk on the subject, "Foeign and Home Mission Work." A thank-offering was taken which amounted to $7.14.

GRACE KILLINGSWORTH, Reporter.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—Yesterday was a good day for us. Rev. Lee Leonard, of Greenville, preached for our pastor at the morning hour. His sermon was helpful and inspiring. The Lord's Supper was administered; a goodly number partook.

The night service was given over to the young people. The program, "Youth in Service," was given. Mr. N. G. McClimon had charge of the program. Those taking part were Misses Lula Pearson, Velma Smith, Ruth Pearson, Kate Poole, Rev. Lee Leonard and the pastor. The offering amounted to $11.02.

Since our last report two new members, Mr. and Mrs. Farrow, have been added to our church.

REPORTER.

High Point. The pastor, Rev. R. I. Farmer, chose for his subject "My Home and I" for his Sunday morning discourse. "Jesus adopts Himself into every Christian family, and makes our homes His own. The privacy of our homes is the more sacred because it includes Him. This is for me a very precious day, because I can spend it at home with my own dear ones in the most delightful intimacy. Here love reigns supreme. Here faith has its perfect fruitage, for we can trust each other completely. Here, if anywhere in this troubled world, there is peace. Let me make the most of this day of sacred privilege in the sweetest companionship that life affords."

"O Love that will not let me go,
I rest my weary soul in thee;
I give thee back the life I owe,
That in thine ocean depths its flow
May richer, fuller be."

At the evening service the pastor gave the last of the splendid series on "Power," his subject being "The Assurance of Power," and was based on the text, "Ye shall be endued with power." He said that power is always a magnetic word. The achievements of today were regarded as prophetic miracles yesterday. The radio announcer's voice which carries only a few hundred yards naturally, will extend itself to thousands of miles when the pressure of electric current is behind it. Physical, mental, or spiritual energy in each of us may likewise reach unsuspected realms of service and power, when we accept the power of God and use it. Not Niagara with all its energy is the greatest undeveloped source of power, but it is the power of the Holy Spirit. Do you depend upon the History of the Napoleonic Wars or the Gospel of John for the live-giving message? We must revise our estimate of power-values. Jesus Christ lived, suffered, died and arose to make possible the power of God to all who will accept Him.

There was a good congregation at this service; in fact, the attendance at Sunday evening service is increasing, as well as that of the mid-week prayer meeting, which is a very hopeful sign.

The boys and girls of the Junior Mission Circle enjoyed a happy time on Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Mrs. J. C. Whitesell, superintendent, has some new supplies for them, and they were much pleased with handwork, play, and refreshments. The children from the Home have joined this group, and Mesdames Whitesell and J. S. Pickett report an attendance of 65 at a recent meeting.

The friends of Mr. and Mrs. Hobart G. Ferree regret exceedingly to learn of the blow which they have suffered in the loss of their only little daughter, Evelyn, who fell asleep last evening at 9:30 o'clock. The bright little girl, who was nine years of age, had been ill of meningitis for about three weeks, but rallied and seemed better, when pneumonia in both lungs attacked her, and this was the cause of her death. She is survived by her parents and a brother, Hobart, Jr. Funeral services will be conducted in First church Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev. E. L. Ballard will officiate, since Evelyn was a member of the Junior church. Members of this group will act as flower-bearers and pall bearers, and the choir will sing. Rev. R. I. Farmer will assist Mr. Ballard in these services. An exceptionally sweet and attractive child, her passing will be keenly felt in the home as well as by her friends of the Junior church and Junior Mission circle.

Mrs. R. T. Pickens went to Guilford Battleground Saturday afternoon to attend the unveiling exercises of the Martha Bell markers, which was erected by the efforts of the Alexander Martin Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution. Mrs. Martha MacFarlane McGee Bell was a Revolutionary heroine of Randolph County, who lived at Bell's Mill, now known as Walker's Mill. She performed signal service by giving information to General Greene about the movements of Lord Cornwallis' army. This beautiful marker is of granite with bronze tablet, and occupies a prominent site on the side of the railway and highway. Her descendants number hundreds, residing in many states, and they contributed the larger part of the money for the erection of this memorial to a brave and courageous woman.

Flat Rock, Vance.—We feel very glad here at Flat Rock that we have a pastor again. Rev. Mr. O'Brian filled the third Sunday appointment here and gave us a very helpful sermon from the subject, "The Precious Blood of Christ," bringing out very forcefully why the blood is precious. After the sermon he administered the Lord's Supper, a goodly number partaking.

Mr. O'Brian left an appointment to be filled by some speaker in behalf of conference interests, date to be fixed later.

Mr. S. W. Reavis, superintendent of the Sunday school, expects to re-open Sunday school the first Sunday in March. Every one is urged to be there and help him make the Sunday school what it should be. Remember the date: The first Sunday in March, at 10 o'clock.

The Woman's Missionary Society met last Monday afternoon with Mrs. W. B. Reavis. Five members were present. They decided it best to call off the Washington birthday social that was to have been held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Hester, owing to the fact that two of the Hester children were real sick. They decided to raise the balance of the missionary apportionment as best they can.

Miss Mary V. White returned home last Sunday from a ten days' stay in Durham, where she went for treatment from Dr. Facette, head specialist. We regret that she failed to be benefited.

We were glad to have Mr. and Mrs. G. O. Peele, of Durham, worship with us last Sunday.

REPORTER.

Pleasant Grove.—On Sunday morning our pastor, Rev. D. R. Williams, spoke on "The Challenges," using as a text: "And call ye on the name of your gods and I will call on the name of the Lord; and the god that answereth by fire, let him be God. And all the people answered and said, It is well spoken."

Since we all serve some gods, he urged all to be sure to serve the God that hears and answers prayer.

The pastor had a severe attack of acute indigestion Sunday afternoon and is very sick. We hope for him a speedy recovery.

Next Sunday morning, "Youth in Service" will be presented by a group of young people. This has been postponed on account of bad roads; but we hope to give it next Sunday.

Mrs. W. G. Myer, teacher of the Intermediate Sunday school class, entertained in her home Wednesday evening the class of about 30 boys and girls; after the business and social hour delicious refreshments were served.

The church Brotherhood met Saturday evening, February 23rd, with Mr. B. E. Kennedy. After the business was transacted the pastor gave a splendid talk, then refreshments were served. The next meeting will be held with R. J. Kennedy.

The workers' conference meets Thursday evening; at this time some plans will be made for the Easter exercise.

REPORTER.

Lincolnton Station.—A great work is being done here with increasing interest for every service. Our Sunday school superintendent, Mr. E. E. Eurey, is putting forth untiring efforts for the upbuilding of the Sunday school and church as a whole. One especially interesting plan which he is carrying out is that of having each individual class conduct the devotional exercises of the Sunday school on assigned Sunday mornings. The Young Men's Class had charge for last Sunday and rendered an enjoyable program. It made the church realize to a fuller extent that the young folks are capable of wonderful things. Mr. Bob Eurey, president of the class, made an interesting talk on "The Origin of the Sunday School."

Our pastor, Rev. Fred R. Love, continues to deliver soul-stirring messages. The people are showing their appreciation of the "good old gospel messages" by attending and bringing others with them, causing the attendance to continually increase. He has a great interest in our C. E. and has been instrumental in changing it from one continual "drag" to a service full of interest, enthusiasm and pep. It is steadily growing and we hope to soon have the best society in the state.

We are planning to observe March 10 as "Dollar Day" for the purpose of boosting the church finances. On that date there will be an all-day program, including special music by several quartets and perhaps by the local orchestra. We extend to every one, and especially to our former pastors, a hearty invitation to be with us on that day.

REPORTER.

Moriah.—Last Sunday morning at 11 o'clock our annual Thank-offerings service was held. The Woman's Missionary Society had charge. They gave a very interesting and instructive program. The thank-offering collection amounted to $20.

The Young People's Christian Endeavor society is doing much better work, and we feel that this organization is going to mean much to our church and community.

Plans are being made to celebrate our one-hundredth anniversary, which comes in May of this year.

MRS. J. S. WOOD, Reporter.

Concord.—Our attendance was large at all services Sunday. In the Concord-Burlington S. S. contest our school led, having 329 present and Burlington 317.

At the morning service the church was comfortably filled, and our pastor brought a touching message on "The Lord As Our Strength."

During this month the Missionary Society has had charge of the Wednesday evening services, and they have been termed "Service for Others" nights. The attendance has more than doubled, jumping from 65 and 70 to more than 150. On the second Wednesday night a play, "Thanksgiving Ann," was given in connection with the Missionary study, and on last Wednesday night another "Candle Lighting Service" was presented, and in spite of the fact that a storm was raging, there were 66 present. These meetings have been interesting and helpful.

On Friday night of this week our folks will give the "Candle Lighting Service" at the Kannapolis Tabernacle.

The board of stewards will hold their monthly meetings Tuesday night. Important business is to be considered and it is hoped that all members will be present.

Miss Beatrice Waddell, of High Point College, spent the week-end with home-folks recently. She had as her guest Miss Lucy Nunnery, also of the college.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Grover C. Honeycutt, on February 24, a son, William Lee. Mrs. Honeycutt was formerly Miss Gatha Sides, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Sides.

The regular monthly communion service will be held next Sunday.

MRS. D. A. McLAURIN.

Mt. Moriah, Cleveland Circuit.—Brother Ridge came to us Sunday with a very uplifting sermon. He made it so plain that any child could understand it. Brother Ridge has not been with us very long, but he is doing splendid work.

We are having a fine Sunday school now. We are planning to organize a Christian Endeavor Society soon. Through this we hope to accomplish much good.

We must remember that the church of tomorrow depends on the training of the young people today.

HOW TO PRODUCE TITHERS

"Teaching the Church to Tithe" is a new leaflet issued for free distribution by The Layman Company. Its sub-title is, "Guidance on the Road to Financial Freedom and Self-Respect." It contains simple but tested suggestions of methods which can be used in any church, without breaking into or interfering with present activities. It is equally well adapted to Sunday schools, young people's societies, women's societies, or other groups in the church. This leaflet will be sent without charge direct from The Layman Company headquarters, 730 Rush street, Chicago, on request from pastors or others who are interested in unsectarian, simple and practical stewardship promotion.

NEW CENTURY SERVICE

April 30

During the first week of March a package of literature will be mailed to every pastor of the denomination.

It concerns April 30 and New Century Service and it is highly important business.

The story is this: An effort to pay New Century Service in full by all our churches UP-TO-DATE. Each church can readily determine the amount due New Century Service from the beginning of its conference year down to April 30. Then let it organize its working units to pay its full part by April 30.

There are certain contributing factors:

1. April 30 is the end of the denominational year.

2. April 30 is the end of the Missionary Societies year.

3. April is the designated "Tithing Month."

4. Easter is the great opportunity for members and Gifts.

This package of literature will contain:

The New Century Service Manual.

Information card of the Church Commission.

The church loyalty card.

The pastors' loyalty card.

Poster, "Up-to-Date."

Poster, "April—Tithing Month."

And a few other things.

A letter will go along for the fun of it, just to make clear what it's all about.

This is not an effort at any special collection or anything outside New Century Service; it is simply a method of assisting pastors and churches with their regular tasks. Everything counts as credits which finds its way into the treasury of the general church. Much remains to be said.

—Homer Rodeheaver and Percy S. Foster will direct the music at the International Christian Endeavor Convention to be held in Kansas City, Missouri, July 3 to 8, 1929. A committee of 100 young people are planning the program. Advance registrations are already 50 per cent greater than for any previous convention.

—The time is rapidly approaching to begin the final appeal for the Near East Relief orphans. Date: Greensboro, Sunday, April 14.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

London

Owen Schanen London departed this life February 14, 1929, aged 82 years, nine months and 22 days. He was married to Arminda Newton on January 25, 1868. He professed faith in Christ in early life, and joined the M. E. church at Clover Hill in 1872. Later he moved his membership to Oak Grove Methodist Protestant church, where he lived a faithful Christian life until death.

He leaves to mourn his departure a widow and six children, namely, W. L. London, F. G. London, M. N. London, Mrs. J. C. Downs, Mrs. T. S. Peeler, Mrs. G. A. Irvin. There are 34 grandchildren and 31 great-grandchildren.

The funeral service was conducted by the writer on February 15th at 12 o'clock at Clover Hill church, and burial followed in the church cemetery. Rev. E. O. Peeler, student in High Point College, a grandson of the deceased, and Mrs. Peeler attended the funeral.

The bereaved ones have our sympathy.

C. E. RIDGE.

Edna Diamond Stanley

The death of the just is like the glorious sunset that rounds out and completes the perfect day. How lovingly the light lingers in the upper atmosphere! How the cloud specks catch and reflect the sun's rays, and see! ere yet their golden tints are darkened, the evening star is shining.

On the night of Jan. 25, 1929, just at the turn of a new day, God called and the spirit of Mrs. R. L. Stanley, answered.

The first link of the golden chain has been broken. The wife and mother who shed light and happiness all around her went home to God. The home where changes never come, nor pain, nor sorrow, toil, nor care. Yes, 'tis a bright and blessed home; who would not fain be resting there? At the time of her death she was thirty-eight years of age.

In early life she was united with Mizpah church, where she remained a member until her death.

About three years ago she was united in marriage to R. L. Stanley, to this union were born two sons. One an infant a week old at the death of the mother.

To know her was to love her. Always so kind and loving, ready and willing to serve. It was she who at the death of her mother many years ago, took charge of the home. And truly made it a home for her father, younger sisters and brothers. Not only in her home will she be missed, but in her church and community. She leaves to mourn their loss, a husband, two sons, father, three sisters, two brothers, and a host of relatives and friends.

Her funeral was conducted at Lowe's church January 27 by Rev. Mr. Dollar and her pastor, Rev. J. L. Trollinger. Interment was made in the Lowe's cemetery. The large attendance and many beautiful flowers prove the esteem in which she was held.

"Sleep on, beloved; sleep, and take thy rest; Lay down thy head upon thy Savior's breast; We loved thee well, but Jesus loves the best."

As far as our knowledge goes all of our charges have never contributed to each item in our budgets in one year. With few exceptions each charge has contributed to one or more of these interests during the year, and a few have contributed to all of them. Brethren, why not make a new record and have no blank spaces in our financial report at the end of the year?

It would be a great achievement if we should pay every claim in full; but, if for any reason this cannot be done, let us pay something, however little, on each of them. What do you say, brethren?

Our attention has been called to the fact that we credited Lebanon, High Point, with $5.00 on the G. C. B., in our quarterly report, when it should have gone to the college. The mistake has been corrected. We heartily appreciate the kindness of the brethren in helping us to keep our books correct.

MOPPIN' UP THE FLOOR

Yes, sir, I like my little job,
 An' seem to like it more and more;
 When I've the mop I jes' can't stop
 Moppin' up the floor.

Yes, sir, today a feller asked:
 "Say, isn't that a bore?"
 O answered, "Shucks!" and kep' right on
 Moppin' up the floor.

Yes, sir, some fellers talk of golf,
 They make me laugh and roar;
 You can't beat this for exercise,
 Moppin' up the floor.

Yes, sir, the water must be hot,
 With soap, and what is more
 You've got to have this kind of stroke
 Moppin' up the floor.

Yes, sir, when you have work like this
 You do not ask what for.
 Someone has to keep things clean
 Moppin' up the floor.

Yes, sir, these shoulders gave me pain,
 Once they were mighty sore,
 But now I'm glad to say they're cured
 Moppin' up the floor.

Yes, sir, when five o'clock is here,
 Before I pass that door
 I turn around and scan my job
 Moppin' up the floor.

Yes, sir, as I kneel down at night
 I thank the God that I adore,
 And often in my dreams I smile
 Moppin' up the floor.

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE

The New Century Service Commission has planned a meeting for the Eastern Districts to meet at Hollister church on Halifax charge on Friday, March 8, 11 a. m. and 2 p. m. All of our pastors and members east of Raleigh are expected to attend this meeting.

We will have two of the representatives of our General Conference with us at that time who will address the conference. We want to invite all of our pastors and members in the eastern parts of the state to come and hear these men and let us make this meeting a success.

What They Seek

Go take your place beside the way
Where men pass by in their brief day,
Each man upon some object bent,
Pursuing his course with full intent.

No need to ask one what he seeks,
For eyes flash out a light that speaks,
From face and form there comes a tale
In words so true they cannot fail.

In this man's eye is gleam of gold,
He aims to have and aims to hold.
His fate is sure, the end's in view:
A miser he'll be when he gets through.

Behold, the lure of appetite
Leads on the second man in sight;
And soon you'll hear the clank of chains—
But little hope for him remains.

Third man would make himself a name,
In letters large on roll of fame.
Of all the vain and foolish schemes!
Substantial as a dream of dreams.

The next man sings a different song:
His purpose is to just live long.
He makes no motion to live well,
He'd simply live until—until—

Here comes a man of nobler mien,
His life's worth while is plainly seen.
With purpose strong against all odd,
He strives to do the will of God.

—For the first time in the history of our country millions of our people have sat in their homes and heard the inaugural addresses of the president and vice-president of the United States. We heard them quite distinctly as broadcast by radio from Washington and relayed from Charlotte, N. C. We not only heard, but we saw the people as they were described by observers on the ground. It was cold and rainy there, and the thousands who stood under umbrellas and shivered from cold have nothing over those who sat in warm rooms at home and saw and heard.

—President Hoover declared that he would enforce the prohibition amendment and other laws to the best of his ability, but reminded the citizens of the nation that his success will depend upon their support and co-operation.

—To be of use in the world is the only way to be happy.
—Andersen.

High Point College

President Andrews' statement should awaken us all to serious thought. We are conducting a college at High Point under conditions which in the nature of the case cannot go on forever. The income does not pay the expenses of operation. A deficit occurs each year which increases the debt of the institution. An institution can bear only so much debt. Go beyond that and failure ensues. The doors must be closed. The property must go to pay creditors. That would be a tragic end to our much-loved institution, but it will be a sure end if we do not bestir ourselves to prevent it. If we do nothing about it, if we imagine that somebody else will somehow save the day, we are only deceiving ourselves. Individuals have paid almost their all to build this college. They cannot repeat what they have done. New friends must rise and carry forward. It could be done by the united effort of our people, but there must be united effort. The college is ours, we love it, and wish it to continue because our church needs it. But we must do something. The smallest thing we should do is to pay our part of the conference assessment for running expenses. But we should be far from satisfied with that. We should build up an endowment fund which will itself pay the annual deficits and free the churches from this obligation.

We cannot do all this at once, but we can make up our minds that we will do it, and be ready to do our part when the Finance Committee calls upon us. We as a church should be ashamed to think with any degree of complacency of closing the doors of our college. The mother does not think of the child of her bosom as a crushing burden. No more should we think High Point College a crushing burden. Earnest, united effort on the part of all would be sufficient.

March Winds

We hear the sound thereof, but cannot tell whence they come or whither they go. But what a mighty force do they reveal! Giant oaks bend before them. Vast forests move under their sway. They quickly dry the overwet ground. Whence the force that does all this? Ten thousand Titans could not do as much. All man's enginery is but a trifle in comparison. In the rush and roar of the winds we see and hear the mighty enginery of nature. Elemental forces are released. We feel the power that uplifted mountains and filled deep oceans' beds. The battalions of nature are on parade. We see an invincible armada. We feel a sense of power, power, power.

What a fitting symbol of God's mighty Spirit! He comes and none can hinder. He moves upon the hearts of men. Men grow still before Him. He comes in the springtime of life to remake the world. He would dry up the fountains of evil. He would infuse new life and clothe with beauty and fill with joy. Thank God that He never forgets to wake our dead or sleeping world.

"LET THE PASTOR DO IT"

By PHILOMATH

"Let the pastor do it" seems to be the slogan of the church today. We are glibly told that he is the "key man," and that no door of opportunity can be successfully opened by any one except the pastor. To change the figure, he is expected to be a "man Friday" to every organization in the church and out of it.

If an address is to be delivered on any subject whatsoever, get the pastor to do it. If he is not familiar with the subject, let him familiarize himself with it. He hasn't anything else to do. If there is any praying to be done in any department of the church, let the pastor do it. He is supposed to know how to pray better than any one else; if he doesn't, he ought to. He is supposed to be better acquainted with the Lord than other Christians are, and, consequently, his prayers ought to avail more.

If there is a meeting to be held, no matter how unimportant it may be, let the pastor hold it. He hasn't anything else of much importance to do, and he is capable of conducting unimportant meetings in a very learned way, and besides all this his presence will add dignity and give prestige to the meeting.

If the Anti-Saloon League, or the Chautauqua, or the Lyceum, or the Near East, or the Y. M. C. A., or the Y. W. C. A., or the Community Chest, want anything, send for the pastor; he knows how to get it. Every pastor is supposed to be a "go-getter" for everything imaginable under the sun. If he isn't, he ought to give place to some one who is.

If there is a budget to be raised in the church, let the pastor raise it. Budget raising is supposed to be his supreme business. If the Lord did not call him to be a collector of money, his church has, and that settles the matter. If he can not qualify as a money-getter, he is disqualified as a pastor. He may fail as a preacher of the Word, as a teacher of holiness and righteousness, as a sympathizer with the sad and sorrowing, and as a friend to sinful, dying humanity, and get by with it; but if he fails as a budget-raiser he is to be reprimanded by his conference and told to "go to now, and sin no more." If the offense should be repeated, he subjects himself to more serious penalties, and the third time he "falls from grace" he is, or may be, at the discretion of the powers that be, left without an appointment for a year.

Thus it has come to pass in these latter days that churches have "whips" whose business it is to speed up pastors in their quest of contributions to budgets. From the general conference all the way down the line to the annual conference treasurer there is an insistent demand that pastors quit loafing, get on their jobs and raise the budgets. They must get the money whether there is any to get or not. If the people will not give it, they are expected to get it anyhow, for their efficiency as pastors, I repeat, is determined by their ability to wheedle money out of stingy, penurious church members. If they fail in this there is a penalty hanging over their heads, like Damocles' sword, and woe be unto them upon whom it falls.

Having said all this, let me hasten to say that a true pastor will be prayerfully and actively concerned about his church budgets, and urge his members to pay them in full; but this is not his chief concern, neither is it wholly his concern. It is the concern of every member of his church, and the great duty of the pastor is to get them to realize it.

This is no easy thing to do; but the pastor who succeeds in doing it accomplishes many times more than the pastor who simply goes out alone and collects the money to meet the budgets. Such a pastor writes large and deep the principles of Christian benevolence upon the hearts and consciences of his members, and they will rise up some day and call him blessed. They will gradually grow into a happy realization of the fact that it is "more blessed to give than to receive."

Let us not overlook the important fact that men have certain standards by which they appraise pastors as well as other men, and it is difficult to change them. If a pastor acts as janitor for his church, no matter if he does it to help a weak, struggling church, it will not be long until his members will esteem him no more highly than they do a janitor. The work of a janitor is honorable; of course it is for some men, but Christians somehow feel that a pastor was never intended for a janitor, and they soon lose a certain amount of respect for the one who plays the part. If a pastor acts as collector for a church, even though he does so with the best of motives, it will not be long until his members will have no more respect for him than they have for a bill collector, and his visits will be no more welcomed by them.

This may be one reason why, from so many quarters, we are being told that the "pulpit has lost its power and respect." It may be possible that the power in the pulpit that once swayed the people and brought them to their knees in penitence and prayer, has been diverted to other and less important things. Who knows?

There is a psychological question growing out of this whole matter that our learned professors might answer for us. In the meantime, would it not be wise for each of us to bend his back to the burden, if it is a burden, and bear it faithfully and happily and thus glorify him who made our salvation possible through the ministries of the church?

EFFORTS AT CHURCH UNION

In none of the articles which have appeared in the HERALD combatting the idea of church union has any argument been advanced controverting the main purpose of such union—doing a greater and better work by eliminating competition and overlapping. While the communications that have appeared have, with one exception, been unfriendly to the idea, I am more than ever convinced that union is gaining ground. I referred recently to the statement of a minister that there is a strong undercurrent in favor of it. A few days ago another prominent minister of the North Carolina Conference said to me, "Union is in the air." This minister has a wide acquaintance among the church people of the conference, and should know whereof he speaks. One does not have to go to the market places to sense the atmosphere as it affects this vital question.

The Christian Century of February 21 says editorially: "So suddenly has it come upon them, the churches of America can scarcely credit the tidings from the recent meeting between commissioners of the Presbyterian and Methodist churches. Yet every particle of information from the Pittsburgh gathering indicates that the officially designated representatives of these two great denominations are determined that their churches shall become organically united, and that without delay." In the February 28 issue of the same paper we read: "On the day following the adoption of this proposal (by the Methodist Church, creating a commission on interdenominational relations) a specific memorial, signed by 78 of the leading ministers and laymen of the denomination, was presented by Dr. Ray Allen, long an outstanding member of Methodist conferences. This memorial, which was unanimously adopted while shouts and cheers filled the auditorium, is so memorable a document in the progress of the churches towards unity that it is worth reproducing in full." This is the document:

"The Presbyterian Church in the United States of America and the Methodist Episcopal Church should be united. Their purposes are alike, and they work in much the same territory. Practically their only differences now are in details of organization, and surely these cannot justify their remaining apart, for in union there would be added strength.

"The Presbyterians have an honorable history and a commendable spirit, and they are doing a work of magnitude and value beyond measure. To be actually united with that noble people would be to us a joy and an inspiration. We therefore urge that overtures be made at once looking for early organic union, without reservation or condition."

Two committees have been formed to carry on negotiations, one dealing with administration and property interests, and the other with polity and doctrine. Can one doubt that these two denominations mean business?

Quoting again from The Christian Century of February 21: "At a meeting held in Dayton, Ohio, February 6 and 7, commissioners from the Reformed Church in the United States, the Church of the United Brethren in Christ, and the Evangelical Synod of America adopted a basis of union which is to be submitted to the governing bodies of the three churches. The plan results from almost a year of negotiation. It provides for organic union, beginning with the merging of the supreme judicatories, together with their works in foreign missions, home missions, education, ministerial pension and relief, and other benevolent causes. The merging of the annual conferences, district conferences or classes, is provided for, but not immediately contemplated."

One has but to raise his eyes sufficiently to look beyond the confines of his own denomination to see that a mighty rattling of the dry bones is taking place—that union is indeed "in the air."

E. S. WILLS.

HIGH POINT COLLEGE

Last week my article lost its final paragraphs and signature. But this week I am submitting the following statements about High Point College. The college is having its hardest year, financially. Previous years there was some provision made to help care for the deficit in running expenses, but nothing is provided for the present year. The assessment laid on the churches by the last conference is to take care of the deficit of last year, and at the present time only $3,300 has been paid, notwithstanding the fact that our deficit was $11,300. So you can see how we are not only carrying the unpaid part of last year's deficit we are also carrying the deficit for the present year which grows with each month's operation.

Now if we could have collected just $40 more from each student who was here last year, we might have closed the year without a deficit in operating expenses—this would not have paid for interest on loans, repairs and new equipment, but it would have taken care of the real deficit in operations. This appears to be only a small additional charge and some might feel that it ought to have been made. But had we made it we would have failed to register at least one-third of our number of students. The matter of ten dollars in cost of a year's college expenses often determines where many students attend college.

We will state that if our Methodist Protestant people would send their children to High Point College, i. e., those who go to college, and would pay us $450 a year for each of them, and could we get 350 students at that charge, we would have no deficit in running expenses next year. But when it is remembered that we must give some form of aid to at least 35 per cent of our entire enrollment of students, the matter appears in its proper light. There comes the ministerial student and children of ministers, they get a concession of $100 a year, others receive aid for services rendered from their board to $100 for library work, and still others we just have to find some form of aid for, so when these are all counted in on our debit side of the ledger, the real situation appears, and you can see what our problem is.

Of course there is a way to take care of this; the accrediting associations prescribe an endowment of $500,000 for our colleges from which income the deficit in operating is provided. High Point College must have such an endowment in order to function properly. This is problem number one.

The question is asked that since we have so much difficulty in keeping High Point College running, why not close it and sell it? I am not sure that anybody wants it who would pay even one-half of its real value; but would it be a wise policy to get rid of it? Should our people rid themselves of all cumbersome responsibilities? Can they do it and maintain their self-respect? Can we do it and remain Christians? Such an act would have far-reaching effects upon us. I am confident that whenever any people decide to free themselves of all responsibility for public weal, that then and there that group has made a dive for the primitive conditions of the uncivilized races. Whenever this is done, by it would be written over every church door in the denomination, "Ichabod," in letters so bold that every intelligent person passing that way would refuse to enter and worship with such a group of despairing souls. It's a shameless group that refuses to bear its share of the cost, in effort and dollars, of improving the races about them. However much we may differ on other matters, we must be a unit in church activities which make our youth true and strong. For the last link in the chain of service through a sense of responsibility is fastened in the torso of a barbarian. He who refuses to do his duty for the world about him will soon find himself not next door to a barbarian, but a barbarian himself full grown. Problem number two.

JERUSALEM CONFERENCE REPORTS

A pamphlet entitled "World Mission of Christianity," containing a condensed report of the great Jerusalem conference, and another pamphlet entitled "Roads to the City of God," containing a most vivid description of the council meeting, may be purchased at 25 cents per copy for the former and 50 cents per copy for the latter, or a full report of the conference in eight volumes may be purchased for $7.00. We wish it were possible for all of our missionary workers and pastors to possess these books. The same may be had by applying to the International Missionary Council, 419 Fourth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

OPTIMISM

The President's Letter

EVANGELISM

*Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit;
so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.*

Pastors' Reports for First Quarter

From the 89 charges in the conference, reports for first quarter have been received from 71 pastors. These reports show the following facts: Total paid pastors on salary, $18,084; average per pastor, $254.70. Thirteen charges have paid pastors in full for the quarter; twenty-three charges report payments on the A. C. B., and nineteen on the G. C. B.; sixty-six charges receive offerings at all regular services; twenty-one charges report an encouraging financial condition. Seven charges report repairs on parsonages, and two report new parsonages. Thirteen charges report repairs on churches, and eleven report new church projects in process or in contemplation. Sixteen charges indicate the need of consolidating churches. One hundred and twelve churches contribute to the Children's Home; six charges do not contribute, and six reports contain no information on this point. Twenty-one charges have a Sunday school council; twenty-nine pastors give pastoral attention to absentee members by correspondence, and most of them report good results; fifty-nine pastors live within the bounds of their respective charges; sixty-one give full time to the pastorate; sixty report encouraging attendance at the regular preaching services; forty-nine report that conditions on their respective charges indicate a year of progress.

As would be expected, the prospects on some charges are not so encouraging as on others. We trust that the pastors and charges where the difficulties are greatest may have our constant prayers, and we trust also that these difficulties may be, to such pastors and to such charges, a challenge to stronger faith, more fervent prayer, and unflagging and united labors. The promise is that faith as a grain of mustard seed will remove mountains. God will see to it that difficulties shall not prevent the progress of his cause if we will but obey his command to go forward.

We thank these pastors for the attention that they have given this quarter's report.

Thomasville, First Church

March 3, Sunday.—For the morning hour, 11 a. m., we were with this church, arriving in time for the Sunday school, and having the privilege of attending the men's class. We understand that this church was organized with only eleven members. It is not an old church, though we do not have at hand the date of its organization. The membership now numbers 161, and the estimated value of property holdings is between nine and ten thousand dollars. The church impresses us as having an opportunity for continued service and growth. The congregation at the preaching service was attentive and responsive, and we enjoyed our worship with them. Bro. Powell and his family have been kindly received, and the work is prospering under his leadership. Both pastor and people are hopeful of a prosperous year.

Pleasant Grove

Sunday, 7 p. m.—From Thomasville we went over to Pleasant Grove and worshiped with this church in the evening service. This is one of our strongest and most hopeful rural churches. The building has been worked over in recent years, and a Sunday school annex built in the rear. And just last year a splendid brick veneered parsonage was erected on No. 10 highway, in easy reach of the church. The church has a considerable endowment, and this, supplemented by the contributions of the congregation, should make it an Honor Roll church, it would seem. The probability is that in a very few years this church will be in the midst of a very thickly settled community. Its opportunities for service will grow with each year, and of course the church will have to grow to keep abreast of these opportunities. A great future, it seems to us, awaits this church. We found Bro. Williams hopeful and zealous and his wife a good second. The people are giving hand and heart to his efforts and all together are looking forward to a year of happiness and growth. We enjoyed our visit with these churches, and we are grateful for courtesies shown us and for provisions for our comfort while with them.

Once More

We are appreciative of letters coming from the brethren, assuring us of their co-operation with the program of Dr. Straughn and his helpers, March 8-13. This will be our last public announcement of these meetings, and our last appeal in their behalf. The meetings should be thoroughly advertised by this time, and if the weather is favorable, we are hopeful of good attendance. The program, as published last week, is complete and final. Let each pastor, without fail, attend at least one of the all-day meetings, and get just as many of his people there as possible. And please do not forget the dinner. Now, all together for a good time with Straughn and his co-laborers!

Have You?

Ordered that Easter program? Please do it now. We must not fail to make much of Easter. It is one of the most important festive seasons of the church. Put the Easter service, as provided by the Board of Missions, in the Easter program of your churches, and begin at once to prepare it. Nothing can please our risen Lord more than a prayerful, earnest, joyous effort to extend His kingdom.

Send a card to Rev. G. W. Haddaway, D.D., 516 North Charles Street, Baltimore, Md. He will do the rest.

Agreed

"Let us have a number of district rallies," suggests one pastor, as a means of promoting conference work? We are in complete accord with this idea, and shall leave nothing undone to have a number of such assemblies throughout the conference.

It is our purpose to take the matter up with the district chairmen in the very near future, and to work out with them a program that we hope to put on throughout the entire conference. In the meantime, let everybody talk "district rallies."

Keeping Up

We sometimes hear it said of a person, "He keeps up with what is going on." Such a remark compliments the person. It indicates that he is alert mentally, and has a worthy desire to be informed. Such a remark would certainly seem fitting when said of a pastor, and especially if it were said in regard to his immediate work. That is his particular field, and there he is expected to be a specialist. He, of all men, should "keep up" with what goes on in the workings of his charge. He should have detailed information of the finances, the organizations, the programs—everything that concerns the work over which he is the overseer. Then he should "keep up" with the conference programs and plans of work. He should also "keep up" with the doings of the denomination, and be able to talk to his people informally about the things of the general church. Then, too, he should "keep up" with the new ideas and plans that are constantly being proposed for meeting the problems and carrying on the work of the kingdom. He may not want to use them all, but he should know about them. "Keeping up" with all of these things will require some effort but it is worth while. More than that, it is necessary. A pastor is always stronger with his people when they know he "keeps up" with what is going on in his church and in the religious world.

EVANGELISM

(From President's Report to Annual Conference)

Optimism and Evangelism have been our key words, and they have stood as our guiding star in all that we have written, said and done during the year. They will likewise be our key words for this conference. The spirit of optimism will be in evidence from this hour until the benediction is pronounced in the closing session, and evangelism will ring out through the conference as clear as the tones of a silver bell.

It is the profound conviction of your speaker that no need of the church today is so paramount as the need of a permeating, powerful spirit of evangelism. Such a spirit would do more to exalt the church and to stem the currents that are beating hard at her foundations than anything else conceivable. A redeemed sinner, brought into the conscious knowledge of saving grace, is the very best justification that the church can offer for its existence, and the most powerful testimony that it can have of its good works. When Jesus said, "The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost," he determined forever the program of his church, and any departure from that program is displeasing to him and deadly to the purposes of his Zion.

If this spirit has not departed from the church, it has sorely waned, if observation and experience are dependable and statistics reliable. The fires of evangelism are certainly burning low when 200,000 Protestant churches in this country can operate for a whole year without a convert. Our own beloved Zion can not boast of any white heat evangelism. The best that we could do for the past four years in the matter of soul-saving was less than two converts per church per year.

But we can not enlarge here. Suffice it to say that the spirit of evangelism must be dominant in the church, or the church must be lowered to the level of a social institution. And "if the foundations be destroyed, what can the righteous do?"

It is highly gratifying that Rev. John Calvin Broomfield, the President of the General Conference, and a man aflame with the spirit of evangelism, is to speak to us in a series of addresses on this subject. May the Spirit of our compassionate Lord stir his soul for this task.

TOBACCO—PROTECTION FROM MAD BULLS

WILL H. BROWN

Two men working in a field near Kingston, N. Y., were chased by a mad bull, and took refuge up a tree. While the animal was looking up at the men in great anger, one of them squirted a mouthful of tobacco juice into its eyes. The bull fled in terror, and the men resumed work.

To be consistent, the tobacco promoters should hail this as a great discovery in protecting people from mad bulls, and advise every one, men, women and children, to chew tobacco for just such emergencies. True, such an experience would never come to millions of American citizens, and to millions of others not more than once or twice in a lifetime, but there is nothing like being ready for an emergency, and at the same time have an excuse for doing something that one is ashamed of.

Of course thus suggestion is absurd, but no more so than the attempt of the tobacco men to twist the statements of a so-called French scientist into an endorsement of the use of tobacco. This French man has stated that tobacco smoke, under certain definite circumstances, kills certain disease germs, and that "in certain epidemics smokers are less liable to attack than non-smokers." It matters not that scores of other scientists and capable doctors have denied the statement, the tobacco men keep on quoting the Frenchman's statements as a prop for their business.

There is just as much danger to millions of citizens from mad bulls as there is from "certain epidemics." If the men claim the right to smoke to keep free from epidemics, they must be consistent and urge wife and children to take the same precaution! They mustn't be selfish!

MISSION CLUBS

Why not establish Mission Study clubs in all Methodist Protestant churches, especially for young ladies and young men; the same to meet at least once a month to take up the study of some phase of mission work both in our home land and foreign lands? This might prove very helpful, both educationally and socially. Churches of other denominations are doing this with great delight and profit. What other churches are doing in this respect the Methodist Protestant Church can do.

OUR STORY PAGE

THE OLD WITCH'S CURE

It was 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The sun was shining over the warm May meadows, and in the blue sky there wasn't even a feather. It was cool under the trees. Down at the water hole there were some fellows in swimming, and I knew that afterwards they would play baseball in the field. Some fellows have all the luck, but not me.

I was in bed sick.

Staring at the ceiling with the blinds down—the house so quiet that I thought everybody was dead. And maybe I would have died myself if I didn't hear footsteps sneaking up to my bedroom by the back way. It was Budjo Cornley, my friend. He slid inside and closed the door softly. Then he turned to me and grinned.

"How's that for detective work?"

"All right," I said. "But you'd better detective out again because nobody is supposed to come up here. I've got the mumps."

"Aw—they're nothing. I know a fellow who has them on his legs, and all he does is rub his muscles with milkweed."

"But they're catching just the same."

"Not to me, they're not. I can't take anything like that. Watch my ears."

I watched Budjo's ears, like he told me to. The tops of them waved at me, then they wiggled, and then they began to flap back and forth like a donkey's.

"Do that," he said.

I never could move my ears, and I told him so.

"Try."

I tried.

"No use," I said. "I couldn't move them even when I didn't have the mumps."

"Then you'll have to take the old witch's ointment."

"What old witch?"

"I guess you don't know the old witch who lives in a cave on Melbrow's Mountain, do you? She's a snake charmer, and there's a bear who lives in that cave with her. I know a man who catches frogs for her, and he says he can get me any cure I want."

"Why should I take any of her old cures?"

I was a little sharp, I guess, because I don't like witches. But Budjo had a good answer.

"Don't you want to be all well for the fishing trip on Saturday?"

It was only Tuesday, but I felt so swollen around the neck that I had already given up the idea of going like we had planned to go. What Budjo said made me want to go again.

"You mean all this swelling will go down?"

"Every bit of it. All I have to do is scratch you in the arm with my penknife and rub in some of the witch's ointment. Doctors know about the scratchin', 'cause I've seen them do it, but this ointment is secret.

"Nope," I said, firmly. "I won't let you do that—not to me. But," I added, since I saw that Budjo didn't like me not liking to be scratched, "you can taste some of my medicine if you want to."

"What does it smell like?" he asked, taking the glass in his hand and bringing it up to his nose. "Why, it doesn't smell like anything at all!"

"Taste it," I invited.

"All right, here goes"—and wiggling his ears so as not to get poisoned, Budjo tasted my medicine.

"Aw—that's not medicine!"

"What isn't?"

"That isn't. It's just colored water. The medicine I could get would be better than that. It would smell like medicine and it would almost choke you going down, it would be so good. And it would get you all better by Saturday, 'cause the Indians always use it when they want a warrior to get better for a fight or for a hunt. They make it out of the bark of trees, and it will cure warts and measles as well as the mumps, and if you wanted to, you could use it on rubber boots to make them waterproof."

When my chum came back that night, like he said he would, he gave a good imitation of two cats fighting on the back fence. When the nervous man who lives next door threw a shoe at him, nobody but Budjo and I knew how he'd been fooled; but anyway, Budjo stopped the noise and crept up the stairs, this time in his stocking feet.

He was very mysterious. He said we ought to talk in low tones, because after nightfall it was better to be doubly careful.

"Here's two thrush eggs," he said, taking them out of his pocket. "Look at 'em. Aren't they dandies?"

I couldn't look, because it was dark, but I felt, and they were nice warm eggs.

"What are you going to do with them?"

"Give them to you."

"Why—are they good for the mumps?"

"Nope," answered Budjo. "They're just a present—like flowers. But I've got something in this bottle that's good for the mumps? This is made from a rare kind of root that I found by accident this afternoon. I picked a lot of it and went home right away to boil it down. It makes you hungry, and food is an enemy of mumps and that's why it is so good."

He pulled the cork out of the bottle and made me smell of what was inside.

"Puh! Bad cabbage!"

"I'll say it's bad," Budjo answered. "Two drops placed on a dog's tongue will kill a horse."

I drew in a sharp breath.

"You—you don't expect me to drink it, do you!"

"Gosh, no—you don't have to drink it. All that you have to do is rub it on your face and neck. Here, let me put some on."

I pushed down the covers and raised my chin so that Budjo could rub the mumps with the witch's cure. He shook the bottle until the liquid inside was a muddy brown in color and then he began to say something I couldn't understand.

"What's that?"

"That's the incantation," he said.

"What does it mean?" I asked.

But I never found out what it meant because just then we heard an automobile stop in front of my house and a moment later the doorbell rang. I advised Budjo to duck. It was lucky I did because no sooner was he down the stairs than the doctor came in. He didn't stay long, because he sat down on the thrush eggs where Budjo had placed them on the chair and he didn't like it. But before he went he said that the next day I could get up and go downstairs, if I was careful to keep away from everybody and not cough or sneeze only in a handkerchief.

The next afternoon I was in the yard when Budjo came by. "How's the boy?" he asked me.

"Pretty good," I answered. "The swelling's gone down a lot, and I think I'll be all right by Saturday. I feel weak in the legs."

"It goes to the legs that way," explained Budjo. "I think the best thing to do is to walk barefoot through some nettles. The Indians always make their children do that and all Indian children are good runners. Look at my feet.

He showed me his feet, all calloused.

"You can try it Saturday when we go fishing."

"How do you know I'll be able to go fishing Saturday?" I asked.

"I've been fixing it up for you. There's an old negro who lives in the shack down by the railroad tracks, and he's been rubbing his palms in fire and praying in two foreign languages and if that won't cure you by Saturday, nothing will."

On Saturday I was cured all right, like Budjo said I'd be. I got my pole, and dug some bait, then sat down on my front steps to wait for him. Instead of him coming, his sister came. She had a note. Here is what it said:

"This being wrote by Sally Cornley, his sister. He says to go down by the river in the dark of the moon and dig him some dirt which is like black sand at ten o'clock at nite.

"Yours truly,

"BUDJO."

I couldn't understand that note, so I went over to his house.

Budjo's mother shooed me away from the door with her apron.

"Don't come near the house," she said. "Budjo's got inflammation of the parotid glands."

I must have given her a dumb look.

"Mumps," she explained.

So I guessed there wasn't anything for me to do except wait for the dark of the moon and dig that black dirt like Budjo told me to. He and I are pals and whatever he says goes with me. Look at how he cured my mumps by Saturday, just like he said he would!—Selected.

MONEY TALKS

The success of the Methodist Protestant Church is made possible only by the membership and that just to the extent of individual devotion, sacrifice and financial liberality. This applies to the great work of missions, especially. The same is a great present need.

G. W. H.

—A large part of Mexico is reported in revolt against the government. A battle has been fought in which both sides claim victory. Poor Mexico!

—Dr. William John Cooper, of California, was sworn in as Commissioner of the United States Bureau of Education on February 11. He was appointed to that post by President Coolidge on January 12, and confirmed by the Senate on the 11th.

A STOLEN RIDE

In 1901 George Newbert stole a ride on an Erie Railroad train from Mansfield to Akron, Ohio. There would be no occasion to publish his real name and the wrong he did, had he not made it public by his restitution. Four years later he wrote a straightforward letter to the assistant general passenger agent, telling him what he had done, and enclosing two dollars and twenty-five cents, the price of a ticket, which he wished credited to him as payment for the ride.

Mr. J. D. Brown, the agent who received the money, forwarded it to the treasurer of the company, and wrote a receipt for the amount. In forwarding the letter to Mr. Newbert, he wrote a letter in which he said:

"I have a wish, and you and I will shake hands on it. The wish is that there were more people like yourself. Some parts of your letter indicate that you have been reading one of the choicest gems of wisdom and experience, the Bible. I assume that its divine counsel has spoken, and you have been blind, and it has given you light; weak, and it has given you strength; hungry, and it has given you food; thirsty, and it has given you drink. Stick close to that book. Two dollars and a quarter are perhaps to you a large sum, but it has been a millstone round your neck since the day you stole the ride. Now I know you are happy, and the world looks bright."

Mr. Newbert was not expecting a letter of this character in answer to his straightforward note, but it touched his heart to discover that the officer to whom the money went was, like himself, a student of the Bible.

Some one who learned of the correspondence was interested to inquire whether the passenger agent was right in assuming that it was the Bible which had stimulated the man who stole the ride to return the money.

"It was conscience most of all," said Mr. Newbert, "but it was the Bible, too, I felt I owed the money, and so I returned it. It is the Book of books Conscience and the Bible what make men honest."—Selected.

ENCOURAGING REPORTS

Rev. J. C. Minnis, of Graham, N. C., writes that on Sunday night, February 2th, the women of his church held a most enjoyable missionary service. The address of the evening was made by Mrs. Minnis. The offering for missions was the largest of the kind in the history of the said church. The missionary interest evidently is not waning in Bro. Minnis' church.

Rev. G. H. Hendry, of Concord, N. C., states that the new united auxiliary plan for the women of his church is working most delightfully. They have six circles and all working in harmony with the interest growing. They are delighted with the new plan. "The past six months have been the most fruitful period of missionary interest and endeavor known in the history of this local church."

The above items are expressive of the missionary spirit taking hold of the churches where the new auxiliary movement is being tried. This, notwithstanding adverse criticism of the General Conference action in the matter of the merging of all our missionary interests.

HEAVENLY SALVAGING

We give from the Christian Advocate the account of a memorial service held in honor of a judge who through 18 years had inspired defeated men and women to turn defeat into victory. The speaker was an old lawyer who could talk out of experience:

"There came one day a girl with dark blue eyes and flaxen hair, and she looked impudently at the judge, who asked her if she were guilty or not guilty."

"'Guilty,' she replied and laughed with no blush of shame upon her girlish face.

"'You know what that means?' asked the judge, pained to the heart.

"'You tell it.'

"'The State's prison—a convict.'

"The girl with the blue eyes laughed again, a laugh without mirth. I felt the shivers creep up and down my spine, as at times when in the face of some great danger.

"'You—a girl—don't want to go there?' His voice trembled with a shock.

"'Why not? It's all in a lifetime.'

"'Won't you promise me to be good if I let you off?'

"I never saw the like of it. The judge pleading with the sinner. Yet she couldn't understand.

"'No use, judge,' she gibed. 'I'm bad—that's all there is to it. Send me over the road.'

"She said that, this girl with a face as innocent as a child's. Not more than seventeen and yet headed down and didn't care. I thought of the man who had brought her to that pass and that if I could only—

"But never mind. The judge told the bailiff to take her back to jail. He hurried through the docket for the day and then walked the floor of his private office. Suddenly he picked up the telephone and called to one of the best women of that town—one of those women that God has made to do his work when all else has failed.

"She came and listened to what the judge had to say with glistening eyes. It was whispered around the court room next day that they—the judge and this good woman—knelt in prayer. Then she left and went over to the jail.

"The case was called in the morning—the State against Agnes—never mind the other name.

"They entered the room, the woman and the girl who didn't care, their arms entwined.

"The girl was weeping softly, her head on the woman's shoulder.

"'This is Agnes, Judge,' said the woman, 'and she has come to tell you she will give you her promise to be a good girl from this time on as God may help her. Is it not so, daughter?'

"'Yes,' sobbed the girl, 'and tell him how I thank him for being so good to me.'

"She would have knelt and kissed his hand, but the woman held her up.

"Five years later she—the girl who didn't care—wrote to the judge and sent him the picture of her baby girl. She said she had gone West, found a good honest man and married him, and this was their child. 'And, Judge, we want you to know that we kneel at the bedside every night, my husband and me, and pray to the good God to bless you and love you and yours.'

"I saw the letter and the picture of the little girl."

TRUSTING TO A STRAW

"Well, can you say you have crossed the line from death to life, yourself?" We asked a woman, after presenting the Gospel to her sick husband.

"Yes, I'm a church member."

Seeing that this did not make us feel very sure about her spiritual state, she continued: "Of course, a person may belong to the church and not be a Christian, so I allow it don't count for much anyhow."

"No," we replied, "I am sorry to say it does not, but that with many, it simply means that they have had Satan's dust thrown in their eyes by it to deceive their souls and are going down to destruction, unsaved.

"The grace of God is something to be received, something for nothing, and if we know we are in need of it, are in need of being saved, then let us come to Christ and receive His great salvation, and then go on our way rejoicing."

After coming out of the house we remarked to our friend: "Is not that the strangest argument in the world? This woman answers our inquiry as to her being saved by saying she is a church member, and yet with the next breath she says that this is not worth much, if anything, and so she owns that she is but trusting to a straw for salvation."

Reader, are you doing the same? Do you answer the inquiry: Dost thou believe on the Son of God? with "Yes, I'm a member of the church," and so try to satisfy those who care for your soul and to quiet your own conscience, with what you know only makes people the greater sinners if they still remain in their sins? To live for ourselves, for the world, and in the service of sin and Satan is a great delusion. To cover over our true state by a mere nominal profession of Christ's name is worse still. For "a name to live while dead," a "form of godliness with the power thereof denied," are greater delusions still. Turn from them, then, to God in the name of His Son, and receive His great salvation by simple faith.—B. C. G., in Home Friend.

EVIL INSTINCTS CONQUERED

In Jack London's Call of the Wild he tells us of the magnificent St. Bernard dog, the pet of a wealthy family in California, that was stolen and sold to the Klondike freighter. In this new life the dog became a monster. The old wolf instincts that long had laid dormant were aroused by the conditions. He fought and survived as wolves fight, and life is "to the strongest." He learned to cut the bull loose from the herd and bring him down. When his owner died he went to the wolf pack and fought his way to mastery.

The splendid St. Bernard had gone back and become the beast of prey. It was because there was something in the dog that responded to the howl of the wolf. The old nature was simply veneered over, and under certain conditions the veneer was scraped off.

That is what we have most to fear in our fight for character, in our endeavor to build Christian manhood and womanhood. The old wolf instincts are in us, the response to evil, the reply to temptation.

But, thank God, the Saving One within us is mightier than all evil instincts and can quell them. "Greater is He that is in you than he that is in the world." The Lord who mastered us can master these uprising sins for us.—Selected.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Eden, Halifax Charge.—We are glad to observe quite an increase in our congregation. Now that the weather is improving we hope to have still larger congregations. Brother Spencer has preached some excellent sermons to us and those who have been kept away have been losers.

Our Sunday school has survived the winter and is coming on nicely. We regret to say our very efficient secretary, Miss Lula Neville, has been very ill for two weeks. We hope she may soon be well again. We are glad to have Capt. Wilkie Burt, of Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., among us again. He is visiting in his old home for the first time in six years.

We deeply regret the passing of five of our most highly esteemed members within the last six months. They were Mrs. Wood, Mrs. Britt, Mrs. Keeter, Mrs. Hamill and Mrs. Parks. Mention of their death has probably been made in the Herald already.

We hope to have a good representation at Hollister next Friday, the 8th. We also hope the weather now will not be doing any stunts that day. REPORTER.

Kannapolis.—Our usual services were held at the Tabernacle Sunday. Our Sunday school attendance is good. We had 77 February 24. Today we dropped back to 70, as some of our people were away visiting. The congregation was good at both 11 o'clock and night services. Bro. Lowdermilk preached two very interesting sermons. One thing that we notice is most encouraging. Most of the children of the Sunday school are staying for church.

On the evening of February 18 our Ladies' Aid Society met at the parsonage, and after the usual procedure of business the society planned for a Washington birthday social, which we had at the Tabernacle on Saturday evening of February 23rd. After a brief program paying tribute to the Father of our Country the social committee took charge, the leader being Miss Maggie Mann, of Concord. During this time the little folks, older folks and everybody enjoyed a hearty laugh. Refreshments were served. The ladies realized the nice little sum of $19.00 clear from this birthday social. A number of our good Concord friends came and were with us.

It was our happy privilege to have a number of the ladies of the Concord Missionary Auxiliary with us on Friday evening, March 1, and render a thank-offering program. Each one played their part splendidly and we appreciate their helping us to the fullest extent. Surely they are answering the Macedonian cry by coming over and helping us. REPORTER.

Asheboro.—One of the most delightful services which we have held for quite a while was the "good news" service of last night. It had been announced for a week that the people were to come ready to tell the best thing they had heard about anybody else. The plan was to have this just before the sermon, but when the people got started to telling the good things heard they went right on until time to close the service. The purpose of the meeting was to encourage people to think of the good rather than the bad things they hear; also to encourage the workers of the church by letting them know they were appreciated. The program worked so well it is very certain we will try it again.

The quarterly communion service yesterday morning was well attended and almost everybody communed. The Sunday school assembled in the church auditorium for the close, with all the departments present. It is our rule to bring all five of the departments together for the close the first Sunday of the month. The report of the secretary-treasurer for the month showed an average attendance during February of 187, against 186 for January. One of the remarkable things about the report was that the attendance never fell below 175 nor went above 198 for the month.

Last week the missionary societies and the Ladies' Aid organized according to the plan of the last General Conference. We now have a Woman's Auxiliary with several circles and a budget will be made up covering all phases of the work and this will be distributed among the circles.

Mrs. John Swaim, whose condition was critical at the High Point Hospital last week, is pulling up again, and we are both hoping and praying she may be restored. J. E. PRITCHARD.

March 4, 1929.

Pleasant Hill, Why Not Circuit.—Sunday was another good day for us. Attendance at both Sunday school and church was very good. Brother Trogon preached a very inspiring and helpful sermon again, as usual. He took his text from the eighth verse of the first chapter of Acts. He made his sermon so plain that any child could understand it. This is the second year that Brother Trogon has been with us, and he is doing some splendid work. It seems that every sermon gets better.

We are very sorry to note at this writing that two of our members are sick: Mr. S. S. Cox and Mr. J. C. Loudermilk. We miss them in our Sunday school and church work. Hope they will soon be with us again.

Best wishes for the Herald and its readers. REPORTER.

First Church, Burlington.—Our reporter, Bro. L. A. Braxton, has been keeping the readers of the Herald well informed as to most of the activities here at First Church. However, recently, because of sickness in his home, he has not been able to attend all the services. We are glad that Bro. Braxton's boy, L. A., Jr., is now much better, and we hope he will soon be out again.

We are going ahead with our plans to join in the simultaneous evangelistic meetings that are to be held in Burlington from March 17 to the 31st. Each church will conduct its own meeting in its own way, except that there will be a union day service during the week days at 10 o'clock. Thirteen of the churches are joining in this campaign. Rev. J. D. Williams, D. D., of Greensboro, and Brother T. O. Pender, of Mebane, have been selected by our people to lead us in our meetings at First Church. A publicity committee appointed by the Ministerial Association has charge of the publicity part of the campaign for all the churches. Large streamers over the highways at the entrances of the city and in the business centers will tell the people about the meetings in addition to 500 window cards that are to be used.

A very fine spirit of fellowship and co-operation prevails among the pastors and the churches. For four Sunday evenings there has been an exchange of pulpits by the pastors except in a few cases where previous meetings had been arranged for. The prayers of Christian people will be appreciated and will help in this work.

A few outstanding meetings at our church have not been reported because our reporter, as stated above, has been kept at home. On the second Sunday evening in February the young people, several of them, had charge of the service, giving the program as outlined by the Department of Religious Education. They did not render the program like experienced public speakers, but they did well, and a large congregation was present for the service. As pastor of the church, I appreciate the willingness of our young people to take part in services of this kind.

On Friday night, February 22, our young people held their annual banquet. This was a decided success, so much so that we were embarrassed when we were not able to accommodate all who came. Tickets had been sold and we thought ample provision had been made, but quite a number came expecting to purchase tickets after arriving at the hut. Revs. F. L. Gibbs and Elwood Carroll were the speakers for the occasion. Both gave us inspiring and helpful addresses. A number of our local people added to the program with music and readings, toasts, etc. All appeared to have a jolly good time. Something like 110 plates were placed. The young people say this must be an annual event. So let it be.

Last night our people enjoyed the rare privilege of having Bro. J. F. Minnis give a stereopticon lecture on his work in India. It was the occasion of the women's thank-offering service. Mrs. L. W. Gerringer presided and introduced the speaker, while Mrs. M. A. Coble read the Scripture and Miss La Stafford made the opening prayer. Chairs had to be brought in to accommodate the crowd. The people greatly enjoyed Bro. Minnis' visit. The pastor's family was glad to have Bro. and Sister Minnis with them for supper. We were delighted to have them in our home. The offering for the evening amounted to something more than $63.00.

L. W. GERRINGER, Pastor.

Burlington, March 4, 1929.

Forsyth Circuit, Maple Springs.—Our pastor, Rev. R. C. Stubbins, filled his appointment Sunday morning. He administered the sacrament, after which he preached a most helpful sermon on the "Second Coming of Christ." We had a good attendance at this service and all seemed to enjoy the sermon very much.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely. We are having a contest between the classes. The class having the largest percentage of attendance for the month is presented a banner. Mrs. Ira W. Bait's class won last month.

We are planning to hold an Easter service Easter Sunday.

The missionary societies held their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. I. W. Bait. On last Thursday the missionary societies held an all-day service, when Mrs.

C. W. Bates presented "Friends of Africa," and Rev. R. C. Stubbins presented "Templed Hills," our missionary study-books. We also had with us Miss Miskimen, our returned missionary from India, who gave us a short talk on India. We were glad to have these friends with us and thank them very much for their help. Several other churches of this district were represented. We were glad to have them with us. Mrs. T. L. Speas was re-elected district chairman, with Mrs. J. F. Hunter, secretary.

Next Saturday evening the Ladies' Aid will serve supper at the church. The public is invited. IDA M. LONG.

Laurel Hill.—Our Sunday school is doing fine now since we have caught a glimpse of spring and 'most every one has recovered from colds and other diseases. Our school is increasing, both in number and in interest.

We are now planning to have an Easter program on Easter Sunday.

The next quarterly conference will be held at Laurel Hill either March 12 or 13. We expect to see our ladies come out with well filled baskets; let's all go and attend to the business of our churches and get a delicious dinner also.

We have decided that every second Sunday morning our Sunday school collection, also our morning offering, shall go to the Children's Home to help support some little motherless child. May God bless these children.

Best wishes to the Herald.

REPORTER.

Roberta.—This beautiful Sunday we had a good attendance for Sunday school—189; our collection was $11.05. We are in a contest with Lincoln church for the next three months. They may beat us, but they are going to have to work, for we are going to put forth every effort possible to win.

We observed Young People's Day this morning. We were supposed to have the program before now, but on account of the bad weather and so much sickness in the community we had to postpone it.

John Furr gave a short talk on "Preparation for Service." Theo Blackwelder gave a talk on "Youth and Yesterday." The Juniors sang a song, "I Would Be True." Gertrude Furr gave a talk on "Youth in Training for Service in the Church of Tomorrow." Our pastor, Rev. Robert Short, gave a talk on "Youth and the New Century Service." Hymn, "I'll Go Where You Want Me to Go."

We hope the young people will hear and heed the call for service in the church and take advantage of all opportunities to prepare themselves.

Death came into the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Smith and took their darling baby Friday morning. The funeral was held at Rocky Ridge M. E. Church this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The bereaved family has our sympathy. REPORTER.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle Circuit.—Today our contest on finances closed. The winners were as follows: Bro. O. P. Jones as teacher of Class No. 2 received a copy of "Peloubet's Select Notes on the International Sunday School Lessons"; Mrs. E. S. Stone received a copy of Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress."

The writer has always been taught that a person never loses anything by giving to the church, and as superintendent he secured these little prizes at a time when finances were very close with him and at a real sacrifice, with no thought but to receive spiritual blessings. But the loyal members of the Sunday school had made up their minds that they wanted to do something right now to show that they appreciated my efforts. I had secured Prof. W. C. Dutton, of Pinnacle High School, to deliver the presents. He did that without any formality, and then he gave us a splendid talk. After he had finished, Bro. R. S. Barber wanted to make a few remarks, and he said that he thought one good turn deserved another, so he presented me with a handsome and useful watch that the school had helped pay for, costing a good deal more than the books I had presented.

We will have an Easter service Easter Sunday night at 7:30. You are invited to come. Bro. Hunter will be with us while we practice music for the Easter service.

Bro. O. P. Jones and wife had the misfortune to lose their baby, which was buried at Mount Zion last Friday at 11 o'clock.

Next Sunday at 2:30 p. m., Dr. Straughn will speak to us. Don't forget to come, you that are in easy reach of your church.

The County Sunday School Convention will be at Mount Zion during the coming summer.

Bro. Sam Lane continues right sick at his home. C. W. ALLEN, Reporter.

Spring Hill, West Thomasville Charge.

Our Sunday school is moving one very nicely.

We had with us at the 11 o'clock service Sunday, March 3, our pastor, T. J. Whitehead, who gave us a brief but very interesting message; also Mr. W. D. Wood and C. K. Holt, from the High Point College were with us and brought some very splendid remarks. Mr. Wood's subject was "The Youth of Yesterday," and Mr. Holt's was based on "Training Youth for Service." Their talks were enjoyed by every one. We were glad to have them with us and hope they will not make it their last time. We were also glad to have them with us for Sunday school. At this time music was rendered by a quartet under the direction of Prof. J. B. Swaim. The funeral of Mrs. Callie Mae Sink, wife of G. L. Sink, was held at Spring Hill Sunday, February 24. Rev. Mr. Palmer, of the Zion Reformed church, of which she was a member; Rev. D. C. Cox, her former pastor, and Rev. T. J. Whitehead, her husband's pastor, conducted the service. Burial followed in the church cemetery nearby. She was only 22 years old, but the young have to die as well as the old. Her pastor said that he had visited many, but she was among the happiest he had ever seen at the point of death. She will not only be missed by her husband and little son, but by the church and community also.

Mrs. I. I. York, after being absent so long was with us Sunday. We are always glad to have our old people at church.

ALICE HAYNES, Reporter.

Mount Pleasant.—Since our last report we have received helpful gifts: Mrs. R. C. Causey, Rev. and Mrs. Burgess, Miss Georgia Amick, Mrs. Thomas Smith and S. A. Alexander.

Death has again come into our ranks. Bro. William Alfred Staley, who has been a member of Mount Pleasant for 35 years, died on February 27; burial on the 28th; a large congregation present. Bro. Staley died at the age of 52 years. He was at one time the choir-leader at Mount Pleasant. We express sympathy for the bereaved family.

G. F. MILLAWAY.

West Forsyth.—The work on this charge is moving along very satisfactorily and there has been good attendance in Sunday schools and church services.

We were at Harmony Grove the fourth Sunday in February and the attendance there was larger than usual. The people at this church are small in number but they are large and generous in spirit and are a faithful little band of Christian believers.

Last Sunday was a good day for Baltimore and Stony Knoll churches. We had a good attendance at Baltimore at 11 o'clock and the people were very attentive to the efforts of the pastor in presenting a message. There seemed to be an unusually fine spirit and atmosphere in the service, which helped greatly in the delivery of the message. The Sunday school took an offering for our Children's Home. We did not learn the amount of the offering, but suppose it was a considerable amount. The pastor and family were invited to the splendid and hospitable home of Bro. Wesley Daub, superintendent of the Sunday school, class-leader and local preacher of the Baltimore church. After dinner had been enjoyed in this home, we hurried to Stony Knoll church for the service at 2:30 o'clock. A large congregation gathered for the service. We were pleased to have with at this service, Rev. Wade Adams, of the Friends church, who delivered a splendid sermon on the theme, "Feeding the Sheep."

From Stony Knoll church the pastor and family went to the delightful home of Misses Nancy and Millie Smitherman at East Bend, where we had previously been invited for supper. Their brother, John Smitherman, makes his home with them. We were royally entertained in this splendid home with very pleasant conversation, radio and victrola music, and the delightful supper, which was a bountiful spread of many good things to eat. Our visit to this home was thoroughly enjoyed. The Misses Smitherman and their brother are members of Baltimore church.

The pastor and family have been the recipients of a number of gifts for our dining table since our last report. These gifts have come from members of our churches and our neighbors, some not members of our church. We are grateful for all of these kind remembrances.

Our regular service for next Sunday morning will be with the Union Hill church at 11 o'clock.

The West Forsyth charge will be visited by one of the representatives of the General Conference during the five-day speaking campaign by four of the representatives of the General Conference who are to be in North Carolina during the period from March 8 to 13. We are glad that we are to have Rev. F. L. Gibbs at three of the churches on this charge, and we are also pleased that he is to come for Sunday services. The appointments for Brother Gibbs are as follows: Baltimore at 11 a. m., Stony Knoll at 2:30 p. m., and Pleasant Hill at 7:30 p. m. We trust that our people will remember these appointments, which are for next Sunday, March 10, and that we will have large congregations at all three appointments.

Pleasant Hill church had a visit from Miss Mildred Miskimen, missionary to India, last Sunday morning.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Fair Grove, Why Not Circuit.—Our pastor, Rev. J. B. Trogdon, filled his appointment here yesterday, March 3, using as his subject, "Loyalty to Our Church."

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society held its annual thank-offering last night, using the program sent out by the Foreign Mission Board. Mrs. D. J. Johnson presided over the program, and the following persons had a part: Mrs. Noah Williams, Mrs. Lloyd Cagle, Mrs. Nettie Allen, Mrs. J. A. Auman, Mrs. J. E. King and Mrs. Paul K. Torbert. The offering amounted to $11.35.

We are planning to hold our Easter service on Sunday night, March 31.

Mrs. W. A. Burgess, of Columbus, N. C., was received into our church by letter yesterday, having come from English Street M. P. church, of High Point. Mrs. Burgess is a former member of Fairgrove church, as she was before marriage Miss Ada Monroe.

MRS. C. E. STUART, Reporter.

Calvary, Greensboro.—It is not my time to write, but so many interesting things are happening here at Calvary that ought to be known, that I venture to take my pen in hand.

Last night (Tuesday) the Men's Brotherhood met for supper in the church hut. In spite of the threatening weather there were 26 present. The men enjoyed a helpful address by Mr. R. D. Covington, teacher of the Covington Bible Class in the First Baptist Sunday school. This was our first meeting since the organization of the Brotherhood, and all the men present are enthusiastic for it. It will mean much, I feel sure, for Calvary church.

Last Monday the Circles of the Woman's Auxiliary met. In spite of the rain, a total of 40 attended the meetings. Circle No. 1 met with Mrs. J. Norman Kirkman; Circle No. 3 with Mrs. David Glass; and at night, Circle No. 2, composed of business girls, had supper at the parsonage. There were 17 present at this meeting. The new plan of women's work is getting a splendid start, and is proving much more satisfactory than the old order.

We are climbing up toward the high mark reached last year in Sunday school attendance; 211 were present last Sunday; 251 is the high mark, but that was reached through a contest with West End. The mark reached last Sunday represents normal growth. But it is due, in part at least, to the opening and closing exercises put on by various classes in the school. On Lincoln's birthday, the Intermediate boys had an interesting program. On Washington's birthday, the Intermediate girls had charge. The girls beat the boys by a small margin in the opinion of the judges, and are to be set up to some sort of entertainment, the boys footing the bill. Next Sunday Mrs. Heritage's class of Junior girls will have charge of the program.

Two interesting additions to the equipment of the Hut ought to be mentioned. One is a play table for the tiny tots. The table was made by Brother Ross Bowman. The other is a birthday cake, made of wood, and presented by Brother J. A. Cox. This is enameled until it looks like an angel-food cake, and when the candles are burning in honor of a child's birthday, it will fool even the elect. The children wanted the superintendent to cut it last Sunday.

Attendance at church services is encouraging, and is very much better than last year, due, in part, to better weather; but due also, I think, to a larger interest on the part of the members and others. One of the fine things about the evening service, especially, is the increasing number of visitors present.

I do not want to close this report without saying a word about the work the choir is doing under the leadership of our Brother Willis Booth. Out of an exceedingly busy life as County Auditor, he is giving unstintingly of his time and talent. And the members of the choir are co-operating splendidly in putting on special numbers that are adding much to the worship services. We have also discovered two male quartets, and other combinations of men's voices, that we did not know we had. So there is music in the air, and, I trust, music in the hearts, of those who attend our services.

The membership is being added to; not quite in apostolic measure, but it is slowly and steadily increasing. Nine accessions so far this year. At least three are to be received Sunday; and the likelihood that a number more will come in between now and Easter Sunday.

Kistlers Church, Cleveland Charge.—The first Sunday in March comes to us a very beautiful day, everybody being full of life and willing to take part in our services of worship. Brother Ridge brought us a most uplifting sermon, his subject, "Son, thy sins be forgiven thee." He made it so plain that even the small children could understand it.

We were very glad to have his wife and children with us, and especially glad to have them with us in our Sunday school.

Our Sunday school is still moving, although our crowd is small. We are striving to do our best.

We had several visitors today; we hope they will come again.

FLORA IVESTER, Reporter.

Philadelphia, Greenville Circuit.—Mrs. J. H. Chambliss was greatly benefited by going to the hospital. She is home again and is getting along fine. We hope for her a speedy recovery.

Sunday morning our pastor, Rev. E. G. Cowan, gave us another very helpful and inspiring sermon. I'm sure it was enjoyed. His subject was "Give God a Chance."

Our Sunday school is not what we would like it to be, although we're still holding on to our faithful few. The flu affected us very badly this winter, but has subsided now. Spring is just about here and I'm hoping that Sunday school attendance will grow larger.

Plans are being made for a circuit rally program Easter Sunday at some church.

REPORTER.

State Street, Lexington.—The primary department gave the opening program Sunday morning for Sunday school. The whole school called it one of the best, if not the best, we have had yet. Mrs. C. L. Koonts, Mrs. H. C. Rodgers and Mrs. F. J. Cox have charge of this department and the children receive the best of training under their efficient leadership.

At the 11 o'clock hour our pastor gave us a beautiful sermon, the subject of which was, "Like Measure." Mrs. Potts sang as a solo a beautiful old hymn, "Do Something for Somebody Today."

At 7:30 the Missionary Society gave a thank-offering service under the leadership of Mrs. Annie Harky, thank-offering secretary. Mrs. Harky deserves much commendation for the splendid and rapid way in which she does things. A large audience called this service a success from every point of view. A liberal offering was received.

The oyster supper given by the ladies of the church Friday night was a very enjoyable affair. A gratifying sum was realized which will be applied on the G. C. budget.

Only a few more weeks now until our revival service begins. Plans are being made to personally invite a large number of people to attend the meeting. We hope every one who can possibly attend will feel invited and urged to do so, and again we ask your prayers.

The Missionary Society will meet Thursday afternoon at the parsonage.

Miss Marjorie Winecoff and Miss Cleo Holshouser spent the past week-end with Miss Clara Taylor and were in the evening services, Sunday. Miss Winecoff is teaching school at Kannapolis and Miss Holshouser at Rockwell. We were pleased to have these fine young ladies with us and hope they will come again.

REPORTER.

Cid, Denton Charge.—Sunday afternoon Rev. E. A. Bingham delivered a heart-touching sermon.

We have lost by death one of our oldest members, Mr. Isaac Black, who passed away three weeks ago. He was about 82 years old. He was buried at Clarksbury. He leaves one son, several grandchildren and many friends. He will be greatly missed in the church and neighborhood. He was faithful to attend God's services. Bro. Black had pneumonia. This is the third member that our church has lost in the past 21 years. Praise the Lord.

The reporter was more than glad to be able to go out to church again Sunday.

Our Sunday school is expected to begin the first Sunday in April.

MRS. N. W. LANIER, Reporter.

First Church, Thomasville.—We do not boast our church as we should. Let us tell of the good things our church has to offer and win people to it.

We were glad to see an increase in attendance at Sunday School Sunday. The church seems to have taken new interest in its work. We hope that when spring comes in with all its loveliness there will be more attending church than ever before.

Our mid-week prayer service and Christian Endeavor Society are moving along nicely. The young people of the church are taking part in its programs. The Christian Endeavor held a Valentine social on February 14 which was a big success.

We were well blessed with a sermon from President S. W. Taylor. After the sermon he presented to the congregation some of the programs of the conference.

At the evening service Mr. Powell, our pastor, delivered another of his fine sermons. His sermon was based on the "Deadly Disease of Sin." Last Sunday, being the first Sunday in the month, Mr. Powell held the regular communion service with a good number taking part.

JUANITA DORSETT, Reporter.

Winston.—Mrs. R. A. Wagner was hostess to the Philathea class of the First Methodist Protestant church Monday evening at the church.

A very enthusiastic meeting was held with 14 members, three new members and one visitor present. Five dollars and thirty-seven cents dues and pledges were collected. Mrs. J. E. Kirk presided and conducted devotionals, with Miss Nannie Watson leading in prayer.

Mrs. R. M. Hauser was elected president, succeeding Mrs. W. C. Tise, who recently resigned. Various business matters were discussed and plans made for enlarging the class.

A social hour followed, during which the hostess, assisted by Mrs. W. D. Coble and Mrs. E. M. Routh, served a delicious salad course.

Lineberry, Davidson Circuit.—Sunday was a very good day for Lineberry. We had 66 in Sunday school and quite a large crowd at 11 a. m. preaching service. Bro. W. D. Reed's sermon was just splendid. Before entering upon his sermon he gave a very interesting as well as instructive talk to the children.

Some few cases of mumps and a small amount of other sickness in community, but we are hoping soon to see Lineberry normal in attendance again. There has been some work done on parsonage yard; there is some more to do yet, which will make it much more attractive.

Mr. Walter Loflin in chopping accidentally cut off the knuckle of his ankle-bone, and spent some while in the hospital.

The fourth Sunday in March the Jackson Hill Township Sunday School Convention will meet with the Siloam M. E. people. Lineberry and Pleasant Grove are due to be represented in this convention.

Davidson circuit must soon have in mind their annual rally day, which is held at Chapel Hill tabernacle the third Sunday in May each year. Let's make this a good day.

Bro. W. D. Reed made a trip last Thursday to see Bro. Siler, but his condition was such that the nurses would not allow Bro. Reed to see him.

J. P. ELLIOTT, Reporter.

Glen Raven.—The attendance upon all services at Glen Raven church last Sunday was greater than usual for this year. There were 126 present for Sunday school. A number of new faces were noted present in each service.

Dr. F. W. Stephenson is to speak at Glen Raven next Sunday evening at 7:30. We are hoping that nearby churches will be well represented, as well as Glen Raven also.

We were handsomely pounded Monday night, the 25th of February. Quite a number of men and women came in at 8 o'clock, bearing their expressions of love and appreciation. Each one has our thanks.

Funeral services for Mr. George Garrison, father of C. C. Garrison of our church, were held in Burlington February 27th. The deceased was a member of the M. E. Church.

He had been seriously ill for some time. Many expressions of esteem were voiced at the service.

WM. H. NEESE.

Burlington, N. C., Route 4.

High Point.—Rev. R. I. Farmer has prepared a series of sermons for the Lenten season, and different groups are urged to attend every Sunday. Last Sunday was designated as Women's Day, next Sunday will be Men's Day, and the following, Young People's Day. On last Sunday morning the message was brought on "My Church and I," the text being Psalm 122:1, "I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord." He said in part: "There is a particular reason why our church means more to us than any other in the world; it is simply because it is our own, and the responsibility for it rests upon us. When we go to church in the right spirit, the Lord speaks to us, and He fights His battles through consecrated lives. Despite all the criticism and abuse heaped upon the church and its members, no one can reproach or criticize the life of Jesus. We should be loyal to our church, its leaders and founders because of the Head of the church. It is not a passive virtue that Christ wants from us, but we need to be active and aggressive as Christians in fighting sin. America is the greatest nation in the world today, and if we seek to find the source of her genius and power we will not find it in her rivers and harbors, her cities, commerce, or government, but America is great because she is good. Her greatness is to be found in her churches, and the spiritual, consecrated lives of her members and ministers. James Tyson, an Australian bushman, died recently; he had gone out there and taught the men to drain their land and to be better farmers, having become wealthy. When he lay down to die he said that his pride was not in the money he had made, but in the game he had played. The church that is efficient is the one that reaches out in the work of service. It is a deplorable fact that 90 per cent of the work of the church is done by 10 per cent of its membership, and in an average church of 700 members, if 75 people were to die at one time, she would be flat on her back. What is the chief evil of the church? The way that people hold back from active and aggressive work. Let us not only resolve to do something for our church, but do it joyously and wholeheartedly."

At this same hour in the Junior church service downstairs, Rev. E. L. Ballard gave a most entertaining talk on a novel topic, "The Lenten Boxing Class," in which he explained to the boys and girls the idea of Paul in I Cor. 9:26: "So fight I," the word "fight" meaning to "box" in the original Greek. Paul said that he was constantly compelled to wage war against his baser nature or the old Saul, so the boys and girls were advised during Lent especially to fight against any ill-will or bitterness in their hearts. Mr. Ballard in his characteristically pleasing and winsome manner with the children, urged them to try to live very near to their heavenly Father during these holy days. By his patience and gentleness as the leader of the Junior church he is indeed "casting bread upon the waters, and he will find it after many days."

At the Sunday evening service an innovation was introduced in the form of a 15-minute vesper recital on the organ by Prof. Ernest B. Stimson, director of music. Mr. Stimson is a real artist and the congregation enjoys very greatly his exquisite playing every Sabbath. Rev. Mr. Farmer chose for his subject at this hour, "The Homeless Home." He says that it is a startling fact that the American home is undergoing swift changes. Too many of them are becoming merely places to eat and sleep. Father and mother are no longer the children's companions. A boy's definition of home was "the place where mother is." That place is too often an uncertainty in these days. But thank God! there are a few old-fashioned sons and daughters left! An absent son sent on one occasion a card to his mother bearing these lines:

"I look the world in the eyes,
And I meet the day and its cares
With courage I've drawn from your loving heart,
And strength that comes from your prayers.
There isn't a day as I go on my way,
That my thoughts don't return, dear, to you,
And the farther I go, the more surely I know
There was never another more blest with a mother,
So loyal and loving and true!"

And that mother, though poor in this world's goods, would not exchange this symbol of love and gratitude for a fortune!

The Leadership Training School is progressing nicely with about 50 in attendance.

The Women's Circles met Monday afternoon.

On Wednesday evening a Covered Dish Supper will be served for the women of the church at 6:30. Mesdames Geo. R. Brown, of Reidsville, and H. W. Maier, of Thomasville, will be present, and explain the workings of the new merger of women's societies into one Auxiliary as proposed by General Conference.

The Ladies' Aid Society is serving a mid-day luncheon to the Rotary Club today (Tuesday).

Thursday evening, the Brotherhood will meet, when Rev. Lawrence Little will be the chief speaker, and supper will be served.

Last Saturday Society Day was observed at the college by the Artemesian and Akrothian Literary Societies. Classes were suspended for the day, many of the ex-members came back to join in the celebration, and a delightful banquet at 8 p. m. in the college dining hall brought to a close the day's festivity.

A memorial gift to the college in the form of a fountain is being erected on the campus in front of Roberts Hall. This beautiful memorial is presented by the class of 1929.

First Church, Winston-Salem.—I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Phil. 3:14. Let us all heed the call for our life's work. While we are yet in our youth this should be settled.

Recently the Baraca class and others have made possible the financing of a church bulletin for the Sunday services and announcements. We are sure that everybody will like it and it will be of service to them.

The Ladies' Aid Society held its regular meeting Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. J. H. Hill.

All the people who can and are willing to assist in the singing during the revival meeting were asked to meet after prayer service.

The officers and teachers of the Sunday school are undertaking a new department when they meet in a workers' conference Thursday evening, March 7, at the home of Mrs. R. M. Hauser on Bethania Road. Supper will be served at 6:15 o'clock with Mesdames Hauser and Surratt as joint hostesses. Business will immediately follow the meal. It is important that all officers and teachers attend this meeting.

Monday evening the Christian Endeavor Society held its regular monthly business meeting in the Sunday school room. A very interesting meeting was held and a good many important matters were attended to. A delightful social hour was then enjoyed.

The members of the Philathea class held their regular monthly meeting in their class room Monday evening. A large number attended in spite of the downpour of rain. A very interesting program was held, after which a delicious salad course was served.

The board of stewards held their regular monthly meeting Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. T. C. Hauser, Hawthorne Road.

On the 17th of March Rev. Surratt will begin a two weeks' revival season before Easter. The Wednesday evening services are being given over to talks on prayer, preparatory to the revival.

The Young People's Missionary Society held its meeting last week. New officers were elected. It was decided the society would take a girl from the High Point Children's Home to clothe. Three girls went last week and selected the one. It was a hard task to take just one out of so many and we hope that other societies will do the same.

EVELYN SMOTHERS.

Denton.—Rev. E. A. Bingham delivered a splendid sermon on "Heaven" last Sunday morning. At night he took the subject of "Hell." We were not privileged to hear the night sermon, but the sermon Sunday morning was instructive as well as entertaining.

This church is preparing to have an Easter service the last of the month. This, we think, will be a good service, which should inspire us to greater things.

We are sorry to lose Mr. Morris as teacher, but we feel fortunate in having Mr. Coy Kearns to succeed him. REPORTER.

Mizpah, Haw River Charge.—Our Sunday school is doing fine, increasing both in number and interest.

Our pastor, Rev. J. L. Trollinger, is preaching inspiring sermons. On the third Sunday in February, he preached on the subject, "How May I Know I'm Backsliding." The first Sunday in March his subject was "When Is Our Church Like a Wagon Wheel?" These services were very impressive and were enjoyed by all.

We are glad to have so many visitors from other churches come and worship with us.

Rev. E. N. Brittain, from St. Paul church, Greensboro, will be our help in the revival meeting beginning on Easter Monday night, April 1st.

Our Sunday school is planning to have Easter services.

Wishing for our church and all other churches as well a successful year.

NOTICE

The New Century Service Commission has planned to send two speakers to Cleveland Circuit on Tuesday, March 12; Oak Grove church, 11 a. m.-2 p. m.; Mount Moriah church, 7:30 p. m.

We take this opportunity, through the columns of the Methodist Protestant Herald to again urge our people of Cleveland circuit to attend this meeting.

We have planned for Pleasant Hill and Kistlers to come to Oak Grove for the day services. Dinner will be served on the grounds. Brethren, this is a great privilege we have of hearing these noted speakers who are wide awake to the needs and program of the Methodist Protestant Church. We also invite other pastors and people from nearby charges to come and hear these men and help to make these meetings a success.

C. E. RIDGE.

FROM REV. J. H. MOTON

Dear Brethren of the Conference:

I feel that I am physically strong in health to take up my much coveted work—revival meetings. If any of the brethren feel that you could use me satisfactorily I shall be glad to confer with you in regard to the time and place.

Some have already spoken to me, but have not designated the time and place. Please inform me that there may be no conflict of plans.

J. H. MOTON.

CAN'T TAKE A JOKE

Some folks are very queer!
Take our near neighbor here:
We tried to have some fun
With board on chimney top;
But he came out with gun
And quickly made us stop—
We'd filled his house with smoke.
Some folks can't take a joke.

And there's our neighbor, Jones,
Who stopped our throwing stones;
We meant to make him jump
By hitting side of door.
But badly misaimed lump
Sent broken glass to floor.
Out he came, out he spoke!
Some folks can't take a joke.

Then there's our neighbor, Brown,
Who lives at edge of town.
He'd cleared his walks of snow
And piled it high in stack.
We thought at night to go
And all to shovel back.
He phoned for cop first stroke!
Some folks can't take a joke.

Then there's our neighbor, Smith,
Who came at us with withe.
He lives in house so white
We meant to add red stripe
In early hours of night.
He plainly heard our swipe.
Didn't wait for second stroke.
Some folks can't take a joke.

PINE RIDGE, KENTUCKY

At 3:30 a. m. in a mud-daubed log cabin, not a mile from Alvan Drew School, where there were already four children, (all but one under school age) a baby girl was born, a sister to one of our day pupils, George Branham, a bright, promising boy. To these children this is home; and yet there is so little suggestive of home; there is not a window of any kind, not an opening through which light can enter, except by the door, no matter how cold the weather.

We learned of their destitute condition a few weeks ago, when little George took some glass jars to a neighbor and tried to exchange them for food, saying they had nothing to eat. When the news reached us, we began to investigate, found the mother in that expectant state, with no preparation and no prospect for making any; the father not being able to find work in the immediate neighborhood, and the condition of his wife making it necessary for him to remain near her, could not go to the oil field or elsewhere to seek employment.

Since learning of their condition, available work has been provided him by the Mission; our nurse has been visiting them, necessities have been prepared for the mother, and the expected baby, and food provisions given from our co-operative store, for the family of six, but on Saturday the hungry father told us that again there was no bread in the house, and again the need was temporarily supplied.

A statement of their condition was made at breakfast in our dining room, and that there would be an opportunity at the chapel service to make a free will offering for these people, through love for God, a privilege of knowing the joy of service; the proposition was again stated in the chapel service and then the offering of $22.64, not to be given to the family direct, but to be used to meet the immediate needs until home conditions will permit that husband to go away for work.

We have found more cases of real need this winter than ever before, and are therefore glad indeed that our friends are making it possible for us to give the helping hand to those in distress. Words cannot express the wonderful blessing that our store and the clothes which you send have been to the mountain people far and near.

And do you not share the joy of that family about two miles down the ridge, living in a shack, where the father is dying with tuberculosis? They had no milk for him, none of the neighbors had milk, all just existing, so that they could not buy milk, even if they had the money. At the school this winter we are having more milk than ever before, for which we are thankful; when we heard of the deprivation of this family, and learned that they owned a young heifer, we let them have one of our fresh cows in exchange for the heifer, which will give us milk next year.

Now the sick man has plenty of milk to drink, is selling some to his neighbors, who are, with him, singing the praises of Pine Ridge Mission.

Is it worth while?

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By Grover L. Angel

President C. E. Society, High Point College

MARCH 10: "HOW TO BECOME A CHRISTIAN"

Acts 2:37-41; 16:30, 31

Poster

"To become a Christian—

Believe! Repent! Confess! Be baptized!

To stay a Christian—live like Christ."

Plans for the Meeting

Each member is to do his best to get some unsaved person to attend the meeting. At the close sing an invitation song and have the pastor to give the invitation for people to accept Christ and to become members of the Christian Endeavor Society.

Points for the Leader

There are many people in the world who would like to become Christians that do not know how. The New Testament is the only answer to the questions of those who desire to follow Christ. There are too many confusing ideas on "How to Become a Christian," and those are the ideas we want to discuss this evening. We all need to know how people can become Christians in order that we ourselves may follow Christ and explain His teachings to those about us.

Suitable Songs

"More About Jesus."

"Whiter Than Snow."

"Let Jesus Come Into Your Heart."

"Just As I Am Without One Plea."

"Come Unto Me, Ye Weary."

Topics to Be Discussed

1. What I would tell one who asked me how to become a Christian.
2. The relationship of the church to Christianity.
3. The Christian Creed.

Questions to Be Answered

1. Why are there so many mistaken ideas about how to become a Christian?
2. How can our Christian Endeavor Society help people to become Christians?
3. Why is a confession of faith necessary in becoming a Christian?

Debate

Resolved, That the existence of divisions in the Church prevents many people from knowing how to become Christians.

Ten-Minute Bible Reading

Read (Rom. 10:1-15); hear about Jesus (Acts 8:35-39); believe (Acts 19:2); accept the Gospel (Acts 16:14); repent (Acts 3:19); confess (Matt. 10:31, 33); belief and baptism (Acts 8:13); baptism (Acts 10:47, 48); baptism (Acts 16:15).—C. E. Quarterly.

Appropriate Quotations

"The change of heart is one of the most vital points in the religion of Jesus. We can not put too much stress on the great necessity of the change of heart. If the sinful heart is unchanged, man's religion is all worthless.

There must be a thorough, radical change of the whole heart in entering into the Christian life."—James C. Creel.

"Baptism is a wonderfully suggestive symbol, but it was never a symbol of cleansing. It is a pictorial representation of all that Christ did for our redemption in His atonement on the Cross, and of all that we do in coming to Him through our faith and repentance. Every conversion is a recapitulation of the experience of Calvary. To be saved we must follow Jesus in death, burial and resurrection."—Kellems, in "The Forgiveness of Sins."

Poetry to the Point

THE INDWELLING GOD

Go not, my soul, in search of Him;

Thou wilt not find Him there—

Or in the depths of shadows dim,

Or heights of upper air.

For not in far-off realms of space

The spirit hath its throne;

In every heart it findeth place

And waiteth to be known.

Thought answereth alone to thought

And soul with soul hath kin;

The outward God he findeth not,

Who finds not God within.

And if the vision come to thee,

Revealed by inward sign,

Earth will be full of Deity

And with His glory shine!

Thou shalt not want for company,

Nor pitch thy tent alone;

The Indwelling God will go with thee,

And show thee of His own.

O gift of gifts, O grace of grace,

That God should condescend

To make thy heart His dwelling-place—

And be thy daily friend!

Then go not thou in search of Him,

But to thyself repair;

Wait thou within the silence dim

And thou shalt find Him there.

Why the Camel Has the Hump

An elderly man approached one of the attendants in the traveling menagerie.

"Can you tell me what that hump on the camel's back is for?" he asked.

The keeper scratched his ear.

"What's it for?" he murmured.

"Yes; what use has it?"

"Well, it's pretty useful, sir. The old camel wouldn't be much use without it, you know."

"But why not?"

"Why not!" exclaimed the keeper in surprise. "Well, you don't suppose people would pay to see 'im if 'e 'adn't got an 'ump, do you?"—Tit-Bits (London).

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

BRANCH MEETING OF W. F. M. S. AND

W. H. M. S.

The annual Branch meeting of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of the North Carolina Conference will be held in Asheboro, N. C., April 9, 10, 11.

All auxiliary treasurers will please send the full amount of money raised during the year to the Branch treasurer before March 31, as her books will close on that date.

It will be a great help to the finance committee if each auxiliary will designate the amount of the budget it can assume for another year. In this amount include dues, student loan fund, special pledges for Bible women, or scholarships, and, if possible, a little extra for the contingent fund. Be as liberal as possible. All money except that used in our own Branch counts on the General Conference budget of the local church.

Our Branch districts must be made to conform to the Annual Conference districts. Some of them overlap, and, judging by reports, some have no chairmen at present. We want to elect district chairmen at the Branch meeting, and these must be recommended by the respective districts.

Even though some of our auxiliaries have united, our branches can not do so until after the Board meetings in May, so send delegates to both Home and Foreign branches. In union auxiliaries the officers can act as delegates in both Branch meetings, or delegates elected to do so can act.

We are hoping to have fine reports from all auxiliaries, and a greater interest in the big business of missions.

Mrs. Marie Thompson will be with us, and we expect our own missionaries, Auman and Minnis, as well as representatives from Bethel Home and the Children's Home. The program for the meetings will appear soon.

MRS. GEORGE R. BROWN.

GRACE MISSIONARY SOCIETY

The Woman's Missionary Society of Grace church met in the chapel on Monday at 3:30 with Mrs. D. S. Coletrane presiding. The devotional was led by Mrs. T. A. Hunter and the lenten prayer read in concert. Mrs. J. Norman Wills gave a piano solo. A beautiful violin solo by Arlindo Cate was enjoyed by all. The study chapter was led by Mrs. R. F. Williams, and a talk on "Why We Give a Thank-Offering and How Used" was given by Mrs. J. M. Stone.

We are confidently expecting the thank-offering to reach $100. Instead of using the Question Box on the program day we are trying that out in the circle meetings in the homes. There is a bit of friendly rivalry in the circles in the attendance.

A friend is giving $2 each month to the circle having the largest number present at both the business meeting and the program meeting, which come on different Mondays. Mrs. T. A. Hunter's circle won for February. Who will be the next? Since uniting the three into one society we are having greater interest and the best attendance in the history of Grace church.

MISS MISKIMEN'S ITINERARY

Miss Mildred Miskimen will be at Welch Memorial this Sunday night. On the third Sunday morning she will be at Rehoboth on Granville Circuit, and will speak at other churches in that section on the same day. Any of the churches desiring her after this coming Tuesday, especially church between Greensboro and Henderson, please notify Mrs. Bates so appointments may be made. Miss Miskimen is an interesting speaker, and will give us information concerning our mission work in India which will be of great value in our work. To fail to have her to speak to our people is to miss a great opportunity.

Elder brother am I,
You are the younger son;
Held by ties of kinship,
We work together as one.

The web-like line between us,
Needs not sentry nor gun;
In mutual understanding,
We work together as one.

Some may boast of warfare,
Of strife we will have none;
In peace and fruitful labor,
We work together as one.

The race now set before us,
Alike with patience we run;
Girded with truth and honor,
We work together as one.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

We, your committee on resolutions, do hereby submit the following:

Realizing that in the death of Mrs. Pattie P. Parks we as a church and community have lost one of our oldest and most highly esteemed members, and that whereas her life has been so pure and unselfish, so Christlike and peaceful that we have been able from time to time to gather inspiration from her example of Christian living and that perfect peace with God;

Be it resolved, that we, the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of Eden M. P. Church, striving to follow her example, live more Christlike, to be of greater service to our church and community and to all humanity so that when we too shall have passed from this world it may also be said of us that we preserved our bodies a living sacrifice wholly acceptable unto God.

Be it further resolved that copies of this writing be sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald and the local paper for publication, and to the bereaved family, and that a copy be preserved in the records of our society.

MRS. L. A. WILLIAMS.

MISS BLANCH HARDEE,

MRS. J. R. LOCKE,

Committee.

White

Our church and community was saddened on Friday, February 15, when it became known that the spirit of Mrs. Jeffie White had passed away.

Mrs. White was sick only a few hours. Her husband, being employed as clerk in the General Assembly at Columbia, failed to reach her bedside before her spirit took its flight.

She was an active member of Fairview church. She had been organist most of the time for 25 years, and always had charge of all special programs.

Mrs. White was an earnest and active Christian, a true and unselfish friend, a faithful companion and mother.

Besides her husband, Hr. L. H. White, she is survived by four sons and one daughter, Clyde, of New York; Bruce and Louie, of the University of South Carolina, Columbia; Claude and Elizabeth, of Easley.

The funeral was held at Fairview church on Sunday evening, conducted by the pastor, Rev. G. B. Ferree, and Rev. C. P. Carter, of the M. E. church. Her body was laid to rest in the church cemetery, under a cover of beautiful flowers so typical of her pure life.

MRS. ESTELLA CONNELLY.

Patton

Mrs. Martha Patton, born January 14, 1857, was a consistent and faithful member of Clark's Chapel Church, departing this life February 19, 1929. Mrs. Patton leaves a husband, two children and six grandchildren.

At the above stated church in 1907 she cast her anchor and was until death a believer in the eternal verities of a redeeming Saviour. She was a good woman, a faithful wife, and a loved neighbor.

The home, community and church will miss her. And may the blessings of our Heavenly Father attend those left behind. In the absence of the pastor, Bro. Sprinkle, Baptist pastor, conducted the funeral.

Lo! this one preached with a fervent tongue;

The world went forth to hear;

Upon his burning words they hung,

Intent, with ravished ear.

Like other lives the life he led,

Men spake no word of blame;

And yet, unblest, unprofitd,

The world went on the same.

Another came, and lived and wrought,

His heart all drawn above;

By deeds, and not by words, he taught

Self-sacrificing love.

No eager crowds his preaching drew;

Yet one by one they came;

The secret of his power they knew,

And caught the sacred flame.

And all around, as morning light

Steals on with silent wing,

The world became more pure and bright

And life a holier thing.

Ah! Pastor, is thy heart full sore

At all this sin and strife?

Fed with the word, but ah! far more

Fed with a holy life.

NUMBER 19

"It Is Finished"

The brief report heroic soul
Most gladly makes when ends the whole
Long reign of agonizing strife,
Absorbing all, including life.

It marks the end of stress and strain
And all the ills they bear in train;
It joyfully notes the end's been gained—
The world may sing its glad refrain.

And many times the cry's been heard,
In thought if not identical word;
The world has had its heroes great,
In every land, in every state.

The world rewards with honors high,
With spires of stone that pierce the sky,
The brave men who deliverance bring,
And make sweet songs of freedom ring.

A task so great, so worthy too,
Requires great soul to push it through.
He that falters is he that fails,
It wants a man that never quails.

Among heroes of ages past,
Not very first, not very last,
There comes to view a Mighty One
Who all the rest has far outdone.

When He declared, "The task is done!"
'Twas greatest task beneath the sun:
For He alone of all mankind
Could bear the load upon His mind.

He saved a race, redeemed a world,
And death itself to death He hurled.
"What would a fitting monument be?
Just eat and drink in memory of Me!"

Out of Employment

This is said to be the predicament of many people at this time, though some improvement in the situation is reported. The causes of this condition are perhaps largely economic, but are also largely moral. Economic questions are generally moral questions at bottom and the moral responsibility cannot be evaded by reference to economic laws.

Over-production will lead to a glut in the market and to consequent suspension, but generally it is greed that leads to over-production. Men who manufacture are under obligation to look ahead and provide for the real needs of the world and check up their enlargements beyond the demands of real need. If they lose sight of everything but the profits they hope to gain, they are headed toward the precipice.

When a business must be reduced in output or wholly suspended, employers should do their best to find employment for those they must dismiss. The right to work for means of living cannot be questioned. Captains of industry cannot lightly throw off their responsibility belonging to their station. Men are equal in fundamental rights but are far from equal in advantageous relation to the means of subsistence. In the long run capital and labor are mutually dependent. Neither should deny the other in the hour of need.

What Is a Church Member?

What is a member of the human body? Is the hand a member? Yes. The eye? Yes. The heart? Certainly. A glove worn on the hand? No, a glove is not a member. An artificial limb? Yes and no. Apparently yes; really no. A real member of the body must be a living part of the body.

A church member is a part of the living body of Christ. The living body of Christ is the church and Christ is its head. A church member that receives not the life of Christ is only apparently a church member, he is only a dead artificial limb. He that hath not the life and spirit of Christ is none of His. One cannot become a church member by joining a group of church members. We must form vital union with Christ in order to be a member of His body, the church. We may be a Mason or an Odd Fellow without vital relationship to Christ, but we cannot be members of the Christian church if Christ be not in us and we in Him.

Shaking Hands With a Ten-Foot Pole

Can you imagine how it can be done? Awkward, isn't it? The way to shake hands is to shake hands without the pole.

The attempt to shake hands with a long pole illustrates the awkwardness of many of our indirect methods. We try to shake hands by machinery. We employ media that really prevent our doing what we might and ought to do by direct action. We go to prayer meeting and talk about prayer instead of praying. We send cards to those we ought to go to see. We send a man to do what we ought to go and do. We put off till next week what we ought to do today. We make large investments in the world, hoping to pay small dividends to the church. We spend much labor for that which will satisfy not. We go round the world to find what we could find at home. "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might," and do not depend too much on mechanism.

Wherefore take heed of being painted fire, wherein is no warmth; and painted flowers, which retain no smell; and of fruit: "Whoso boasteth himself of a false gift is like clouds and wind without rain."—John Bunyan.

A REFLECTION AND A QUESTION

On my return from our group meeting at Hollister March 8th, in the interest of the New Century Service, a reflection caused to stand out prominent in my thoughts two facts—the uplift of the meeting and the far too meager attendance. Of the ten pastors supposed to be there six were present in the forenoon, that is 60 per cent; seven were present in the afternoon, that is 70 per cent, or an average of 65 per cent for the day, below the passing mark in school.

Of the 4,184 members reported at last conference, thirty-eight were present in the forenoon, that is a little less than one per cent. In the afternoon forty-four were present, that is a little more than one per cent. In addition to this count, visitors were present, making a fairly good sized congregation, saving us from that empty lonesomeness which is unavoidable when only a "handful" is present.

The speakers, Haddaway and Stephenson, and the audience were earnest and interested, continuing without restlessness through a forenoon session of an hour and a half and an afternoon session of two hours.

Question: Why the too low attendance? Was it too far away? No, the one pastor farthest away of all was present, traveling considerably more than twice as far as any other would need to. Then, too, other border pastors, some of them, were present. Besides, the local pastor to get the speakers there traveled farther that morning than any others would need to, except the one remote pastor who was present.

Was it because there is no need of such a meeting and such discussion? Not that, it was stated by one of the speakers that the receipts on General Conference budget—now included in the New Century Service that we were there to learn about—is approximately $100,000 short, for the church year drawing to a close, of the average amount received each year during the last quadrennium, and the boards are forced to borrow or curtail their work and I believe are doing both. Two or three days before this meeting I received through the mail an urgent appeal for a contribution to the student loan fund, lest a worthy young woman now in college preparing for missionary work be compelled to gather up her books and go home. On my return home from the meeting I found in my mail an almost frantic appeal for a contribution to save one of our most important educational institutions in another state from financial disaster in necessary running expenses.

There is another phase of momentous importance that would raise a tremendous question, but—. That is, how to get the inspiration and urge of the Hollister meeting into the thirty-eight churches and the more than four thousand members back home. To the representatives who were there, this is a real question, and they no doubt will meet it with the same earnestness that characterized the meeting. But with reference to the fields and churches that had no representatives there, it is no question as to how the inspiration and urge of the meeting will be gotten back to them. It simply won't be done. Nobody is trying to do it. Nobody is prepared to do it.

The count taken did not reveal what fields or churches were or were not represented, but by last conference report there are thirty-eight churches in the area, and forty-four members present. A considerable percentage were local; one church not local had eight of the number present. Hence it follows that no small percentage of the churches and of the members will never even know such a meeting was held.

Some few may read about it in the paper but receive no moving urge.

A dark picture? Let us all unite and exert ourselves to brighten things up, you in your corner, I in mine.

T. M. JOHNSON.

PASTORS AND PASTORATES

(From President's Report to Annual Conference)

It may seem trite, but it is nevertheless true: "The pastor is the key-man." For every charge, this holds good. A pastor of whom this is not true is not worthy of an appointment from this conference. It is not difficult to see how this fact exalts the office of pastor, and at the same time entails upon the man who enjoys this high privilege a tremendous responsibility. It may be truly said that every charge reflects the spirit and purpose of the pastor. In the spiritual life of the church this is true; in the finances of the church it holds good; it is likewise true in the matter of church administration. "Like priest, like people," is a fact that we can not deny. Pastors must, therefore, always set high standards for their people. They may sometimes have difficulty in realizing all of their goals, but if the standards are not lowered the people will ultimately come up to them. No pastor will ever suffer because he follows high ideals in his ministry. In the end he will be appreciated and his services demanded.

One of old said to those whom he had served for three years: "Ye know that from the first day that I came into Asia, after which manner I have been with you at all seasons, serving the Lord with all humility of mind, and with many tears and temptations—and how I kept back nothing that was profitable unto you, but have shewed you publicly, and from house to house, testifying both to the Jews and to the Greeks, repentance toward God and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ.

"Wherefore I call upon you this day to bear witness that I am pure from the blood of all men, for I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God."

This, brethren, must be our testimony and our challenge upon the close of every conference year. And let us make this suggestion: The charge that gets the best service from the pastor is the charge that recognizes his leadership. He is not to "lord it over God's heritage," but he is the shepherd of the flock, and to recognize that relationship is the surest way of getting the most and best service that a pastor can give. I must be remembered, however, that leadership is not a thing that can be commanded by the mere virtue of an office; it must be won by the merit of commending service. We commend our pastors for their spiritual and denominational integrity, and for the earnestness with which they have devoted themselves to the tasks assigned them by this conference. We rejoice with them, also, in whatever measure of success has crowned their labors.

We must remind them, too, of the ever increasing demand for efficiency in service. Whether we agree with this demand or not, it is upon us, and we must adjust ourselves to it. Eternal vigilance on the part of pastors is the price of this efficiency. We must "study to show ourselves approved," as teachers of the word, as representatives of the denomination, and as administrators of the affairs of the church. The pastor must be informed upon every phase of the work committed to his care, and in many particulars he must be a specialist. And above all, the touch of God must be upon him. No man is fit to be a pastor who does not "bear about in his body the marks of the Lord Jesus." Many imperfections and failures will be overlooked and excused, but not this one. We may not be great; we can be good, and neither God nor man will excuse this lack in a pastor.

" 'Tis not a charge of small import
The pastor's care demands;
But what might fill an angel's heart,
And filled a Saviour's hand."

Some of our pastorates are entirely too large, both for the strength of the pastor and for any hope of developing the work. Every church should have preaching services at least on two Sundays each month, but with so many churches as some pastors are serving, this is impossible. One serious difficulty in breaking up these large charges is pastoral support. There is no merit in breaking up charges and forming new ones unless the new charges can be made sufficiently strong to maintain a pastor. The chief hope seems to be in consolidation. With good roads and means of rapid travel, this is feasible now as it was not years ago. When we catch up with this idea of church consolidation, the problems on some of our large fields can easily be solved.

It is to be regretted that some of our pastors find it necessary to devote more or less of their time to work outside the pastorate. This, we think, should be avoided just as far as possible. We know, of course, that pastors must live, and if the churches they serve do not provide an adequate and timely support, they must find it elsewhere. However, we believe that this should be the last resort, and when it becomes necessary it should be done by the sanction of the charge and of the president of the conference. It is encouraging to note that the tendency in the conference is toward more services for each church, and a better support for each pastor.

LIGHTS—FAILING OR SHINING?

There is no light to be had from any human beings in the world except Christians. For only Christians have Christ; and Christ alone is the light of the world. Therefore he could make the amazing statement to those who belong to him: "Ye are the light of the world." And because of this, "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." What, then, if those who alone have God's own light fail to let it shine? A writer quoted in the Keswick Calendar asks: "Who can tell the danger to souls when the light of the Christian becomes faint or uncertain? Young beginners are discouraged. The world rejoices, and Satan triumphs." We are living in dark days, and in a dark place, for "the whole world lieth in the evil one" (1 John 5:19), and he is the prince of darkness. If ever the world about us, and the church also, needed light, it is today. Do others look hopefully, trustingly to us for light, only to be disappointed by the darkness of our lives? The same writer continues: "It need not be so. Our light may burn clearly and steadily. Its brightness depends entirely upon the supply of the pure oil, the unction of the Holy Ghost. This supply is unlimited. Abundance is always at hand." And the Christian has no option as to whether he should or should not be so filled from this unlimited supply that his light shall shine. "Be filled with the Spirit," is God's command to His children. The way is simple: yield wholly to him, and trust him wholly. Then the Holy Spirit, filling the whole life, will show forth

Christ in us and through us in such heavenly radiance that others will be blessed by God himself. As the keeper of a lighthouse dares not let the light go out for a single moment during the entire night, so we should not dare to let our light fail for a single moment until we come into the eternal presence of him who is the light.—Selected.

TRUST IN GOD

Since thy Father's arm sustains thee,
Peaceful be;
When a chastening hand restrains thee
It is he.

Know his love is full completeness,
Fills the measure of thy weakness,
If he wound thy spirit sore,
Trust him more.

Like an infant if thou thinkest
Thou canst stand;
Childlike, proudly pushing back,
The offered hand.

Courage soon is changed to fear,
Strength doth feebleness appear,
In his love if thou abide,
He will guide.

Fearest sometimes that thy Father
Hath forgot,
When the clouds around thee gather?
Doubt him not.

Always hath the daylight broken,
Always has he comfort spoken,
Better hath he been for years
Than thy fears.

Therefore whatsoever betideth
Night or day,
Know his love for thee provideth
Good alway.

CHARITY AND JUSTICE

Ruskin contrasts charity and justice in "The Crown of Wild Olives" and then shows how they are related. "Charity you will say is greater than justice. Yes, it is greater; it is the summit of justice—it is the temple of which justice is the foundation. But you can't have the top without the bottom; you cannot build upon charity. Do justice to your brother and you will come to love him. But do injustice to him because you don't love him and you will come to hate him. Love is the last reward of good work." Splendid! for love becomes incoherent gush outside of its natural context. Faith and works are no more essential to each other than love and justice.—Selected.

PATIENCE AT WORK

DENOMINATIONAL ENTERPRISES

TO ALL THE MEMBERS IN ALL OUR CHURCHES

By REV. J. C. BROOMFIELD, D.D.

Special plans for the furtherance of our denominational program are being submitted to all our pastors and to all our New Century Service Commissions by our Secretary of Promotional Work, Rev. J. H. Straughn, D.D.

These plans relate to an ingathering of members and gifts on Easter Day, and also to two special programs for April. The first heads up on April 30. On that date the financial year of the missionary societies and of the general boards comes to a close. In view of that fact Dr. Straughn is urging all our churches to pay their General Conference assessments in full to that date. This will not mean a great deal to any one church, but it will be of vital importance to our whole denominational program.

The second calls for tithing our income for April. It would be beautiful and wonderful to have our entire denomination for thirty days swing into line with God's minimum financial demand upon us. I verily believe that one-tenth of the net income of all our people for one month would provide us with our entire General Conference goal of $500,000.

Beloved, as your chosen leader, I call you to the blessed experience of bringing one-tenth of your income for April into the house of the Lord. Out of your "tenth," pay your regular weekly or monthly subscription, and give the balance as a special gift for the General Conference benevolences. Your special gift will count on your local church budget.

Pastors, lead the way.

New Century Service Commissions, get busy with definite plans.

Members of the churches, fall in line, bring your tithes to the house of God and help us close our first year in our new century amid a blaze of spiritual glory.

EVANGELISM IN THE CHURCH SCHOOL

Evangelism is our prime duty both in the pulpit and the parish, but most of all through the church school policy of educational evangelism, we should be able to teach and win every one who comes to us for Christian fellowship and instruction in God's Holy Word—men and women, and boys and girls.

"By educational evangelism we mean the bringing to bear upon the life of every pupil the early nurture and training of consecrated Christian parents, then the more systematic religious education in the home, also the continuation of religious education in the church school and the church, and the enviroing of the life with Christ-controlled experiences, so that as the child comes to the place of sufficient knowledge, of his own volition, having had his will trained, he may definitely, personally, intelligently choose Jesus Christ as his Saviour and Lord.

"It is then for the church school to help this saved one to grow in grace and the knowledge of Jesus Christ, and be trained for co-operative service with and for Christ to help Him to get His gracious will done in the world. Is it not the shame of our Kingdom service to win children, youth and adults to Christ and the church and then let them drift away from active participation in Christian work? Saved, but lost to the church and Kingdom enterprises."

Let us be much in prayer, that we may be used of the Holy Spirit to win many souls to follow Jesus in this year 1929.—Calendar Central Church, Atlanta.

WITH JESUS

"O Master, let me walk with Thee
In lowly paths of service free;
Tell me Thy secret; help me bear
The strain of toil, the fret of care.

"Help me the slow of heart to move
By some clear, winning word of love;
Teach me the wayward feet to stay,
And guide them in the homeward way.

"Teach me Thy patience; still with Thee
In closer, dearer company,
In work that keeps faith sweet and strong,
In trust that triumphs over wrong,

"In hope that sends a shining ray
Far down the future's broadening way,
In peace that only Thou canst give,
With Thee, O Master, let me live."

INCONSPICUOUS HELPERS

Great achievements are seldom due to the genius of a single man. Electricity is named for the Greek word for amber, the substance in which it was first discovered, and back of the many wonderful appliances for its utilization lie the thoughts and accumulated contributions of many inventors. The steam engine was a growth of centuries and not a sudden creation. All the credit for bringing it into existence should not be given to him who finally put the finishing touches on it and set it to going successfully. A large number of other persons contributed to its making. These remarks are equally true as to the perfecting of the airship.

In like manner, in religious work there are not a few unobserved silent helpers who are entitled to a large share of the credit for what is accomplished. As an illustration of this, we quote the following: "The legend is related of a monk who went into the pulpit and preached so that the people were wonderfully moved. And then he went home and God told him:

"Thy word had been naught
But for the prayer
Of the poor beggar
Who sat on the stair."

The humble and quiet disciple who keeps in touch with the Master and who prays and works unostentatiously, as best he can, may contribute largely to the spiritual prosperity of the church of which he is a member. And our discerning Lord will not overlook a single such follower either in this life or that which is to come.—Selected.

EVANGELISM

*Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit;
so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.*

The Straughn Meetings

We have been able to attend two—Mt. Hermon on Friday and Flat Rock on Monday. These were very good, indeed, both from the standpoint of attendance and the response to the efforts of the speakers. Dr. Straughn and Rev. F. L. Gibbs were at Mt. Hermon and Drs. Haddaway and Stephenson were at Flat Rock. At each place the number of ministers present was fourteen. At Mt. Hermon eight charges were represented, and ten at Flat Rock. The total attendance at Flat Rock was fifty-nine, with probably a few more at Mt. Hermon. The attendance was good, and the response all that could be asked. These two brethren report also splendid services in their three appointments each on Sunday.

We have no reports up to this time (Tuesday) on other Sunday and Monday programs. These men have helped us by their coming, both by their good fellowship and their splendid messages. They have our grateful thanks, and the assurance of our full co-operation in every general conference purpose and program. We wish also to acknowledge here our full appreciation of the generous dinners that were served at these churches that we have heard from, and for the very encouraging co-operation of pastors and people in these appointments. We hope to have reports from other points by next week. In the meantime we urge pastors and churches to go forward as rapidly as possible in putting into operation the full program of "New Century Service."

West Thomasville

March 10, Sunday.—The morning and afternoon on this date were given to this charge. At 11 a. m. we were at Spring Hill church, and 3 p. m. at Canaan. We arrived at each place in time for Sunday school, and found a goodly number present in each school. The Spring Hill church building is new throughout. The building is 45x72, with a large porch entrance. The floor is elevated, and there is a spacious choir gallery built back of the pulpit. A large basement provides a place for a furnace, and six rooms for Sunday school classes. The windows are of colored glass, and are large and well spaced for light and ventilation. The building is brick veneered, and the construction and design are good. It is being used now, though not entirely completed. The work on it will go on to a final finish as means are provided, which we trust may be soon. This congregation is to be heartily commended for what they have done in erecting this building, and also in not becoming involved in much debt. In a few years this promises to be a suburban church. The city of High Point is rapidly growing in that direction. It is very necessary, therefore, that the church keep progress with the community.

At Canaan we also found improvements in progress. Four large rooms for Sunday school classes are being added to the church, and so constructed that they may be thrown open to accommodate overflow congregations. A large porch entrance is being added also. From what we saw of the Sunday school, the congregation and the community, we are sure that these improvements reflect sound judgment. The church is located in the midst of a thickly settled community, and the people are thrifty and prosperous. When the building is completed it will reflect added credit to the community, and the efficiency in the work of the church will be greatly enhanced. Again we give our hearty commendation for this evidence of life and for this spirit of progress. The people at each place were attentive and responsive, and we enjoyed preaching and worshiping with them. Pastor Whitehead has entered upon this his first work with becoming zeal and tact; the people have received him gladly and he has won his way to their esteem and confidence. West Thomasville is a good charge, and we believe that the showing this year will confirm that estimate of them.

Community Church

At the close of a beautiful Sabbath we worshiped with the congregation of the Community church. The attendance was encouraging, and the attentiveness of the people helpful to us in our efforts to preach. This church is spacious and beautiful, and provides ample facilities for all the activities of the congregation. Pastor Maier is ably seconded in the work by his efficient wife, and under their leadership the church is organized thoroughly along all lines, with the spiritual life of the church paramount in all programs. This church had anticipated, by considerable time, the merging of the women's work, so that unification was in operation there long before it became the order of the General Conference. They have proved it, and no argument could destroy their faith in its merit. Community is an Honor Roll church, and of course it will live up to its good record this year. Pastor Maier and his wife are popular with their people, and have won their way into the confidence of the community. We expect for them a year of increasing success.

The people of these churches were given an opportunity to make an offering to our seminary, with the following results: Spring Hill, $3.40; Canaan, $1.95; Community Church, $5.10. Our grateful thanks to every giver! The amount is already in the hands of Dr. Elderdice.

We enjoyed the day with these fields, and greatly appreciate the courtesy and kindness shown us by pastors and people.

April

This is "Stewardship" and "Pay-Up" month, so ordered by the annual conference, and likewise planned by Dr. Straughn in his promotion of New Century Service.

What should be paid? These things: Pastors' salaries; all annual and general conference budgets; college maintenance; Gratitude Gift deficit. All of these obligations should be met in full to date. If we can realize the full measure of this good end, it will be a great achievement for us. We appeal to pastors and churches to do their very best in this matter. If it is not found possible to realize the entire goal, then let there be something in this list across which we may write: "Paid in full to date." We are looking to every charge for a faithful and persistent effort to carry out this order of the conference. The tithing method of Dr. Straughn's program should be urged, and pastors should put much emphasis on stewardship during the month. And above all, let us be much in prayer, for "Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it."

Consolidation

The recent reports of pastors indicate a number of churches on various charges that apparently should be consolidated. This is a matter upon which there is likely to be divergent views. But it is a matter, nevertheless, that should have our serious and careful attention. Since many of these churches were built conditions surrounding them have greatly changed, and the changes have not been favorable to their continued growth. Consolidation would bring together two or more such churches, and provide one strong and promising church in their stead. Apparently this would be a forward step. It is exactly what the state has done in the matter of public schools, and it would seem to be a wise, and even necessary, thing for churches. Anyway, we should think about it, and pray about it, and hold ourselves in a sympathetic attitude toward anything that will strengthen the church and make it more efficient in service.

Third Sunday in May

By order of the annual conference this is "High Point College Day." The purpose of the day is to boost the college among our people, and to foster and enlarge interest in the institution. We are calling attention to it now so pastors may have it in mind, and begin in time to plan their programs for the day.

A Good Testimony

"The new plan of women's work is getting a splendid start, and is proving much more satisfactory than the old order." This is the way one of our pastors writes about the merger in his church. What he says reflects the attitude of North Carolina. The women, the pastors, and the churches are pleased with the change. A great many more women are being brought into the work than ever before and their field of service has been greatly widened.

WHAT WILL FILL THE CHURCHES?

Rev. Edward Beal, of Scotland, while waiting at a railway station fell into conversation with the station agent, who deplored the advent of the motor bus and said, "Yes, sir, you and I are serving organizations which are things of the past!" Mr. Beal did not think so. In the Scots Observer he explains why. This is one reason:

"The churches will one day be filled because men will one day find—if indeed they are not beginning to find already—that they can no longer exist without those values to which the church bears witness. The truth is that modern life shows signs of getting to be just a little too much for us. Man cannot survive for many generations together without drawing upon his own entire personality, and man happens to be a spiritual being. As the French proverb puts it, 'It is necessary to have a soul.' Since the Church of Christ is the only community having the slightest interest in the soul of man as distinct from his mind and body, it is incidentally necessary to have a church. In a general measure and for a certain time men may subsist without paying very extensive regard to the soul; but in an age of invention, discovery, hustle, speed, hazard, speculation and materialism like our own, such periods must inevitably be short-lived. Man's outreach after sanity and moral equilibrium will involve a reaction. If there is anything that is intuitive to the modern man, it is the instinct of self-preservation, and without the consolations, the inspiration, the renewal of life that come from devotion to God, annihilation stares us in the face."—Selected.

THE HIGHWAY OF HABIT

Truly we stand in the ranks of a great army that nightly lies down to rest without any certain knowledge of the march or battle that is to be tomorrow. We come up in a great wall of human energy and movement—but we pause; there is not one of all the millions who can say what the next day has for him or them—what the next hour holds in its mysterious grasp.

The brains, the wills, the tongues; what do they all accomplish as far as this thing goes? The wisest philosopher on earth cannot tell what faces will meet him on the street tomorrow, what sky will cover him, what physical or mental changes may pass over him; he is not much better than the baby in the nursery for all that. He does not know whether his soul will be in his body twelve hours from now; and all the science, all the philosophy of the ages, cannot help him to the knowledge.

Should not this make us very humble? What are we that we should demand to understand before we accept—to see before we assent! Truly each day's combination of events and sensations is a mystery that we cannot refuse because we have not seen it, because we could not predict it. We have to take so much from God: our coming into, our going out of life, our breath, our brain, our relations to Him as our Creator; why cannot we humbly take His mandates, His revelations (beyond which mystery stands beyond mystery) concerning spiritual things? I should think the spirit that demands a sign must be detestable to God. A thousand times He says, "Only believe." And what else can we do but believe? Many turn back and walk no more with Him for some "hard saying." If they had gone forward, they would have found it a saying perhaps which though still hard to the mind, was clear and transparent to the soul. "The heart hath its reasons which the reason cannot comprehend."—Selected.

THE TESTIMONY OF HYPOCRISY

Hypocrisy itself does great honor, or rather justice, to religion, and tacitly acknowledges it to be an ornament to human nature. The hypocrite would not be at so much pains to put on the appearance of virtue if he did not know it was the most proper and effectual means to gain the love and esteem of mankind.—Joseph Addison.

OUR STORY PAGE

BETTY'S PARTNERSHIP

Little Betty, her face pressed hard against the window-pane, stood watching with wondering, wet eyes a motor-car now almost out of sight. It was carrying her mother—her precious mother—away, and leaving her to "be a good girl" with Aunt Myra. That would be easy for she loved Aunt Myra and Uncle Arthur and Cousin Marjorie—but mother had never left her before!

Uncle Arthur called, "A dime for you, Betty. Another for Marjorie and that spells ice cream."

Quickly Marjorie wriggled into her coat and stood poised for a dart to the store around the corner. But her little cousin twirled the dime in her fingers and hesitated.

"Hurry, Betty, we'll have a doubleheader."

"But where's God's pocketbook?" demanded the little girl. "I have to fix that first."

Marjorie stared. "I don't know what you mean. Come on," she urged.

"I can't," persisted Betty. "I always pay God first."

"What is God's pocketbook?" Uncle Arthur questioned.

"It's with my things. I know it is. Mother never leaves it out."

Aunt Myra led the child to her room, the other followed curiously. "Here it is—see," cried Betty eagerly as she pulled a purse from her suitcase. "I've got two dollars in this part. There's the rest," and she emptied a collection of rolling coins upon a chair.

"So you give all your money to God—is that it?" Uncle Arthur appeared interested.

"All? Of course not. We're partners. He gives me things and I give Him things."

"Where's your share?"

"I'll find it," and Betty searched again until she found another purse. "Here's mine. Isn't much in it, though, 'cause I spend mine."

"What good is it to keep God's in a pocketbook?" teased Aunt Myra.

Betty looked at her puzzled. "I don't. Wait, I'll show you." This time she drew forth a scrap-book containing many pages of pictures, clippings, and figures. The child chatted on rapidly, full of eagerness.

"See! There's my hospital and up in that corner, mother thinks, is the bed where my little baby got well. She was awful sick."

"Your baby? How come?" It was Cousin Marjorie who asked.

"I just call her mine, you know, 'cause—let me see how much," and small figures in the corner of the page were studied intently for a moment. "Six dollars and fifty cents—that's what I sent. The mishnary said she 'most knew 'twas 'nough to make the baby well. An' here's my school-house. Isn't it funny-looking? A dollar—that's what went there. 'Tisn't much, is it? Here's an orphanage—two dollars. An' see the letter I got from China. Look at the funny postage stamp."

The child went excitedly on with her story until Marjorie again urged ice cream. When the two finally ran out, Aunt Myra, who had listened thoughtfully, went slowly to her own room. God's pocketbook? She had none belonging to Him in her house. Of course she contributed to the church—or rather her husband's check went to the treasurer regularly.

Betty's missionary scrap-book! Years ago she had attended missionary meetings. Later she had dropped them from her list of engagements. There were so many things to do.

Little Betty sharing all she had with the world's needy ones—and rejoicing in it! Aunt Myra loved her small niece—and the child's mother, her own brother's wife. Sister Madge had always been "different," and it appeared that little Betty was receiving unique training.

Aunt Myra recalled with a sudden sense of shame her own excuse for not making a World Service pledge in the recent "every member canvass" of the church. Well, she would send them a check at once—then she could not forget the matter.

But there was no forgetting with Betty in the house. Every day furnished some new evidence of the child's partnership with the Father who was so real to her. Each piece of spending money was carefully shared with Him. Once she put her entire allowance into His purse with the gleeful remark, "I have to give my African boy a lot today, 'cause I 'most know he hasn't had much to eat—and think what I had for dinner!"

On Sunday she ran joyously to the fund to count out the collection plate amount. A special appeal at the church school in behalf of mountain children brought a plea for Aunt Myra to help her decide what could be spared.

Then one afternoon Marjorie, upon whom every luxury had been lavished, suddenly buried her head in her mother's lap and sobbed, "I don't have any money for God! I only had five cents for the poor old lady selling pencils and things this morning—and that was yours. She was 'most blind, too! Mama," and Marjorie turned a terrified gaze upon her mother, "s'pose you had to sell pencils!"

Mother, her face serious, comforted the child with the promise that hereafter she should have a pocketbook for God. After that, she took up the more difficult task of having it out with herself. Were Sister Madge and little Betty right? Could it be possible to enjoy more thoroughly what one gives than what one keeps? Had she herself forgotten the Father except as she conceived Him watchful of her own interests? How little she had concerned herself with the details of His business!

To welcome cries of distress as choice opportunities for service instead of cringing and shrinking away from them! A fund always ready to be drawn upon—it began to look alluring. Finally Aunt Myra bowed her head in decision as the voice of a little child whispered to her, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."—Susan Potter Hesse, in Zion's Herald.

JUNGLE FEVER

Dick Sanger's father, the explorer, gave us the quinine and told us to paddle down the river as fast as we could.

"Jack is dying of fever," he added, "and this is the only medicine that will cure him. Give him ten grains three times a day, and by the time the rest of the expedition reaches Palca, he ought to be well enough to go on with us to Iquitos and civilization."

We were in the heart of the Amazon Jungle, with tigers and big boa constrictors all around us. But the greatest danger of the jungle to a white man is the malarial fever that lurks in the swamps.

Because of it, our party had been forced to return to the base of supplies on the bank of the Amazon River. When we got there, after four days of wearisome marches, we found our little camp deserted, with nothing to tell us of what had happened excepting a note, pinned against a tree by an arrow.

"Am dying of fever. Send quinine at once. JACK."

Jack was one of our party who had stayed down the river twenty miles to see that supplies came through safely from Iquitos. That is why Dick and I were being sent ahead in the small canoe.

"Get started at once," directed Mr. Sanger. "Make as much speed as you can without taking too many risks. Remember it's a case of life or death for Jack."

So with the precious quinine packed away in a watertight bag, we shoved off from our camp and started down the river.

"I wonder why our Indians deserted?" queried Dick.

"Maybe they're afraid of the fever," I suggested.

"Perhaps," admitted Dick. "But how did Jack's note get pinned to the tree?"

That was a puzzling question. I thought about it as I paddled along, but couldn't answer it except by saying that the Indian who brought it got scared like the rest of them and went wherever they went. Anyway there we were, on the Amazon River in a small dugout canoe, with twenty miles of fast, dangerous water between us and the white man who needed quinine.

"The river is rising, I believe," Dick observed, as we sped along with the current. "I don't ever remember seeing it running as fast as it is now."

"Think you can handle the canoe all right?" I called back.

"I think so. Let me know when we are coming to any bad rapids."

I said I would, and I did; but none of the bad passes were too bad for us to shoot until we reached the Vuelta, which even the Indians say is a trap set by the evil spirit of the water for unlucky men.

I saw it boiling and bubbling some distance away.

"Big rapids ahead!" I warned.

"Think we can run them?"

I stopped paddling and looked ahead to where white foamy water tumbled down a drop in the river.

"We might if we're lucky."

"Then we'll try it."

A moment later we were caught in the current and carried with the running waters like a cork swept down before a flood. I paddled furiously, as you always must paddle when shooting fast water; while Dick steered from the stern of the canoe.

It was great fun, and if we hadn't been on so serious a mission we would have enjoyed it. And maybe we would have seen the snag and avoided it in time to save ourselves. But as it was, we ran into it head-on, and tore a hole in the bottom of our canoe big enough to fall through.

We sank instantly up to our waists. The water rushed against me and knocked me over, so I had all I could do to make the shore fifty yards down the river. But somehow Dick had been quick enough to save the quinine and a machete, which is a broad-bladed knife used in the jungle to chop away the underbrush.

"Now what'll we do?" I asked.

For a moment both of us were silent. Then Dick said: "We'll strike out through the jungle. If this is the part of the river I think it is, Palca is across this neck of jungle due west from where we are now. Are you willing to try it?"

With Jack dying of fever only four or five miles away, who wouldn't? So Dick faced the afternoon sun and entered the jungle, swinging the machete where it was needed. I followed him carrying the medicine.

The jungle, for a little while, was mostly very large trees with only a small growth of underbrush, but after two miles or so, the ground under our feet began to get swampy, and after that we were troubled by the density of the low growing trees and vines. We began to see less and less of the sun, and finally we lost it altogether. Night, like it always does in the tropical forest, fell like an angry man's hand on the table, and we were still in the thick of the jungle, many miles, for all we know to the contrary, from either the river or the little hut in which we expected to find Jack.

"Lost!" I gasped.

"Not lost," replied Dick, calmly, "but in a very serious situation. I think we had better keep on going in hopes of striking the river. We can't be very far away."

So we stumbled onward in the darkness, scarcely knowing in which direction we were going, but Dick's words were true for after twenty minutes of anxious traveling we broke through the last line of trees and saw the river.

About a mile down stream there was a light—a single light. But it looked as good to us at a thousand of them.

"Cheer up!" cried Dick. "There's Palca!"

We made our way along the bank of the river. We found the hut where Jack was lying sick. We gave him ten grains of quinine. We kept watch over him all night and next day we had the pleasure of seeing his fever go down, and him in a condition to talk with us.

"Where is the rest of the expedition?" he asked faintly.

"At the camp," we replied. "They'll be along just as soon as they can build rafts to float the equipment down the river."

"I'm glad," said Jack. "While you were away from the camp, the Indians rose in rebellion, and it is wise for all white men to get out of the country. All the Indians are at Massaca, war dancing and getting ready. We'll escape the conflict just in time."

At this news, Dick and I looked at each other. We didn't say anything, but I know we were both thinking that life in the Amazon Jungle was just one adventure after another.—Selected.

MAKING ADJUSTMENTS

We shall not adjust our Bible to the age; but before we have done with it, by God's grace, we shall adjust the age to the Bible. We shall not fall into the error of that absent-minded doctor who had to cook for himself an egg and therefore depositing his watch in the saucepan, he stood steadfastly looking at the egg. The change to be wrought is not in the divine chronometer, but in the poor egg of human thought. We make no mistake here; we shall not watch our congregation to take our cue from it, but we shall keep our eye on the infallible Word, and preach according to its instructions.—Spurgeon.

Clothing and Other Gifts

The wash cloths credited to Mrs. R. M. Cox in our last report distressed her a bit because they were contributed by the Mission Band of which Mrs. Cox in the superintendent. We gladly correct.

We thank Rev. and Mrs. J. S. Williams for a crate of oranges direct from Florida. We are so glad they could go to Florida, and it is just like them to remember us so generously.

Rev. and Mrs. R. S. Troxler came over one day last week to look over our children with a view to selecting one to be fed and clothed by the C. E. Society of Shiloh, North Davidson. We thank these young people for this manifestation of interest. Who will be the next? We have 83 to clothe and feed, and an individual, or a C. E. Society, or a S. S. class can so easily do this by sending $5.00 or $10 per month. Let us hear from you.

Rev. C. W. Bates sent us $3.00 from his C. E. Society to Calvary for magazine subscriptions. We will put a part of that into the American Magazine and save the balance until someone else sends us some to go with it to get another good magazine.

Spring Opening

It looks today like spring is opening and we are glad. We have two plows running today and will soon be planting some seeds to grow food for our tables.

We thank you for your responses to our needs here, and we are trusting that every Sunday school in the Conference will soon be contributing monthly to the Home. Your help is needed.

Please! When you take collections for the Home, please send it along. Right now we have a bit of insurance which must be paid soon or the policies will lapse. Thank you.

Faithfully yours,

A. G. DIXON.

Due to sickness of the writer, no report was made last week. Concord has forged quite a bit ahead in attendance of entire school, and with only three more Sundays remaining, Burlington will have to bestir herself to win, as Concord has no doubt now "hit the stride" to win. We shall see. T. T. STAFFORD.

—There were about 60 people at Flat Rock to hear our General Conference representatives, Dr. Haddaway and Dr. Stephenson, and we counted 30 autos on the ground. The addresses were instructive in the matters of missionary and educational work. From Flat Rock the speakers went to Charlotte.

—Calvary church was pleased to receive Miss Rogers, formerly of Burlington, into membership last Sunday. The C. E. society received her and Miss McGregor the week before.

—The March winds have been unusually strong. They took a few slate shingles from Calvary church and snatched the cover from a man's Ford.

—"All things come to those who wait," is said but may be doubted. After moving into the new parsonage Bro. Bates waited for a garage for his car and Mrs. Bates' car. The Men's Bible Class relieved the situation by building a garage to house both cars.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

TO THE AUXILIARIES

I will urge each member who has not done so to make an offering for the Student Loan Fund. We need the money to help train a North Carolina worker for the foreign field. The amount you pay will not only count on your auxiliary budget, but your church budget also. I hope you will give liberally and that other people in the church who are not members of the foreign missionary society will give to this fund also.

The Student Loan Fund is a perpetual fund. It is paid back into the treasury after the worker gets on the field and then can be used to train another worker, and so on as time rolls on and other workers are called.

MRS. C. L. WHITAKER,
Sec'y of Education.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

At the meeting of the N. C. Branch of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary societies, in Asheboro, April 9-11, a large attendance is very much desired. All the societies, both home and foreign, should send delegates, and the branch is asking that every church be represented at this meeting. Please send names of all who expect to attend to Miss Lollie Jones, Asheboro, N. C. Further notice will appear next week.

MRS. WM. C. HAMMER.

NOTICE TO TREASURERS OF W. F. M. S.

This is to remind you that the branch treasurer's books must close March 31st, and to ask you to please send your money very promptly so that I may close my accounts and have them audited before branch meeting.

Our budget of $6,240 is fearfully behind. Please come to our rescue as early and as generously as possible. Thank you.

MRS. S. W. TAYLOR, Treasurer.

HERALD SUBSCRIPTION RECEIPTS

Rev. J. D. Williams, $3.00; Rev. J. E. Carroll, $3.00; Rev. J. L. Trollinger, $4.50; Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk, $1.50; Rev. J. D. Cranford, $1.50; Rev. R. S. Troxler, $3.00; Rev. Edward Suits, $3.00; Rev. W. H. Neese, $1.00.

—Byrd has discovered land, if land it may be called, in the South Polar Regions which he has named Mary Byrd Land and which he claims for the United States by right of discovery.

—There was a great gathering of Alamance county people in Melbane to celebrate the arrival of a carload of seed.

—We were glad to have a call from Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk yesterday. He is pastor of our church in Kannapolis, which is moving forward under his leadership. He is one of our most consecrated and faithful pastors.

—We are requested to announce that there will be a community singing at Tabernacle the fourth Sunday at 1:30 p. m. Several choirs will take part.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

English Street.—Our pastor, Rev. G. L. Reynolds, always preaches excellent sermons, and those who hear him regularly are receiving spiritual instructions that cannot be destroyed, and those who do not hear him are missing more than they realize. We trust more people who do not go to church will take this opportunity and come to hear him.

The Sunday school is doing very well. The number has outgrown the Sunday school rooms, so plans are being made to curtain off some extra rooms for the present time. We hope for better accommodations soon.

Mrs. J. A. Bowers continues very sick and suffers much pain at her home on Pope street. Mrs. Warren Phillips is slightly improved. We miss them very much at church services.

The Ladies' Aid held their February meeting at the home of Mrs. Paul Hulin with 22 present and $34 collected in dues and for things these ladies have been selling. The ladies and a few men are keeping busy, but it seems there is always a call waiting to be answered by this organization of the church.

The Senior Christian Endeavor is coming along nicely under the leadership of their president, Miss Iris Caudle, and are looking forward to their regular monthly business and social meeting which is to be held next Friday night at the home of Miss Kathleen Embler on Adam street.

The workers' conference met last Thursday night at the home of W. T. Kennedy; several things were discussed.

Let us all pray more.

REPORTER.

West Forsyth.—Services at Union Hill were well attended last Sunday morning. The pastor was entertained for dinner in the splendid home of Bro. Norman and wife, whose home is on the banks of the Yadkin river.

West Forsyth charge had Rev. F. L. Gibbs, assistant secretary of the Department of Religious Education of the General Conference, in three meetings during last Sunday. He spoke to the Sunday school and also delivered his message to a good sized congregation at Baltimore church in the morning. A fairly good congregation gathered at Stony Knoll at 2:30 in the afternoon. Rev. H. F. Surratt, of First church, Winston-Salem, and members of his church, and Rev. C. H. Whitaker, former pastor, attended. At 7:30 a medium-size congregation attended the final meeting of the series at Pleasant Hill church.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Burlington, Fountain Place.—We had very good attendance at all services Sunday. We were glad to note some visitors, whose presence was appreciated and to whom we say come again. We are glad to add new names to our Sunday school roll occasionally, and we sometimes almost wonder why it is that more people do not unite with some Sunday school and thus do a service and derive a benefit such, we think, as they will hardly realize anywhere else.

At the morning church service Pastor Chambliss brought us an excellent message based on John 20:25. After commenting on the attitude of doubting Thomas, he showed the reasonableness of the world's demanding that the Christian furnish proof of the saving power of Jesus. Also, that the church should show the world what it is missing by rejecting Jesus, and what it will gain by accepting Him.

At the evening service we were favored by an excellent sermon by Rev. G. W. Perry, pastor of Front Street Methodist Episcopal church.

On next Sunday, the 17th, our special meeting will begin. Rev. R. C. Stubbins will be the pulpit help, and we extend a cordial invitation to our friends and neighbors to come and worship with us.

We were glad to note the presence of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Amick Sunday, after an absence on account of sickness. Also, Mrs. Egbert Greeson, whose critical illness we mentioned some time ago, is now well on the road to recovery.

With best wishes, and hoping that this may be a most successful year for all charges throughout the N. C. Conference.

Orange Charge.—Announcements: Easter services are being planned for each church on Easter Sunday, as follows:

Hebron, 11 a. m.

Chestnut Ridge, 2 p. m.

Union Grove, 3:30 p. m.

Effland, 7:30 p. m.

Regular Easter offering will be received at each church; also, doors of church will be opened for the reception of new members.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Pine Hill, Davidson Charge.—Brother Reed last Sunday at 3 o'clock brought us an interesting sermon. We all have learned to love Bro. Reed and his good wife. We must all stand by him and help lift him up.

Our prayer meeting and Sabbath school are moving on fine, but we don't have the attendance we should have. We pray for a great upbuilding of the Kingdom and look to God for the results.

F. L. SMITH, Reporter.

Albemarle.—Mrs. C. S. Moton and Mrs. J. E. Gantt very graciously entertained the members of the Ladies' Aid Society at the regular monthly meeting Tuesday, March 5. The meeting was held in the ladies' parlor of the church, as will be all future meetings of the society.

The room looked very cheerful and home-like, with its open fire and early spring flowers.

Mrs. C. S. Moton had charge of the devotional exercises, after which the regular routine of business was disposed of. Committee reports showed a very progressive spirit being carried on the different departments.

We were very glad to have two new members join us at this time, Mrs. Ralph Andrew and Mrs. Alton Lowder. This makes a total of 36 now on roll.

Mrs. Marshall Hatley donated a nice hand-made apron to the "traveling basket."

Seventeen dollars was brought in to this meeting that which was earned by some of the members for a "Dollar Social," which was to have been held some time ago, but unavoidable circumstances prevented having it, so the dollars were put into the treasury anyway.

Another money-making scheme was entered into for our next work, which is somewhat different from anything that has been tried before, that of a "Human Calendar." Mrs. D. J. Hatley represents the year 1929, and various members are the months and weeks.

During the social hour the hostesses, assisted by Mrs. J. A. Furr and Miss Margaret Gantt, served delightful refreshments in two courses. Throughout the refreshments the colors of green and white were carried out, suggestive of St. Patrick's Day, which made the service very attractive.

This was one of the most enjoyable and interesting meetings which have been held in quite a while.

MRS. JOHN WHITLOCK, Reporter.

Pilot Church, Pinnacle Charge.—We do not boost our church as we should. Let us tell the world of the good things our church has to offer and win people to it.

We were glad to see an increase in Sunday school last Sunday. The church seems to have taken a new interest in its work. We hope when spring comes in all its beauty and loveliness there will be more attending church than ever before.

We have been selecting Scriptures from the Bible and a new teacher every Sunday, and the young people have been ready and willing to teach. Let us press on to the high mark of the calling of God. Let us heed the call for our life's work while we are yet young. We are sorry to report one of our number, Mrs. Georgia Dezarn, has passed to the Great Beyond.

We are glad to say our new pastor has been preaching some real fine sermons. Bro. Hunter has been preaching for us since I was a little boy; now I am 37. We think we have one of the best.

J. A. ALLEN.

First Church, Albemarle.—As the good sunshine of yesterday came it makes us feel like telling you some of good things we are enjoying. We had good attendance in Sunday school and preaching services. We are now located in our new church with plenty of good Sunday school rooms, and one of the nicest auditoriums in town. We are showing a gain in our Sunday school of 50 per cent over one year ago. Our school is divided in two sections. Mrs. C. S. Moton has charge of the Junior department and, needless to say, she is making things go with her staff of good teachers and officers. But the biggest smiles you have seen occurred a few weeks ago when our men's Bible class was invited out to the dining room of the church for supper and was told that the supper was 50 quail on toast with plenty of good coffee. Every one went away feeling that it was good to have been there.

We have organized a workers' council which we feel is going to be a good aid in our work, as we can take up matters of importance and feel free to discuss same in these meetings.

Stanly county has a campaign on now to increase the church-goers, using as a slogan, "March to Church in March." Every church-goer has a button on with the words "March to Church in March," and on automobiles you will see the label, "March to Church in March." After this campaign it is the aim of most of the churches to start a revival. We are planning to begin ours on the fourth Sunday in this month.

Our Ladies' Aid is doing a wonderful work in helping to furnish our church with pianos and carpet and numerous other things. Their last meeting was held in the church; they have been meeting in the homes of members.

We are deeply sorry to note the illness of one of our faithful members, Mrs. D. H. Hatley, who is confined to her bed. Our prayers and sympathy are for her and hers and hope she will soon be up and able to take her place at home and church.

With love to everybody.

R. L. L.

Hope, Chatham Charge.—We had a good service Sunday. Bro. Lindley gets better each time. He always has interesting and helpful messages for us.

Our Sunday school is gradually increasing, but we are not satisfied with it yet. We should have at least 75 per cent of our enrollment present. We are glad to report that our school has decided to give our collections on each fourth Sunday to the Children's Home. Of course our offering will not be large, but we shall feel glad to have a part in carrying on this splendid work.

Best wishes to the Herald and readers.

KARA ANDREW, Reporter.

Randleman.—The second quarterly meeting for Randleman charge will be held at Level Cross Saturday, March 23, at 2:30. Please take notice and be present.

T. A. WILLIAMS.

Draper.—Our Sunday school is still growing nicely and our plans are still going forward for our new church. Rev. D. A. Morgan brought a great message today.

Sister Totten doesn't get any better, we are sorry to say.

Our Easter program is coming along fine.

LOUIS C. CRAIG, Reporter.

Kannapolis.—On Sunday evening, March 3, the Junior C. E. Society had a splendid consecration meeting. The topic was "Keep On; Don't Give Up." The Juniors named a number of things that they wanted to keep on doing, thereby helping them to grow stronger day by day. The young folks are manifesting a great deal of interest in the society. Six new members were added to the roll at this meeting.

On the evening of March 8th we met at the tabernacle for our first business meeting. The superintendent appointed a number of committees and explained the duties of each. A number of other things of interest to the society were explained, after which the social committee took charge. After some games and refreshments the children went home feeling that every one had a good time.

EVA ALLEN, Cor. Sec'y.

Concord.—Our S. S. reached a high peak in attendance Sunday. There were 390 present, and our enthusiastic superintendent, Mr. J. S. Polk, was happy, as was the entire school. It was no trouble to know which school was leading in the Concord-Burlington contest even before the report was given, for our superintendent was all smiles. Concord is now leading by 33.

Our pastor is giving us a series of sermons at the Sunday morning services on "Stewardship," and his sermon Sunday on "God, the Owner—Man, the Steward," was one of the best it has been our privilege to hear on this subject. The great need of our church today is more people giving systematically to the work of the Kingdom and we trust that more of our folks will be led into the right way of giving.

The attendance at the night service was very good and Mr. Hendry spoke on "The Revelation of Goodness."

A very interesting meeting of the Brotherhood was held last Friday night in the dining hall of the Sunday school building. Supper was served, and a debate given on "Resolved, That Moses' contribution to the world was more than Paul's." On the affirmative were Messrs. P. H. Scarboro and W. J. Widenhouse, and negative, Messrs. W. J. Bailey and B. F. Waddell. The judges decided in favor of the affirmative. It was a delight to all to have Dr. R. M. Andrews, of High Point College, present and speak.

All six circles of the Woman's Missionary Society will meet tonight (Monday) in their regular monthly meetings, and on next Monday night the monthly joint meeting will be held at the church.

The mid-week "Service for Others" will continue another month and will be in charge of the Brotherhood of the church.

Next Sunday, March 17, is pay-up day. All members who are behind with their pledges are asked to pay up.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Jernie L. Sides, on February 26, a son, William Max. Mrs. Sides before marriage was Miss Nola Helms, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Helms.

MRS. D. A. McLAURIN.

State Street Church.—Sunday morning a very helpful and interesting sermon by Bro. Bethea caused all to question their own hearts as to whether they were living the kind of Christian life they should. The subject was "The Roll Call of Backsliders."

We were very glad indeed to have Miss Mary Lou Boggs join our number Sunday morning. She was formerly a member of the First M. E. church of Statesville. Miss Boggs has charge of the Junior C. E. Society and is a faithful worker in many ways.

The workers' council met at the close of the preaching service, Bro. John Hayworth presiding. Among other things discussed were methods to enlarge the Sunday school and promote interest in the coming revival.

Next Sunday night Bro. Bethea will preach in the First Reformed church at the request of the pastor, Dr. J. C. Leonard, this being the opening sermon of a series of meetings to be held there.

REPORTER.

Bethesda, North Davidson.—Sunday was another good day for us. Bro. Troxler brought a very interesting message. There seemed to be an unusually fine spirit and atmosphere in the service.

Our Sunday school is getting along nicely. The attendance does not seem to be what it should be. Are we doing our part in Christian service as a negligent member? Can we not see that just as a chain is no stronger than its weakest link, so the church is entirely dependent upon us as individual members for its success or failure? Let's be awakened with the springtime and not only come to Sunday school and church, but also find someone who is not in church and bring that someone along.

The pastor will meet with the workers' council on Monday night, March 11, at 7:30 o'clock to discuss official business of the Sunday school and church.

We will observe Young People's Day next Sunday morning. We were supposed to have given this program before now, but on account of bad weather and other programs we have been unable to do so. We hope the young people will hear and heed the call for service in the church and take advantage of all opportunities to prepare themselves.

We hope to have a good representation at the District Meeting which will be held at Shiloh on Monday, 11, and also at the quarterly conference which will be held on Saturday, March 16, at the same church.

REPORTER.

Asheville.—This is a very busy week in our church. Monday evening the Young Girls' Circle will meet with Miss Nancy Clouse. We have an interesting bevy of girls and they enjoy their meeting together. Mrs. F. W. Paschall is leader.

Misses Louise and Arline Hanner have returned from Washington, D. C., where they went for the inauguration of President Hoover. We were glad to see them at service Sunday.

Mrs. F. R. McIntire, mother of Miss Novella, is ill. We pray for a speedy recovery.

Tuesday evening the Brotherhood will meet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Hanner for 6:30 dinner and they will have their meeting following. An interesting program is to be given.

Rev. and Mrs. J. S. Williams are in Florida for a visit. We have missed them at church for some months.

Friday evening at 7:30 there will be a "Hold Up" party at the church for "fun and funds." The program will be in the Sunday school rooms. Miss Verda McIntire and Mrs. Paschall have charge of the affair.

We hope Miss Flossie Stout will soon be with us again. We have missed her for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Walker and daughters, from Black Mountain, worshiped with us last evening.

Rev. F. W. Paschall gave us two wonderful sermons yesterday.

REPORTER.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—The attendance at Sunday school and preaching service was very large last Sunday. Pastor Spencer delivered a good sermon as usual. He used for his text: "Beware, lest thou forget God." In this fast age and in this age of prosperity in which we are now living we have to be very careful lest we forget God. He is the same God yesterday, today, and forever. We should not forget God.

We feel very fortunate indeed in having the New Century Service of the Eastern Districts to meet with us last Friday, March 8. Dr. Stephenson and Dr. Haddaway gave us some inspiring and helpful talks. There were seven preachers present and there should have been ten or eleven present. We do not know why they weren't present but we do know they missed a lot by not coming. Watch the Herald for a full report of this meeting by Miss Mamie Johnston, of Whitakers, N. C. She was appointed to give a full report to the Herald.

Mr. Charlie Ellington and Miss Jessie Wallett, of Hollister, were married at the parsonage by Rev. C. L. Spencer Sunday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Ellington are members of Harris Chapel Baptist church, but they attend services at Hollister real often. We wish for them happiness and success as they journey through life.

KATHLEEN SHEARIN, Reporter.

High Point.—A large and enthusiastic group of women, young ladies, and girls of our membership, with a few men, assembled at the church last Wednesday evening for a covered dish supper. Each one brought a contribution of food, and it was placed on a long table, and the supper was served in cafeteria style. After everybody had appeased their hunger Mrs. George R. Brown, of Reidsville, explained in a very clear manner the constitution of new Woman's Auxiliary as recommended by the last General Conference in Baltimore, and Mrs. H. W. Maier, of Thomasville, told us how well the merger has been working there for the past two years. She said that the attendance has greatly increased and the receipts for the budget have trebled. If there were any opposed to the plan after hearing Mrs. Maier's clear and convincing talk based on practical experience, they were converted at once. When a vote to unite the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies was taken it carried unanimously. Truly it was a very harmonious and enthusiastic meeting.

The Brotherhood held an enjoyable get-together meeting Thursday evening, and a delicious dinner was served them at 6:30 o'clock by the group of women, of which Mrs. W. A. Davis is chairman. There was some special music, and an interesting address by Rev. Lawrence Little.

On Sunday morning, which was designated as Men's Day in the pre-Easter services, the minister, Rev. R. I. Farmer, spoke to the congregation from the subject, "Who Is My Neighbor?" He said that nobody who ever came into the presence of Jesus was able to entangle or embarrass Him by questions. Immediately after He had been praying, the lawyer came and asked Him what he must do to inherit eternal life, and Christ's answer was: "Thou shalt love the Lord with all thy heart, strength, and mind, and thy neighbor as thyself." The lawyer then asked: "Who is my neighbor?" In answer Jesus gave the parable about the man who was traveling from Jerusalem to Jericho, and fell among thieves. This story of the Good Samaritan ranks next to that of the Prodigal Son. The world must dwell in love if it is God's world. In teaching this truth or parable Christ was giving the idea of the fellowship of the world. My neighbor is the one whom I meet in need. Neighborliness is not at all limited by geography; it exists not in states or nations, but in the heart of humanity. Who is my neighbor? Any man or woman to whom I may bring help or sympathy. Most of us, who manage to avoid the difficulties of life, are often impatient with those who are less fortunate and in a prejudiced and hard-hearted way insist that their misfortune comes by their own fault. God is not satisfied until the concentric circles of sympathy reach the limits of the world. The Jericho road passes by every door-step, and there are robbers in this day. No man or woman is free from his responsibility; the lost world will not be saved by formal preaching, but by Good Samaritans who lend their aid to all who need their help.

At the same hour in the assembly room downstairs, the children of the Junior church enjoyed a delightful object talk on "How God Measures Men," by Rev. E. Lester Ballard.

The Ladies' Aid Society held its regular monthly meeting at the church Monday afternoon with a splendid attendance. The president asked Mrs. S. S. Coe to make some remarks about the merger of the Aid Society with the Missionary Society, which had merged on Wednesday evening, after which a motion was made to unite all three societies into one Auxiliary. When the vote was taken, it stood 31 to 11 in favor of the merger.

A "New Century Service" Rally will be held at Lebanon church in Mechanicsville next Wednesday evening when Dr. G. W. Haddaway, secretary of missions, will be the speaker. The mid-week prayer meeting at First church will be omitted in order to give all members of the congregation an opportunity to hear this gifted and consecrated speaker.

We are glad to announce that Arnold J. Koonce has returned to High Point.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Fogo, parents of Mrs. R. I. Farmer, who have been spending the past three months with their daughter, left last Friday for their home in Ohio. They were charmed with this first visit to the South.

Rev. R. I. Farmer will go to Asheboro upon invitation to address the Rotary Club next Friday. Our pastor is in great demand as an after-dinner speaker in and out of the city.

Mr. and Mrs. George Penny have gone to Orlando, Fla.

Mount Lebanon, Randleman.—For a number of weeks our attendance at Sunday school has gone above the 100 mark, but last Sunday we fell far below that number. Our superintendent, Brother E. F. Jarett, was unable to be present on account of the illness of his wife, who is in the High Point Hospital, recovering from an operation.

Our pastor continues to give us excellent sermons. Someone remarked the other day that "every sermon gets better."

The first Sunday, however, while he was present at church, he was unable to preach for us. Brother A. R. Sink, a neighboring church layman, supplied for him. Brother Williams has been very ill for the past few weeks, suffering from throat trouble. He has not fully recovered but he attended the mid-week prayer meeting Wednesday evening, and is going in and out among the people, keeping up his visits to the sick. Mrs. Williams and T. A., Jr., have also been ill, and the younger daughter, Hazel, is still taking treatment in Burlington. We trust that they, and the other members of our church who are ill, may soon be restored to health.

On the first Sunday evening the young people gave the program as laid down by the Department of Religious Education.

A group of young men of Greensboro, and Brother Alec McCaskill and children, also of Greensboro, sang for us. These numbers were greatly appreciated and enjoyed.

We are always glad to have with us any time former church members and friends.

For several years, at Easter time, Mount Lebanon has held a sunrise prayer meeting. The attendance and interest of these services have so steadily increased from year to year that we now feel they have become a part of the life of our church. Plans are already going forward to make this Easter prayer service the best ever held here. We are also preparing an Easter program to be given in the evening.

REPORTER.

Graham.—We are glad to report the Jesse Minnis, the small son of our pastor, who has been ill for the past week, is improving.

Our pastor is still bringing helpful messages each Sunday. He is a zealous worker for the Kingdom of God.

On Sunday evening the service was highly interesting and enjoyable. The most prominent feature of this service was the address by Dr. Haddaway, secretary of the Board of Missions. We trust that a large measure of good may be accomplished by his visit. We wish to thank Rev. Mr. Loy, pastor of Mebane church, for bringing so many of his people over for this service, and hope they will come again.

In the absence of our pastor on the first Sunday evening, Rev. L. W. Gerringer very ably filled our pulpit.

The Ladies' Aid and Foreign Missionary Societies met at the home of Mrs. J. H. McPherson last Monday afternoon. Several members were present in spite of the down-pour of rain.

Yarboroughs Chapel, Cross Anchor.—The work has been moving along satisfactorily due to the interest aroused by our pastor, Rev. D. D. Broome. He has preached some excellent sermons and has made us realize and be thankful that the Sun of Righteousness shines forever, and that it is worth the struggle to get into His light where the air is pure, eternal, and His golden sunlight gleams sweet to the soul.

We are glad to observe quite an increase in our Sunday school. Our pastor is trying to get every one in this community in some Sunday school. The blessing of Providence is upon the Sunday school and all who labor in its ranks.

A few Sundays past the young people organized a Christian Endeavor Society with Miss Gladys Wilson as president; since then a number have joined and we are hoping many more of both the young and older people will join. The society has been divided into two groups, the "reds" and the "blues," for the purpose of bringing in new members or visitors. The losers are to give the winners a social. The society has taken the slogan, "Say It With Services," for our own, and are trying to practice it. We are trying to make this a brighter place in which to live. The social committee has planned a social for Friday night.

We are planning an Easter program for Easter Sunday. We enjoy working and our leaders, Miss Wilson and Mr. Broome, keep us quite busy.

Sunday, two weeks ago, we were glad to have Mr. Jay Davis, from the Presbyterian College at Clinton, to preach for us. He was invited by the pastor and we hope Mr. Davis will come again.

The pastor suggested that this community have a mid-week prayer service. Much interest has been shown by all the people from the different churches. Services are held every Thursday night at 7:30 at the different churches with a new leader each time. Rev. D. D. Broome and J. E. Hembell led last week at the Baptist church. The program was enjoyed. Dr. C. M. Workman will lead at the Methodist church next Thursday. Let us hope every one in this community will be present.

The pastor has made 95 visits since January in this community; this is a good record and every one, I'm sure, wishes him to visit them and then to come back again.

Accept our thanks for allowing us to be with the Herald. We will be back again in the near future with our special reporter, Lloyd Wilson, writing for us. Best wishes to the Herald and all who read it and may all the good I wish be realized by each and all of you.

LOUISE JACKSON.

Concord.—Since our last report we have had a number of visiting speakers with us. On the fourth Sunday in February Mr. Minnis, pastor of Graham church, who is a returned missionary, gave us an interesting lecture on missions and conditions in the foreign field. This was very much enjoyed by all and we hope that we may be permitted to hear him again soon.

Mr. Frank Stephenson was also with us last Sunday afternoon and talked to us on the "New Century Service."

Rev. S. W. Taylor, president of the Conference, will be at our church next Sunday evening at 7:30. We are always glad to have Mr. Taylor with us, for he always brings a good message.

Death visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Ray last Sunday afternoon and took their oldest daughter, Alene. Miss Ray was born on May 27, 1908, and died March 10, 1929. She assured her people before passing that she was ready and anxious to go. She is survived by her father and mother, six brothers and three sisters, all of Graham. The funeral was conducted at Concord on Monday at 3 p. m., by Rev. Virgil Pike, of Graham, assisted by Rev. O. C. Loy. We extend to the family our sympathy.

REPORTER.

Stallings, Mecklenburg Charge.—We are glad to say our pastor, Rev. Mr. Hall, was able to fill his appointment Sunday at 11 o'clock. He was not able to fill his appointment on the third Sunday night. His health has failed. He is taking treatment under doctors, was worse Friday night, March 8th, but is some better today. Hope he may soon return to his regular work. His daughter, Etta, has returned from the hospital where she has been taking treatment. She is recovering fast. May the Herald readers and all Christians think of Mr. Hall and his family in their prayers.

Sunday school is progressing.

The Ladies' Auxiliary met with Mrs. Carl Stallings on February 7th. We had an interesting program.

On March 7th the ladies met with Mrs.

H. B. Furr. The meeting was presided over by the vice president, Mrs. P. L. Garmon. We were very sorry our president, Mrs. M. L. Stallings, was sick. We are glad she is recovering. We had an interesting program on the "Resurrection of Christ." Hope all members may be present at the next meeting, April 4th, at the home of Mrs. P. L. Garmon.

Miss R. A. Drye spent last week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. D. Drye.

Stallings community gave our pastor, Rev. Mr. Hall, a pounding recently. Many were present and many gifts were given.

An Easter program is being planned for Easter Sunday.

Happy wishes to the Herald.

REPORTER.

South Lexington Church.—The work at our church is progressing nicely. We have a good Sunday school and much interest is manifested. Bro. Isley filled his appointment at our church Sunday, using as his subject "Man's Appointment With God." He gave us a very good sermon.

The Christian Endeavor is doing a good work in our church. The young people are very interested. The Ladies' Missionary Society is doing a good work. The good ladies have made a quilt and made nearly one hundred dollars for the society. The society is also selling cosmetics for the society. We realize the value of these auxiliaries in our church.

Our special meeting will take place in April and let us pray that God will send us just the blessing that we need. Help us to prepare ourselves for the blessing. We know if we pray earnestly for our meeting we will have a great meeting. May we go out and reach those who are in sin and know not God and His forgiveness of sin. May the Lord be with us and help and strengthen up in His work.

REPORTER.

Enfield Charge.—The church here feels very deeply the sorrow which has been brought to one of her members, Mrs. Sallie Barnhill Riggsbie, in the loss of her life's companion. Although Mr. Riggsbie had been ill for some little time, his passing was a shock to every one and especially to those who knew him best. It was not the writer's fortune to know him personally; in this community he was spoken of as a man of very high character and one who was loyal to his Christ. The church here is remembering Mrs. Riggsbie in this trying time and prays that she may have grace to see that it is the Lord's doings.

Mr. and Mrs. Riggsbie were living in Durham, the home of Mr. Riggsbie's people, at the time of his death. The funeral services were conducted by his pastor and his body was laid to rest in the Maplewood cemetery in the city of Durham.

Recently the death angel called from our midst a great and good woman in Mrs. Pattie Parks. She was not a member of our church here, yet she resided in Enfield and was a regular attendant at our services. We miss her saintly presence among us. The memory of her ought to reprove us and make us better Christians. The funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. C. L. Spencer, assisted by the writer, and her body was laid to rest in the cemetery at the Eden church.

Last Sunday the Sunday school superintendent appointed Mrs. Sam Pierson and Mrs. Cecil Matthews as a committee to get up the

The prayer meeting hour for the Whitaker Chapel church has been changed from Friday to Tuesday night. Just as soon as the weather opens up it is expected that the services will be held in the church again. Here also Easter services are being planned.

The people here are still showing their appreciation of our efforts by the things they leave for the parsonage table.

Shiloh.—On Sunday, March 3, the Christian Endeavor Society of Shiloh M. P. Church had charge of the evening service. "Youth in Service" was the general topic for the evening. We gave the regular Youth Day program. All the young people took a great interest in this program, as it especially appealed to us. The topics given to us for discussion were given in a very interesting way at this service. Mrs. Ray Leatherman, our president, discussed "Youth in Christian Service." Others taking part were the pastor, Rev. R. S. Troxler, Supt. H. A. Leonard, Mr. Ira Koontz, Mrs. Floyd Leatherman, Mrs. P. L. Koontz, Misses Emma Berrier, Vesta Troxler, Ruth and Reva Sink, Lessie Lanning, and Mr. Lyman Troxler. All the other members took a very active part in the singing. The Junior Christian Endeavor Society, under the leadership of Mrs. Cleano Koontz, gave us a special song.

There was a large number present at this meeting. The church was practically filled. We had a very good collection which is always welcomed by our society.

We ask the prayers of all Christian people that our society may grow in grace and knowledge with our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. MRS. P. L. KOONTZ, Reporter.

ACTIVITIES OF DR. BROOMFIELD

The president of the General Conference, Dr. J. C. Broomfield, spent part of last week on Long Island. On Wednesday evening he delivered the missionary address at the annual thank-offering service, in the church at Baldwin, L. I., and on Thursday afternoon he addressed the quarterly meeting of the Metropolitan District of the Eastern Conference, held in the Lynbrook church. By unanimous vote the district pledged its faithful support of the plans of Dr. Straughn concerning Easter and April 30, and April Tithing Month.

In the evening Dr. Broomfield preached the sermon in the Young People's Rally.

While on Long Island he called on Rev. J. C. Berrien, D. D., who for a number of years has been living in Loudon Hall Sanatorium, Amityville, L. I.

For years we was secretary of the Board of Ministerial Education, and in 1890, while pastor of the Methodist Protestant church of Beaver Falls, Pa., he received Dr. Broomfield into the church.

Dr. Broomfield reports finding Dr. Berrien in fine spirits, and, in spite of his more than 80 years, vigorous in body, and in close touch with our denominational life and program.

—The following ministers were at the Flat Rock meeting last Monday: Pegg, Trolinger, Brown, J. D. Williams, Brittain, Tambllyn, Bates, Pritchard, Cranford, Ashburn; also President Taylor.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Samuel J. Hughes died February 11, 1929, at the age of 73 years. He professed faith in Christ a number of years ago and joined the Haw River Mission church, where he remained a member until death. He was not only loyal but a liberal supporter of his church.

A quiet, unassuming man has passed, a kind friend and neighbor, a man who will be missed, not only by his own immediate family, but by many friends as well. He leaves wife, one daughter, Mrs. John M. Baker, and one son, I. M. Hughes, and five grandchildren.

The funeral services were held in the M. P. church and were conducted in the absence of the pastor, Rev. M. P. Chambliss, by Rev. O. B. Williams and assisted by Rev. Geo. W. Holmes. Interment was made in the church cemetery. The large attendance and many beautiful flowers prove the esteem in which he was held.

A FRIEND.

Mrs. Ella Saunders Adams

After an illness extending over a long period, but not serious until about three months ago, Mrs. Ella Saunders Adams, wife of Mr. Andrew M. Adams, of 1100 English Street, High Point, N. C., passed into the Great Beyond on Sunday morning, February 10, 1929. The daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Saunders, she was born April 12, 1868, at Pinnacle, Surry county, N. C., near Pilot Mountain. In early girlhood she gave her heart to God, and united with the Methodist Protestant Church near her home. On March 30, 1907, she became the bride of Mr. Andrew M. Adams, and they came to High Point to make their home. Soon thereafter she transferred her membership to the First Church, of which she was a faithful and consistent member until the close of her life. She was the mother of two children, a little son who died in infancy, and Miss Mary Elizabeth Adams, now a student at High Point College.

Of quiet and unassuming disposition, Mrs. Adams loved deeply her home, her family, her friends, and her church. She was a member of the Ladies' Aid Society and the two missionary societies, and was a "cheerful giver" to every appeal made for these causes. An unusually faithful and regular attendant at all church services, she was always found, until prevented by illness, at her post. She was kind and sympathetic to all who were bowed down by sorrow or grief and those afflicted by illness. To her neighbors she ministered lovingly whenever occasion demanded, and their affection for her was deep and sincere.

Surviving relatives are two brothers, Messrs. R. R. and John Saunders, of Shoals, N. C., and one sister, Mrs. J. M. Flinchum, of Siloam, N. C. Mrs. J. W. Boyles, of Thomasville, is a niece, and in addition there are several nieces residing in Johnson City, Tenn.

She loved her church very dearly, and to the pastor, whoever he might be, was a true and loyal friend, and enjoyed entertaining him and his family. Funeral services were conducted on Tuesday afternoon, February

12, in First Church by her pastor, Rev. R. I. Farmer; associate pastor, Rev. E. L. Ballard, and two former pastors, Dr. Geo. R. Brown, of Reidsville, and Dr. A. G. Dixon, of High Point, who paid high and worthy tribute to her memory. The lovely offerings of flowers bore silent testimony to the esteem and affection in which she was held by relatives and neighbors. The life of a good and consecrated woman has closed, and "who has done what she could." Her cheerful smile will be missed in our congregation and church services, but most of all the loss of a true and devoted wife and mother will be sadly felt in the home. To her bereaved husband and daughter we offer our deepest sympathy, and commend them to the tender comfort of Him who has promised, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee."

"There is no flock, however watched and tended,

But one dead lamb is there!

There is no fireside, howsoever defended,

But has one vacant chair!

Let us be patient! These severe afflictions

Not from the ground arise;

But oftentimes celestial benedictions

Assume this dark disguise.

We see but dimly through the mists and vapors;

Amid these earthly damps

What seem to us but sad funeral tapers

May be heaven's distant lamps.

There is no Death! What seems so is transition;

This life of mortal breath

Is but a suburb of the life Elysian,

Whose portal we call Death.

In that great cloister's stillness and seclusion,
By guardian angels led,

Safe from temptation, safe from sin's pollution,

She lives whom we call dead.

Day after day we think what she is doing

In those bright realms of air;

Year after year, her tender steps pursuing,

Behold her grown more fair.

Thus do we walk with her, and keep unbroken
The bond which Nature gives,

Thinking that our remembrance, though unspoken,

May reach her where she lives."

High Point, Feb. 25, 1929.

Best

On the night of February 26, 1929, just at the turn of a new day, God called and the spirit of Mrs. James E. Best answered. The first link of the golden chain has been broken. The wife and mother who shed light and happiness all around her went home to God; the home where changes never come, nor pain, nor sorrow, toil, nor care.

Yes, 'tis a bright and blessed home; who would fain be resting there? At the time of her death she was 23 years of age. In early life she was united with Haw River M. P. church, where she remained a member until a few years after she was married. She then joined the M. E. Church, South, of which she was a member at her death. Before her marriage she was Miss Lunette Stout, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Stout, who are members of our church. To know her was to love her; always so kind and loving, ready and willing to serve; not only in her home will she be missed but in her church and community.

She leaves to mourn their loss a husband, four children, father, mother, two sisters and four brothers and a host of relatives and friends.

Interment was in the Haw River cemetery. The large attendance and many beautiful flowers prove the esteem in which she was held. The bereaved ones have our sympathy.

ESPA BULLARD.

Nicholson

Elizabeth Jane Nicholson, daughter of Hilton and Polly Roberts, born February 28, 1843, married John M. Nicholson November 26, 1874, died March 9, 1929.

Of her immediate family three children survive, as follows: Henry C. Nicholson, of Mehane; Albert Nicholson, and Mrs. L. C. Sykes, of the Hebron Community, and several grandchildren.

Sister Nicholson joined Mount Hermon M. P. church in early life, later transferring her membership to Hebron M. P. church, where she remained a faithful member until death.

Funeral services were conducted Sunday afternoon from Hebron church, after which the remains were placed to rest in the church cemetery.

The writer was assisted in these services by the following ministerial brethren: W. M. Loy and M. I. Crutchfield.

The large congregation present showed the esteem in which the memory of this good woman is held. May God comfort the bereaved ones.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Shaw

Mrs. Wilmer Broome Shaw, born in Union County, near Matthews, N. C., February 22, 1893, of Judge and Nettie Broom, died at the Presbyterian Hospital, Charlotte, N. C., February 25, 1929, after an illness of intense suffering for three weeks.

Her mother died when the deceased was just a girl and the stepmother, Mrs. Ida Haiger Broom, is responsible for her good training.

In her early teens Mrs. Shaw united with Pleasant Plains Baptist church, in Union County, where she lived, and there retained her membership until some time after her marriage to Thomas A. Shaw, of her home community, when, with her family, she moved to Ellerbe, Richmond County, North Carolina. There she united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Later she moved her membership to Norman Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in which community she was then living. Here she retained her membership until she moved to Charlotte and united with the First Methodist Protestant Church.

Her church membership was one of her most precious possessions. She never forgot it but always took it with her, wherever she lived, and entered wholeheartedly into the work of her church. In the three years she had been a member of the Methodist Protestant Church she had found her place in the fore-rank of the leaders of the church.

She was teacher of the Philathea class, president of the Woman's Auxiliary, a member of the board of stewards, and active in every department of the church work. She was faithful in her attendance and loyal to her pastor.

February 16, 1913, the deceased was married to Thomas A. Shaw of near Matthews, N. C. To this union were born three children: Mary, Neal, and Ralph, all of whom, with the husband, survive her.

The deceased is also survived by her father and step-mother, and the following sisters and brothers: Mrs. R. S. Garmon, H. G. Broome, Mrs. T. F. Helms, C. A. Broome, and T. T. Broome, all of Charlotte; Mrs. J. G. Long, Huntersville, N. C.; J. I. Broome, and Mrs. H. M. Waddington, Matthews, N. C., and one uncle, W. P. Broome, Matthews, N. C., of whom she was particularly fond.

Blanks

On the evening of March 4th in her home near Henderson, Mrs. Eva Blanks passed away, aged 46 years, three months and 19 days. She had been afflicted for five or six years, but bore it patiently until the end came. She was converted in her childhood days and joined Union Chapel M. P. church, in Vance County. Later in life, when Gillburg church was built, she moved her membership there, and remained a faithful member until death. Before she was so badly afflicted she was active in her church and had a reputation of being a good woman. There had been no burying place at Gillburg, but there is now, she being the first one to be placed there. She was held in high esteem by many who knew her.

The mound of earth which covered her form was completely covered with beautiful flowers.

She leaves behind her husband, four brothers, two sisters, two daughter, and two sons, and many friends.

The church and entire community deeply sympathize with them in this hour of sore trial. She is relieved of her suffering here and has entered the home of rest.

The funeral was held at Gillburg church, conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. H. F. Fogleman, of Granville Circuit.

LOOK TO THIS DAY

Look to this day!

For it is life, the very life of life.

In its brief course lie all the varieties and realities of your existence:

The bliss of growth;

The glory of action;

The splendor of beauty;

For yesterday is already a dream, and tomorrow is only a vision;

But today, well lived, makes every yesterday A dream of happiness, and every tomorrow a vision of hope.

Look well, therefore, to this day!

Such is the salutation of the dawn!

—From the Sanskrit.

—Clarence Conc, prominent business man of Greensboro and Gibsonville, died suddenly Wednesday. Dilation of the heart was the attributed cause.

AFTER AN ACCIDENT

My head was crushed between two cars,
My thoughts are in a jumbled mess.
I might have gone through scores of wars
With wounds and hurts by far the less.

My name's forgot and who I am;
I do not know from whence I came:
Sometimes I think I'm Uncle Sam,
But no two days am I the same.

I'm troubled much, for many things
Are not what once they seemed to be.
It's now the earth that talks and sings,
And men and birds move silently.

By night the sun is shining bright,
And we can see to sleep or rest.
By day it's dark as blackest night,
But we must work and do our best.

All things are out of whack, I know,
And will they ever better be?
Wherever in the world I go,
The strangest, queerest things I see.

Today I saw a barking cow
With head like dog and tail like hare,
And then I saw a monstrous sow
With wings of gauze fly through the air.

The limbs of trees are hissing snakes,
The clods of earth are gruesome frogs.
My life is full of pains and aches,
In constant fear of maddened dogs.

But all of this could I endure
And all of this seem very small,
If once for all I could be sure
About my dearest Mary Hall!

That day she'd changed her name to mine,
We rode along and felt secure;
Of coming danger saw no sign;
To us both life and joy were sure.

O Mary Hall! My Mary Hall!
What fate was thine that luckless day?
Didst thou pass on beyond recall?
Can no one tell? Will no one say?

REPORT OF MEETING AT HOLLISTER

On last Friday at Hollister we had the pleasure of hearing two of our general agents. True to appointment, Drs. Haddaway and Stephenson met with us, and brought to us much inspiration. I am sure we all understand the New Century Service program as we have not before. In the morning Dr. Stephenson outlined to us Dr. Straughn's program, beginning with visitation and personal evangelism. He covered so much ground that seemingly he left nothing for Dr. Haddaway to talk about, but when his turn came he found a lot of interesting things to say. Although new in this work, his whole being is wrapped up in it. He told us in a very striking manner of the great need of the mission work and made this statement: "If Christianity is not missionary it is nothing."

We did not have as large an attendance as we had hoped for. There were seven pastors present: Revs. O'Briant, Shelton, Hethcox, Smith, Auman, Johnson, and Spencer. There were 44 Methodist Protestants present. As good as the morning addresses were, the afternoon talks were better. Both speakers seemed to be inspired for the occasion, which in turn inspired the hearers. Before closing, an invitation was given for all who would go back to their home churches with a determination to carry out the New Century Service program to the best of their ability and almost the entire audience stood in response. May the kind Father whose we are and whom we serve help us in carrying out these things.

A PROMISE OF PEACE

I saw men:

Striving, pushing, hasting,
Gambling, shaking, wasting,
Slinking, fearing, bungling,
Jostling, glaring, stumbling,
Sneering, warring, rushing,
Hoarding, forcing, crushing,
Plunging, weeping, grasping,
Fainting, slaving, gasping,
Scowling, fawning, vying,
Dreading, failing, dying.

Above the din of human will

I heard a Voice say: "Peace, be still!"

I heard men:

Boasting, bantering, grumbling,
Shouting, wrangling, mumbling,
Brawling, bickering, railing,
Pleading, clamoring, wailing,
Scolding, quibbling, crying,
Plotting, bartering, sighing,
Gloating, muttering, moaning,
Haggling, shuffling, roaning,
Grunting, bellowing, scheming,
Swearing, shrieking, screaming.

Above the clamor loud and shrill,

I heard a Voice say: "Peace, be still!"

And then I saw enthroned:

Truth, justice, fidelity,
Peace, harmony, courtesy,
Right, loyalty, goodness,
Faith, courage, kindness,
Grace, liberty, humility,
Trust, respect, nobility,
Valor, honesty, patience,
Mercy, modesty, meekness,
Honor, charity, reverence,
Unity, victory, happiness.

In every land there reigned good-will,

A Voice said gently: "Peace, be still!"

—War still goes on in Mexico, though the government expresses hope of subduing it soon. But the civil war in our country was to end in 90 days, but went on for four years.

—The new Flat Rock church impressed all beholders by its well-built granite walls and its comely proportions. The cost was above $7,000. The congregation did well to build in such a splendid manner. And they are not through yet. They purpose to add new pews.

—Dr. Haddaway was born in an oldside Methodist family, but preferred when a small boy to attend the newside Sunday school. His mother at first objected to his changing schools, but at length consented with the proviso that if he started in at the new Sunday school she would use a switch to see that he went every Sunday. He went and ever since has been identified with the newside Methodists, now more commonly called Methodist Protestants.

GREENSBORO, N. C., MARCH 21, 1929

NUMBER 20

First Palm Sunday

The time was ripe for strange event,
Opposing powers their portents lent:
'Twixt priest and prophet war had sprung,
And battle lines must soon be flung.

The "upstart prophet" from Galilee
Had dared invade the Holy City,
Had dared condemn the holy priest,
Intends to make all worship cease.

"Profanely speaking 'gainst the place"
Made sacred by the Jewish race,
He'd proved himself a dangerous foe:
'Twas meet that he from earth should go.

His death was thus by priests decreed,
Was deemed the world's outstanding need.
And, strange to say, he thought so too,
And joined with them their will to do.

But friends he had who'd not consent
That he should e'er to death be sent;
They'd make him king forevermore,
They'd bow before him and adore.

Two programs thus were in the air,
Aiming at ends you can't compare.
The one would lay him 'mong the dead,
The other make him state's great head.

The test has come, the war is on,
And both will fight till strength is gone.
The wondrous thing, as story goes,
He sought to please both friends and foes.

The schemes of both he'd carry out,
If not at once, by turn about:
More cruel death than sought by foes,
More lofty throne than friends e'er chose.

Yes, please his foes and please his friends,
And, best of all, gain God's great ends.
It was a strange, a glad, sad day
When all these forces came to play.

What changes would the day bring in?
Will our side lose or will it win?
Will our great prophet be enthroned?
Or—sad to think—will he be stoned?

Our best we'll do to gain the day;
Brave stand we'll take and bold words say;

We'll call him king and king he'll be
If right triumphs, as we shall see.

And so we see triumphal day—
Both cloaks and palm leaves pave the way;
We see the prophet ride as king,
We hear the loud hosannas ring.

With friends behind and friends before
He rides along and seems secure.
But dangers great are just ahead,
Both anger fierce and hatred dread.

He knows full well the seething hate
That burns for him beyond the gate.
Let us take note of what he'll do
When first the city comes in view.

Will anger burn, will fury rise,
When once the sight shall greet his eyes?
Will he the curse of heaven call down
On men that hate beyond all bound?

We're startled much to see him weep
As eyes on city he does keep!
Can it be true he weeps from fear
Of what they'll do, so very near?

We hear his words of deepest sorrow;
He sees ahead their tragic morrow:
He weeps aloud for doomed city,
With tender, touching words of pity.

A man in tears—with woman's heart—
Can he be king and act the part?
His friends lose faith, are filled with doubt;
They fear their scheme can't carry out.

Inside the city the throng moves on,
But early ardor now has gone;
When challenge came in "Who is he?"
They said: "The prophet of Galilee."

His friends have failed, he's left alone,
His foes he meets in strength his own.
He shows us how to treat our foes
And former friends now not so close.

It was a strange, a glad, sad day.
Of many things, one thing we say:
How vain the fondest schemes of men
That fail with scheme of God to blend.

NEAL DOW, PIONEER AND SEER*By* ERNEST H. CHERRINGTON, LL.D., Litt.D.

Neal Dow was the grandfather of national prohibition. He was more than a pioneer in the fight against one of the greatest social evils which threatened this nation. His contribution to the crusade was far greater than could be reckoned in terms of time or money. He put his life into this cause and so identified himself with it that one cannot think of the march of events which culminated in the ratification of the constitutional amendment without thereby paying tribute to the memory of Neal Dow. While others were discussing half measures, he kept his mind fixed upon the ultimate solution. He wrote boldly into the first drafts of the law which later was adopted by Maine as a pioneer in prohibition, not merely a ban upon spirituous liquors, but used the phrase "intoxicating liquor" as a definition, including not alone the whiskey and brandy against which many were then fighting, but the fermented beverages which were gradually coming into wide and dangerous use.

General Dow was one of the first to realize the economic significance of the prohibition of beverage intoxicants. In this he was far in advance of many of the temperance agitators of his own time. He recognized the moral questions involved, gave them their due emphasis, but forcefully and continuously dwelt upon the fact that the wealth and prosperity of the people of Maine depended largely if not wholly upon the banishment of intoxicating beverages. He was wont to make a point of the fact that the people of Maine "were consuming in strong drink the entire value of all the property of the state in every period of twenty years."

General Dow saw that involved with the economic well-being of the people were their health, their virtue and their morality. He fought against the liquor traffic not alone to make the people of his state wealthier, but to make them better.

Born in an epoch when the use of intoxicating beverages was assumed to be a necessity and when prohibition was only considered as applicable to Indian tribes, his prophetic vision foresaw the day when the flag would no longer protect that insidious enemy of American institutions. Dedicated from his earliest years to personal abstinence, he soon saw that the liquor problem was a social and not merely an individual question. While chief of the volunteer fire department of Portland, Maine, he realized the difficulty in keeping men away from intoxicating beverages when their sale was licensed. In town meetings and in a debating society of which he was a member he raised his voice in season and out of season against the evils inherent in the liquor traffic. He led the fight for local prohibition in Portland in 1839 which was lost by a few votes, and the splendidly successful battle of votes in 1843.

During the days of the Washingtonian movement and all through the forties of the last century, by "sowing the state knee-deep" in temperance literature, by petition after petition and by organized effort that brought increasingly definite results he became the herald of the new day of prohibition in American political life.

The fact that this state prohibition law was adopted by both branches of the legislature and signed by the governor in three days from the time it was taken up in the legislature indicates the amount of public sentiment which supported this legislation.

This public sentiment had been stimulated by General Dow, who from 1843 had been circulating petitions to the legislature, asking that the traffic in intoxicating beverages might be held and adjudged an infamous crime. In the intervening years General Dow had presented other petitions, one of which, offered in July, 1846, was 59 feet long and had upon it 3,800 names, most of which had been obtained by the personal solicitation of General Dow. Other petitions secured largely through his influence brought the total signatures to over 40,000. Largely as the result of his leadership the license system was abolished in 1846 by vote of the legislature, although the penalties for violation were so light that the illicit traffic flourished widely.

The original Maine Act of 1846, while a marked advance over all previous legislation concerning beverage intoxicants, was really not a prohibition law, but merely a restricting measure. Its title was "An Act to Restrict the Sale of Intoxicating Liquors." It limited the sale of such beverages to licensed persons who could sell only for medicinal and mechanical purposes. Imported wines and spirituous liquors could be sold, however, in quantities of not less than 28 gallons, which must be taken away at one time. The penalties imposed by this measure were a minimum fine of $1.00 and a maximum of $20 for the first offense, while second offenses were punished by minimum fines of $5 and maximum of $20. One person of "good moral character" could be licensed for every town having less than one thousand inhabitants and not less than three nor more than five for every town having more than three thousand inhabitants. This measure, which made it practically mandatory for the selectmen, clerk and treasurer of each town, acting as a licensing board, to grant at least one license in every Maine city, can hardly be called a prohibition measure. The act was also weak in the absence of any search and seizure clause.

In spite of the weaknesses of the law of 1846, the liquor traffic virtually disappeared from many parts of the state and especially from the rural districts. It was because, however, of its very evident weaknesses that in 1849 an additional law was passed forbidding sale of liquors within two miles of cattle shows or fairs. In 1850, a search warrant provision was adopted by the legislature and vetoed by Governor Dana, who, in his veto message, declared: "Immediately on the announcement that I had withheld my signature from the bill, petitions signed by more than 3,000 persons were presented to me, urging its approval." In 1851, General Dow was elected mayor of Portland on the prohibition issue, he was defeated in 1853, but was again elected in 1855, and was elected to the state legislature in 1858. The true Maine law, adopted in 1851, was drafted by General Dow, who incorporated in the bill search and seizure provisions, provided stronger penalties and took the liquor traffic out of the class of legitimate business by providing that all payments or compensations for liquors sold in violation of the law should be null and void, and that no action was maintainable in any court in the state for the recovery or possession of intoxicating liquors or the value thereof. This radical legislation proposed and supported by General Dow hit the money nerve of the illicit traffic. That clause, probably, was more effective in causing the law to be observed than any other portion of the legislation.

That the Dow prohibition act of 1851 was effective was maintained by Horace Greeley who visited Maine in 1855 and wrote concerning it in the New York Tribune the following: "The pretense that as much liquor is sold now in Maine as in former years is impudently false. We spent three days in traveling through the state without seeing a glass of liquor or an individual who appeared to be under its influence, and we were reliably assured that, at the Augusta House, where the governor and most of the legislature board, no liquor is to be had."

The Maine Law Party practically disbanded after the adoption of the Maine prohibition law. The question of slavery was becoming engrossing and many of those who had originally formed the Maine Law Party now joined with Whigs and Democrats in the organization of the Republican Party. As a natural result of the demobilization of the prohibition forces, the prohibitory law was repealed in 1855. Neal Dow, however, did not feel this repeal had any finality, and when he became a member of the state legislature in 1858 another prohibition law was adopted. He continued his educational work. Maine, for a season now, vacillated between various forms of license and regulations varying from the adoption of a state liquor agency measure to later adoptions of prohibition, which culminated in the prohibition amendment to the state constitution ratified by a popular vote in 1884.

While General Dow gave a splendid public service as mayor of Portland and as a state legislator, it is probable that his larger service was rendered upon the platform. Not alone did he speak to record-breaking audiences throughout this nation, but three times he toured Great Britain under the auspices of the United Kingdom Alliance, telling the story of the Maine law, its general observance by the people, and its successful enforcement, to those who were seeking to discover some practical method of dealing with a growing social evil.

The Civil War made a break for a brief period in Dow's activities in the prohibition campaign. He served as colonel in the Thirteenth Maine Regiment and later as brigadier general in command of the forts at the mouth of the Mississippi and later of the district of Florida. Wounded twice in the attack on Fort Hudson, in 1863, he was taken prisoner, spending eight months in Libby Prison and at Mobile. He was later exchanged for General Fitzhugh Lee.

At the close of the Civil War, General Dow returned to the old campaign against the liquor traffic, stumping this nation and twice visiting Great Britain for lecturing tours.

In the estimate of the men and forces most influential in securing the ultimate adoption of the national prohibition amendment, General Neal Dow will probably be ranked with Dr. Benjamin Rush, of Philadelphia, and the Rev. Lyman Beecher. He supplied the third leg of the tripod upon which rests this great reform. Dr. Rush was the father of the scientific study of the effects of alcohol upon the human system. Others had casually referred to this phase of the alcohol problem but Dr. Rush gave it conscious direction. Dr. Lyman Beecher laid broad the foundations for the presentations of the social aspects of this problem. Others have developed his arguments or have readjusted them to the kaleidoscopic shifting conditions of our modern life, but Lyman Beecher's first formulation of the principles remains classic. General Neal Dow, possibly because of the intensity of the man, partly because of the commanding position he came to assume in the work of agitation, did more than any predecessor to direct the attention of the people to the economic arguments against any licensed sale of beverage intoxicants and to secure legislative action for its suppression. This service is all the greater since he advanced those arguments before modern industry had become so highly mechanized and before intensive competition had narrowed the profit margin to a point where the scale might be turned between profit and loss by a very small element. In reality, he was marking the dawn of a new age which few foresaw. The capital wasted through the consumption of intoxicants during Neal Dow's active period would not have been so highly significant a factor as the later drink bills, since investment opportunities and the constantly increasing demand for funds to finance large enterprises did not exist then as they do in this epoch. The economic loss was more largely personal or else confined in a large degree to the community wherein the drinker and his family resided. The principle, however, which was fundamental to General Dow's argument contains an eternal element of truth. The economic losses resulting from the consumption of intoxicants involves more than the comparative wealth or poverty of a neighborhood. We see today that money is merely an algebraic symbol by which we express manpower, comfort, service, opportunity, the march of progress and the development of civilization. We waste these when we waste those economic gains which are the fruit of labor.

There could be no better evidence of the fallacy which lies in Mark Antony's saying that "the evil which men do lives after them; the good is oft interred with their bones" than the life of Neal Dow. Because of what General Neal Dow was and because of what he did in the face of obstacles that seemed almost insuperable and because of the remarkable service rendered by the hosts of prohibition leaders who "followed in his train," we today live in a land from which has been banished beverage alcohol, where the trafficker in alcoholic beverages is a criminal, and where doors of larger opportunity swing widely open to coming generations who will find it hard to understand the wilderness and the desert through which men like Neal Dow and his comrades led.

ORDINATION OF WOMEN

Women are granted the right of ordination in only 43 of the 114 leading Protestant denominations in the United States, according to a carefully compiled report contained in a book called Women and the Ministry, published this week by Doubleday, Doran and Company, New York. The report is a tabulation of the exact lay and clerical status of women made by Miss Elizabeth Wilson under the direction of the Federal Council of Churches in America. It offers, in addition to the American figures, a summary of the English situation and presents a spirited argument by Canon Charles E. Raven, of the Church of England, for the ordination of women in his communion. His argument has already found a resonant echo in an editorial in The Churchman, leading Anglican periodical of this country, which pleads in its 125th anniversary number for the immediate recognition of the place of women in orders. And a proposal has been adopted by the Presbyterian General Council now in session in Philadelphia to give women equal rights in the Presbyterian Church in the United States. Denominations in which the ordination of women is not permitted include the various Lutheran bodies, the Methodist Church of both the north and south, the Southern Baptists and the Episcopalians.—Contributed.

DENOMINATIONAL ENTERPRISES

LAST CALL

All churches and Sunday schools not yet having ordered Easter supplies, please order today the number needed. Tomorrow may be too late, if not already so.

Pastors, please distribute the Passion Week Self-Denial Envelopes to your congregations next Sunday, March 24th, morning and night.

Sunday school superintendents, please distribute the Passion Week Self-Denial Envelopes to your entire school next Sunday, March 24th.

All churches and schools please pull together in one sacrificial effort for the largest Easter offering for missions in our denominational history.

The Board of Missions is receiving distressing appeals for help. What will you do in this regard on Easter Sunday for the cause of your resurrected Lord, for the sake of needy humanity? Do not neglect this appeal. Also, may several thousand persons be received into your church membership on Easter Sunday and everybody will be made to rejoice.

G. W. II.

INDIA BUNGALOW

Only about one-third of the $6,000 required for the building of a modest home for our missionaries has yet been subscribed. Will the church respond to this appeal, especially those who are financially able, and thus assure the bungalow—or will the church fail to do so and thus add to the discomfort and ever-increasing danger of our loved ones far away? Send reply to the Board of Missions, 516 North Charles Street, Baltimore, Md.

THE LACK OF INNER CONTROL

Fallen man, if he would not make a wreck, must have a master to keep him under control. The law uses the method of outward control. Note the increase in laws being passed by the national legislature and the various state legislatures. Observe also the increased police forces in the cities, and additional guards for banks and institutions where much money is handled.

The multiplying of these various means of outward control is a confession of the fact that a considerable proportion of the population of this country has lost control of itself. The speed and safety of an automobile may be in a measure controlled by signs along the road, by an occasional traffic policeman, and the like, but nothing is a better speed regulator than a man at the wheel who knows the laws regarding vehicle travel and has a disposition to do what the law says. This kind of a man could be entirely controlled by signs and signals without the intervention of a policeman.

In like manner laws and policemen can restrict the activities of evil men to an extent. But nothing is equal to putting a new heart in the man that makes him willing and desirous of obeying the law. The increase of outward restrictions is always the sign of an inward lack of restraint. An inward monitor to keep right and an outward law to direct is the ideal.—Selected.

JESUS WITH SINNERS

Matthew, who was a man of some substance, invited Jesus to his home and called in those with whom he had been associated to meet Him (verse 15). In those days eating with company was not so private an affair as it is now. Apparently it was easy for those outside to see and even enter the dining room.

Perhaps Matthew's associates were not of a high type—men such as we call "ward politicians." Jesus did not hesitate. A person with high purpose who keeps pure can go anywhere with any one. Why is he there, is the test question. The scribes of the pharisaic party made much of outward form and were censorious of others. They saw Jesus with that company and with uplifted eyebrows, asked, "How is it?" We can hear them with a self-righteous tone and air which comes so easily to some (verse 16). No doubt censoriousness is an easy fault to acquire. Not only those who think they are righteous, but those who call themselves sinners, fall into it. We have heard people who held no place among church people utter louder criticisms than the righteous. It is so common. Let us remember that Jesus in any company kept His purity and dignity. He was no cheap "mixer." He did not "put on airs," nor did He forget His character and mission. Some, even ministers, have hurt more than helped by becoming careless in certain circles. They are there not to do good, but to get applause and popularity. Jesus went with all love to the company Matthew invited. He was no respecter of persons or station, yet He did not forget for an instant that He was about His Father's business. Let every Christian follow His example.

He answered the criticism very aptly (verse 17). Where does the physician go? Into the sick room, even though it be leprosy or smallpox.—Selected.

THE SPIRIT OF YOUTH

Youth means a temperamental predominance of courage over timidity, of the appetite for adventure over the love of ease. This often exists in a man of fifty more than in a boy of twenty.

Nobody grows old by merely living a number of years. People grow old only by deserting their ideals.

Years wrinkle the skin; but to give up enthusiasm wrinkles the soul.

Worry, doubt, self-distrust, fear and despair—these are the long, long years that bow the heart and turn the greening spirit back to dust.

Whether sixty or sixteen, there is in every human being's heart the lure of wonder, the sweet amazement at the stars and at starlike things and thoughts, the undaunted challenge of events, the unfailing, childlike appetite for what next, and the joy of the game of living. You are as young as your faith, as old as your doubt; as young as your self-confidence, as old as your fear; as young as your hope, as old as your despair.

In the central place of your heart is an evergreen tree; its name is Love. So long as it flourishes you are young. When it dies, you are old. In the central place of your heart is a wireless station. So long as it receives messages of beauty, hope, cheer, grandeur, courage, and power from God and from your fellowmen, so long are you young.—Selected.

Saxapahaw Charge

March 17, Sunday.—The Lord blessed us with another beautiful bright Sunday, and we spent the day delightfully with Saxapahaw charge. In the morning we were at Orange Chapel, in the afternoon at Salem, and Concord at night. The attendance at each service was good, and the response to our mission all that we could ask. These are all influential churches in their respective communities, numbering among their membership large numbers of sturdy, well-to-do citizens. The country church is a might leavening factor for good in our rural life, and no one is wise enough to calculate the helpful influence of churches such as those we visited Sunday. We found evidences of asserting life at each church. In recent years Orange Chapel has been beautified inside and out by paint. This is a widely known church, and has a large field for service. At Concord we heard talk of consolidation of churches. The plan is to merge the Saxapahaw and Concord congregations and to build, central to each church, on the Graham-Pittsboro road. We learned that the state would likely hard-surface this road in the near future. We have not had an opportunity to study details in regard to this merger, but on general principles it seems to us a wise move. Salem church is adding Sunday school rooms, and paying as they build. We commend them for both. This is one of the oldest churches in our denomination. They celebrated their centennial three years ago (we believe we are correct as to the date) and it was our privilege to be present on that occasion. After all the years of varying vicissitudes of community life, it is a cause of thanksgiving to find this centenarian still young with the vigor of church life, and more progressive than ever as they start their second century. At this church, and also at Concord, the Gratitude Gift deficit was subscribed and paid—$14.60 at Salem and $11.50 at Concord. We did not have time to present it at Orange Chapel. We were glad to hear the people speak well of Pastor Loy, and to hear him speak well of them. He is applying himself zealously to his work, and we predict progress for the charge under his leadership. We were glad to find him giving out Easter envelopes at each of the churches we visited. For us the day was a good one, and we trust that good was done for the cause. Pastor and people have our grateful thanks for kindnesses shown us during this visit.

Easter Offering

Just this week Dr. Haddaway is sending out an appeal urging a liberal offering because of the great and pressing needs of the Board of Missions. He expresses the hope that $50,000 may be realized through this offering. We want North Carolina to do her part in bringing this to pass. We are asking, therefore, that an Easter offering be taken in every church in the conference. Of course this will be done where the program is given, but in many of our churches the special Easter program will probably not be held. We urge that the offering be taken in all of these churches. Pastors can give attention to this in the churches where they have appointments on Easter Sunday; we suggest that in other churches they plan with the superintendents for the offering. Let us rally to this, brethren, and make the offering the largest North Carolina has ever given.

Pope's Dictum

"Be not the first by whom the new are tried, Nor yet the last to lay the old aside."

This is sound advice. We may cause hurt by rushing precipitately into new things; on the other hand, we may greatly retard progress by holding too long to old ideas and practices. The one-room log schoolhouse served a good purpose in its time, but no one can possibly conceive of that idea of the public school meeting the needs of this day. The reaping hook answered well as a harvesting implement when harvests were small, and there was no better means of reaping them. But what would become now of our great fields of golden grain if we still insisted upon harvesting them with the reaping hook of our great-grandfathers? Changes are constantly taking place. Progress demands that it be so. The fact is, there can be no progress without change. And we must adjust ourselves to that fact. We must understand, too, that the church is no exception. The methods of handling the finances of the church years ago will not do for this age. Many churches leaders—ministers and laymen—and many churches have found that out, and have long since adjusted themselves to newer and more satisfactory systems in providing the money that is needed in carrying on the Lord's work. The time is upon us when every church should "lay the old aside" and adopt a financial system that would include not only the pastor's salary, but the budgets of the church as well, and that would give to every member a definite financial allotment and provide likewise for systematic payments. We appeal to our laymen to study this matter of financing the church, and not to hesitate to give up an outworn system for one that is better.

Quarterly Conferences

On Thursday night, March 14, we attended, as a visitor, the quarterly conference of Calvary church. The pastor very kindly and courteously asked us to preside, and even drew the law on us to enforce his request; our decision, however, was that the law was not mandatory in that case, and we availed ourselves of the privilege of sitting in the conference as a spectator. As we were not there officially, we shall not attempt to report the conference in detail. And we suppose, too, that it will be given to HERALD readers through the regular reports of the church. Pastor Bates' report and his recommendations showed that he was giving much time and thought to the work. It was a good conference.

On Friday night we were with Bro. Reynolds, by appointment, and held his second quarterly conference. This was a good conference also. All the routine business of the conference was promptly transacted, and some special matters that vitally concern the future of the church were considered. It is our opinion that this church should grow and become one of our strong High Point churches. The report of the Sunday school superintendent was very encouraging, and he expressed the hope that the enrollment would soon go over two hundred. But the church must be relocated and better housing conditions provided before we can use the opportunities for service and expansion that await us there. Pastor Reynolds has the full confidence of his people, and he is giving much time and thought in his effort to work out a solution of our problems there. We are hopeful that with sufficient time and support he will succeed. The plan is to sell the present property and buy another location and build. A desirable lot, and well located for our purposes, is available for us now, and steps are being taken toward securing it. With this done, and a proper building on it, there seems to be no doubt about the growth of the church. There are from fifteen hundred to two thousand people in this community that would constitute our field. Pastor Reynolds and the people are anxious that we should not lose this opportunity.

Herald Clippings

"We are glad to report that our Sunday school has decided to give our collections on each fourth Sunday to the Children's Home." "The young folks are manifesting a good deal of interest in the society (C. E.). Six new members were added to the roll at this meeting." "Our pastor is giving us a series of sermons at the Sunday morning services on 'Stewardship.'" "We will observe Young People's Day next Sunday morning." "When the vote to unite the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies was taken, it carried unanimously. Truly it was a very harmonious and enthusiastic meeting." "The Christian Endeavor is doing a good work in our church."

The New Century Service Program

Dr. Straughn and his able assistants have been with us and made the schedule planned for them. They were very gladly received everywhere, as was to be expected, of course, and their coming has done us good. It now remains for us to carry out this program as far as possible on every charge and in every church. We presume that the "Manual of New Century Service" and other matter prepared by Dr. Straughn is in the hands of all pastors, so that there may be an easy understanding of what he is asking us to do in promoting New Century Service—the G. C. B. Pastors will of course acquaint themselves with this program and do all possible to carry it out in every church. We believe that this is going to be a year of increased budget receipts.

DOING ONE'S DUTY

He who does not do his duty in this world will never do his duty in any world. He who does not do his duty to his brother will never do his duty to his God. I am bound to put my whole strength and energy and wisdom into my business. To be lackadaisical, half-hearted, so taken up with things above as to be slipshod in my dealings with things below, is to serve neither God nor man, to serve neither this world nor the next. Because I am a Christian I am bound to be earnest, and indeed enthusiastic in all that makes for the welfare of the place in which I live and of the people about me and of the nation to which I belong. He will never do his duty as a Christian who does not do his duty as a citizen. I am unworthy of my liberties unless I seek to extend to others the good that has been conferred upon me. Surely there is nothing more cowardly than that which seems to say: "This is the victory that overcometh the world, to run away from it."—Mark Guy Pearse.

THE MINISTER'S RESPONSIBILITY

If we knew next Sabbath's sermon

Would be the last we'd ever preach,

Would we try to amuse our hearers

Or only Christian ethics teach?

And yet we know life is uncertain,

That some day soon our work will cease,

When we will have no further privilege

Of preaching for the Prince of Peace.

Our opportunities are passing

For saving souls from death and hell,

And we should daily to some sinners

The saving gospel story tell;

For we must soon appear in judgment,

To give account of what we've done,

Of how we taught the blessed gospel

Of Christ, God's well-beloved Son.

We now profess to be His watchmen

Upon the walls of Zion here,

But are we warning men of danger

Of all the perils they are near?

For if we leave them uninstructed

As to the danger they are in,

On us may rest their awful ruin

If they sink down in deadly sin.

TO INSURE HAPPINESS

Today will be a happy day

If, first, you find some time to pray;

If, first, alone, you go apart

From worldly things, and, in your heart,

You make resolve to do your best

And then to God you leave the rest.

For God will take the hate and fear

Of yesterday and yesteryear

And, in their place, He'll make you feel

The light and love He would reveal.

Yes, this will be a happy day

If, friend, right now, you'll stop and pray.

OUR STORY PAGE

MARY ELLEN, SNOB

We were unusually thankful that Wednesday evening before Thanksgiving. Mother and father, who had been ill with influenza (for a long time we thought they would not live), were fully recovered. They were to be at the table for the first time in several weeks on the next day. Grandma had sent turkey from the country, and the relatives were coming.

Mother sent me down to the other side of town to the college dormitory that night to borrow one of Miss Fitz's long tablecloths. When I hurried through the hall I heard the queerest noise. I knew that the girls had all gone home, and it frightened me for a moment. Then the noise seemed to come from the music room. It was one of the girls—Mary Ellen Robinson! Mary Ellen dressed in silk every day, and had more money than she knew what to do with. They thought she was a snob and queer, but I learned that she wasn't a bit.

She was sitting at the big piano in the dark, crying. "Whatever is the matter, Mary Ellen?" I asked.

She didn't hear me until I got right up to her, and she said, just as cross: "Matter enough! How'd you like to be left here at the Hall when every single girl was away having a good time? The people who invited me for Thanksgiving are down with the 'flu' and now all I can do is to stay. How would you like to be without a brother or sister or father or mother, or without a relative in the whole world at Thanksgiving time?"

I gasped at the very thought. I was so sorry for Mary Ellen that I threw my arms about her right there in the dark.

"You just get your traps and come home with me until Monday," I said. "We haven't much, but we'll do our best to make you enjoy yourself."

Glad? I should say she was. She hugged back, then we ran for her valise, and inside of fifteen minutes we were scooting across the town.

When we reached home the children all ran out to meet us. They were laughing and trying to tell me something, but when they saw Mary Ellen they quieted down bashfully.

She picked up Tiny, our three-year-old, right away. "Oh, you little darling!" she cried, "won't you kiss me?" When Tiny did, that settled the matter; the whole family took her in. She helped me wash the dishes that night. She said it was splendid fun. Maybe she wouldn't have looked at the work in that way if she had been obliged to do the same thing over again three times a day for fifteen years—minus six. She helped me cook breakfast on Thanksgiving Day. When breakfast was over we began to pack the baskets which we always took to the poor folks. Mary Ellen grew thoughtful. I think she thought there wasn't much in them. We did not have as much as usual on account of all the illness—just vegetables which Bob and I had raised.

When the baskets were done, she took out her purse. (I think she was almost afraid to suggest anything lest she hurt our feelings!) "I never gave a Thanksgiving basket in my life! I never thought of it," she slowly said. "Do let me help!" Her blue eyes were very pleading. "Let me call the grocer and have him bring chicken and oysters and celery. Oh, let me! I never spend all my allowance. I would like to do something to help."

"You dear old thing! Of course you may!" I laughed. "We were worried because we hadn't anything better; but we had to content ourselves by being thankful for mother and father."

"You can't know what that is unless you never knew the love of mother and father," choked Mary Ellen.

Oh, when those packages came! Every chick and child had to help. We put striped candy and bananas in every basket and arranged the celery in a fringe around the outside for a setting for the plump, little yellow turkeys.

I couldn't tell you how grateful they were (soldiers' families, some of them), or how Mary Ellen whispered that "the best of living was giving."

When the girls at school heard all about it the following week, they discovered that they had been to blame about Mary Ellen. She had never snubbed them, but they'd been so independent, because they'd heard she was rich, and were afraid that she'd snub them.

But when the end of the year came, and the partings were said, there was not a girl in school as popular as Mary Ellen Robinson.—The Lookout.

THE GIRL SPY

It was in the winter of 1777. The British were in Philadelphia rolling in luxury while Washington's men were starving and freezing in Valley Forge. It was a sad day for the patriots, who hardly knew which way to turn.

Communications had been kept up between Washington and his friends in Philadelphia by patriot spies who, in the guise of produce dealers, had been going right through the British lines among the redcoats in the heart of the city. As long as Washington could keep in touch with the plans of the enemy, he felt reasonably secure despite the wretched condition of his army.

A certain major had been sent with a company of men to a wayside tavern six miles from Philadelphia to find out if possible the plans of the British.

"Will you take this basket of eggs into Philadelphia?"

These words were spoken by the major to Esther Mallory, a fifteen-year-old girl whom he had met at the tavern. This girl had such a heroic spirit that he believed she could be trusted with the most delicate mission.

"But you must be on your guard," continued the major. "The British lines are drawn right across the city; every road is watched and several spies have been caught and imprisoned, and others turned back. We have heard nothing from Philadelphia for a long time, and General Washington is anxious to know something before undertaking a certain enterprise he has in mind. Do you understand?"

Esther understood. Yet she doubted her ability for the perilous journey. Then she thought of her father and brother at Valley Forge, hungry and cold, and she was willing to undertake anything even at the risk of her life to gain the desired information.

With a grim faith, yet with heart beating so hard she could almost hear it, she started walking up the frozen road toward the city with the basket on her arm. She was undisturbed until coming near the city, when suddenly a number of redcoats appeared in the road just ahead of her. Putting on a bold appearance and secretly asking God to help her, she kept on.

"You expect to pass, do you? Can you give the countersign?" Both questions were hurled at Esther by the redcoats before she had time to answer the first.

"Countersign, did you say? Well, you see, I'm just a country girl going to market. I'm not acquainted with the signs of war."

"What's in your basket?"

"Just eggs I'm taking to exchange for some bread."

"Eggs, well, we can use them; and give you bread for them. So you need go no further."

"Yes," replied Esther with not a quiver in her voice, "that is kind of you, but the eggs are promised to a person in the city and I want to be true to my word."

"True to the rebels, I imagine," retorted a redcoat.

"Rebels, who are they?" innocently inquired the girl.

"Let her pass, boys," said the leader; "she's too ignorant to be a spy. Doesn't even know what a rebel is. Guess she doesn't even know that George III is her king."

But she was not so ignorant as they supposed. If she had been she would not have gotten by. And as for George, she did not consider his authority at all.

Without further interruption she reached the city, and finding the house where the correct information was waiting, she exchanged the eggs for a loaf of bread. She made her way through the streets right among the British soldiers with her precious loaf of bread lying in the basket in plain view. But she was so calm in her manner that not a soldier stopped her until she reached the same band again.

Here they were in the road still watching intently for any suspicious character. As Esther approached them on her return, she could almost feel her heart in her mouth. But with a bold step she proceeded as if nobody was around. She was about to pass when a redcoat stopped her.

"We want to know more about your mission," said he in an angry tone.

Another one grabbed the loaf of bread, saying, "We'll examine this; it may contain a message."

"Oh, give me the loaf," pleaded the girl; and she wondered what would happen to her if they broke the loaf and discovered the paper which had been baked in the bread—and what would become of her father and brother—of all the poor men at Valley Forge!

"The bread is for mother; she's old and sick and has had no bread for a long time; won't you please give it back?"

"Ah, let her go; give it to her," said the leader; "I don't think she can do us any harm."

"Guess not," spoke a second, "when she doesn't know what a rebel is."

"Well, anyway, she looks innocent," said a third. "Besides, I hardly think a girl of her age would be sent as a spy."

"Of course not," added a fourth, "a girl who doesn't know the name of her king. You remember when I asked her if she knew the name of her king, she replied that Jesus is her king. Don't suppose she ever heard of George."

By this time the loaf was in the basket and Esther was walking down the road, looking neither to the right nor left. When she got out of sight, she broke into a run, putting every ounce of her strength into the effort.

Meanwhile the redcoats were still discussing the girl's mission, and finally, mounting their horses, they started in pursuit.

But fear had given the girl superhuman strength, and she reached the tavern just as the redcoats in hot pursuit hove in sight.

"To your horse, major!" exclaimed Esther. "The redcoats, the redcoats!" With a leap the major was on his black steed, and in another moment Esther was clinging on behind him. The precious note had been extracted from the loaf of bread, and tucked away in the major's pocket; they were ready for the wild ride.

"Leave the ground, Dan," said the major to his noble black steed, and the beautiful horse started toward German-town with the speed of the wind.

"Leave the redcoats, too, Dan," coaxed Esther; and the noble horse understood. The chase was fast and furious. Were the redcoats gaining? It seemed they were. Or maybe Dan was not doing his best in order to lead them into a trap. The noble animal had led many a chase and had never been caught, but now it seemed he was lagging behind.

So close were the redcoats and so eager to capture the girl spy and the major that they had not noticed how much ground they had covered; and in the final rush to reach the side of Dan, with trophy almost within their reach, the beautiful Dan leaped forward like a streak of light, and the British soldiers ran past the American lines, and in a moment were cut off and captured by Washington's men.

"You have done a great work, Esther," said the major. "This message has saved our army a big sacrifice, and, besides, you have brought all these husky redcoats into camp, too."

But the girl, almost exhausted, simply answered, "Give Dan the credit; he did it."—The Leader.

THE CHANGE IN SETSUKO

Pale little Setsuko sat very still in her new chair and timidly listened to what her teacher was saying, her eyes growing wider and wider every minute. She had never heard anything at all like it before.

"And so, because Christmas is Jesus' birthday, we celebrate it by trying to help other people," the pleasant voice went on. "Do any of you know Jesus?"

At that all around the circle black eyes twinkled and little hands were eagerly lifted. "I know him! I know him!" answered a chorus of voices.

Setsuko didn't join them because she knew nothing at all of the Man about whom the teacher spoke. She began to wonder who he could be.

"And now what shall we sing?" the teacher asked.

"Jesus was a little child," please," said a funny little boy in the seat next to Setsuko.

Everybody seemed glad at that. The helper sat down at a queer black box with white things on it, and made some music come out. The funny boy didn't seem to know the words very well—perhaps he was rather new, too—but he sang lustily, keeping a safe distance behind the others, so as to catch the words from them.

"Let's sing 'Jesus loves me' now," said the teacher. "You know the words of this, Taro Chan, so see if you can keep right with the rest of us. It sounds better that way."

But even then Setsuko could understand only a little of what the song was about; for her funny neighbor, anxious lest he be left behind, rushed a line head of everybody else. Still she caught some of the words, and they were very strange and very interesting.

Gradually the hours wore by. Setsuko watched everything that happened and did what the teacher told her, but she never said a word. She wondered how Taro Chan could dare to cry as he did. Of course it was very strange that the teacher wouldn't let him have his nurse right with him all the time if he wanted her, and queer, too, that he had to do what she said even when he didn't want to. But still Setsuko would not have dared to cry in such a place as kindergarten.

Later on, when Taro Chan had stopped wailing, he was allowed to come back into the circle beside her.

"I am not going to cry any more," he confided. "It isn't nice to cry; teacher says it doesn't please Jesus."

But shy, frightened little Setsuko said never a word and only wondered again who Jesus was.

At home, when bedtime came that night, she told her mother; but mother did not know about Him either.

"Now that you have begun to go to kindergarten, and have grown to be such a big girl, you will not mind if I carry the light away, will you?" she said, after the story of the day's happenings was ended.

"O no, no! Don't do it!" screamed Setsuko. "Don't do that; I am so afraid in the dark!"

"There, there, never mind," said her mother quickly, "I'll leave the light."

"Poor child!" sighed her mother when, after a long, long time, the sobs had quieted down into deep-drawn breaths and Setsuko slept. "Do you suppose she ever will be strong and rosy-cheeked and unafraid, like other children?"

"Perhaps the kindergarten will help her," said the grandmother, but secretly she shook her head. "Setsuko was born on an evil day," she muttered. "Nothing can make her like other girls."

But the grandmother was mistaken. From the very beginning Setsuko told wonderful tales of what was done in the kindergarten—of the songs about birds and soldiers and sunshine and harvest and the Man named Jesus; of the Mother Goose rhymes and the dances and the games that were played. And after a little while she brought home a folded boat and colored pictures she had made, and showed them shyly. One day mother heard her humming the music of "London Bridge" under her breath, and a month or so later she joined a group of children next door and played "Oats, peas, beans and barley grow" as if she had been playing games all her life. When spring came she begged to join the special party from the kindergarten which was going to the zoo in a special trolley car.

Grandmother looked surprised enough. "Why, she is not afraid of the animals any more, is she? And I do believe her cheeks are as rosy as even Taro Chan's when she gets excited," she said to mother after Setsuko had bowed low and gone out of the room on dancing feet which would not quite walk soberly.

But the biggest proof that Setsuko was exactly like other children, after all, came in the fall, when she had been in kindergarten a whole year. By this time she was going to Sunday school, too, and even father and mother had begun to go to the kindergarten teacher's church.

Mother had seen her all comfortably rolled up in her quilt, and was just starting out of the room when a sleepy little voice said: "I don't want the light any more, mother. Please take it away."

Mother could hardly believe her ears.

But Setsuko added simply: "You see, Jesus does not sleep, and he keeps watch all night long; so I don't need a light any longer."

"Well, well! Well, well!" said grandmother when she learned about it. "I would not know that she was the same child. I wish I had some more grandchildren to send to the Imadegawa Kindergarten."—Selected.

MUSIC

By MRS. ADDIE B. AYCOCK

Music hath power to melt to tears,
To stir deep passions, or quiet fears.
'Tis a lullaby to soothe to rest,
And calms the spirit by grief oppress.

The harmonies of nature, divine,
Are in the sighing of the pine,
And in the swish and moan of the tide,
And where waterfalls and rivulets hide.

The chirp and hum of the insect band
Are part of nature's orchestral plan—
And warblings of the birds of the air—
What, with their thrilling notes, can compare?

Of all the instruments invented,
The piano is best adapted
To the composer's skill and pleasure
In vibrant chord, or gleeful measure.

Ripples and runs and musical thrills,
Descriptive of streams, brooks, birds and rills,
Andante, cantabile, allegro
Are best expressed on the piano.

The flute, with its liquid, bird-like tone,
The full, soft notes of the saxophone,
Twang of guitar, or ukelele,
Together make joyous harmony.

The plaintive strain of the violin
Touches a responsive chord within,
And the soul vibrates in unison
With its pathos and diapason.

Emotions strangely mingled and deep
O'er the harp-strings of life do sweep—
Hope, despair, passionate grief and tears—
And memory wakes from the sleep of years.

What thrilling fantasies from its strings
The master-hand of an artist brings!
Enrancing strains of melody flow
When the hand of Kreisler draws the bow.

When voices take flight in songs of praise,
And blend with the organ's deep tones to raise
Anthems that rise and swell and roll,
The grandeur of music fills the soul.

Oh, there is music everywhere!
Radio, winged medium of the air,
Brings it to us over the tides
Of ether waves, as it floats, or rides.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

NOTICE TO TREASURERS OF W. H. M. S.

Please see that your entire apportionment is collected and sent in promptly as the treasurer's books close March 31.

MRS. H. A. GARRETT, Treasurer.

GRACE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

Grace Missionary Society met in the chapel of the church on Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. After a piano solo by Mrs. J. Norman Wills, Dr. Spahr led the devotional with an Easter message in which he stressed the great service of love the women performed. He said it is in harmony with the attitude of the women of the church in the present day to do all they can and make sacrifices. Mrs. Lloyd Horne sang beautifully, "Cast Thy Burden on the Lord," by Hamblin.

The study chapter in "Friends of Africa" was given by Mrs. R. Fletcher Williams. Mrs. D. S. Coltrane told interestingly of the community work in the Kentucky hills, and of the school at Pine Ridge.

The attendance prize was won by Circle No. 2, Mrs. T. A. Hunter, chairman.

MRS. J. M. STONE.

MT. PLEASANT MISSIONARY SOCIETY

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of Mt. Pleasant church met at the parsonage with Mrs. G. F. Millaway.

At this meeting the two societies consolidated. So we now have a Woman's Auxiliary, with Mrs. J. E. Stafford as president. For the present we will have two treasurers.

The Auxiliary was then divided into three circles. We hope to do better work under the new rule.

After the business of the meeting was over Mrs. Millaway, assisted by Miss Georgia Amick, served a dainty luncheon, which was enjoyed by all.

SALLIE AMICK,

Cor. Sec'y, W. F. M. S.

ASHEBORO MISSIONARY SOCIETY

The Woman's Missionary Society of Asheboro met with Mrs. J. S. Lewis Monday afternoon, February 18. Especial emphasis was placed on the observance of the Prayer Day program in connection with the regular program.

Reports from the officers and circle chairmen were of unusual interest. Receipts from the thank-offering service, commemorating the 50th anniversary of the founding of the society, almost completed the budget for the year. Plans were begun for the state meeting, which will be held in the local church April 9-11, inclusive. The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Wm. C. Hamner; vice-president, Mrs. W. F. Redding, Jr.; recording secretary, Mrs. Jesse Pugh; corresponding secretary, Miss Lollie Jones; treasurer, Miss Esther Ross.

At a meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society on the following Monday it was unanimously decided that a merger of the Ladies' Aid and Missionary Society be effected and arrangements were made for the planning of the work for the year. The following ladies have been named as circle chairmen by the executive committee: Circle No. 1, Mrs. Earl Bulla; Circle No. 2, Mrs. W. M. Ridge; Circle No. 3, Mrs. J. E. Pritchard; Circle No. 4, Mrs. D. R. Lowdermilk; Circle No. 5, Mrs. W. F. Redding, Jr.

The secretaries of the various causes are: Missionary education, Miss Lollie Jones; spiritual life and temperance, Mrs. Eunice Hayworth; life, memorial and perpetual members, Mrs. T. F. Bulla; literature and benevolences, Mrs. Clyde Hendricks; Christian education and scholarship, Miss Ethel Lovett; pastor's aid, Miss Esther Ross; thank-offering, Mrs. L. F. Ross; young people's work, Miss Kate Bulla. Mrs. J. S. Lewis has been elected assistant treasurer. Standing finance committee is composed of Mrs. J. E. Pritchard, Mrs. J. S. Lewis, and Mrs. W. F. Redding, Jr.

LOLLIE JONES, Cor. Sec'y.

PINE RIDGE PICTURES

Rev. Frederick J. Baylis, of Bluffs, Illinois, spent nearly two weeks with us at Pine Ridge last September, and, being deeply interested in our work here, he got all the information he could and also secured quite a number of interesting pictures. From these he has had made a fine collection of art colored stereopticon slides, and from the information he has prepared a lecture to go with the slides. I have not seen the lecture. I have no doubt it is interesting, but I suspect that because of his kindly appreciation of all of us here, he is saying things about us that are too nice, but if he succeeds in winning a lot more of friends for us, I guess we can stand it.

If pastors or other representatives in any of our churches and church organizations feel it would be a good thing to have their people better informed about Pine Ridge, write Bro. Baylis, and he will be glad to arrange a date for you to have the slides and lecture. Of course you will be expected to pay postage and the only other requirement is that you distribute some cards which will be sent with the outfit, asking for names and addresses of interested friends and whatever evidence of co-operation they may be disposed to make.

Note: Material for the two talks may be secured from the Associate Executive Secretary, 516 North Charles street, Baltimore, Md. Many of the merged auxiliaries have studied the Foreign study book the first six months, and desire to study the Home study book for the remainder of the year. This book may be secured from this office, 516 North Charles street, Baltimore, Md., by sending sixty cents.

All or any part of the devotional material may be used.

HOLLISTER MISSIONARY SOCIETIES

The Woman's Missionary Societies of Hollister church met in the home of Mrs. E. T. Ellington on Tuesday, March 12, with Mrs. C. L. Spencer presiding. The devotional was led by the writer. The last chapter in the study book was given by Mrs. J. L. Alston. We were very glad to have Mrs. Glenn join our society at this meeting.

We organized our societies into one, known as the Woman's Auxiliary. We are expecting to pay our budget in full.

This being the time for election of officers, the following were elected: President, Mrs. C. L. Spencer; vice-president, Mrs. E. T. Ellington; secretary and treasurer, Rev. C. L. Spencer; corresponding secretary, Miss Kathleen Shearin.

Our society is small but is very active.

KATHLEEN SHEARIN, Cor. Sec'y.

—Mr. Richard Wright, wealthy capitalist of Durham, died recently at the age of 77. We believe he was a brother of Mrs. Rev. J. R. Ball.

—The Charlotte News is receiving the congratulations of many friends. Beginning in a small way 40 years ago, it has grown to be a great daily. It has just moved into a new home and installed a great press and is prepared to render still better and larger service. Those now in charge are to be congratulated and commended.

—Prof. T. E. Whitaker, head of Oak Ridge Institute, died last night after a brief illness of indigestion. His age was 63. He filled a difficult position and his place will be hard to fill as well as he filled it.

—Five hundred children are injured annually in the United States by playing with blasting caps left lying around carelessly after explosives have been used. Eighty per cent of these accidents occur in rural districts.

—Carolina mountain counties have caught the lespedeza fever and the first co-operative shipment of seed for Yadkin county was placed last week.

—Nearly $9,000 has accrued to farmers of Lincoln county from three sales of poultry held during the past six weeks.

—Grape plantings in the Valdese community of Burke county will not be greatly enlarged this year because of the outlook for the industry.

—Pastures are being planted in Alamance county at the rate of 40 acres a day when weather permits.

—About 400 additional acres will be planted to peanuts in Scotland county as a result of a recent meeting of those who grew the crop last season.

—The Republican and Democratic National and State Committees spent a total of $16,586,115 in the presidential campaign of 1928.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Spring Hill, West Thomasville Charge.—Our Sunday school is increasing in number, having 100 on roll today. Mr. Holt, from the High Point College, was with us again for Sunday school today.

Rev. T. J. Whitehead filled his 11 o'clock appointment March 17. Like all his other messages, it was very impressive to all. Each sermon proves to be more interesting than the previous one.

President S. W. Taylor visited us Sunday, March 10, at 11 o'clock, with a very encouraging sermon. We were glad to have him with us for Sunday school. His visit was much enjoyed.

We are now working on our Easter program, and planning to have all-day services. There will be Sunday school at 10 o'clock, followed by the Easter exercise, which will continue until the afternoon, when Pastor Whitehead will be present. Every one is invited to come and bring dinner.

Harrison Tise has undergone an operation for appendicitis. He is getting along nicely.

REPORTER.

First Church, Thomasville.—On Wednesday night, March 13, Dr. H. W. Stephenson, executive secretary of the Board of Religious Education, gave a talk on the programs of the General Conference. Mr. Stephenson made plain to the church its duty and also what our denomination is doing.

The young men's class had charge of the Sunday school on last Sunday morning. The attendance was very good, but not what we hope for in the future. At this hour, the "Eastern Star Colored Quartet" gave some special music.

A thank-offering service was held on last Sunday night under the direction of the Young People's Missionary Society. This program took the place of the regular Sunday night service. We were favored with special music by the Clinard sisters of this city. Mrs. H. W. Maier gave a very interesting talk. She introduced her talk by an appropriate monologue. She took as her text, "What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits to me?" The answer to this question was, "I will pay my vows now in the presence of all his people." Every one enjoyed the talk, which was given in a most effective way.

There have been some additions to the membership of the church. We were glad to welcome into our midst Mr. and Mrs. B. P. Garrett. Our pastor, Rev. H. L. Powell, and his family joined us on their arrival among us. With all working together, we are looking forward to a great year.

JUANITA DORSETT, Reporter.

South Lexington Church.—Bro. Isley filled his appointment Sunday at 11 o'clock with an excellent sermon to the young people. The old enjoyed it just as well as the young. There were many out.

Sunday marked a day of joy in our Sunday school. We had set as our goal 203, but Sunday we numbered 208. We are very glad indeed to see so many people come out to Sunday school. We are also proud of the interest manifested. We realize there is a great deal to be done and the people of the church are the ones who must do it.

We have taken up the New Century problem and are hoping to get to work just as soon as we receive our literature. We have chosen a committee of nine to push this work onward by the assistance and backing of the church as a whole; the committee is as follows: Educational committee, W. C. Gibson; phones, Bean and Lena Hedrick; the stewardship committee, H. C. Koontz, Mrs. B. C. Everidge and Guy Barber; financial committee, Mrs. Bryan Myers, Henry Yates and R. C. Gibson.

We feel like these people will put forth every effort and the church will make a great move. We must do these things; it is a part of God's work. May we all get new inspiration and go forward and do the things God has for us to do. God will help us carry on this good work if we each do our part. Pray for us and our work.

REPORTER.

Davidson Circuit.—Flu has fled and mumps is waning and the outlook is brightening. Congregations are growing, finances picking up, and our spirits are revived.

Lineberry is far in the lead on finances and other things as well. They have one of the best C. E. societies here we ever attended. They have an average of about 100 in attendance. Bro. Jesse Taylor is the efficient president and is doing things in a big way. We have a large group of as fine young people here as you can find anywhere.

Our good brother, Thomas Hall, who is about 60 years young, is one of our most faithful in time and active service; always on hand on time, and never flinches when the collar presses his shoulders.

We regret the fact of the serious illness of Mrs. Reed, who has undergone a major operation at High Point Hospital. She is a daughter of our Bro. W. A. Frank, of Handy. We hope for her a speedy recovery.

Pastors who have served this charge will join us in our sadness at the going out of Sister Madison Taylor. For many long years her home was like an oasis in the desert to weary and worn prophets of God. "One by one we are going down the valley."

W. D. REED.

High Point.—At the hour for morning worship on Sunday, Clarence Schultheiss sang a beautiful solo, "Prepare Ye," with organ accompaniment by Prof. E. B. Stimson, and the choir rendered the beautiful anthem, "The Lord Is Exalted," by Marston. An interesting feature of this service was the presence of Dr. A. Norman Ward, president of Western Maryland College, Westminster, Md., who led in prayer. The pastor, Rev. R. I. Farmer, chose as the subject of his discourse, "Christ Challenging the Heroic," the text being found in Luke 9:62: "No man having put his hand to the plow, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God." Jesus challenges everybody, but it is His delight to challenge the heroic. The way in which He chose His disciples was heroic. There were three individuals, distinct types, that He would have to follow Him; the rash and precipitate disciple who said, "Lord, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest," and Jesus said unto him, "I have nowhere to lay my head." Another procrastinating disciple said, "I must go and bury my father;" the third was a wavering and irresolute disciple to whom Jesus said, "No man having put his hand to the plow, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God." Jesus was teaching truths by the challenge, "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve." These three who hesitated have been recorded in the annals of the world. The pastor said that he thinks that it is a fitting time for our church to move on in this new day for New Century Service, and his hope for Methodist Protestants everywhere is that, having laid their hand to the plow, they go forward into greater and enlarged service. He especially commended the women of the church for uniting their societies into an Auxiliary, which he considers a forward step.

At the same hours the Junior church worshiped in the assembly room downstairs, and Rev. E. Lester Ballard gave an entertaining gospel story on "What It Means to Be a Christian."

The subject of the evening message was "When Youth Plays the Fool."

On Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock the last general meeting of the Woman's Missionary Societies was held with a splendid attendance. Delegates from the Foreign society to Branch meeting at Asheboro were elected as follows: Mrs. C. L. Whitaker and Mrs. J. H. Allred, by virtue of their office as president and secretary; Mrs. C. C. Robbins and Mrs. H. A. Moffitt, with alternates, Mrs. A. M. Rankin and Mrs. J. H. Pritchard. From the Home society Mrs. Ben T. Moore and Mrs. R. T. Pickens are delegates by virtue of their office, and those elected were Mrs. S. D. Shelton and Mrs. H. A. Oakes, with alternates, Mrs. John S. Pickett and Mrs. J. W. Allred. Immediately following this meeting the Woman's Auxiliary convened, and officers were elected as follows: President, Mrs. S. S. Coe; vice-president, Mrs. J. C. Whitesell; secretary, Mrs. J. H. Walker, Jr.; assistant secretary, Mrs. J. H. Allred, and treasurer, Mrs. R. T. Pickens. The Home Missionary Society has raised $600.00 this year, as follows: Dues, $86.50; Mrs. Penny's scholarship to Pine Ridge, Kentucky, $100.00; scholarship loan fund in High Point College, $66.00; thank-offering in November, $270.00; two perpetual memberships (Mrs. Harrell and Mrs. Pickens), $60.00; Bethel Home, $12.00; Pine Ridge, $8.00, and "Buds of Hope," $1.05.

The C. E. Society enjoyed a banquet Monday evening at their weekly meeting.

The Young Woman's Auxiliary, of which Miss Mary E. Young is president, will meet Tuesday evening.

Pre-Easter services will begin Wednesday evening with a message from the pastor on "The Approach to the Cross." Cottage prayer meetings will be held at different homes on Thursday and Friday evenings. During next week, which will be Passion Week, services will be conducted every evening.

The entire congregation was pained to learn that Mrs. J. C. Welch, Sr., suffered an attack of sudden illness last Tuesday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George T. Penny, on Greensboro road, but we are much pleased to hear that her condition is much improved, and she will probably be brought to her home today. Mr. and Mrs.

Penny, who have been in Orlando, Fla., arrived at home Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. June Gray and young sons went to Charlotte last Saturday to visit Mrs. Gray's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hutchison, the former having been ill.

Dr. and Mrs. George R. Brown, of Reidsville, came over to attend the C. E. Society banquet Monday evening.

Bethel, Alamance Charge.—Our Sunday school is moving on nicely under the leadership of our faithful superintendent, Mr. Lon McPherson, who never misses a Sunday except in case of sickness. On the first Sunday in the month the primary class opened the Sunday school by reading the lesson in concert. The next Sunday the Junior class repeated the 23rd Psalm from memory.

Prayer meeting the first Sunday was very inspiring. The leader was Mrs. Lon McPherson, who used "Kindness" as the subject.

Last Sunday was another good day for us. We enjoyed the privilege of having Rev. J. F. Minnis with us in our thank-offering meeting. We hope that we may have the opportunity of hearing some more of his missionary lectures. Our offering was $24.50.

We are preparing for all-day services on Easter Sunday. We hope to have a good attendance on that day.

The ladies are planning to get together at the church on Easter Monday and plant a flower bed.

The Woman's Missionary Society met with Mrs. R. W. Lindley and held a very interesting meeting. A contest is to be put on for the purpose of securing better attendance at the meetings. The side that has the largest total attendance during the summer will be the winner. The next meeting will be held the first Sunday in April at the home of Mrs. O. C. Braxton. We are expecting to report to the Branch Meeting our budgets paid in full.

REPORTER.

Mebane.—The Senior Christian Endeavor met at the home of Miss Margaret Qualls last Thursday night. A large number of young people attended.

A short business meeting was held, with Miss Bessie Barnette, president of the society, presiding.

The meeting was then turned over to the social committee and a series of games were played with great zest.

Following the games, fruit salad was served, after which adieus were bid for the night.

Mt. Hermon, Mt. Hermon Charge.—Mt. Hermon church was highly favored when Dr. Straughn and Rev. F. L. Gibbs came here in the interest of the New Century Service. President Taylor was also present and gave us some food for thought; he and Dr. Straughn occupied the time in the forenoon; afternoon, Dr. Straughn and Mr. Gibbs. One of the most interesting features of the day was a round table discussion on "When Is a Church a Church?" Rev. J. A. Burgess gave the best answer. (If anyone wishes to know, perhaps he could be persuaded to answer through the paper). Fourteen preachers were present and eight charges and nine churches were represented. Yet there were many who might have been present who were absent. This writer enjoyed the day so much that she went to Rock Creek to hear Dr. Haddaway. Several others from Mt. Hermon charge were there. All were well paid.

Our pastor, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, continues to give us good sermons; in fact, they get better; the way his people follow him from one church to another shows how much his sermons are enjoyed.

An Easter service will be held at 11 o'clock.

(We'll never rest till we know. On with your answer, Bro. Burgess!—Editor).

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—We had very good attendance at Sunday school and prayer meeting last Sunday. We were glad to have visitors. The prayer meeting was conducted by Bro. Henry Wilson, who made a good talk.

The fourth Sunday in February our president was with us; the sermon was excellent, this was also communion day, which service was very beautiful. After the communion service President Taylor had his business meeting, in which he gave us good advice and good instructions. Every one present enjoyed his visit. We were also glad to have his wife (who was one of our girls) worship with us. Pastor Trollinger was with us the second Sunday afternoon, and we are looking forward to his being with us next Sunday. He preaches excellent sermons and those who do not come to hear him are missing more than they realize.

The missionary society will hold its March meeting Thursday with Mrs. R. P. Butler. The Sunday school and C. E. S. are doing good work.

An Easter service is being prepared.

With best wishes and hoping success for all charges of our conference.

March 19, 1929.

Rehoboth, Creswell Circuit.—Our pastor, Rev. R. L. Hetheox, filled his appointment the second Sunday. Due to sickness in the community only a small number were present.

The families of Captain Noah Tarkington have moved near Suffolk, Va. Captain Tarkington has a position on a sea-going tug. He is the brother of Mrs. William Totten, of Draper, N. C.

Our attendance at Sunday school is better; 25 were present the first Sunday; collection was $1.95; visitors were Mr. Wilbert Blount and Mr. Doughty, of Norfolk, Va., Miss Donnie Blount, of Roper, Miss Jennie Swain, nurse at Rex Hospital, Raleigh, and Mr. and Mrs. Jim Alexander, of Cherry, who have moved in the residence with Mrs. Pattie Spruill will be members of our Sunday school.

We are planning an Easter entertainment for Easter Sunday. Our Sunday school also wishes a speedy recovery for Mrs. William Totten, of Draper, once a worker in Rehoboth Sunday school.

REPORTER.

Siler City.—Our pastor was with us again last Sunday and began a series of sermons on the prophet Jonah.

Our Sunday school is increasing, we are glad to say. The Junior department will give an Easter exercise the fifth Sunday evening under the auspices of Misses Sallie Smith, Minnie Cooper and Mrs. Duncan Welch.

The second quarterly conference of this charge convened at Liberty last Sunday. Quite a number from both churches were there and took a part in the service.

The play which has been given at several different churches by the Woman's Auxiliary of Calvary church, under the direction of Mrs. Bates, will be given at the Liberty church Tuesday, March 26th. It is hoped that a number of the Siler City people will attend also.

We are very glad to know that Mr. Phil Siler, who spent quite a while in Clinic Hospital, Greensboro, has returned and is improving rapidly.

REPORTER.

First Church, Winston-Salem.—"Work, for the night is coming when man's work is done." A two weeks' revival service was started Sunday morning. This is a very effective way to approach the Easter season. It should be remembered "the way home is the way of the cross."

Last week was observed as Witness Week. At that time personal work was done. We feel that much was accomplished and we trust this work will continue during the meetings.

The men and women will meet separately in rooms set aside for prayer and personal workers' band. These groups will meet promptly at 7:00 each evening during the revival services.

The Woman's Missionary Society, composed of a joint meeting of the Woman's Foreign and Home Missionary Societies and the Ladies' Aid Society, will meet Tuesday afternoon at 3:00 at the church. This meeting for the merging of the societies will be both important and interesting. All the ladies of the church are urged to be present. We hope that the joining together of these societies will be a greater blessing to the church and society.

The Christian Endeavor is having some very interesting meetings, but we would like to see more young people taking part in this work. This should be the slogan for all: "You Need the Church—The Church Needs You."

EVELYN SMOTHERS.

Asheboro.—One of the most impressive occasions which we have witnessed for quite a while was the annual Father and Son banquet here last Friday night, March 15. Quite a fine company of men and boys were on hand for the occasion and all seemed to have a good time. Rev. E. L. Ballard, of High Point, rendered a number of splendid and appropriate songs, while Rev. D. I. Farmer, of High Point, brought us a fine message. This was the first opportunity our people generally had had of hearing Brother Farmer and they were delighted with him. Capt. A. M. Rankin, of High Point, was introduced and made some encouraging remarks, as did Mr. Hackney, the Boy Scout director for this district. The women of the church served the banquet free. Mr. O. E. Rich was awarded the honors for having the largest number of boys present—four.

The Brotherhood of our church had a delightful meeting recently and new officers were elected, as follows: President, Prof. T. F. Bulla; vice-president, Mr. D. D. Almond; secretary-treasurer, Mr. Dallas Rich.

Yesterday morning the Sunday school attendance was 201—the largest for the winter, and the attendance at church service was good.

We expect to have a communion service on Thursday evening before Easter and to have preaching on Good Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The children are practicing for the Easter service, which will be on Easter Sunday morning, and the choir, under the splendid leadership of Mrs. H. W. Walker, is working hard on a fine musical program which will be given Easter Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

St. Paul, Greensboro.—The usual services were held last Sunday with good attendance. The pastor, Rev. N. Brittain, preached a good sermon at this service and Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Wilson had their baby, Dorothy Lee, baptized.

Our Sunday school is taking on new life as spring approaches. The Royal Blue class is going to hold a class meeting at the parsonage some time this month. We are planning to have an Easter program for Easter Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Brittain and Miss Lenora Lineberry attended the services at Flat Rock.

The Ladies' held their meeting Saturday night with Mrs. R. C. Lineberry. There was a good crowd out. After the business meeting was over we were invited into the dining room where delicious refreshments were served.

Our Christian Endeavor has gained until it has been divided and now we have the Senior and Junior Endeavor. They have a contest on to raise $50 for the college assessment, and they are going to reach their goal.

REPORTER.

Piney Grove.—While I am not a reporter, I wish to take the opportunity in thanking the one who was kind enough to send me a copy of the Herald, which we thoroughly enjoyed, and think it is just an ideal little paper. However, I found no report from Piney Grove. While I feel sure the efforts of the pastor and others are well worth mention, surely the untiring efforts of the superintendent and wife will meet their reward.

Bro. E. A. Bingham, pastor, filled his appointment Sunday p. m., March 10, with a sermon that did our hearts good and made us feel indeed: "Oh, for a closer walk with God."

There will be an Easter entertainment on Saturday night, March 30.

MRS. P. E. ALBERTSON.

Elbaville, Mocksville Circuit.—The work at our church is progressing nicely. We have a good Sunday school and much interest is manifested. Bro. Braxton filled his appointment Sunday at 2:30 o'clock. He delivered a very good sermon.

The Ladies' Aid Society is doing fine work among the sick and needy.

Our revival meeting will take place the first Sunday in July. Let us pray that God will send us just the blessings that we need. If we pray earnestly we will have great success. May we go out and reach those who know not God and His great arm of love. May God bestow His richest blessings upon each reader of the Herald and keep them that they may observe these few days of Lent as He would have them.

Mount Pleasant.—We have been remembered with material things by Mrs. Thomas Smith, Mrs. R. C. Causey, Mrs. W. G. Causey, Mrs. L. L. Bowman, Mrs. Caroline Lineberry and Roy, her son, and Miss Georgia Amick. We appreciate the kindness of these people.

G. F. MILLAWAY.

Liberty, N. C., Route 2.

West Forsyth.—Last Sunday was a beautiful day, the weather being ideal, which afforded people a splendid opportunity for church attendance. Muddy roads of the previous week had improved considerably by Sunday morning and this added to the pleasure of travel to and from church services.

The pastor was at Pleasant Hill for Sunday school and the regular preaching service. The Sunday school attendance was the largest this year. There was also a larger attendance than usual in the preaching service. We were pleased to have several visitors at the service. Some former members of Pleasant Hill were with us, and some members who had not been present for some time on account of sickness were in attendance. The congregation was very attentive to the efforts of the pastor in the delivery of the message.

The pastor and family were very pleasantly entertained in the splendid home of Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Long, who are among the oldest citizens of the Pleasant Hill community and members of Pleasant Hill church, for dinner last Sunday. The dinner was a bountiful spread. Their son, W. A. Long, and family, also reside in the home, and they all are very congenial and hospitable people. The elder Mr. and Mrs. Long are a genuine type of people whose church relationships and activities date back almost half a century ago.

We were met with a large congregation at Tabernacle church last Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The writer was suffering with throat trouble caused by a severe cold and had invited an M. E. pastor of the community to attend the service. The other preacher was there and relieved the pastor of the delivery of the sermon. We were glad to have Rev. S. W. Johnson, pastor of two rural M. E. churches in Forsyth county, to preach to the large congregation in attendance. He delivered a very helpful sermon on the subject, "Waiting Experiences."

In our brief report to the Herald last week we failed to mention the fact that Rev. F. L. Gibbs, of the department of religious education of the General Conference, delivered a splendid address to the Christian Endeavor Society of Pleasant Hill church on the previous Sunday. The meeting was held at 6:30 o'clock, just preceding the meeting in the interest of the New Century Service, at which Bro. Gibbs spoke again, delivering a most interesting and instructive address. The pastor and family were pleased to have him as their guest Sunday night. He departed Monday morning for another group meeting in another part of the state.

The dates for two of the annual revival meetings on West Forsyth charge have been determined. The first one will be at Union Hill church, beginning the second Sunday in July, and the other one will be at Tabernacle church, beginning the third Sunday in July. Two other meetings will likely follow these, the one on the fourth Sunday in July and the other on the first Sunday in August.

The pastor and family are thankful for a number of useful gifts from people of Pleasant Hill church and the community of Dosier. Mrs. Ellis Long appeared at the door of the parsonage one day last week and the evidence of her presence was the noise of a big, cackling hen, which she presented to the mistress of the parsonage. The week previous the pastor visited the home of Mrs. W. W. Whitman, of the Tabernacle church, and when he departed a nice, young hen was placed in the Ford. The visiting young preacher (Gibbs) aided the pastor and family in devouring this fowl. We also thank Mrs. Mary Long, Mrs. Arthur Long, Mrs. C. G. Hunter, Mrs. W. A. Long and Bro. Holt Long for useful gifts.

Our appointment for next Sunday will be with the Harmony Grove church.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Chase City Charge.—We are serving this charge for our second year. These people continue to be our friends and are interested in our little church there. We could render them better service if we were not so far from them. They have carried on their S. S. during the winter months and hold prayer meetings on Sunday nights when there is no preaching.

The state has taken over the road from Chase City to Clarksville and made it a good sand-clay road. This road passes by our church and it makes it easy for many of our people to reach our church. We hope to see our church here grow and become a power in the community. These people are appreciative and deserve to succeed.

J. B. O'BRIANT.

Henderson.—Since our last report many interesting things have taken place. The thank-offering service of the Foreign Missionary Society was a splendid success. The program was one of the best ever given by that organization and the offering, which amounted to $88, was larger than any that we have seen reported in the Herald.

A Brotherhood has been organized with 20 members and as many more are expected to join at an early date. Clyde Finch is the president, with C. M. Hight, vice-president, and J. B. Hicks, secretary-treasurer. The next meeting will be held the last Thursday night in March. The men of the church are enthusiastic about this new organization and we expect to have some interesting reports of its work later.

Last Sunday was a good day for us. The morning congregation practically filled the main auditorium of the church. The Young Ladies' League had charge of the evening service, giving a program of song and story which was heard with a great deal of interest by a good-sized congregation.

The choir is in better condition than it has been in for many months. Mrs. F. R. Harris, who is a very capable leader, is directing it. Mrs. S. R. Watson is organist. The music is inspiring and helps to make our services uplifting to all who attend.

We are hoping to receive some new members into our church Easter Sunday. There are a number of Methodist Protestants living in Henderson who hold their membership elsewhere. Some of these should unite with us on that day. Others, we hope, will come on profession of faith.

R. A. HUNTER.

Vance Circuit.—We have thought for some time that we would write a little about our work on Vance charge. We were assigned to this work in January, 1929, after two months of the Conference year were gone. We have found the people here to be a very appreciative people. We did not get to meet with the New Hope people until the first Sunday in February. We have here some very good people and they can do things on a greater and larger scale that will mean much for their church and community.

Flat Rock people repaired their church and added Sunday school rooms last year while Bro. Chambliss was with them. They seem to be in a fine spirit to work and are making progress.

We found a fine-working little band at Spring Valley, and they seem to be very much alive and awake to the interest of the church.

At Gillburg we found good people, but just a little discouraged. We believe, however, they are overcoming their difficulty and will soon get back to doing good work.

At Harris Chapel there are some splendid people who are interested in their church, and we believe they will continue to do good work.

Fairly good congregations have greeted us at all of the churches, which we appreciate very much, and hope to be some help to these good people during our stay here.

J. B. O'BRIANT.

Mt. Hermon Charge.—All the community and church extends sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Holt because of the passing of their only daughter, Juanita Dare. She was only six months and seven days old. Yet in so short a time she became very much entwined about the hearts of those who knew her. She was an unusually likeable baby.

Friendship church has raised money to buy a hundred "Cokesbury Hymnals." The pledges were taken last Sunday afternoon and immediately after service the pledges were paid almost in full. The books will be ready for use by Easter if not before. This makes three of the churches of Mount Hermon charge equipped with these books.

The Christian Endeavor at Bellemont is doing splendidly. The average attendance runs about 40. Many of these participate in each service. The group held a social at the home of Mr. Baker on March 16.

The people at Bellemont church have covered their church. The roof is of galvanized shingles and shows up well. With the exception of only a few dollars it has been paid for.

All the churches on the charge have finished paying the college assessment in full. The people at Mt. Hermon raised their balance at the last preaching hour.

All revivals have been planned and help arranged for. The date and help for each church is as follows: Bellemont, June 4, Rev. N. G. Bethea; Cedar Cliff, July 28, Rev. O. C. Loy; Friendship, August 4, Dr. T. M. Johnson, and Mt. Hermon, August 18, Rev. Fred W. Paschall.

Bellemont church will hold its regular annual Memorial Day service the fourth Sunday in May. Mt. Hermon will hold hers the third Sunday in May. Friendship will observe the second Sunday of May or June as Memorial Day. Each of these is an all-day service with dinner on the ground. All friends and relatives to those buried are invited.

Dulins, Mocksville Charge.—Our Sunday school and preaching service were well attended by both the young and old. We are indeed glad to have the older people worship with us.

Our pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton, brought to his hearers a sermon about the crucifixion of Christ. Every one thought it was an inspiring sermon. It made them feel as if they would like to hear it again.

Since our last report we have purchased 36 new hymn-books, which we are thankful for.

Our Sunday school primary classes are preparing to give an Easter program Easter Sunday afternoon.

Definite plans were made yesterday to hold our youth service program April 21 at 11 o'clock. The young people of our church are looking forward to that date, and planning to do our best.

We are badly behind financially. The stewards have resolved to look after the salary a little closer and see if they can't regain some lost time.

We ask the prayers of our former pastors that we may grow better every day as a church.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.
REPORTER.

Burlington, First Church.—Since our last report our young son, L. A., Jr., has been right sick, but we are glad indeed to say that he is much improved and gaining back his health.

Attendance at the Sunday school today stood at 382, showing an increase of 39 over last Sunday. Offering amounted to $22.85.

Bro. Gerringer brought a very powerful sermon at both the morning and evening preaching services. The subject at the morning hour was, "The Place of the Holy Spirit in a Revival." This theme was indeed appropriate, as our revival began today. Dr. J. D. Williams, a former pastor of the first church, will arrive Monday to do the preaching for us, and Bro. T. O. Pender, well known leader of music throughout the North Carolina Conference, will lead the singing for us. Thirteen churches of this city have entered into a simultaneous revival and in co-operating with the other churches we are holding our meeting now. We must each one pray and work that our Heavenly Father may bless us in sending a great ingathering of souls during these days of the campaign.

Mr. Jeff Campbell, Maple Avenue, one of our faithful members, is ill at this time and we pray that God will bless and restore him soon.

The Baraca class voted to attend the revival in a body Thursday evening of this week and also on Thursday of next week. The Philathea class is to come in a group Wednesday evening.

The second quarterly conference met on Wednesday, the 13th, and matters of business were disposed of. Among the items of importance attended to was the nominating of two brethren for nominees for delegate to represent the church at the next Annual Conference. The brethren named were Messrs. J. E. Moore and A. B. Holt.

The Girl's Mission Band held its regular monthly meeting Tuesday night at the home of Mrs. L. W. Gerringer. The meeting was opened with a song and Scripture read. The band was then led in prayer by Katherine Dixon and Frances Hinshaw. As the society is to have charge of the Sunday school program for Sunday the program was discussed and made out. The dialogue that is to be given in the Sunday program was then given. The election of officers came next. The officers elected are as follows: President, Sarah Thompson; vice-president, Margaret Hinshaw; secretary, Margaret Cole; treasurer, Marguerite Dixon; press reporter, Margaret Rogers. Plays were discussed and a committee appointed to see about them, as follows: Chairman, Margaret Rogers, Margaret Hinshaw and Margaret Cole. After the meeting adjourned delightful refreshments were served.

"EVOLUTION DISPROVED"

Anti-evolutionists will ask the legislature of every state to enact a law (or submit such enactment to the voters) prohibiting, in all tax-supported schools, instruction that man came from the brute by evolution and was not created.

Evolution is not proven and is not true, and voters have a right to say it shall not be taught in the schools as science and the truth. Rev. W. A. Williams, D. D., Camden, N. J., will send a copy of his recent book, "Evolution Disproved," free to every member of a committee considering such a bill, and one to every member of the legislature free, if some-one will forward to him 20 cents per copy, one-fifth price. "Unanswerable," "masterful," "an absolute demonstration," "fully disproves evolution," etc.

TABERNACLE PREACHERS

President Taylor said some time ago that Flat Rock church had sent out more preachers than any other church in our conference, ten men having gone out from that church. Tabernacle church has furnished our conference eleven preachers, as follows: Revs. Joseph Causey, J. W. Heath, J. M. Kennett, W. C. Kennett, R. R. Hanner, W. D. Fogleman, S. W. Coc, W. F. Kennett, T. F. McCulloch, J. F. McCulloch and H. F. Fogleman.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Dezarn

Georgia D. Dezarn died March 2, 1929, aged 31 years, nine months and 13 days. She professed faith in Christ at the early age of eleven years, and united with Pilot church and remained a loyal member till called home. She was married to Julius Dezarn on December 29, 1915. To this union were born four children. She leaves a husband, four children, a father, mother, six brothers and four sisters, besides a host of other relatives and friends. As a child Georgia was said to be obedient to her parents, and later in life a dutiful wife and mother, devoted to her home and family. Her life, though short, was lived so as to make friends of all who knew her, and she will be greatly missed by all, and especially by her dear little children. No one has ever been able to tell the exact loss of a good mother out of the home. No one can fill her place with the little ones, and the husband can never know the loss until she has gone and left him with the responsibilities of father and mother too.

Our hearts go out in sympathy for him in this sad trial and dark hour. May the Lord's blessings rest upon him and direct him in training these little ones.

This is another call to us to be ready, for we know not when the Son of man cometh.

Funeral services were held by the writer and the remains were laid to rest in Pilot cemetery to await the final resurrection.

May the good Lord bless the bereaved.

A. L. HUNTER.

Causey

Miss Martha Jane Causey was born October 18, 1851, and passed from this life February 20, 1929. In young girlhood Sister Causey accepted Christ as her personal Savior and joined Tabernacle Methodist Protestant church, remaining a faithful and consistent member until death. Miss Causey made no display of her religion but she was true and kind and loyal, doing what she could to make her community better.

She was the last member of the Levi Causey family to depart this life. One brother, D. M. Causey, and three sisters, Dora, Nancy and Mrs. Roddy Fields, preceded her to the grave several years ago. The following nephews and nieces survive: Bros. C. R. and W. H. Fields, Mrs. R. P. Fields, Mrs. J. F. Brown, Mrs. W. E. Hackett, Mrs. Floyd Allred and Mrs. Carey Kirkman.

For a number of years Miss Causey lived in the home of Brother C. R. Fields. Brother Fields and family are to be commended for ministering to her needs so lovingly and tenderly.

The writer conducted the funeral at Tabernacle church February 21, 1929. Her body was then laid to rest in the church cemetery.

Servant of God, well done;

Thy glorious warfare's past;

The battle's fought, the race is won,

And thou art crowned at last.

Poythress

Sunday morning, March 10, 1929, the soul of little Philip B. Poythress, Jr., took its flight to heaven. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip B. Poythress, of Henderson, N. C. He was born November 23, 1928. He was sick only a few days with pneumonia. Although very young he stood it bravely until the end. He being the only child, we know it was very, very hard for them to give him up, but yet we know his little soul has gone where sorrow and pain are unknown. May the Lord bless and lead them through life that they may meet him again. He was always a sweet baby from the time he began noticing anyone and was loved by all who knew him.

He was laid to rest under a beautiful mound of flowers in the family cemetery, near the home of his great-grandfather, G. M. Stainback.

His cradle bed is vacant,

His mother's heart is sad,

His father is hearbroken

For his sweet and precious lad.

He is sleeping, sweetly sleeping

In a new-made grave today;

We are weeping, sadly weeping,

For our darling's gone away.

He is sleeping, but not forever;

In a land that's far away

We shall meet to part, no never,

In a bright and endless day.

ALMA POYTHRESS.

Marion

Maggie Aletha Marion, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Marion, died February 17, 1929, aged 50 years, nine months and one day.

On January 20, 1909, she was happily married to H. D. Wall. To this union were born two sons, Claude S. and Paul W. Wall.

She was a faithful and devoted wife, a kind and loving mother. When quite a young girl she professed faith in Christ and joined the Methodist Protestant church and had lived a consecrated Christian life.

She had been afflicted for more than a year, but bore her suffering patiently and submissively, with her usual smile. It was seldom we ever saw Maggie while in health that she failed to meet us with a smile, seemingly cheerful and happy, and never seemed to tire of doing anything that fell to her lot to do. Those who were at her bedside during her last hours said she expressed her willingness and readiness to go and be with her Saviour.

Besides her husband and children she leaves four brothers and a number of other relatives and friends to mourn their loss. She will be missed in her home, church and community, but most of all in her home where she so willingly administered to the wants and needs of each member of the family.

May the husband and two sons who so faithfully and willingly did their part in administering to her needs during all of her afflictions be amply repaid for all their service, and may this sad providence serve to draw the family, relatives and friends nearer the cross, and may we all feel more and more the importance of being prepared to go and meet our loved ones in the sweet by-and-by.

Funeral services were held by the writer, after which interment was made in the Mt. Zion cemetery.

The family have our heart-felt sympathy in this sad bereavement.

Our denominational fiscal year ends April 30. Six months of our conference year will end on the same date. We are being urged to make April "Pay Up" month. This means that we are expected to pay all of our apportionments in full for the six months of our conference year. If we go about it in a determined and systematic way, we ought to have little difficulty in doing this for our Lord and His church.

On April 1, one of our Gratitude Gift notes will fall due and it must be paid. We hope our churches will bear this in mind and make it possible for us to meet this obligation in full. In addition to this note, we must pay the interest on two other G. C. notes, each amounting to $1,000.00. It takes money, brethren, to do these things. It is a pity that we do not pay these notes and stop the interest.

Your treasurer has been notified by the General Conference officers that contributions made to the Student Loan Fund, passing through his hands, are to be credited on G. C. B. Several contributions have been received for this fund, and credit has been given the churches, or charges, from which received.

Clothes and Other Necessities

Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Sizemore drove by one day last week and left a good quilt for a bed. We thank them.

About two weeks ago a fine looking man drove by and left 12 gallon cans of fine preserved cherries. I thought it was someone leaving some canned goods that Mrs. Dixon had ordered. But when we got it into the kitchen and examined the labels we soon saw that it was a choice product such as our financial condition here will not permit us to order. It has proven a very fine treat for our children. If the brother will reveal his identity we shall be glad.

A Suggestion

Several used to send to the Home the price of Sunday eggs. There are only about three of our ladies who have kept this up. We thank the three, and appeal to the many to take it up again.

Note above that Mrs. M. E. Moore, of Siler City, has already sent her personal offering for Easter. If many others would do likewise in addition to the regular offerings it will do much to help us over a difficult position. We thank Mrs. Moore for setting the pace.

Thanks for response to refurbish rooms. Much is needed in the way of refurbishing rooms in the girls' dormitory. Several have responded favorably to our call for this, and First church, Burlington, and Tabernacle church on Tabernacle charge, are working away to secure their amounts. We thank these and also the others who have indicated a willingness to do the thing.

In the fall when we came here we asked especially for two things—chickens and bed quilts. The folks responded beautifully and as a result we are now getting from ten to twelve dozen eggs per day—a great help in a big family. Quilts came in until we are pretty well supplied with good quilts.

Some Immediate Needs

Mrs. Dixon says that we are short of sheets and pillow cases, bed spreads, table cloths and napkins. Especially sheets and spreads for single beds. We will thank you for your help here. For all your thoughtfulness of our needs we thank you.

Faithfully,

A. G. DIXON.

Glad Easter Day

Then were the disciples glad, when they saw the Lord.

—JOHN 20:20

Are northmen glad to see the sun
Returning from his yearly run,
To bring to close their lengthened night
With floods of warming, cheering light?

Are farmers glad to see the rain
With promised plenty in its train,
Who did not know what they would do
Before the showers came in view?

Do war-cursed nations welcome peace
And all the joy of glad release
From sore distress and all the fears
That drive to madness or to tears?

Do storm-tossed sailors hope for day,
So helpless they can only pray,
While lightnings flash and thunders growl
And all the winds do madly howl?

But these all look for things they know,
For things the ways of nature show:
The much desired is well assured,
But little doubt 'twill be secured.

But take the case of men who yearn
For gift ne'er given by nature stern,
Who long for what they cannot hope
In all the realm of prospect's scope.

No man e'er broke the bars of death;
And hope goes out when goes the breath:
The dead and buried come not back,
Of proof of this there is no lack.

Both James and John and all the rest
In state of mind are much depressed.
Old hopes are gone and new hopes too,
They know not what in world to do.

He whom they'd come to know as Lord,
To whom they looked for guiding word,
Has met foul play and is no more!
Could earth e'er have a darker hour?

To prostrate forms Dame Rumor hastes;
They sit and note, but words she wastes.
They don't believe, they can't believe;
No rumor can their fears relieve.

The night comes on, a night of gloom,
And they're together in one sad room;
The doors are shut for fear of men,
And lo! He's in their midst again!

They see their Lord, their risen Lord!
In this all minds are in accord.
And their hearts become so glad
They nevermore can be made sad!

Present Kingship of Christ

Many expressions that we hear or read indicate a widespread notion that Jesus is sometime to become King, but is not King now. Perhaps some of our hymn writers are responsible for the prevalence of this view. The Old Testament predictions also may have had a part in making this impression. Careful heed to New Testament expressions can scarcely leave such a thought in mind. Jesus said after His resurrection, "All authority is given (not will be given) unto me in heaven and earth." Paul repeatedly refers to the exalted rank of Jesus. In one place he speaks of this as a reward for His sufferings and death: "He humbled himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Wherefore God hath highly exalted him, and given him a name that is above every name: that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth, and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." Because all do not bow at the name of Jesus yet, some may imagine that Christ is not yet enthroned as King, but that would be a false inference. The purpose of God is that all men shall acknowledge Christ as King. The fact that some men do not do this dishonors Christ but does not and cannot dethrone Him. A good father or mother is ruler over their children even though some be disobedient.

Some imagine that Christ will become King when He comes to raise the dead. But Paul tells us that that will be not the beginning but the end of His kingship. In First Corinthians we read: "In Christ shall all be made alive; they that are Christ's at his coming. Then cometh the end when he shall have delivered the kingdom up to God, even the Father; for he must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet." Christ's reign is now in progress, it is a reign of conquest, and will continue until the conquest is complete.

Some are puzzled over this matter because they are accustomed to think of kingship and rule in terms of physical force. They picture for Jesus a career somewhat like that of Napoleon in his swift conquest of Europe. They imagine Jesus will subdue His enemies by a great display of physical force. They do not understand the spirit of Jesus and cannot comprehend His method. They do not see that it is His purpose to rule by love and triumph through reason. He

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

Five years ago next May the General Executive Board of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society faced a crisis. A proposition to enter a "tentative merger" with the Men's Board of Foreign Missions was laid before it. Many assurances were given it. It was told that it was only an "experiment," and if not satisfactory could be dissolved. Fifteen women who sat in that Board were credulous and voted "aye." All the misfortune that has befallen the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society in the past five years is traceable to the hour when fifteen women were beguiled into voting in favor of a tentative union.

A like crisis is approaching. Articles of Agreement have been prepared by the new Board of Missions. Strenuous effort is being made to induce the General Executive Board of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society to adopt these Articles. No stone is being left unturned to accomplish this purpose. Representatives from the new Mission Board are racing from one branch to another. They stand before the women assembled there, read the Articles of Agreement, give their own exposition of their import; urge the women to endorse them and to instruct their representatives to the approaching General Executive Board meeting to vote for their adoption. Too many women who are seated in these branch meetings are unaware of the tremendous responsibility that rests upon them. They are too credulous. They hear one side of this question and make their decision without further investigation. Women of the Foreign Missionary Society and also of the Home Missionary Society awakened to the fact that a tremendous crisis is a few paces ahead of us. The splendid women who are standing on the defense line of these two societies will not sit complacently in the General Board Meetings and see all the charter rights of these organizations voted away.

The charter of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society is granted under the laws of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. The charter of the Woman's Home Missionary Society under the laws of the State of Maryland. Every Commonwealth in the United States has its own constitutional and statutory law. The Articles of Agreement submitted to the W. F. M. S. and the W. H. M. S. are identical with the exception that an extra resolution has been added to the W. H. M. S. requiring a reduction of managers from nine to five. The consequences that will result from the adoption of these articles will be the same to both societies.

We now invite our readers to study carefully and prayerfully these Articles of Agreement as submitted by the new Board of Missions to the Executive Committees of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies, and are now being presented to the branches of the organizations, with a view to securing their approval and later their adoption by the General Executive Boards.

In order that we may have an adequate background for our analysis, we lay down the following propositions, and they are fundamentals:

1st. The General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church cannot change or in any way invalidate the charter of the Woman's Foreign Society, granted under the laws of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

The General Conference of 1928 authorized the new Union Board of Missions "to secure immediately" a charter changing all items in the charter of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society "except those of property rights," so as to harmonize them with the report of the Committee on Foreign Missions which was adopted by the General Conference. This was reaffirmed when the joint committee made its report.

June 7 and 8, 1928, the new Mission Board met in Pittsburgh. It appointed a committee to carry out the instructions of the General Conference—"to secure immediately" a charter that would change all items in the charter of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, "except those of property rights." Well, what happened? When the committee consulted an attorney and when it approached the portal of the court house, it found to its chagrin that the General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church could not lay a finger on the charter of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. It was inviolable. Only three agencies could alter or in any way amend that sacred document—the stockholders themselves; the legislature of the state; the supreme court of Pennsylvania. Under these circumstances, the new Board of Missions, instructed by the General Conference, decided that if it couldn't it wouldn't. Today the charter of the W. F. M. S. stands intact as when it was received in March, 1882.

If the reader will now turn to page four of the pamphlet recently issued by the Executive Committee of the new Board of Missions, he will find this concession:

"They (attorneys of the W. F. M. S.) take the position that neither the General Conference nor the Board of Missions has any power to change or surrender the charter of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. THIS WE DO NOT DISPUTE." We have capitalized the last sentence because of its importance. The new Board learned its lesson—the State is higher than the Church.

2nd. The General Executive Board of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society cannot alter or amend the charter of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. It is a creature of the society and subject to its will. A year ago the stockholders of the corporation voted by a large majority that they would not merge, and the General Executive Board cannot legally adopt any measure that leans in that direction.

3rd. The General Executive Board of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society cannot change the constitution and by-laws of the society in such a way as to bring them in conflict with the charter. The constitution and by-laws cannot restrict rights the charter confers.

We now turn to analysis of the Articles submitted by the new Board of Missions, and which it is straining every nerve to have adopted. We pass over the preamble and the "whereases" and come to the crux of the matter.

On page four of the pamphlet sent out by the Executive Committee of the new Board of Missions we meet this announcement:

"If you will read the plan of union again, you will note that neither the General Conference nor the Board of Missions contemplate any interference with the charter of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, in fact, the charter is not touched or changed in any way. The plan provides for the amendment of the by-laws of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and that not by the action of the General Conference nor the Board of Missions but by the legal act of the Executive Board of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society itself, at a regular meeting as provided for in its own Constitution."

A little later we will consider the contents of this paragraph. Just now our attention is drawn to the fact that, on the same page of the pamphlet considerable space is given to citations from the "opinions" of four attorneys who are the legal advisors of the women who are protesting against the action of the last General Conference. Attorney J. P. Patterson, counselor for the new Board of Missions, vouches for the high standing of these lawyers, but after their opinions relative to the legality of the Articles of Agreement have been cited, the minister who wrote the pamphlet for the Executive Committee of the new Board steps to the front and announces that these attorneys "of high standing" do not know what they are talking about. Each of these lawyers was furnished with a copy of these Articles of Agreement. They gave them careful examination and wrote out their opinions and then a minister of the gospel who in all probability never read a law book through in his life, announces four times in succession, "All this has no bearing on the case." What a backset for those lawyers!

In our consideration of these Articles of Agreement we find much that is objectionable, but we confine ourselves to the outstanding features. We begin with the first resolution; we will capitalize the most important features.

First—"That the management of the missionary activities of the Methodist Protestant Church in so far as heretofore carried on by THIS SOCIETY, SHALL IN THE FUTURE BE CARRIED ON UNDER THE JURISDICTION AND MANAGEMENT OF THE BOARD OF MISSIONS, and that, so far as the missionary activities are concerned, THE JURISDICTION AND MANAGEMENT THEREOF BY THIS SOCIETY SHALL CEASE upon being assumed by the BOARD OF MISSIONS."

In connection with this, read the third resolution:

Third—"That the branches and auxiliaries now existing shall organize in harmony with the action of the BOARD OF MISSIONS and BE UNDER THE AUTHORITY AND JURISDICTION OF SAID BOARD in the same manner as they have heretofore been under this society."

Now if we turn to page 59 of the Journal of the General Conference of 1928 we are told that "the present method of Organization and Work of the local Auxiliaries and Branches of the W. F. M. S." are not to be "interfered with."

For fifty years the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society has toiled and sacrificed to build up its organization. Twenty Branches, 700 Auxiliaries with a membership of over 10,000. All this is to continue. The women are to work as hard—yea, harder than—ever, for the overhead expenses under the new Board far exceed the overhead expenses of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. The women in the branches and auxiliaries are to make the brick, with or without straw, but they are to have new taskmasters. All management, all semblance of authority is to be taken away from the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society and be transferred to the new Board of Missions. The first article is very explicit on this point: "The missionary activities 'heretofore carried on by THIS SOCIETY shall in the future be carried on UNDER THE JURISDICTION AND MANAGEMENT OF THE BOARD OF MISSIONS,' and the MANAGEMENT thereof BY THIS SOCIETY SHALL CEASE upon being assumed by the BOARD OF MISSIONS."

Now how does this arrangement harmonize with the statement on page four of the pamphlet that "neither the General Conference nor the Board of Missions contemplate any interference with the CHARTER OF THE WOMAN'S FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETY"? The charter of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society makes it a self-administrative body. These Articles of Agreement rob the society of every scintillation of self-government. We are told that all this is accomplished by a legal act of the General Executive Board of the society in a change of the by-laws. The statement is untrue. The General Executive Board cannot change the constitution in such a way as to rob the society of rights guaranteed by the charter. The lawyer-preacher says: "It is evident that the action of the General Conference, directing the union of all our missionary activities, is 'imperative,' and must be complied with."

The General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church cannot make any illegal act "imperative." Such action would be a violation of the Constitution, Article VII:

"Neither the General Conference nor any Annual Conference shall assume power to interfere with the constitutional powers of the civil government, or with the operation of the civil laws."

The purpose of the first resolution in the Articles of Agreement submitted by the new Board of Missions is to strip the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of all the management and jurisdiction of an organization it has spent fifty years in building.

The purpose of the third resolution is to compel the women in the branches and auxiliaries to "hew the wood and draw the water" for the Board of Missions.

The second resolution in the Articles of Agreement now claims our attention:

"That the title to the property, real and personal, NOW HELD BY THIS SOCIETY, shall continue to be held by this society, and the INCOME THEREFROM, UPON RECEIPT, shall be TRANSFERRED by THIS SOCIETY to the BOARD OF MISSIONS."

Now refer to page four of the pamphlet sent out by the Executive Committee of the new Board of Missions, and find this statement:

"The plan being contemplated MAKES NO PROVISION FOR THE TRANSFER OF ANY OF THE ASSETS of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society to the Board of Missions; for it reads: 'That the property, real and personal, now held by this society, shall continue to be held by the society.'"

The trouble here is that the resolution is dismembered; it is not given in its entirety. In full it reads as follows:

"That the title to the property, real and personal, now held by this society, shall continue to be held by this society, AND THE INCOME THEREFROM, UPON RECEIPT, SHALL BE TRANSFERRED BY THIS SOCIETY TO THE BOARD OF MISSIONS."

Now the writer of the pamphlet says: "The plan being contemplated MAKES NO PROVISION FOR THE TRANSFER OF ANY OF THE ASSETS of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society to the Board of Missions."

What are assets? Assets are anything that can be placed on the credit side of the ledger; anything that is of value. Is the income from property a thing of value? Can it be placed on the credit side of the ledger? Certainly! No doubt about it! Then it is an asset.

Now we ask any fair-minded reader, Does the plan contemplated make provision for the transfer of any of the assets of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society to the Board of Missions?

Under the second resolution of the Articles of Agreement the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society may hold the empty title to its property, real and personal, but that is all it can do.

The income from all its property must be transferred to the Board of Missions.

There is another fact that must be noted here. It is this. When the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society has transferred all its income from its property, real and personal, to the Board of Missions, it has no further claims on those funds. It has neither voice nor vote as to how they shall be disbursed. It amounts to this: Pay over your income and ask no questions.

The demands made upon the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society by the new Board of Missions are not yet exhausted. Turn to the closing resolution of the Articles of Agreement and read the following:

"Be it resolved that at the next annual meeting of the Executive Board of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, to be held in May, action be taken at said meeting authorizing and amending the by-laws so that the by-laws shall provide that this society shall be managed by a Board of Managers, consisting of five women designated by the BOARD OF MISSIONS and CHOSEN FROM ITS NUMBER as elected by the General Conference."

Our analysis thus far has revealed that under the provisions of the Articles of Agreement, the branches, auxiliaries and the income of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society are to be taken from it and be transferred to the Board of Missions, and now we are required to accept a Board of Managers appointed BY THE BOARD OF MISSIONS, and CHOSEN FROM ITS NUMBER. Every vestige of JURISDICTION and AUTHORITY is to be taken from our society.

On page four of the pamphlet we read this statement:

"A very definite provision is made in the plan of union by which THEY ELECT FOR THEMSELVES a body of trustees who will hold their funds and property in the name of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society and under the rights and powers of their own charter." We challenge the statement. Look at these facts:

Under the standing rules of the General Conference, "The appointment of all committees shall be by the President, unless otherwise ordered by the Conference."

The President appoints the committee that reports on Foreign Missions. Last General Conference this committee reserved to itself the right to nominate the persons who would constitute the new Board of Missions. These nominees were elected and are serving on that Board today. That Board is to APPOINT the five women who are to MANAGE the affairs of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.

With a full knowledge of these facts the editor of this pamphlet sent out by the Executive Committee of the new Board makes the misleading statement that the members of the W. F. M. S. "elect for themselves" a body of trustees, etc.

On page three of the pamphlet this same writer informs his readers why these five women are to be appointed by and from the new Board of Missions. If they were chosen from the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society there might be friction. Those women might have a mind of their own, and that is not to be tolerated. He says:

"No action could be taken by the Board of Missions, involving the property owned by the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, without their consent and co-operation. If this property-holding body were not a part of the Board of Missions, it would result in endless delay in the work or in great expense by having both bodies meeting together as would be necessary, since one could not function without the approval of the other. Furthermore, if the property-holding body of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society were antagonistic to the work of the Board of Missions, they could prevent any action of the church relating to their property interests, such as the repair of buildings, the erection of buildings on property owned by them, the improvement of the work, etc."

According to this minister's reasoning, the best way to prevent friction with the women over their property rights would be to take their property away from them.

The statement that these five women, appointed by the Mission Board to manage the affairs of the W. F. M. S. under the rights and powers of its own charter, would not stand for a moment the test of the courts.

And now in conclusion. On the 8th day of May, 1929, the General Executive Board of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society will convene in Pittsburgh. It will be the most momentous meeting in the history of the organization. Every woman seated in that body will face tremendous problems. One of the most serious will be the Articles of Agreement submitted by the Board of Missions. How much we need to pray! Every member in that Board should bear in mind three facts:

1st. That she is a custodian of consecrated property. Not a woman seated in that Board can claim a penny or a foot of ground in fee simple. Everything is held in trust. God is the sole Proprietor of all the assets of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and every member of that Board must give an account of her stewardship.

2nd. Every woman seated in that Board should bear in mind that she is an executor of the will of women who in the past toiled and sacrificed to accumulate this property, real and personal. And in their sacrificial toil they had a definite purpose—so definite that they had it inscribed in the charter: "The object of this association shall be the educating and Christianizing of women and children in foreign lands." The women of today should never lose sight of that objective; they should never forget.

3rd. The women seated in that Board must be awake to the fact that they function under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania and are liable for any breach of their trust. The probabilities are strong—very strong—that the entire problem of the merger must be solved in the courts. We know whereof we speak. We have made careful inquiry of our attorneys as to the responsibility of the members of the General Executive Board, and the following information has been given:

1st. A member of the Board voting for the adoption of the Articles of Agreement, submitted by the new Board of Missions (if said adoption receives a majority vote) becomes personally responsible in the courts for her pro rata share of any loss sustained by the W. F. M. S. in the alienation of its assets.

2nd. A member voting against the adoption of said Articles of Agreement is not liable for any loss suffered by the society, because she exerted herself to protect the assets of the society.

3rd. A member refusing or neglecting to vote on the question is pro rata liable for any loss sustained, because she did not exert herself to protect the assets of which she is legally a custodian.

WORSHIP PROGRAMS OF THE CHURCH

Nothing that we can possibly do as a church is more important, more necessary, and more pleasing to God than our public worship. The more interesting, the more attractive, the more helpful this can be made, the stronger will be the appeal of the church, both to saints and sinners. It is the opinion of your speaker that we need to study this matter, with a view to enriching our worship programs. An important part of such programs is the sermon, of course, but that is not all. People go to church to hear the sermon, but only as an incident in the program; primarily they go to worship; the sermon is only one part of the program designed to assist them in this purpose. The music is an important help, also—even a God-designed means to assist in worship. Take the music—real gospel music, and not religious jazz—from our churches and we would be deprived of much that lifts us up to God. And the deplorable fact is that it has been taken away from the people. If they ever availed themselves of this heaven-appointed help to worship, they do not do it now. The choir does the singing for the congregation. The fact is, nobody has a book but the choir. I do not object to the choir singing. I like to hear them sing the great God-given hymns and gospel songs of the church. But the choir can not do the singing for the congregation, no more than they can do their praying or their paying. I believe that we should be scriptural in all things, and certainly there should be no failing in this when we go to the house of God to worship. What is it? "Let the people praise thee, O God; let all the people praise thee." The singing in our services is one very important way by which we render this praise, and surely the people should not be deprived of it. Not half of our churches are supplied with song books. In many cases where large congregations assemble, either for regular worship or revival meetings, practically all the books available are in the hands of the few people who sit in the choir. I can not think that this is right or necessary. To deprive a congregation of the privilege of singing is to seriously lessen the worship value of the service. Another enriching of our worship programs could be realized through the use of responsive readings, the apostles' creed, the reciting of the ten commandments and the Lord's prayer in concert. In fact, I know of no better order for the enriching of our worship programs than that given in our church hymnal. It is simple, dignified, worshipful, and easily followed by the people, when once they become accustomed to it. If local conditions necessitate some variations, that could be easily arranged. Our church hymnal is a song book of high merit, and it is regrettable that more of our churches do not use it.

Pastors, we think, should direct the worship programs of their churches. They are charged with the responsibility of developing the people they serve in the art of worship, and this they can not do unless they formulate and direct the worship programs. One pastor of a sister church said in my presence some time since, "I spent thirty minutes Saturday selecting my Sunday hymns." This, I think, reflects the right attitude of the pastor. He should regard himself not only responsible for a sermon, but for a worship program, as well, that will both inspire the people in their worship and give to them a medium through which to worship. When the program has been arranged, the pastor should direct it. There is becoming fitness, dignity and impressiveness in a pastor standing before his congregation, and with book in hand, announce the hymns, and perform all the other functions that belong to him as the director of the service. Developing the church within is essential in making it powerful without; and certainly one important way of doing this is by enriching the worship programs.—Pres. Report, Annual Conference.

A FEW OBSERVATIONS

By PHILOMATH

I went to church the other day, which, by the way, is no unusual thing for me to do. I was late, however, and this was unusual for me. I stepped into the vestibule of the church and found that the preacher was offering the opening prayer. From where I stood I could see at least two-thirds of the congregation, and I was impressed by what I saw. Some of the people were sitting with bowed heads, others were resting their heads on the tops of the pews in front of them, and still others were sitting bolt upright apparently indifferent to what was going on.

By this time, I suppose, some reader is ready to say: "Philomath, if you had been reverently engaged in prayer out there in the vestibule of that church, you would never have known what those inside were doing." Perhaps so; but the fact that I was outside made me a little curious to find out what those inside were doing during a season of prayer, and I took this opportunity of doing it. If I had been inside while the preacher was praying, the congregation would have been invisible to me. My attention would have been directed to a throne of infinite grace, and my time would have been taken up by a confession of my sins, which are many. But I was outside, and like most people who hang on the outer edge of things, I failed to appreciate the significance of the solemn occasion, or to enter into the spirit of the service.

In a little while the preacher announced that the stewards would receive the offering, and to my great surprise several of those who sat upright during the prayer went forward, received the collection plates from the hands of the preacher and went out through the congregation in quest of the Lord's money. I do not know how much they received; but I am certain that, if the members of the congregation were as indifferent about giving as those stewards were about praying, they came back with precious little more than the plates.

By this time what little mental machinery I have began to work, and it has been working more or less ever since, and here are a few of the things it worked out:

1. Many professed Christians manifest too little respect and reverence for the services of the Lord's house.

2. No matter what we may say, men judge us by our attitudes. Why not? Attitudes do not lie. If our attitudes in church, or elsewhere, indicate indifference on our part towards things sacred and holy, no amount of reasoning can convince men that we are fit to be officers in the church of Christ.

3. That if church members do not go to church to worship, they ought to stay at home, or else go to the mourners' bench and stay there until their hearts are cleansed and filled with the Holy Spirit, and their souls are all aflame with holy zeal for the things of the kingdom of God.

4. That it is high time for the church of the living God to exercise greater care in the selection of men to administer her affairs. To give a man an office for the purpose of honoring him dishonors the church. Just any one will not do. Church officials must be men "of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom," and given to meditation and prayer.

DENOMINATIONAL ENTERPRISES

SOMETHING NEW AND WONDERFUL

By REV. J. C. BROOMFIELD, D.D.

So far as my knowledge goes, this is the first time the members of our churches have been called upon to join, during one month, the month of April, in a denominational tithing of their income.

According to the figures prepared by the National Bureau of Economic Research, the net annual income of our people is over $100,000,000. The biblical tithe, one-tenth of this amount for the year, would be over $10,000,000. For April the tithe would be one-twelfth, or over $833,333.33.

Our denomination last year gave for all purposes, which means pastors' salaries, current expenses, for new church buildings, on church debts, etc., the sum of $3,139,456. April's share of that amount would be one-twelfth, or $261,621.

Take this amount from the tithe given above for April, and you have left $571,712. Thus you see, without taking one dollar from the local church, or the annual conference, or even from the regular average monthly payment to the General Conference Budget, if we would tithe our income for April we would have enough left out of our tithe to pay the entire General Conference assessment in full, and have $71,712 left for other purposes.

Think of paying out of our income for one month the entire General Conference Budget for the year, and that without taking a dollar from any other department.

Only one month remains until the close of the financial year of our denomination.

If, during the month, we join in the tithing campaign, and bring our tithe into the church treasury, we shall be able on April 30 to close the year with all bills paid, and a substantial balance for advance work.

This will be "something new and wonderful!" It can be done, and I appeal to you to do it.

AN EASTER CELEBRATION

Among Methodist Protestant people Easter has come to have more than one meaning. We count it a great privilege to celebrate the day in honor of our Lord's resurrection. To remember again not only his harrowing anticipations, the shameful mockery of trials, his agony on Calvary and the loneliness of the tomb, but the brightness and triumph of the resurrection day, is not only a duty but a spiritual benefit. To wend our way to the house of God, to fellowship with his people, to participate in the service of worship and to place upon the altar our gifts of love and hope are a part of the rich spiritual experience of the day. Few things can come to us on Easter day aside from the death of a loved one or some other similar disappointment which can destroy our joy or sense of exaltation.

As a denomination Easter has become a season of special meaning in that it has long been our custom to bring our offerings to the church to be used to promote the work of the Kingdom in the home land. We acknowledge an obligation not only to evangelize China, India and Japan but the neglected parts of America! There are pastors to support, churches and parsonages to be built and an executive to be provided to oversee such work. The record of the former

Board of Home Missions and the new Board of Missions is worthy of high praise. Our dollars have been made to do double duty and as a result there are scattered over the various states of the union numerous beautiful and useful temples of worship and comfortable, though modest, homes for the pastors.

To the denominational officers and secretaries Easter offers an opportunity to express the spirit of fellowship and co-operation which characterizes their attitude toward one another. Chosen by their church to lead great causes and enterprises, they believe the success of one makes for the success of others and especially for the progress of the Methodist Protestant Church and the Kingdom of our Lord. It is a real joy to urge our people everywhere to do their part to make Easter of 1929 one of the greatest in the history of the denomination. The Board of Missions is urgently in need of funds and a generous offering March 31 will help greatly to strengthen the hands of those responsible for this work.

F. W. STEPHENSON, Executive Secretary,
Board of Christian Education.

LIBERALITY

Some are born liberal in their spiritual employment of their privileges; most have to be educated into it; many are liberal for ulterior motives; a few have to be shamed into it, and all of us need guidance such as Paul gave to the young church at Corinth.

This was a collection for the saints. Christian giving has an altruistic purpose. The church is a family and all its members demand loving care and consideration. Each must seek the peace and prosperity of the whole.

As I have given order. Organized giving goes farthest and fares best. The apostle gave order and harmony to fluctuating sentiments. For such direction church boards are established. It is the duty of the church to follow their leadership.

Upon the first day of the week. Giving is too spasmodic when it is subject to the variable moods of the individual. Consistency is a most laudable virtue in this instance and the collection during worship is the historic attempt to sustain this virtue in the Christian life. It is not intended to enrich any one but the individual worshiper.

As God hath prospered him. There is no hard and fast law. Giving must be spiritual. God is good to all. Give Him your heart and you will give everything.

The first day of the week. Giving must be Christian. The first day reminds us of Christ's triumph. How do you value it? Let your giving record your gratitude. The Cross is the measure of giving.

Every one of you. It is not good for a church to commit the privilege of giving to a few. Every one should have a share in it. Character and responsibility are two sides of the same coin. To give is to grow; to withhold is to wither. —Selected.

—The Home Missions Council proposes that May 5 be observed as Rural Life Sunday and has prepared an elaborate program. This important topic is proposed for discussion and consideration: The Importance of the Country Church in the Life of the People. This may be made an inspiring occasion to any church, and especially to country churches, which are not always conscious of their real importance.

OPTIMISM

The President's Letter

EVANGELISM

*Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit;
so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.*

Sunday, March 24

For Sunday school and the morning worship we attended Grace, and was edified in each service. Pastor Tamblin is holding special services this week, leading up to the Easter programs next Sunday. We trust that these special efforts may be richly rewarded.

Welch Memorial

We were here, by appointment, for the night service, and found Pastor Curry and his people working zealously and unitedly to promote all the interests of the church. The pastor speaks well of the charge, and the people speak well of the pastor. This spirit of fellowship and co-operation, coupled with the progressive program which is being worked out here, will result in increasing bounds of usefulness for this church. The splendid field for service which this church has is a standing challenge to the unflagging zeal and the confident hope of pastor and people alike. Here, too, we found Easter services planned for the week, leading up to the final program Sunday. We earnestly hope for them the rich blessings of Him who is "the resurrection and the life." In addition to emphasizing the spiritual needs of the church, Pastor Curry is enriching the worship programs, and working out with his people schemes of organization and financing that should add perceptibly to the permanent progress of the work. There are encouraging signs of a good year for this charge.

We are grateful for the privilege of worshipping with each of these churches.

What to Preach

Spurgeon has a wise and a timely word here, as quoted in a recent number of the HERALD. He says, "We shall not adjust our Bible to the age; but before we have done with it, by God's grace, we shall adjust the age to the Bible." "We make no mistake here; we shall not watch our congregation to take our cue from it, but we shall keep our eye on the infallible Word, and preach according to its instructions."

The Bible teaches the exceeding sinfulness of sin; preach it. It teaches "repentance toward God and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ"; preach it. It teaches assurance; preach it. It teaches love as the Christian's badge; preach it. It teaches that we are to "bear about in our bodies the marks of the Lord Jesus"; preach it. It teaches the virgin birth; preach it. It teaches the Deity of Jesus; preach it. It teaches the efficacy of His atoning blood; preach it. It teaches His bodily resurrection; preach it. It teaches a blessed immortality; preach it. It teaches retribution, awful and eternal, for the unrepentant sinner; preach it. O God, give to thy ministering servants everywhere a clear understanding of Thy Word, and unflinching courage to preach it!

Evangelism in the Sunday School

It is gratifying to know that some churches are putting emphasis here. The Central Church, Atlanta, says through its weekly calendar (and here again we give credit to the HERALD): "Evangelism is our prime duty both in the pulpit and the parish, but most of all through the church school policy of educational evangelism, we should be able to teach and win every one who comes to us for Christian fellowship and instruction in God's Holy Word—men and women, and boys and girls."

That the Sunday school affords a rich field for spiritual harvests, no one will question. And that it likewise entails a tremendous responsibility to gather this rich harvest will hardly be questioned. What, then, is the essential thing in our Sunday schools? Is it not the spirit, the purpose, and the program of evangelism? Making Christians of those who are not Christians should be the biggest thing in the purposes, the planning, and the prayers of every Sunday school in our conference. We appeal to superintendents to lay hold of this problem and to seize upon this opportunity with much thought and prayer, and to put the emphasis here, until the Sunday school does what it is really supposed to do—make Christians of the men and women, the boys and girls that it enrolls.

This is Good

"Friendship church has raised money to buy a hundred Cokesbury Hymnals." "Since our last report (Dulins) we have purchased thirty-six new hymn books." This reporter does not say what book, but we trust that it was a standard book, in the Cokesbury class. With the exception of our own Hymnal, the Cokesbury Hymnal is one of the very best for use in our churches. We trust that a great many of our churches will follow the lead of these two and provide song books,—good standard books that are an inspiration to worship, remembering always that our Hymnal is the best. And when you buy, buy for the people. One of the great needs of many of our churches is congregational singing. And the reason that the people do not sing is because they have no books. Anything that takes away congregational singing strikes at the very life of public worship. Here it is, even out of the Book: "Let the people praise thee, O God; let all the people praise thee." "Sing aloud unto God our strength: make a joyful noise unto the God of Jacob."

A Last Word

Several of our churches are holding evangelistic services that will terminate with Easter Sunday. We pray that God may greatly bless these services, and make them fruitful in the salvation of many souls, and in the enriching of many lives for Christian service.

And, brethren, please do not fail in the Easter offering. The Board of Missions is depending a great deal upon the receipts from this offering. Let us ask, and urge again, that no church fail to take it. Send the amount promptly to Rev. George R. Brown, Reidsville, N. C., and designate it "Easter Offering." It counts on the budget of the local church.

OUR STORY PAGE

A GROUCHY OLD MAN'S VALENTINE

The grouchy old man frowned down at his mahogany desk, frowned at the mahogany chair with soft red cushions, frowned at the red velvet hangings which gently brushed the top of his bald head, frowned at everything in the room. Then he turned the gaze of his discontented eyes upon a scene outside, which was as cold as this picture was warm; whose snow was as beautifully white and shining as the diamonds winking on his shirt front, sparkling from his watch chain, and flashing on his finger.

He frowned at a breakfast which an epicure might have fancied, pushed it away with a shrug of the shoulders and a disgusted "T'ough" which spoke volumes.

He frowned when he strode to the library, to the mahogany desk which held no mail; struck savagely the silver bell, and when the man-servant came, explaining, "The mail delivery is late, sir, on account of Valentine's Day," ordered peremptorily, "Then send for it."

He frowned, presently, when the boy came panting from the office, which was just around the corner, carrying two letters and a paper; but he settled himself to read, first the crisp, businesslike sheet which he took from an envelope just as crisp and modern in appearance. Afterward he scowled crossly and tossed the crumpled sheet from his hand to the corner from which James rescued the poor letter and, while doing so, read:

"Dear Sir: A mutual friend has handed us your name as that of a man who would probably like to observe St. Valentine's Day by an act of kindness. We truly believe that there is no other way in which you can give so much happiness by so small an expenditure as by sending our paper free of charge to the shut-ins whose names we inclose.

"Many of these old saints, wives of ministers and other churchmen who died leaving this means for their dear ones, mourn daily for the loss of their church paper, which has been to them both meat and drink. They have written piteously, explaining why their names must be taken from the subscription list. This is a most godly work. Because we feel sure that you will be interested we inclose the names of those to whom you may send good cheer if you are so inclined.

"Hoping that we may be able to serve you further and with every good wish for a continuation of your good works, we are,

"Very sincerely yours,

"THE EDITORS."

"The church folks are always begging!" roared the old man.

James, with a familiarity bred of long years of service, beamed. "Now, wouldn't that be a good way o' keeping Valentine's Day? My old mother went without sugar in her tea last year so as to have the church paper."

"Hold your tongue!" said the grouchy old man, as he took up a small, soiled envelope, scanning each letter, written by a childish hand. He made a wry face as he read it the third and fourth time. When he began to read in a queer, mystified tone, James drew near to wonder and listen:

"Dear Mr. Lacey: I've seen you every day through the window since we moved into the neighborhood, and I've been so sorry because you're all alone and so poor and miserable." The expression on the old man's face was most laughable. "At Christmas, when I saw you eating dinner by yourself and without a single Christmas gift, I pitied you more than ever. It was then I decided what to buy with the two-dollar bill that Uncle Rob had sent for my very own. I'd thought of a fur cap and a muff, a pair of skates, stationery, and oh, so many things; but I can run and play, and I have my brothers and lots of things that a poor old man can't enjoy; so I decided that it must buy you a valentine."

The grouchy old rich man feverishly turned the sheet to read the remainder of this most remarkable letter:

"I couldn't decide what I should give to a man who has everything until mother said she couldn't keep house without the church paper, 'cause it was full of such splendid ressepees to save money; and Bob, my brother, declared it summed up the financial sityouashion just right for busy people; and grandfather thanked God for the prayer articles what brought back the old-time religion that man needed in these strenuous times. So here it is. Nobody knows but you and I, and we'll keep the secret. A happy Valentine Day from
"MERRY MERRIWEATHER."

"P. S.—Daddy says the story makes him think of his boyish days down on the farm."

"James!" The grouchy old rich man called so loudly that he almost cracked the eardrum of his faithful attendant. "Who is Merry Merriweather?"

James stumbled to his feet stammering and shaking.

"No-nobody at all, sir. Nobody at all but a little freckled, pug-nosed girl who has moved into a house on the street."

"I don't care who she is or where she lives. Bring her to me."

"She's a very nice little girl. I'm sure she didn't mean any wrong," ventured James.

"Do as I tell you," ordered the old man, and carefully slit the wrapper on the paper which had been posted by Merry Merriweather. He turned immediately to the "Family Page." The grouchy old rich man, too, had been raised on a farm.

As he read he saw the old fireplace with its bulging stockings hanging in a row; heard the sizzling of the apples, the popping of corn and cracking of nuts. He could see his old father reading as did the grandfather of the story:

"And behold, there were in the same country shepherds"—see his mother swaying and singing:

"Hail the blest morn when the great Mediator." Oh, she had the old-time religion and the joy which all his millions had not brought! Merry Merriweather was right. This gift which brightened the mind and softened the heart and brought back the past was of a greater value than rubies. He wiped his eyes.

"Merry Merriweather, sir," announced the calm, decorous voice of James.

The poor old rich man turned, expecting to see a frightened little girl. Children always feared him. He saw, instead, a pug-nosed, freckle-faced, blue-eyed little girl, whose every movement irradiated good cheer.

"I'm so glad that you liked your Valentine," she said. "Really, d'ye think I could have selected anything better?"

Regardless of the shocked expression upon the face of decorous James, the grouchy old rich man reached out and set the child on his knee.

"It would not have been possible," he said, seriously. "I wonder if you would answer this letter for me," and he placed in her hand the crumpled sheet. She scanned it carefully.

"Course, I'll be glad," she smiled, after a moment. "But I'm 'fraid the editor'll object to my spelling."

"Not seriously," said the old man, and forgot to frown. "Now while you do the letter I'll fix up a twenty-dollar check, so as to make happy a lot of folks who can't keep house without the church paper. Paper and pencil, James!"

The letter was finished, inspected, stamped, and pronounced perfect. Then the grouchy old rich man smiled at James and the letter written by Merry Merriweather. "Now the car, James," he ordered. "We are going to find a fur hood and a muff and a pair of skates and some other things for a girl who gave away her Christmas. How'll that do for a valentine?"

"Gloriously, sir," grinned James.—Christian Advocate.

Present Kingship of Christ

sent men out over the world, not to threaten terrible penalties, but to preach the good news of a marvelous salvation. He would plant in the hearts of men that which will change them and make them voluntary and loyal sons of the great Kingdom of Heaven. People of small minds and small hearts cannot comprehend the magnanimity of Jesus. To them His mighty rule of love is no rule at all. They would arm Jesus with thunderbolts and dynamite and high-powered bombs and have Him quickly conquer or destroy the wicked world, though He plainly said He came not to destroy but to save. Christ's rule is part of His effort to save and bless the world. He is trying to save the souls of men. Having given His life for men, can we imagine Him now inactive or indifferent? Surely He is now most concerned and most active in our behalf. He is King not for His own glory, but for our good.

IT IS FINISHED

"He said, It is finished . . . and gave up the ghost."—John 19:30.

These three words, given in our Bibles, are in the original a single word. That has been called the greatest single word which ever broke upon the ear of man. Often, when one is preaching, it is not the whole sermon that God uses. It is a single word or thought, coming home with power to the hearer. The one word, Yes, uttered by a woman may alter the whole future of a man, and lead his life to power or ineffectiveness. A single word has changed the course of history and affected the destiny of empires. Who can exhaust the heart-break and the tears that are hidden in the word Farewell? But the greatest of all single words that ever broke upon the ear of man is this word of Jesus upon Calvary. Finished was His work on earth for God finished. His work for man. Finished were those sufferings which made His face marred more than any man's. We have security and peace and joy, not less than absolution and release, in the finished work of our Redeemer.

As we read this word our thoughts go winging back to the first recorded utterance of Jesus. He was a lad of twelve when He said, "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" Some people saunter through the world; their great ambition is an easy life. But our Lord, even in His boyhood, had an intense conviction of vocation. The claims of home and the appeal of motherhood were submerged in the intense conviction that He must be about His Father's business. What that conviction meant to Him in boyhood it is impossible for us to estimate. It would grow with every prayer He prayed, it would deepen as He pored on the Old Testament. But even then it mastered and controlled Him, and to the end this was His burning thought: "I must work the works of Him that sent Me." It is always a quietly glad thing to complete the task even of a day. But when the task is lifelong, and has absorbed the years, far greater is the gladness of completion. That is why we never really penetrate the gladness of this cry of Jesus till we remember that His labor was His life. It was not a service of selected hours. It was a service that included everything. His sufferings and His prayers were part of it, as surely as His teaching on the hill. There was in it an obedience which was passive as well as an obedience which was active—and now that work for God and man was ended.

Again we reverently remember the fidelity with which that work was done, and done in the teeth of every temptation, for He was tempted in all points like as we are. When we do the humblest bit of service faithfully there is always a certain joy when it is done. Perhaps there is no joy to equal that, unless it be the happiness of home. It does not matter what the task may be, whether in the kitchen or the college—to do it faithfully sets the joy-bells ringing. The man who is unfaithful in his duty is continually defrauding older people. But he is doing something even worse than that—he is continually defrauding his own soul. For him the joy-bells never ring, nor does he hear the music of high heaven, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." Now think of the fidelity of Christ, tempted in all points like as we are; tempted by weariness, and by His friends, and by all the appearances of ghastly failure. Yet through the bitterest and darkest hours faithful to His vocation, till He cries on Calvary, "It is finished."—British Weekly.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By Grover L. Angell

President C. E. Society, High Point College

MAR. 31: "THE WORDS OF JESUS ABOUT LIFE UNENDING"

John 14:1-3

Plans for the Meeting

The service may be planned in accordance with the other services of the day. The Christian Endeavor program should fit in with the general program of the church, and should be in keeping with the season. Pictures suggestive of the resurrection may be clipped from different magazines and papers and given to all those who attend. Special music and other features may be worked out in a very effective manner for the different societies.

Try This Program

1. Worship period:
 - Quiet music.
 - Silent prayer.
 - Hymn.
 - Prayer, by pastor, closed with Lord's Prayer.
 - Special music.
2. Program:
 - Scripture lesson.
 - Leader's talk.
 - Questions and topics.
 - Music.
 - Sentence prayer.
 - Poem, "Heaven."
3. Closing moments:
 - Surprise talk, by adult.
 - Poem, ("Crossing the Bar," by Tennyson).
 - Ten-minute Bible reading.
 - Song, ("Christ Arose.")
 - Mizpah.

Suitable Songs

"Oh, Worship the King."
 "Where the Gates Swing Outward Never."
 "Ring, Happy Bells of Easter Time."
 "Christ, the Lord, Is Risen Today."
 "God Hath Sent His Angels to the Earth Again."
 "The Home of the Soul."

Points for the Leader

"The belief in immortality is as universal as the human race. Among every tribe of ancient people we find some idea of life beyond the grave. Every religion in the world today carries with it the idea that a future life is something that we must enter, and that we should prepare for it. All of us are confronted with the question of future life. It is a large part of our religion. Someone has said: 'Never mind the future; live today as one ought to live, and the future will take care of itself.' This is only a half-truth. No one can live as he ought to live today without he keeps the future in view. The greatest source of information about Life Unending was given by Jesus in His answer to the question, 'What must I do to inherit eternal life?' He answered because He knew what that life was. Thus we are interested in what it is to be, how we may obtain it, and how we may lose it. Jesus gives us definite teaching about this. I wonder if we know His teaching?"

It is especially fitting that we should have this topic for discussion in our meeting on the day when the world is remembering the resurrection of Jesus. Let us hear what He has to say.

Topics for Discussion

- The appeal to Philosophy. (Matt. 10:28-33.)
- A Matter of Supreme Importance. (Matt. 16:25-27.)
- How shall we get it? (Matt. 19:16-22.)
- We must choose now. (Matt. 25:41-46.)
- The nature of Unending Life. (Luke 20:27-38.)
- The supreme argument. (John 14:1-20.)
- (Material on all these topics may be found in the Christian Endeavor World for March 14, 1929.)

Questions for Discussion

- Why do all religions contain teachings of eternal life?
- Why is Jesus the best one to teach us about this life?
- Why are some people willing to believe in reward after death and not in punishment after death?
- How does the hope of eternal life help us conquer temptation?

Poetry to the Point

HEAVEN

No night is there!
 Though here the night comes dank and chill
 And shadows every corner fill,
 The deathless morning comes at last
 When all of time for me is past;
 No night is there!

No pain is there!
 Though here the pains wrench the mortal frame
 And men are sick and weak and lame,
 In that fair land awaiting me
 I shall from ills and pains be free;
 No pain is there!

No tears are there!
 Though here we miss the loved ones dear
 And lonely are and often fear,
 In heaven, our home, we'll meet them all
 And answer once again their call,
 No tears are there!

Our Christ is there!
 He'll come and take us to Himself,
 And give to us for this world's pelf
 A mansion made by His dear hand
 And with us dwell in that fair land;
 Our Christ is there!

—Clarence A. Vincent.

A Shining Hope

God grant that all who watch today
 Beside their sepulchres of loss,
 May find the great stone rolled away—
 May see at last, with vision clear,
 The shining angel standing near,
 And through the dimly lighted soul
 Again may joy's evangel roll—
 The glory of the Cross.

—Julia H. Thayer.

Closing Moments

CROSSING THE BAR

Sunset and evening Star,
 And one clear call for me!

And may there be no moaning of the bar
 When I put out to sea.

But such a tide as moving seems asleep,
 Too full for sound and foam,
 When that which drew from out the boundless deep
 Turns again home.

Twilight and evening bell,
 And after that the dark!
 And may there be no sadness of farewell,
 When I embark;

For though from out our bourne of Time and Place

The floods may bear me far,
 I hope to see my Pilot face to face
 When I have crossed the bar.

—Alfred, Lord Tennyson.

ANNOUNCING MATERIALS FOR MOTHER'S DAY AND MOTHER-DAUGHTER WEEK

May 12-19, 1929

We are sure that a large number of Methodist Protestant churches will desire to observe one of the most beautiful services of the whole year. That day is Mother's Day. There will be some that will want to give the daughter a place along with the celebration by observing the week of May 12-19 in connection with Mother's Day by using the entire week as Mother and Daughter week.

Adequate material is necessary for the proper observance of these days. The purpose of this announcement is to put all church workers in touch with materials which have been prepared. The International Council of Religious Education, 5 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill., has ready for your use four attractive and helpful folders, as follows:

1. A general Descriptive folder of 6 pages setting forth practical suggestions as to how to get the observance started, plans for the program and suggestions for the Mother and Daughter banquet. Price 1½¢ each; per 100, $1.25. Cash must accompany orders. Samples may be had for 10¢.

Wishing for our churches everywhere a successful observance of this period.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

LAST CALL

The books of the home and foreign missionary societies are to close March 31. This is, therefore, the last reminder to auxiliary treasurers to get in all money to be counted on this year. The branch meeting at Asheboro, April 9-11, is also close upon us. Send your reports to the home and foreign secretaries as we have always done.

The officers of the branches very much desire a large attendance at this branch meeting. All auxiliaries should be sure to send delegates and each M. P. church should be represented by some one, whether there is a missionary society there or not.

Send names of delegates and representatives to Miss Lollie Jones, Asheboro, N. C.

A REPORT FROM MRS. TAYLOR

The following auxiliaries of the W. F. M. S. have paid their budget in full and many of them overpaid: Asheboro, Asheville, Bethel (Alamance), Concord (Saxapahaw), Calvary, Fountain Place, Graham, High Point, Hollister, Harmony (Yarborough), Hickory Grove (Forsyth), Lebanon, Liberty, Mebane, Mount Pleasant (Mount Pleasant), Maple Springs (Forsyth), Moriah, Pleasant Hill (West Forsyth), Pleasant Union (Mount Pleasant), Siler City, State Street, Union Chapel (Granville), Whitakers, Winston-Salem.

We hope to have a much longer list next week. MRS. S. W. TAYLOR, Treas.

A REMINDER

To those auxiliaries who would claim the awards for Educational Efficiency in 1928-29: I would like to remind them that they will receive these awards at the Asheboro Branch meeting, April 16-18, provided someone writes me by March 31, stating that their Home Missionary Auxiliary has held 12 inspirational meetings, completed the home missionary study book, and held 12 missionary programs in the Sunday school during the year; or their Foreign Missionary Auxiliary has held 12 inspirational meetings, completed the foreign missionary study book and at least one-half the members of the auxiliary have found the answers to all the questions in the Missionary Record Question Box during the year.

Yours for a full report, on time, and a record number of awards,

MRS. R. M. ANDREWS,

Chairman Standing Educational Committee of the North Carolina Branch.

High Point, N. C., March 25, 1929.

NOTICE Y. P. MISSIONARY SOCIETIES

I have sent out report blanks to all the Y. P. societies, but if your society fails to receive one, please send me your report by April 2. We can not give full report of the year's work at the Branch meeting unless we have the reports, so please report all work done by your young people.

One of the banners that was awarded the N. C. Branch at the board meeting last year has been visiting the different district meetings. Will the one that has it send it to me before the Branch meeting?

"UP-TO-DATE" BOUQUETS

New Century Service

"I have read with delight the literature which you have recently circulated. It is decidedly up-to-date and I am confident will bring in the desired results."—President Elderdice, Westminster, Md.

"I am writing to pledge my full co-operation with your plan."—Rev. B. M. Mitchell, Parkersburg, W. Va.

"The Manual is FINE."—Rev. B. A. Brooks, Ash Grove, Kansas.

"We are hoping to put 'April Tithing Month' over at Milford, and I am writing for 300 envelopes." "Your plan (church loyalty card) brings the matter squarely to the attention of the officials."—Rev. J. F. Bryan, Milford, Del.

"But believe me, I shall follow out your program to the dot."—Rev. J. G. Lynn, Bivalve, Md.

Thirteen conferences are represented in the returns on New Century Service: Information, loyalty cards, both church and pastor, requests for Manuals and postors. That is a fine representative showing. New Century Service is alive all over the Church.

JAS. H. STRAUGHN, Exec. Sec'y-Treas.

—Bros. J. Frank Coble and D. C. Curtis are the nominees for Calvary's delegate to Annual Conference.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

State Street, Lexington.—The Methodist Protestants in Davidson County and surrounding charges have a treat in store for them in the coming of Dr. E. D. Stone, of Baltimore, to hold special services from April 8-19, State Street Church, Lexington.

All the nearby pastors have promised their co-operation for at least one night during this series in bringing their congregations with them to these services. Special times have been assigned to the different charges who have signified their willingness to help in this way, as follows:

North Oavidson, Monday, April 8; South Lexington, Tuesday, April 9; Pleasant Grove, Wednesday, 10; Denton, Concord, Kannapolis and Davidson, Thursday, April 11; West Thomasville, Community and First Church, Friday, 12. These are all coming for the evening services, which will begin at 7:45. Tuesday evening, April 16, Bro. Farmer has asked that this date be designated as High Point night, and all the churches there have been asked through their pastors to come at that time.

Of course we will be glad to see any of you at any time you can come, but will appreciate your coming at the time your church through your pastor has chosen.

The first week Dr. Stone will be here he has been asked to speak to the Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs, one day to the men in the United Furniture Factory, two of the women's prayer meetings besides the regular services at the church each evening. The second week of the meeting there will be an early morning service each day as well as the evening service.

The second Sunday in addition to the regular services Dr. Stone will speak at 3 P. M. to men only. You are asked to attend this service if you are in reach, men. To the good ladies who read these lines, will you not remember us especially in prayer at this service for men as well as all the services. You can help us much by your prayers. We are hoping by this effort under God's direction to not only have our own membership encouraged and helped by an increase but that the Methodist Protestants in this section may see the need of closer fellowship as we labor for the advancement of Christ's kingdom.

Begging for an interest in your prayers in this effort that ought to mean much for our cause here, and with a cordial invitation to come all you can,

Sincerely,

N. G. BETHEA.

Gibsonville Church.—Our Sunday school is increasing rapidly in attendance. Last Sunday we had 211 present. This was an increase of 45 members during the month of March. For Sunday, March 17th, the Young Men's Bible Class challenged the whole school for the best attendance and won the banner. Their motto is "Co-operate and Win." For last Sunday the Young Ladies' Bible Class challenged the school and won the banner. Their motto is: "In Business for My King."

Dr. Lindley has been preaching some splendid and helpful sermons for us. We think his sermons are better every Sunday. We were glad to have Mrs. Lindley worship with us last Sunday.

On Sunday, March 17th, Rev. Mr. Wood, a student of High Point College, preached for us in the absence of Mr. Lindley. He gave us a fine sermon on "Being Alone With God." Mr. Wood explained the necessity of being alone to commune with God.

The Woman's Home Missionary Society held its monthly meeting with Mrs. W. J. Summers as hostess. The devotionals were conducted by Mrs. Norman Brown. At this meeting the following officers were elected for the new year: Mrs. Jennings, as president; Mrs. M. J. Randolph, vice-president; Mrs. D. M. Davidson, secretary, and Miss Georgia Clapp was re-elected treasurer.

The Intermediate Christian Endeavor held its regular monthly social in the hut. The games were directed by Miss Myrtle Williams and the writer. Miss Isabelle Shoffner played several selections at the organ, which were enjoyed by all. The social committee served a course of delicious fruits.

ORPHA BURGESS, Reporter.

P. S.: Will someone please send to my address, Gibsonville, N. C., or have a copy published in the Herald of the poem, title, "Is It Nothing to You?" O. B.

Shiloh, North Davidson.—On the 11th of March Dr. Straughn and Mr. Gibbs came to Shiloh in behalf of the New Century Service program. Quite a number of visiting pastors were with us, and all of us had a good time. We sincerely hope that our church has caught a new vision of God's work outside of our own beloved church and community.

On the third Sunday our pastor, Rev. R. S. Troxler, brought us a tender and inspiring message on "The Last Supper." After the sermon a large number took part in the Holy Communion service.

Our Sunday school for February showed a good gain over January. We hope March will be even better.

We are glad to have Bro. Curtis Leonard with us in Sunday school regularly once more. He is a splendid young man and an asset to any church.

We are looking forward to an Easter service to be given on Easter Sunday at 11 a. m. Everybody is invited to come and rejoice for this glad day of the triumph of our Christ.

MRS. WILEY SHOAF, Reporter.

Harmony.—Due to the great interest which our pastor, Rev. D. D. Broome, is showing, our Sunday school attendance is improving rapidly.

We were very fortunate to have with us Sunday Rev. Mr. Davis, of Presbyterian College, Clinton, S. C. Mr. Davis delivered a very good sermon Sunday morning. We enjoyed his visit very much and hope that he will be with us again soon.

Our Sunday school will give an Easter program Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. The public is cordially invited. We hope that every one will be as liberal as possible in their offering.

The W. F. M. S. held its monthly meeting Friday, March 22, at 3:30 p. m., at the home of Miss Kate Medlock. A short, but interesting program was rendered, after which a few minutes were spent in electing new officers for the society. The following officers were elected: President, Miss Kate Medlock; vice-president, Mrs. Henry Balentine; secretary-treasurer, Miss Edna Hughes.

The Christian Endeavor Society rendered a very attractive and helpful program Sunday evening, March 24. Mr. Davis gave a splendid talk on the subject.

GRACE KILLINGSWORTH, Reporter.

Charlotte, First Church.—The Missionary Societies have been working as an Auxiliary since they merged in the fall. The officers for the new year are Mrs. B. W. Little, president; Mrs. L. M. Harvard, vice-president; Mrs. N. M. Harrison, treasurer, and Mrs. A. F. Love, secretary. All the various secretaries were re-elected. We have two day circles and the Business Women's Circle, which will meet in the evening. (Business Women's Circle not fully organized yet). Mrs. J. J. Atkins is chairman of Circle No. 1; Mrs. J. H. McCall, chairman of Circle No. 2 and Mrs. C. B. Bruton, chairman of Circle No. 3. The Auxiliary met in the church parlors the third Tuesday afternoon with a very impressive program. After singing "What a Friend We Have in Jesus," Mr. Harrison made a brief talk on the Friendship of Jesus and the spirit of friendship in the society. Prayers were offered for "Thankfulness for the Friendship of Jesus," "Thankfulness for our friends at the Children's Home," "Thankfulness for our friends at Pine Ridge." The regular business was carried out and delegates to Branch meeting are Mrs. R. S. Garman, Mrs. B. W. Little, Mrs. A. F. Love and Mrs. J. H. McCall. Tuesday (this week) Circle No. 1 meets with Mrs. R. C. Millaway, 407 East Boulevard; No. 2 meets with Mrs. C. A. Broome, 1502 North Allen street. The society clothes one child at the Children's Home. We expect to pay our budget in full and hope to go over the top considerably.

MRS. A. F. LOVE, Sec'y.

South Lexington Church.—The work here is going well, and the Herald readers have been hearing from time to time of the progress of the church through the regular reporter.

On the evening of March 4, as I was returning from the church, chancing to stop at a barber shop on the way, I found a gathering of South Lexington members, together with Brother Bethea and some of his good members. After some minutes in conversation I was taken to the rear of the building and presented with a generous pounding. We wish to thank all of the good people who took part.

The work of the Sunday school is growing well and the attendance is increasing.

The Ladies' Aid Society is planning to do some needed work on the interior of the church. They will soon give a chicken supper for the benefit of the church.

Our revival meeting begins on the third Sunday in April. Rev. D. I. Garner will be the pulpit help, with Prof. Yokley as choir director. We are expecting a successful revival. C. G. ISLEY.

Glen Roven.—All services last Sunday were well attended. There were 143 in Sunday school, being the highest mark so far this year.

On Sunday evening the second quarterly conference was held. Both churches were well represented. Some interesting speeches were made. E. H. Thompson and G. B. Anderson were made nominees for delegate.

On next Sunday at 11 a. m. the writer will fill his appointment at Fairview and an offering for the N. C. S. will be received. At night an Easter program will be given at Glen Raven. A liberal offering is desired here also.

Mrs. Loy, mother of Rev. D. M. Loy, has been in declining health for some time.

The following have remembered us in a very substantial way: Mesdames J. A. McPherson, P. E. Troxler, E. H. Thompson, Mary Rumbley, Y. F. Tickle, Tom Hornady, T. A. Amick and Mr. G. W. Lednum. We thank each one.

WM. H. NEESE.

Burlington, N. C., Rt. 4.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—Sunday was a beautiful spring day and Pastor Trollinger brought us a wonderful message. There was a large congregation. Sunday school was well attended. We will hold our Easter service next Sunday afternoon at 2:30. We are hoping to have a large congregation and a good time. We invite all who can to come and help make this service a success.

MRS. G. W. APPLE, Reporter.

Efland, Orange Charge.—Bro. Williams brought us two very interesting messages Sunday. Rev. M. Ivey Crutchfield assisted the pastor in administering the sacrament Sunday morning. A goodly number partook.

Mr. James O. Webb joined the church Sunday. We extend to him a cordial welcome.

The ladies gave an oyster supper Saturday night for the benefit of the church. A sum of about $25 was realized.

Our Sunday school is moving on nicely. We had 103 present Sunday. This is quite an increase over our past attendance. May every member do his or her part in carrying on this great work.

MRS. E. S. TAYLOR, Reporter.

(Received too late for last week.—Ed.)

Oak Grove, Cleveland Circuit.—One of the most impressive occasions which we have witnessed for quite a while was on March 12 when our "New Century Service" rally was observed in our church. Four of the greatest and most Christian men of our denomination were present: Rev. J. H. Straughn, D. D., promotional secretary and treasurer of the General Conference; Rev. G. W. Haddaway, D. D., executive secretary of the Board of Missions; Rev. F. W. Stephenson, D. D., executive secretary of the Board of Christian Education, and Rev. F. L. Gibbs, assistant secretary of the Board of Young People's Work, from Durham, N. C.; also, Rev. M. C. Henderson, pastor of Bess Chapel charge. In the afternoon Rev. J. M. Morgan, of Fallston charge, was with us. Kistler's church was also represented. We feel that this will prove to be one of the greatest and most helpful meetings in the history of our church.

Our pastor, Rev. C. E. Ridge, was with us Sunday evening and delivered an excellent sermon to the young people. He gave some wonderful spiritual instructions on how and why we should obey our parents. Every boy and girl present is blessed an hundred fold in the privilege of living in this spiritual and educational age. They were taught wonderful things that they can never afford to lose.

Our Sunday school is still moving on nicely under the leadership of our faithful superintendent, Mr. P. S. Gettys. We have a good Sunday school and much interest is manifested.

The children are practicing for the Easter service next Sunday morning. This is a splendid opportunity for our little boys and girls to do and say something for the dear Savior and they certainly delight in doing so. We are hoping to give them a Children's Day later.

The Christian Endeavor is having some interesting meetings, but we would like to see more young people taking part in this work.

The church is sorry that one of our oldest and most beloved members, Mr. C. M. Hastings, is quite sick. We hope that he will soon be well.

LOULA PENDLETON,

Reporter.

Pleasant Grove.—The first Sunday morning "The Youth in Service" was observed by the young people of the Sunday school. Prof. Geo. H. Crowell, of Archdale, gave a special talk to the children. We hope he will come again.

The first Sunday night Rev. S. W. Taylor, president of the Conference, was with us. We are always glad to have Bro. Taylor; he brings good messages.

Brother Williams preached two more of his good sermons Sunday. It was not my privilege to hear these, but some of the members who are most always present said "They were the best yet." He always gives us some real spiritual food.

We were very glad to have Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Williams, of Lynchburg, and Mr. and Mrs. Garrison and children, of Burlington, worship with us Sunday. These are the children of our pastor and wife.

The Sunday school attendance is increasing and we hope it will continue, as there are others in the community not in Sunday school anywhere.

We are planning to give the Easter program Easter Sunday morning at 11 o'clock.

REPORTER.

(Received too late for last week.—Ed.)

Granville Circuit, Rehoboth.—On the first Sunday Rev. H. F. Fogleman took for his text John 3:16: "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

Love is the real thing in life. It will control the life of the body, sweeten the thinking of our minds, and purify our souls. All that God gives us and does for us is a symbol of His love. We are to interpret this divine love to others.

Rev. Mr. Fogleman mentioned the importance of taking care of our bodily life so that we may be able to grow, to glow, also to know. We drift along carelessly as if we didn't think there was any life beyond the grave. But there is. So let's live each moment well, give our service to Him, for we are more than mere animals. We are not as the beasts that perish. One beautiful thought was: "This is the spring-time of the year—may it also be the spring-time of your souls. Examine yourself and see just where you stand." We were also reminded to be always in a reverent state of mind when we enter the sanctuary.

The Missionary Society met on March 20 at the home of Mrs. Sam Hunt. We had a very large attendance and a splendid meeting. Our new officers were elected. Mrs. Carey Chatham was re-elected president. Delicious candy was served and good music enjoyed. We enjoyed having Miss Mildred Miskimen, a missionary from India, with us on last Sunday. She made a very interesting talk on her work in India. I think it is a fine thing to have someone bring a message to us like this one. It is somewhat inspiring. Our hearts go out to her in this great work. May she accomplish much in her efforts, leaving loved ones to work for her Master.

Let us give our money, time and prayers and help the great cause for Christ.

CRYSTAL BOBBITT.

Laurel Hill.—Last Sunday night our good pastor, Rev. J. M. Morgan, gave us an impressive sermon on Prayer. Every one enjoyed the message and went home with it in their hearts. Rev. Mr. Morgan made it plain that "we have not because we ask not." We do not pray for what we need and how do we expect God to give us what we don't ask for. Prayer is the key to God's storehouse. So this unlocks the door and gets our blessings.

Our Sunday school is doing very well, but it is not growing like we want it to.

The second quarterly conference will be held at Laurel Hill on Saturday before the second Sunday in April at 2 o'clock. Let's all take off the afternoon and come and attend to our Lord's work.

REPORTER.

Whitakers.—The organizations of Whitakers church—Sunday school Ladies' Aid Society, Woman's Missionary Society, and four Christian Endeavor societies—are functioning normally and producing spiritual results, I think, as well as material benefits. With the coming of spring the brightening of the skies between showers, the budding of the trees, and the blooming of the flowers, there seems to be an enlivening of interest and a quickening of activity in church and religious matters.

The attendance is better and a corresponding increase in interest. One instance of such interest is the discussing of the principles of life and living involved in the topic on the part of the members of Young People's Christian Endeavor Society—a group of high school age. The older head, which directs this group, seems to have the happy faculty of being young with them, meeting them on their level intellectually and spiritually. Hence, they throw off the reserve that so often hinders (they don't mind my being there), and discuss in a free and easy, sometimes spirited manner, the topic before them. It gives a new thrill to note with what amazing frankness young people will express themselves, when they are allowed to feel that they may say just what they think and feel, not hampered by the feeling that they must say what older people think they ought to say. They have thoughts, beliefs, experiences; they don't mind telling them among themselves and others of kindred spirit—and they are not skeptical or bad, just young.

The Ladies' Aid Society is a high pressure organization, a high voltage current.

The parsonage is in the building. The foundation is laid, and the carpenters are at work.

As to finances: Speight's Chapel is not functioning in any way. Whitakers church paid both her college maintenance quota and quota of deficit on Gratitude Gift fund, also took the usual Thanksgiving offering for the Home, Christmas offering for New Century Service, observed Young People's Day with program and offering, preparing for Easter program and offering. The Missiary Society has full quota for their year. The church treasurer announced that G. C. B. will be paid up to date April 30th, also hands the pastor a stated amount on salary regularly each month.

Two high spots we touched were when the boys from the Eastern Carolina Training School, accompanied by the superintendent and some of the teachers, came over one Sunday, filled approximately one-half the church, worshiped with us, sang several songs from their own books in their own way as only boys can when they want to. The other was when a goodly group attended the Haddaway-Stephenson New Century Service meeting at Hollister, received an uplift, and came back and told the others about it Sunday morning.

T. M. JOHNSON.

West Forsyth.—Our services at Harmony Grove last Sunday were attended by an unusually large congregation. The day was warm and beautiful and very conducive to church attendance. We were glad to have visitors at the service. Among the visitors present was Bro. Patterson, a member of Mt. Carmel church, on Forsyth charge. He resides about four miles from Harmony Grove and we may have him at our service frequently. At the close of the sermon by the pastor the matter of painting the exterior of the church was presented to the members present. When a vote was taken on the matter, a majority of the members voted to have the church painted. Subscriptions were taken for the purpose and nearly one-half of the amount needed was secured in pledges and money. A committee was selected to call upon the other members and other people of the community for contributions to secure the remainder of the amount needed. The trustees of the church will have charge of the painting of the church. This is a much-needed improvement and will make the church much more attractive when the painting is done.

The pastor and family were invited to the good home of Bro. C. L. Sheets and family for dinner last Sunday. These are among the good people of Harmony Grove church and are faithful in attendance and support of the services. Mrs. Sheets is the able organist for the church services. We enjoyed a splendid dinner and spent nearly the whole afternoon with these good people. We were privileged to listen to splendid Palm Sunday music over the radio besides a sermon by Dr. Daniel A. Poling and other religious services. These added much to the enjoyment of our visit to this splendid country home.

We thank those of our neighbors who brought gifts for our dining table since our last report.

Pleasant Hill church is preparing an Easter program to be rendered next Sunday night, at which time an offering will be taken for the Board of Missions.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Bess Chapel.—Our pastor, Bro. Henderson, has filled all his appointments since our last report, each time bringing us something good. Bro. Henderson is a "real worker" in the church and community, every ready to do more than his part.

Our Sunday school attendance was good today. It is rising every Sunday, though we are not satisfied with the enrollment and hope to increase it greatly.

The regular meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society was held last Saturday a week at the home of Mrs. Z. M. Dellinger. The following week they gave a pie supper and obtained good results despite the fact that the weather was bad. They are also planning another "help-out" party for this week.

We are glad to say that our new church, a brick structure, is being erected now. We hope to have it completed by the middle of June or the first of July, that we may have our first service, which we trust will be the dedicatory service.

Best wishes to all.

REPORTER.

Davidson Circuit.—Taking too much for granted. I regret the confusion caused by my not making clear, in announcing the illness of Mrs. Reed, daughter of Bro. W. A. Frank, of Handy, that my wife was the daughter of W. F. Moss, of Locust, N. C., and not of Bro. Frank. I will try to do better. However, I appreciate, just the same, the kindly interest shown by the friends who called to see.

We were with the Pine Hill folks yesterday and we were inspired by the rapt attention given us as we talked to them on the duty of tithing. I am hoping that it got deep enough that it will sprout something. At Alleghany in the afternoon we were met by a fine congregation; the interest was so manifest that it made us feel that the people were really anxious to know the truth. We are using the first part of the services, for ten or fifteen minutes, in bringing object lessons to the children. This proves to be quite a drawing card for the children, and the older people as well, who are expressive of their appreciation. The children are delighted to know that a part of the service is for them.

Now, all hail the coming of our Circuit Rally at Chapel Hill the third Sunday in May. By the aid of President Taylor and Rev. N. G. Bethea, our district president, both of whom will be on the program with other speakers of fame, we are preparing the best program yet. Members, write your friends far and near telling them of the great day we are planning and urge them to come. It will be a full day of thrilling information. Come on, folks, and get your stomachs and your heads filled as well.

Lebanon Charge.—On Wednesday night, March 6th, Miss Mildred Miskimen was with us and made an interesting and instructive talk. All who heard her were much pleased with her visit. On Wednesday night, March 13, Dr. Haddaway was with us. We regret that so few heard his message.

Since our last report we have received six members, making a total of 13 since conference. We are expecting several to join next Sunday.

Sunday was a good day for Lebanon charge. We are not in any contest, but we had 112 in Sunday school. This is the best attendance I have ever seen at Lebanon.

All of the services are well attended, and all of the organizations are doing good work. Since our last report a Ladies' Aid has been formed, which gives promise of great things for the church.

Halifax Circuit.—Our second quarterly conference will convene at Eden church on Friday before the second Sunday in April (or April 12), at 2 p. m. We want all of the official members to be present, and all others who can attend. Don't forget the time and place.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Resolutions of Respect

Whereas, Mrs. T. A. Shaw has gone from us, passing from labor into the land of rest and reward;

Whereas, she was the beloved president of the Woman's Missionary Society of First Methodist Protestant church, Charlotte, and was most faithful and capable in her leadership; therefore, be it

Resolved, first, that we express our deep sense of loss in her going from us and our appreciation of her beautiful character and her devotion to the service of her Lord and the church through this society.

Second, that we thank God for her fine spirit and worthy example and shall strive to emulate her sweet, unselfish spiritual life, which was an inspiration to all who knew her.

Third, that we extend our sincere sympathy to Mr. Shaw and the children and each member of the bereaved family in the great loss and sorrow that has come to them, and we pray that the Holy Spirit may sustain and comfort them until the broken family circle is restored in that beautiful land where they shall meet to part no more.

Fourth, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, a copy sent to the family, and copies to the Methodist Protestant Herald and Missionary Record.

Hardy

Mr. R. A. Hardy, a member of the Methodist Protestant church at Hollister, departed this life February 19, 1929. Mr. Hardy first joined Lee's Chapel church. It seems from the best information we can gather he was a charter member, having been converted in a brush arbor meeting near where Mr. E. L. Lee now lives. He had been a member of the M. P. church about 60 years. When Lee's Chapel church was moved to Hollister he moved with the rest of the church. Mr. Hardy had held different offices in the church, and at the time of his death he was trustee of the church.

Mr. Hardy was always faithful to his church as long as he was able to attend. He had been in ill health for more than a year. He talked to me about dying and said he was ready to go.

He leaves to mourn their loss his wife and three children, Miss Belle Hardy, Mrs. O. W. Stokes and Mr. Lee Hardy, all of Essex, N. C.

Mr. Hardy had just passed his 80th birthday. The funeral services were conducted by the writer in the presence of a large crowd of friends and relatives who had gathered at the home to pay the last tribute of respect to the deceased, after which the remains were laid to rest in the family cemetery to await the resurrection morning.

A lot of work by Burlington, combined with the additional interest of revival services in progress and a beautiful days, made it possible for Burlington to overcome Concord's previous lead of 66 and have a surplus of 50 which Concord must overcome next Sunday (the last of the contest) in order to win. The race between the schools has been most interesting, and the work of Concord school is remarkable by the fact that never once during the contest have they slipped back, but have made a steady increase each Sunday, while Burlington has not done quite so well.

Spring is here. All nature is taking on new life. The flowers are popping out of the ground, and the frogs are croaking to their hearts' content. This may not be news, but it is true.

At this season of the year the church ought to take on new life, and money ought to pop out of the pockets of her members into the till of the treasurer. We hope no one will imitate the frog and do nothing but croak. If he does, like the frog, he will live eternally in the bogs and swamps and never contribute anything to the happiness and success of mankind. The church can not live on croakers.

Easter is just around the corner. In a few days we shall witness a great array of new clothes and bonnets. This will be very well, provided, we do not buy them with the Lord's money. Why not make a real sacrifice this Easter and make the largest offering to the Lord we have ever made? Every dollar you give will be credited on your G. C. B. After you have made your offering see to it that your church treasurer remits promptly to your conference treasurer.

WHY LATE AT CHURCH

Annoyed by people coming late,
A parson waxed somewhat irate;
He called on all for their excuse
If they'd escape a storm let loose.

They gave such reason as they had
And tried to make the parson glad.
We give the gist of what they said
In their attempt to cool his head:

- A: "I overslept myself in bed."
B: "I had to make salt-rising bread."
C: "I had to wait for morning meal."
D: "I had to darn my stocking heel."
E: "I lost my way and wandered 'round."
F: "I had to take some eggs to town."
G: "I got my shoe heel fast in crack."
H: "Forgot our babe and must go back."
I: "I could not find my Sunday shirt."
J: "I got myself all smeared with dirt."
K: "I found that all my tires were down."
L: "I must a bag of kittens drown."
M: "I had to wait till friends were gone."
N: "I had to sew some buttons on."
O: "I stopped on way to hear the news."
P: "I had to black my husband's shoes."

- Q: "I thought the worship hour was twelve."
R: "I had to fasten axe to helve."
S: "I had to see the hogs were fed."
T: "My nose got hurt and went and bled."

- U: "A neighbor's dog chased me up tree."
V: "A special friend just called on me."
W: "I had some trouble with my Ford."
X: "I had to wait for pay for board."

- Y: "I stopped to see if hat's on straight."
Z: "My lot has been unfortunate:
I was born a half hour late,
And never could catch up to date."

The parson's mind was much relieved,
No longer did he feel aggrieved.
He thought he'd change the hour to noon,
For maybe he was born too soon.

A Glorious Day

'Twas Sunday morn in Glory Land:
The day was bright and fair,
And bright-hued flowers all around
With fragrance filled the air.

Behold, great throngs of worshipers
Drew near the House of Praise:
From east and west and north and south
They came glad songs to raise.

I wish I could for you describe
That glorious court of praise:
But earthly words do not suffice
To tell of heavenly ways.

The place was grand and from its walls
Entrancing beauty gleamed:
From every part and every line
The radiant glory streamed.

And O, the music thrilling all
Within its distant reach!
It came from throats, it came from harps,
Ten thousand thousand each.

As men and angels joined in song,
With great orchestral band,
The music swelled and rolled along,
And all arose to stand.

The song would change and all would bow,
Before the Lord of all;
Then change again, and, deeply moved,
The host would prostrate fall.

And O, what thrilling joy and love
Uprose in hearts of men
To hear redemption's song so sung
As it was sung just then!

One special feature gave delight:
King David, harp in hand,
A solo played and sweetly sang,
New psalm he had just planned.

The company vast composed itself
Around the sacred desk.
No pulpit orator of earth
E'er faced such audience.

Up well in front there sat great saints
Of all the ages past,

And many men with flaming tongues
Whose fame on earth will last.

Which one will speak on this great day?
"Rare treat in store," I said.
'Twas greater far than I could know
Till I had program read.

The very instant He appeared
Glad song of praise burst forth:
"To Lamb once slain, all honor, power
And rule, for matchless worth!"

He stood to speak and silence spread
Through all that countless throng.
He spoke as never man could speak
In eloquence or song.

His voice inspired and soothed and blessed.
His words were life and peace;
All those who heard were richly fed,
All hunger made to cease.

He bore us up to highest heights,
We saw things from above;
We saw deep moves in heart of God,
And all that movement love.

In His great Sermon on the Mount
He traced true life below:
In this great sermon He described
True life where'er you go.

It was a rare and radiant day,
Too much could not be said.
A bright one said, with smiling face,
"On earth they say we're 'dead'!"

Henry Hunter

Unexpected death removed this dear brother on Thursday night of last week. He was sick only an hour or two of acute indigestion. He had spent the day as usual at his place of business. But before midnight the summons came and he was gone. We had known him long and well. We were associated in our home community around Tabernacle church. For two years we were associated in college, he living in our home. For over thirty years we have been associated as neighbors, friends and fellow church members in Greensboro. The last time we saw him he said: "Stop and talk awhile." We were going to meet an engagement and could not stop. No thought had we that that was our last opportunity to talk with him in this world. But as we sat at his funeral service in Grace

THE TURN OF THE TIDE

A Study in Revivals

By GEORGE H. MORRISON, D.D.

I propose to speak to you for a little on the great theme of spiritual revival, and I choose that subject for two reasons. I choose it because a genuine revival is the great need of the Church today. I choose it because of my profound conviction that this revival is at hand. Never was the Church more richly organized than she is at the present hour. Her ministers were never more thoroughly equipped for the proclamation of the gospel. Yet who does not feel that there is something lacking, some large and heavenly baptism of power, to give authority to those who preach, and reality to those who hear? I recall a remark Sir Walter Scott once made as he stood before a portrait of Robert Burns. He looked at it a moment and then said, "Yes, the lustre is there, but it is not lighted up." And it seems to me that what Sir Walter missed in the portrait of our national poet is what we all miss in our national ecclesia. The lustre is there, of method and efficiency, of able preaching and devoted service, yet somehow, if I see things aright, that lustre is not lighted up, and nothing will light it up except revival. A revival is like a sacrament in this, that it gives nothing which was not there before. Neither reveals the new; each illuminates the old. Each makes intensely and powerfully real what the trafficking of common days has dulled, till the hearts of men begin to burn again. A large baptism of the Holy Spirit—that is the Church's deepest need today. Many are longing for it. Many are praying for it. There are souls in Scotland agonizing for it. And may I utter my profound conviction that the fullness of the time is nigh?

Story of Christianity Is Story of Revivals

One of the many lessons which I learned from my old professor, Dr. Lindsay, was that the story of our Christian faith is really the story of revivals. With his unequalled knowledge and his various learning, he was fond of insisting upon that. Our Christian faith, he would say, has not come down the centuries like a steadily expanding river. There have been times of deadness, seasons of inertia, long ages of a weary formalism. And then always, at the appointed hour, has come the opening of heaven's windows, and an awakening to lost simplicities. So was it with St. Francis. So was it with the Reformation. The Reformation was not a thing of politics; at its heart it was a spiritual revival. So was it with John Wesley; so has it been in our own land, with every secession and disruption. No secession is just ecclesiastical. At its deepest it is spiritual. It is the protest of the heart—the challenge of the soul—the trammelled spirit breaking through to God. The history of Christianity is one long chequering of light and darkness, and "the light is always nigh unto the darkness." Just when everything seemed lost, the battle was on the point of being won. A hundred times the extremity of man has proved the opportunity of God. And today, when we seem to have tried everything, and still lack the authentic mark, of power, taught of history we reasonably hope that the hour of our redemption draweth nigh.

Revival Is Not Obsolete

I should like to protest in passing against the large assumption that revival, in the older sense, is obsolete. One is constantly meeting that assumption in the religion of magazine and newspaper. Many voices, and none without significance, are proclaiming that better days are coming, when religion shall grow dominant again, and faith recapture her spiritual authority. But generally these somewhat precious prophets take it for granted that, whatever happens, it can never be a revival of the older sort. Why, they never tell us. It is the assumption of superiority. Few people can be more irritatingly highbrow than the race of journalistic seers. Revivals for them are among those childish things that to the mature mind are quite intolerable, and therefore they are never going to happen. The strange thing is that in the eighteenth century that same dictum was on many lips. Enthusiasm was discredited. It was vulgar. It was gone, never to return again. And men wrote books in very elegant English, proving to their own perfect satisfaction that the apostles, whatever they were, were not enthusiasts. No excitement—no corybantic outburst—the thing in an age of reason was impossible. Just as we are assured by many voices that the thing is impossible today. And then, to the dismay of all these oracles, came Wesley, gentleman and scholar, and in a year or two the heather was on fire. What! In an age of reason? In a period of illumination? When superior people were perfectly convinced that such things could never be again? Fathers and brethren, if there be one thing written clearly on the difficult and blotted page of history, it is that the wisdom of men is foolishness with God. His ways are not our ways and His thoughts are not our thoughts. The last infirmity of the superior person is to limit the Holy One of Israel. What has been, shall be. As God hath wrought, so will He work again. From the first day on which the Cross was preached, He has confounded the wisdom of the wise.

Revival a Law of Personal Religion

There are two considerations which reinforce this hope, and on which I should like to dwell a little. The first is that revival is the great law of personal religion. I speak to many in this auditory far more advanced in the spiritual life than I am. They are "farther ben" than I have ever been. But is there any one here who does not know through what chequering of life and deadness the soul moves to the country of its dreams? Times when everything seems shadowy—when the great realities are far away—when there is nothing for it but dogged perseverance, uncheered by any gleaming of the stars; and then suddenly, we know not how, for the wind bloweth where it listeth, the music, the shining of the faces that we have loved long since and lost awhile. Our fathers spoke of spiritual desertion. There is no desert like spiritual desertion—when prayer is but a form, and worship weariness, and preaching an interminable drudgery. And the joy of it, when the deadness passes, and the old is quiveringly real again, is like the joy of a summer morning in the Highlands. Not steadily, not on equal feet, does the individual soul move heavenward. It lags. It is weary unto death. It is rescued and revived. And if this be the law of personal religion, and of the life of God within the soul of man, you may be certain it will be so within the Church. For the Church is not an abstract unity, nor is it a philosophic universal. It is the summation of personal experience in the fellowship of the Lord Jesus. The Church is the individual writ large, and as God leads the individual soul, so does He lead the body of His people.

Revival Is a General Law of Progress

The other consideration I adduce is that revival is the general law of progress. Every noble energy of man advances as with the movement of the tide. Take the activities of trade and commerce. Their law is depression and revival. You can scarcely open a newspaper today but the word "revival" stares you in the face. Yet are there people who proclaim their faith in a near revival of our commerce, who shrug their shoulders, and grow skeptical if we speak of a near revival in religion. Take poetry, that daughter of the gods, does she come down the years on equal feet? Is she always radiant—always true to fact—always in tune with the general heart of man? Poetry wearies, and loses touch with life, and sometimes is at the very point of death, and then the great "Makkar" of the universe pours new life into her veins again. Poetry has her lean and barren years. Her eyes are as fast closed as are her couplets. She loses the breath of the broad heaven in the "tangles of Neera's hair." And then strangely, how we cannot tell, for the wind bloweth where it listeth, she sees the beauty of common things again, and wakens to the wonder of the world. They were always there, these common things. The world was wonderful though men were blind. The daffodil was as beautiful in Pope's day as it was when it took the eye of Wordsworth. But, my dear brethren, men do not see the beauty nor feel the wonder of the old simplicities till, in poetry as in religion, God sends the season of revival. As Keats has it—

"Ah dismal-soul'd!

The winds of heaven blew, the ocean roll'd
Its gathering waves—ye felt it not. The blue
Bared its eternal bosom, and the dew
Of summer nights collected still to make
The morning precious; beauty was awake!
Why were ye not awake? But ye were dead
To things ye knew not of,—were closely wed
To musty laws lined out with wretched rule
And compass vile; so that ye taught a school
Of dolts to smooth, inlay, and clip, and fit,
Till, like the certain wands of Jacob's wit,
Their verses tallied. Easy was the task;
A thousand handicraftsmen wore the mask
Of Poesy. Ill-fated, impious race!
That blasphemed the bright Lyrist to his face.
And did not know it."

In Music and Painting

Take music—it is the same with music. Take painting—it is the same with painting. Take learning and tell me, Is the march of learning one unbroken and increasing progress? If so, how could there be a period, familiar by name to every schoolboy, which we designate the Revival of Learning? The strange thing is that men who know all that, should look askance at revival in religion. They recognize the law in every high activity save in the highest activity of all. That is far from being sweetly reasonable, and we must not forget that God is saying to us, "Come, let us reason together."

Objecting to Revivals

I pass on to consider one or two objections that are commonly urged against revivals. And first, and perhaps especially in Scotland, there is the deep dislike of their emotionalism. The pride of the Scotsman is to repress emotion. We are naturally of the Stoic school. No sober Scotsman is ever at home in the exhibition of excited feelings. And when we find, as we generally find, that revivals are times of very great excitement, that alone is sufficient to discredit them. Very often feeling is so intense that it leads to hysterical phenomena. There are cryings and swayings of the body, and seizures, and insensibilities. And that, to a people such as we are, schooled to the repression of emotion, is both objectionable and repugnant. With that attitude I have the greatest sympathy. I understand it thoroughly. Trained in the reserve of Scottish pieties, I am ill at ease with anything hysterical. Yet are there one or two considerations to be urged upon the other side, which the thoughtful must never forget.

TOBACCO AND CLEAR THINKERS

WILL H. BROWN

Many persons marvel at the success of Henry Ford, who in less than a quarter of a century has climbed from a position of hard toil to a fortune of $500,000,000. While he is not given credit for being any smarter than scores of other men, he should undoubtedly receive great credit for the way he uses his brains. He thinks clearly and has the courage to follow the convictions reached after thinking a proposition through.

As long as men endeavor to find some great thing about Mr. Ford to account for his success they will search in vain. It is when we look at the little things, as many would term them, in his life that we begin to see daylight in accounting for his wonderful achievements.

Rev. William L. Stidger, who has written a series of articles for the Hearst papers concerning Henry Ford and his varied financial interests, made this statement in one of his articles: "It is an interesting observation that Mr. Ford neither smokes nor drinks, and that there is no smoking, drinking or chewing of tobacco allowed in his industry, from top to bottom. I have been sitting in with Ford executives at lunch for some time, and have never seen a Ford executive smoking."

It might strike some as being a little thing for a man to waste only twenty minutes a day in smoking. If 50,000 of Ford's employees should do that, at the minimum wage paid by him, it would mean a loss of $13,000 per day or nearly $4,000,000 per year. But far more significant than the money side of the question in wages is the much more efficient service rendered by the non-smoker as compared with the smoker; also the fact that he does more work while at a task. Tobacco is not for clear thinkers, whether day laborers or managers.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

Every right thinking person knows that the youth of the church is the hope of the church. Their spiritual development and their training in church administration are matters about which the church can not be negligent. Our conference Board of Young People's Work, under the efficient leadership of Rev. Fred W. Paschall, and the denominational department of young people's work, under the zealous leadership of Rev. Lawrence Little, are doing much to foster the religious training of our young people, and to strengthen them in denominational loyalty and devotion to Christ. Our young people's training school, promoted by these boards, is meeting a need among our young people that they themselves appreciate, and that will react helpfully upon the church.

It is our opinion that the conference board would be strengthened by organizing in each conference district a dis-strict board of young people's work, to be headed up by the young people of the respective districts, and to work under the direction of the conference board. The benefits of such organizations appear to be obvious. In the first place, it would bring into active relationship with the board a much larger number of young people than are now being reached. In the second place, it would provide an organization in each conference district that could be relied upon for promoting the conference and denominational programs. And further, it would make possible district training schools that would be accessible to many of our young people who can not attend the annual training school at High Point College.

It is our opinion, too, that the financing of the board should be taken out of the budget, and placed with the Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor societies of the conference. We reported last year 65 Senior C. E. societies and 220 Sunday schools. An average of $3 from each of these organizations would realize for the board considerably more money than is being received now from the budget, and what is being now paid from the budget to the board would be released for church extension and superannuates, each of which is sorely in need of more funds. By this arrangement the result, as we see it, would be more money for all purposes. —From President's Report to Annual Conference.

NOTICE OF SPECIAL SESSION OF THE NORTH CAROLINA ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF THE METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH

A special session of the North Carolina Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church is called to meet in the church at Asheboro on Wednesday, April 10, 1929, at 2:00 o'clock in the afternoon, for the purpose of considering a plan for financing the indebtedness of High Point College.

All lay delegates to the last session of the Annual Conference are delegates to this special session. If they cannot attend, then the alternates to the last session will serve as the regular delegates to the special session.

It is important that we have as large a representation as possible, so please make your plans to be present.

S. W. TAYLOR, President,
C. W. BATES, Secretary.

IS OUR ARMY DANGEROUS

The average citizen probably pictures our military establishment as quite small and unimportant politically. He is unfamiliar with the facts brought out in an address made on the floor of Congress by Hon. Ross A. Collins, a member of the sub-committee on appropriations which handles the military bills. Congressman Collins shows that we have enrolled in our regular army 138,555 officers and enlisted men, plus over 60,000 civilian workers; in our National Guard 180,942 officers and men; in the Organized Reserves, 114,824 officers and 5,416 enlisted men; in the Reserve Officers Training Corps, 127,141; in our Citizens' Military Training Camps, 34,515—a grand total of 661,393 officers and men. The National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice, under the War Department, reaches 110,000 more. This establishment is maintained at a total cost of some $328,338,815.

The Military Is Being Popularized

Many means are used to popularize the various branches of the service. For example, Mr. Collins says of the R. O. T. C.:

"Pretty girl officers help 'popularize' military training. I cannot give the Congress the number of girls who are given this particular training because their number was not furnished to the committee, but usually pretty girls are chosen as officers and sponsors and uniforms are provided for them from some source. These girl officers are frequently installed with much pomp and ceremony and public display; they lead parades and participate in reviews and preside on social occasions, conduct personal inspection of boy cadets in some places, and act as general billboards, advertising the glory of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps and the military machinery.

Horses Lend Color to Many Branches of Service

"The young ladies are not the only agencies used in the Reserve Officers' Training Corps for the purpose of popularizing military training. Horses also play a large part. There are certain schools that would probably not have a Reserve Officers' Training Corps unit were it not for the riding horses that are provided for the amusement of these young men. Riding is becoming very popular socially, and most young men in schools like to ride, and as long as they are able to ride a good horse, furnished, fed, and equipped in a fine, splendid way by the United States Government, they join the Reserve Officers' Training Corps—for the purpose of improving their horsemanship. The horse is kept in the army because of its amusement and social value rather than its probable military usefulness.

"Parades and public displays of military units are becoming community events. The big parade for boy cadets where girl officers turn out to 'strut their stuff' is becoming a community event in many places and, of course, the Regular Army is glad to pull off these events, since it gives them opportunities to make speeches on the glories of preparedness and the general stupidity of our country in the past. You should see some of these gala parades and reviews held by our civilian training units—for the edification of those in the ranks and those in the grandstands. . . . These parades and reviews are made so thrilling and attractive by every means possible that the little tots of the community will look forward to the time when they get big enough to participate in yet bigger and showier parades."

"Military Establishment Becomes Political Power"

Congressman Collins points out that this popularized military establishment is beginning to have a growing political significance:

"We are carrying on a very elaborate program in training our men and women for military duty, and we are spending a great deal of money in popularizing the military idea. . . . Of course, it must be admitted that many of these citizens' military trainees are encouraged to be in these units by Regular Army management for propaganda purposes only. They are given sugar-coated training because they will become boosters of the war-game idea.

"Many of these are having a most delightful experience and are most happy to be part of this giant army. They will attract others to desire the same experience. We may expect down through the years to see the demands made upon this Congress grow until our military establishment reaches further and further into the life of our people.

"Their political influence and power, too, will grow with their ever-increasing numbers and their wishes will be more and more respected by public officials generally and especially those of us in Congress."

DENOMINATIONAL ENTERPRISES

"THEY SHALL NOT PASS"

These well known and heroic words of the brave French soldiers at Verdun were paraphrased a year or two ago by the Women's Auxiliary of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., into, "They shall not cut!" Reduced receipts for the denominational budget threatened to compel the return of a score or more missionaries as well as to necessitate curtailment in other departments of the work of the church. Such a situation was too serious to be overlooked or ignored, so to each branch, auxiliary and circle a frank statement was sent, outlining the actual needs and making an appeal for a special sacrificial offering. Throughout their Zion "They shall not cut!" was broadcast and the amount needed, close to $100,000, was gladly given. It was then unnecessary to call home some of the missionaries or to restrict their educational activities.

A similar state of affairs faces the Methodist Protestant Church today. During this first year of the quadrennium and of our new century, our receipts have been far below normal. This is doubtless due to several things such as the great amount of sickness in the country, a natural reaction following the effort to secure the Gratitude Gift, the time and attention required to make adjustments in keeping with the legislation of the last General Conference as well as the feeling of uncertainty on the part of a considerable number of our missionary women. The overdrafts of the two boards, Education and Missions, on the books of Dr. Straughn March 1 were over $30,000, and by April 30 when our denominational fiscal year closes they will be much larger unless our people make a special effort to prevent it. It is expected that the returns from Christian Endeavor Day, the Thank-Offerings and Easter will materially increase the receipts for March and April, but even then, due to the fact that the Maryland Conference does not meet in April this year, the funds available for the use of the Boards of Christian Education and Missions will fall approximately $40,000 short of the poorest year of the last quadrennium. Such a prospect cannot be viewed with much peace of mind by those responsible for the conduct of this work.

At the suggestion of President Broomfield, Dr. Straughn has prepared and distributed a poster calling upon our people to tithe their April income and after making their usual payments to the local church to place the rest on their New Century Service apportionment. This does not mean enlisting as a regular tither but it does request it the rule for one month at least. This is a reasonable request and in the light of present needs it is certain, if adopted, to relieve, if not to correct, the situation. Those chosen to carry out the mind of the church in education and missions can only do so as they are furnished with sufficient funds.

From the standpoint of the Board of Christian Education, we have been passing through a very anxious year. Mr. Little has received but one-half the amount necessary for his work, and on March 1 he was $5,500 behind. The Department of Educational Institutions has been able to make only the following very meager appropriations: Westminster Theological Seminary, $1,850; High Point College, $1,000; Westminster College, $1,000; Adrian College, $500; Western Maryland

College, $250. And in each of these cases they should have been from five to twenty-five times as much. It is little wonder there has been acute distress in four of our five schools. If we thought the returns to our board this year represented the actual interest of Methodist Protestant people in our programs of Christian Education it would not only be mortifying but heart-breaking.

It is the writer's considered opinion that we are passing through a temporary condition. It takes time to adjust matters after the revolutionary changes made by the last General Conference. But these are being made gradually and the future is very promising. However, a crisis like that facing the boards now can easily become so serious as to handicap the work for several years. The future will be more gratifying and successful if we take care of the present in the way the situation requires.

This frank statement is made because of our confidence in the people called Methodist Protestants. This quadrennium promises to be the greatest in the history of the denomination. Its fulfillment will begin immediately if we take care of the present in a large and generous way.

FRANK W. STEHEPNSON,

Exec. Sec'y, Dept. of Educational Institutions.

UP-TO-DATE AND APRIL, TITHING MONTH

We have exactly one month left of our first year in the New Century; its story will soon be written.

Last year at Baltimore we ended the Old Century and started the New with an ardor, with an enthusiasm, such as the present generation of our church people had never known. Great achievements were written down and large undertakings were begun. The thrill of that day made itself felt to the farthest reaches of the denomination. It is still with us.

This first year of necessity developed peculiar situations. It has been a time of readjustments; working out the practical applications of our new marching orders. The machinery of the church is not geared to the new order although it is well advanced. The new method of the women's work as all know is not yet fully established; the New Century Service plan, far-reaching in time and space, has required the most exacting efforts and is just beginning to get fully under way; the merged boards, both of Education and Missions, have needed time. All of this, and more, is easy to understand, and all of us believe the next year will begin a very definite realization of our plans. But,

This year, our first year, which comes to an end April 30, cuts deeply into our pride. In spite of alibis of stringent times, of the new regime and the like, we are unwilling that this year shall trail any recent year, shall tag along in a reluctant mood. We do not intend and have never thought of the slightest retrenchment in our foreign work, our home fields, our educational work, our benevolent service. All of it is going ahead just the same as though our treasury were full (and it isn't).

To bring this year up requires, however, a very positive assertion. It can be done. Easter has made its contribution, but there are yet thirty days unto the harvest; and marvelous things can be done in that time.

First, make a determined effort to bring your New Century Service up-to-date; that is, pay your general conference budget money in full to April 30. Pay the whole year if you desire, some churches have already done it.

OPTIMISM

The President's Letter

EVANGELISM

Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.

Mebane and Haw River Mission

March 31, Easter.—In the morning we were with the Mebane church, preaching in the presence of a large and attentive congregation at 11 a. m. The pastor, Bro. W. M. Loy, is serving his first year on this charge. He is pleased with the work, and speaks commendingly of the people. In the membership of this church are some of our most loyal and earnest folks; they are loyal to the church and can always be depended upon for the support of conference and denominational programs. The charge is entitled to two Honor Roll places in Journal of last year, that for some reason unknown to me they do not have. In addition to paying pastor's salary in full, for which they have proper credit, they paid A. C. B. and assessment for college maintenance, but for these they do not have Honor Roll credit. We regret the omission, and are glad to give them recognition here for these payments. The church will co-operate with Dr. Straughn's program, and they hope to have their G. C. B. paid to date April 30. They were to give their Easter program Sunday night, and it was their hope to receive $50 in this offering. We appreciate the reception given us by this church, and the kind entertainment provided for us during our stay with them. Pastor Loy announced a revival meeting to begin in his church next Sunday night. We shall pray for God's presence in these meetings.

At night it was our privilege to be with the Haw River church in their Easter program. The congregation just about filled the church, and they were repaid for their attendance in the good program that followed. No little time and work is necessary in the preparation of our special church programs, but they are eminently worthwhile. Those who do the work are repaid; the church is repaid; and the cause for which the program is given receives worthwhile support through the offering. It seems a pity sometimes, I think, that these programs can't be given but once after they have been prepared. The offering on this occasion amounted to $17.75. We have a progressive and dependable membership at Haw River. They are not large in numbers, but they are doing good work, and will give a good account of themselves when the year is done. They are listed with the Honor Roll churches last year, and we expect to see them there again this year. Pastor Chambliss was in a meeting at Fountain Place, and for that reason he could not be in this service. We were to have been with him at Fountain Place at this hour, but circumstances seemed to justify our transfer to this service. We hope to visit Fountain Place later. We enjoyed the day with these churches.

New Discipline

It is ready now, and may be had from either of our book concerns. This is the revised edition, as authorized by the last General Conference. The prices are as follows: Card Cover Binding, 20c per copy; per dozen, $2.15, postpaid. Dark Green Silk Cloth Binding, 75c per copy, postpaid; Full Leather Edition, bound in black Morocco binding, intended especially for ministerial use, $1.50 per copy, postpaid.

We trust that our people will buy this discipline and become thoroughly familiar with the contents. And particularly should this be done by our pastors. They are the recognized leaders, and they should be familiar with the law book of the church. We wish also to commend the edition designed especially for ministers. This book is to be used where the ritual is needed in the church, and in marriages, and at funerals. The book is designed with the thought that a ritual used on public occasions should, in its very form, give prestige to the church. We trust that all of our ministers will secure a copy of this edition.

In the Interest of Evangelism

We are planning for a meeting of this nature to be held on Sunday, April 28. We were to have been with Orange charge at this time, but a change in the schedule for that work leaves this date open. For a long time we have wanted such a meeting, and when we found that we had this date free, we quickly seized upon it for this purpose. Everybody, ministers and laymen alike, are urged to attend this meeting. We have appointed it on Sunday with the hope of getting the largest possible attendance, and at an hour when we hoped there would be the least conflict with other appointments. The meeting will be held in the First Church, High Point. The hour is 2 p. m. A program of two hours' length is being arranged. We solicit your prayers for God's blessings upon this meeting. A deep and widespread spirit of evangelism will do more to strengthen the church for all of its purposes than anything else possible. And surely we can not doubt but that such a spirit for His church is God's will.

Easter

We trust that the day was a good one throughout the conference, and that many expectations were realized, both in additions to the church and in Easter offerings. Bro. C. E. Ridge writes of the success of the day on his charge, and Bro. Curry has told us of a great program in his church Sunday night. We have a word from Bro. Joe Trollinger, also, telling us of a day of splendid success on his work. We desire the following information, and are venturing the hope that the pastors will supply it: Number of Easter programs held; were pre-Easter revival services held; the number of churches making the special Easter offering for the Board of Missions; the amount of the offering for the entire charge; and the number of additions to the church.

A postal card will do. Thank you, pastors!

April

This is to be a full month of much service. Dr. Straughn's program is on during this month, and we urge pastors to give full co-operation with this. His batch of printed matter makes the program clear. Pastors will please line their churches up with the program in every detail possible. It will be remembered, too, that our goals, announced at the beginning of the year, designated April as Pay-Up Month, and the conference designated it Stewardship Month and Tither's Sign-Up Month. Surely this is a full program, and one that is eminently worthwhile. Now for a united, earnest, prayerful effort in working these programs to the largest measure of success.

Special Session of the Annual Conference

At the request of Dr. Andrews, president of High Point College, a special session of the Annual Conference is being

OUR STORY PAGE

A NEIGHBORHOOD CONSPIRACY

"What's the good of a vacation 'less you get something nice to do?" grumbled Merry Dawson. "Just 'cause we're going on a big picnic Saturday, I don't see why we can't take our lunch down to the lake today."

"Me neither," scolded Sally Brown. "Just putting up our lunches, that's nothing. 'Sides, we could do it ourselves. And all we'd need to get at the store is bananas and something for sandwiches, and maybe some pickles."

"And it's so nice to eat down by the lake," sniffed small Trotsy weofully. "They just don't like us to have a good time," she sobbed, real tears squeezing out of her eyes and running down her plump cheeks.

"Cry baby!" snapped Merry. "You had better run over and cry a duet with the Tucker bawlbaby. Listen to him yell."

"I don't—I don't cry out loud," stamped Trotsy, her eyes flaming angrily through her tears. "And that Tucker's just driving my grandma crazy, so he is. She's got jumpy nerves, the doctor says."

"Jumpy nerves! Tucker's crying's enough to drive the strongest person out of his wits," declared Sally. "My cousin, he plays football rougher'n rough, and he says if he had to live at our house and listen to Tucker, he'd burst right out like a giant firecracker, and there wouldn't be a bit left bigger'n a jackstraw. And he'd be glad of it, too, he says."

"Hear him, 'waa—waa—waa!'" burst out Merry. "Makes sort of a tune of it, a horrid tune; and tomorrow's sweeping day, and he'll keep it up about all day because his mother can't take him to the lake. Oh, I just wish they'd never moved into our block!"

"And when he gets down to the lake he's a regular cherub. All the ladies crowd around him and pet him to pieces. I feel like telling 'em, I do, I do," stormed Trotsy, then blushed sulkily when Merry stared meaningly at her tear-wet eyes.

"But I don't," she flared back, then stopped. "Look who's coming," she whispered.

"Dolly Ann, and with that everlasting book under her arm," breathed Sally desperately. Then she called out to the newcomer: "Well, Dolly, you needn't think you're going to get us to read that book; we're feeling crosser'n sticks, the whole bunch of us."

"I wish you would read it," said Dolly Anne wistfully. "I've read it three times already. And it's so funny how Buddy Furlong always says when the other fellow wants anything: 'Well, what you got? Add 'em up, and see if you can't get it!' And they always do," ended Dolly enthusiastically, "every time."

"All right," put in Merry Dawson, smiling in a superior fashion. "If you're so sure it'll work, why don't you try it right now this minute. We want something nice to do. Now add up what we've got, and see if you can get the answer."

"You'll let me try really?" Dolly's eyes brightened eagerly. "Let's see, what have we got?"

"Well," offered Sally, "we've got three girls madder than hatters 'cause they can't take their lunch to the lake."

"And I've got a backyard that's got to be picked up today," added Merry ruefully; "and 'til a man takes that old sandpile place and sods it over it will never look like anything anyhow."

"And," announced Trotsy, "we haven't another thing that we aren't tired of."

"Oh, I forgot," announced Trotsy, "we've got something else—a crying baby that's setting the whole neighborhood crazy. Add him in, too."

"Why, I will," came most unexpectedly from Dolly Anne. "And oh, girls, I know what we can do."

"You do!" Astonishment dwelt on three faces.

"'Tisn't any fun, whatever 'tis," denounced Trotsy. "Not with such stupid things to add up into it."

But when Dolly Anne disclosed her plan even Trotsy grew interested. "I've added your big cousin in for a little bit, Sally, and our wheelbarrow and Ralph's and Ted's express wagons," explained Dolly. "But won't Tucker's mother be surprised, and Tucker? I do hope they'll get started early for the lake. Wouldn't it be a joke on us if they didn't go at all today?"

They did go, however, shortly after lunch. Tucker, looking as if he had never shed a tear in his life, holding fast to his mother's hand with one chubby fist and swinging his pail full of sand toys in the other.

"Look," whispered Trotsy, "see the basket she's got with their supper in it. Oh, dear, they won't know what's happened until morning; they won't come home till after dark."

"Nothing will happen if we don't get started," sang out Dolly Anne. "Come on, everybody."

Such a busy time as they did have from that minute on. The Lake Shore Express and the Wheelbarrow Special made numerless excursions to the beach and back. Sally's football cousin helped more than a little bit, and by nightfall all was in readiness. All, that is, except Tucker, who was necessary for the finishing touch, and he didn't return until after dark, just as Trotsy expected.

But next morning four little girls crouched close to the ground behind the fence that ran back of Tucker's yard; they felt sure he would be sent out to play early, because it was sweeping day. "There he comes," whispered Merry, peeping through a knot hole.

And down the steps came Tucker in a fresh blue playsuit, putting one tiny foot down on a step, then carefully pulling the other to meet it. The girls watched him breathlessly. Toddling over to the swing which hung from the willow tree, he put one fat little knee upon it. The girls watched him anxiously. Falling from this swing, low though it was, had started many a spell of crying.

But no, one knee on the swing, Tucker paused, and his blue eyes opened wide—he had caught sight of something red and white, a big umbrella, just like those down at the beach. Sticking up straight, right in the back of his yard, too.

Fascinated, he walked toward it, and there in a boarded-in space about the umbrella was a big patch of his beloved sand. Climbing over the low boards, he plumped down upon it. With his hands full of the glistening bits, he gazed curiously up at the sky.

"Mudder, mudder," he shouted, scrambling back over the boards and running toward the house, "see our new umbrella and all the sand the sky's wained down on it."

And when his mother came out her surprise was even greater than Tucker's. "Dear, dear," she cried, "who could have done it?" Then walking over to the fence she looked around in a puzzled fashion.

But such a scurrying sound as met her ears then—four little girls trying to squeeze themselves out of sight.

"Why, Sally and Merry and Trotsy, and—and—Dolly Anne, what does this mean?"

"Oh," gasped Trotsy, "we—we were only just seeing how Tucker liked his new sand pile."

"But I didn't order any sand pile. I hoped to get him one before long, but they cost so much. Anyhow I wasn't sure it would work, the swing only made him worse."

"But it will," put in Sally; "see him settling down just as pretty; he'll be as happy as if the whole lake shore was tacked onto it."

"Where did the sand come from? I must pay for it anyhow."

"You can't, 'cause it didn't cost a red cent," cried Trotsy. "No, ma'am, not a red. The boards came from Merry's yard, from her sandpile left over from when she was little, and it had to go somewhere, her mother said, so Sally's cousin brought it here."

"And," put in Merry, "the umbrella was all faded, so we painted it red and white stripes. You can't close it, but it stays open fine."

"And the sand," explained Sally eagerly, "we brought it all our own selves, wagons and wagons of it."

"But we wanted to do it," finished Dolly Anne, "because we had nothing, just nothing to do."

"So that's how it was. Do you know what I think? I think I have some pretty fine neighbors. I was just about worn out dragging Tucker to the lake, and now I do believe I can get some rest. Look at him, girls; see him pat the little sand cakes into shape. He's really a dear when he isn't crying."

And when the girls looked, first thing they knew they were crowding around that little boy and exclaiming over him, worse even than the ladies down at the lake did. "I declare, he's the sweetest thing," Trotsy gurgled, "just too ootsy wootsy tunning for anything." And best of all, she really meant it.—Selected.

The President's Letter

called to consider and pass on some matters which concern the financing of the institution. Individual financial obligations are not contemplated in the purposes of this meeting. It is called purely for conference action in regard to certain matters that concern the program of financing the school. The special session will be held in the Asheboro Methodist Protestant Church on Wednesday, April 10, at 2 p. m. The members of the last annual conference will, of course, constitute the members of this conference. It is greatly hoped that every one may be present. It will be interesting to our people to know that an optimistic meeting of the Board of College Trustees was held recently, and that the prospects of an early and satisfactory financing of the institution are very encouraging. However, it must never be forgotten that the college needs and must have the full support of the entire conference. And above all, let us not forget that all power belongs to God, and that for every emergency he can provide an "open door."

Branch Meeting

This will be in session in our Asheboro church next week, April 9-11. Because of the readjustments made necessary by the merging of the women's work, as ordered by the last General Conference, this will be an important meeting, and one of unusual interest. It will be an informing meeting, and just as many of us as possible should attend in order that we may be abreast with the new order, and be acquainted in detail with its workings. Our judgment is that the large place of service that the women already hold in our conference will be greatly augmented by this new plan for their work. And it is highly gratifying that our women are so willingly and so fully adjusting themselves to it, and that they are so gratified with its workings.

Appointments

April 2, Tuesday.—Calvary, in meeting of the Church Brotherhood.

WAR

War denies the Fatherhood of God, scorns the brotherhood of man, mocks the sacredness of human life, is merciless to helpless women and children, uses falsehood, ignores justice, releases the passions, and cultivates hate. War means everything that Jesus did not mean, and means nothing that He did mean.—Quoted.

You will note above two items for refreshing and renovating rooms. Tabernacle had already sent $13.57, and now they send $61.43, making a total of $75.00 for their room. And Burlington sends an even $100 for their room. We are asking those who furnished rooms here when the administration building was first furnished to help brighten up and refurnish the rooms. These two churches have already responded to this call, and we thank them so much. We are needing immediately several beds, springs, and mattresses. Must have these soon. A bed with springs and mattress costs $20.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Miss Alice Jones, Warren, Indiana, 2 dozen handkerchiefs, 6 tablets, 6 pencils, 5 boxes coloring crayons. Miss Effie McCallum, for the Philathea class, Reidsville, one dress for Mattie Ruth Guyer. High Point Overall Factory, $22 discount on 6 dozen pairs of overalls. Mrs. M. E. Moore, Siler City, one sheet and one pair of pillow cases. Mrs. A. P. Coble, for Tabernacle room, 6 yards sheeting and one towel. Philathea Class, First Church, Burlington, 5 pieces of underwear, 3 shirts, and 5 little dresses. Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Garmon, Charlotte, for Vera Garmon, one spring coat and one dress. J. B. Trogdon, Jr., Asheboro, one suit of clothes and one shirt. Mrs. Alice Glasgow, Littleton, 2 little dresses.

On Easter Monday afternoon Dr. S. S. Coe, Mr. A. W. Marsh and Mr. W. F. Bailey, representing the Civitan Club of High Point, came out and hid 300 candy eggs in a nearby wood and gave our children a fine Easter egg hunt. The children thoroughly enjoyed this. And several friends stood by and watched and thus enjoyed it with the children.

For all this thoughtfulness of us and our needs and joys here we thank you.

Next Sunday

Next Sunday being the first Sunday in the month, the Sunday on which many of the Sunday schools take their monthly offering for the Home, we are urgently requesting that on next Sunday, or certainly on one Sunday during April, every Sunday school in the conference send us a good offering. A large number of our schools do this each month; but somehow many of our Sunday schools do not respond to our needs at the Home.

Our bills here have been running behind since Christmas, and we have no way of paying them except to call upon the Methodist Protestant people of the conference.

Yours in His blessed service,

A. G. DIXON.

WILLIAM PENN'S PRAYER FOR PHILADELPHIA—1684

"And thou, Philadelphia, the virgin settlement of this province, named before thou wert born, what love, what care, what service, and what travail have there been to bring thee forth and preserve thee from such as would abuse and defile thee!

"Oh that thou mayst be kept from the evil that would overwhelm thee; that faithful to the God of thy mercies, in the life of righteousness, thou mayst be preserved to the end. My soul prays to God for thee, that thou mayst stand in the day of trial, that thy children may be blessed of the Lord, and thy people saved by his power."

ON EASTER MORN

Fields that were barren yield again,

Grass that had slept is moist with dew,

Memories dim with the pain of years

Gleam through the dawn with the thoughts of you.

Only the faith that could hope and wait,

Only the striving from day to day,—

But clearer the vision, hope more sure,

As on to the west I make my way.

Garden ne'er used till the Saviour died,

Faith that was feeble until you went—

Garden and faith and a Living Christ,

Are gifts of a Father, Heaven sent.

—Ralph Welles Keeler.

CARD OF THANKS

Dear Friends:

Words cannot express our appreciation to you for your many kindnesses shown us during the sickness and death of our mother. May God's richest blessings ever be yours.

J. R. AND MRS. PARKS.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

CORRECTION OF THE PROGRAM

10:30—Joint meeting of executive officers.
2:00 p. m. (instead of 8:00 p. m. as printed last week) regular meeting begins.

Rev. S. W. Taylor will fill the place on the program the first afternoon assigned to Mrs. Marie Thompson. His subject will be "The New Century Service."

HAS YOUR NAME BEEN SENT IN?

Mrs. Hammer says that very few names have been received of persons expecting to attend the Branch meeting at Asheboro April 9-11. Don't neglect this: our hosts want to know who are coming. And don't neglect to go or to send a representative. Our people will have the opportunity to hear Rev. Mr. Minnis and Rev. Mr. Auman, our returned missionaries, as well as Mrs. Thompson, the executive secretary of the Mission Board.

A W. F. M. S. FINANCIAL REPORT

The following auxiliaries have paid their budgets in full since the report last week: Center (Alamance), Tabernacle, Union Grove (Orange), High Point Y. W. A., Charlotte, Thomasville (Community), Mt. Carmel (Granville), Reidsville, Hope (Chatham), and Welch Memorial, High Point.

MRS. S. W. TAYLOR,
Treas. W. F. M. S.

NOTICE TO SECRETARIES OF YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

For Woman's Foreign Missionary Societies

Notices have been sent to all secretaries whose addresses I had about reports for the year's work. If you haven't received one, send in a report anyway.

Information wanted: Enrollment, dues, number of meetings, special offerings, special work, thank-offering.

FROM OKLAHOMA

I have lost my dear husband, J. M. Jarrell. He died March 9, 1929, at the age of 90 years. He got so that he couldn't talk; he would wave his hand upward as he passed away. I know I am ready to meet him when I am called on. I am lost from him. I hope to meet him in heaven. It was hard to give him up, but I had it to do. He died waving his hand upward and smiling he passed away.

SUSIE JARRELL.

—Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt, wife of the governor of New York, on the evening of March 4 at the West Side Branch of the Y. W. C. A., New York City, commended President Hoover's insistence upon law enforcement and law observance in his inaugural address as "a wise thing" and is reported in the New York Times to have said: "Women can help him in his work just as they did in the problem of food restriction in the World War. He asked for their help and they gave it to him."

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

High Point, March 26.—Impressive Palm Sunday services were observed last Sunday morning. A very appropriate and inspiring message on "Intercessory Pardon" was delivered by Rev. Roy I. Farmer.

At the same hour in the Junior church services downstairs, Rev. E. L. Ballard gave a splendid talk to the boys and girls on "Becoming a Christian." This was Decision Day for these Juniors, and a number accepted Christ as their Saviour.

On Monday afternoon the Junior Mission Circle held a delightful meeting at the church, with many of their mothers and friends present. Rev. J. F. Minnis, of Graham, gave a very entertaining talk, illustrated with stereopticon pictures. The views of scenes of rural life in India, the oxen, carts, and primitive modes of travel and farming, the views of the people, boys' and girls' schools at Dhulia, the bungalow in which they lived, and Suvarta Hospital were very instructive and interesting to the children as well as their parents. Mr. Minnis had on display a number of hats, caps, shoes, and articles of dress which the children enjoyed. A silver offering was taken for the help of the children in raising the balance of their budget of $30. Rev. Mr. Minnis was accompanied to High Point by Mrs. Minnis and their two lovely children, Jesse, Jr., and Betty Jean, who were born in India, but nevertheless are American subjects, for their father had them registered with the American consul at their birth and each successive year. Delightful refreshments were served.

(Received too late for last week.—Ed.)

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle Circuit.—The third Sunday in May will be Old People's Day at our church.

Bro. Wesley Jones and family have left their mountain home and purchased the William Brown old home place of T. G. Barber and have moved right near the church.

On Wednesday night, April 3, our teachers and officers will hold a meeting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Jones.

C. W. ALLEN.

(Received too late for last week.—Ed.)

Liberty.—The Liberty-Siler City people recently enjoyed the privilege of having the Dramatic Club of Calvary church of Greensboro present two plays, "Tithes and Offerings," and "Thanksgiving Ann," both of which were very effectively rendered and very delightfully received by an audience composed of members of the Liberty and Siler City Churches and a number of friends from the other churches of Liberty.

The immediate effect of these plays was a generous financial response which went as a Thank-Offering for the India Mission Bungalow through the channels of the Woman's Auxiliary, under whose auspices the visit of the Calvary Club was arranged.

The secondary effect of these plays, though not in any sense of secondary importance or value, was the educational contribution to the cause of Stewardship, the presentation of the Stewardship message in vivid and impressive form, thus preparing the way for the special Stewardship program which we are planning for April.

We wish to heartily commend this dramatic organization to other churches in the vicinity of Greensboro as an effective aid in the presentation of their Stewardship program, provided it can be conveniently arranged. We would like, if possible, for other of our churches to share the enjoyment, the inspiration and the blessing which their visit has brought to our people of Liberty and Siler City.

REPORTER.

Pleasant Hill.—On Sunday morning, March 17, our pastor, Rev. C. E. Ridge, gave us a very interesting sermon. His subject was "The Cross." He noted five steps: (1) Christ's Incarnation; (2) Christ's Crucifixion; (3) Christ's Resurrection; (4) The Ascension; (5) The Intercession. It was a wonderful sermon; much good was derived from it, I'm sure.

The following chairmen of committees were appointed: Mr. O. V. Warlick, Educational Committee; Mr. H. F. White, Stewardship Committee; Mrs. John T. Warlick, Finance Committee.

A special offering will be taken Easter Sunday. Communion service will be held the next third Sunday.

Our Sunday school is doing nicely. We have adopted a plan of having each class in turn to conduct the devotional exercises. This will give us a chance to show what our young people can do, and to train the younger ones as they grow up to become leaders in the church.

LUCILLE WARLICK, Reporter.

Midway, Haw River Ct.—Sunday was a beautiful spring day, and Pastor Trollinger brought us a wonderful message. There was a large congregation. Sunday school was well attended. We will hold our Easter service next Sunday afternoon at 2:30. We are hoping to have a large congregation and a good time. Invite all who can to come and help make this service a success.

MRS. G. W. APPLE, Reporter.

Bess Chapel.—As there hasn't been a report from the Ladies' Aid I will try to tell our people what we are doing and what we intend doing. When the women try, they always do things. Last week our good pastor and wife gathered up hens to the amount of $55; the poultry car came through Thursday and we were ready to meet it with those hens. Mrs. Tom Beam and Mrs. Peter Bess took one truck, the pastor and wife the other. We had a "pie supper" on the previous Saturday night; was a rainy night. We realized $10 from the pie sale. Our Aid Society is working to get money to furnish the new church the men are erecting.

We hope to have our church ready for worship by late summer, and are hoping to have all our former pastors with us at the dedication services.

We held our Easter services last night. The children did excellent work, owing it all to training received by Mrs. Connie Eaker (nee Virginia Beam) and Mrs. Henderson. We used the program sent out by our own publication house. More later.

MRS. J. C. BEAM.

Orange Charge.—Had a good day yesterday. Easter services were held at each church. These services were well attended. The combined offerings amounted to 50 percent more than last year.

The second quarterly conference is called to meet with the Edland church Wednesday, April 17, at 7:30 p. m. Officials, please come.

President Taylor is to visit this charge Sunday, April 28th. Appointments are as follows: Hebron, 11 a. m.; Chestnut Ridge, 3 p. m. This will be his first official visit to these churches. We are hoping for good congregations.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Pleasant Grove.—The Brotherhood met on the evening of the 23rd with Bro. Ralph Kennedy. Owing to bad roads after the storm the attendance was small. After transacting the business, we were served delicious refreshments. A few days ago Bros. B. E. and Ralph Kennedy set six nine maples on the parsonage lot. Yesterday afternoon here came Bros. B. E. Kennedy, Homer Veach, George Hilton, Edd and Clyde Payne with mules, plow and harrow, prepared the yard and sowed it in grass seed. It makes a great improvement in the looks of things about the parsonage. And the Ladies' Aid has not been idle, but has kept right up with the men. Due to them the parsonage has been curtained throughout this week. These good folks are trying to do everything to make our home beautiful and comfortable. And we appreciate everything they have done for us. They have also put a phone in the parsonage.

We are behind with our budget but I believe we are going to pay it in full this year. I think Pleasant Grove is well able to be placed on the honor roll.

We will hold our second quarterly conference on Wednesday evening, April 3.

The Journal gives my address as High Point. It should be Thomasville, Route 2.

D. R. WILLIAMS.

Concord.—Easter Sunday was a great day in our church services. There were 637 present in Sunday school, the largest attendance in the history of our church. The Concord-Burlington contest came to a close with Concord winning. A group picture of the school was made in front of the church.

The pastor preached an impressive sermon on "The Easter Message" at the morning hour, and the choir rendered the anthem "The Lord Is Risen" by Reubush.

We were glad to have as visitors in the services Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Beck, formerly of West Thomasville. Mr. Beck recently moved his family here where he is manager of a new grocery.

Our people were very fortunate in having Miss Mildred Miskimen visit us on Tuesday night, March 19. She gave us a splendid message on our work in India, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all. We were glad to have Rev. and Mrs. C. W. Bates, of Greensboro, in the meeting also. They accompanied Miss Miskimen here.

Rev. and Mrs. G. H. Hendry, Mrs. L. G. Lowder, Mrs. P. H. Scarboro and Mrs. L. E. Beaver are planning to attend the branch meeting in Asheboro next week.

Our people deeply sympathize with Mr. J. S. Polk, the efficient superintendent of our Sunday school, in the death of his sister, Mrs. G. C. McManus, of Albemarle, who died in a Philadelphia hospital last Friday.

Miss Ethel Blackwelder, of Kernersville, spent the week-end with homefolks here.

MRS. D. A. McLAURIN.

Bethesda, Halifax Circuit.—The Sunday school here held a short Easter service yesterday morning. There were songs, a few recitations by the children, and a talk by the pastor. The collection, something over ten dollars, was considered quite good for the very small congregation. Some more will be paid in to add to this amount. We were glad to have with us Miss Maxine Taylor, who teaches in Henderson, and three of our college students, Miss Mattie Moore Taylor, Tom Jeff Taylor, and Willie J. Spencer, all of whom were home for Easter.

Last second Sunday we had a good sermon from Mr. Spencer, and three new members were taken into the church by letter: Mrs. Spencer, Mrs. Lizzie Glenn, and Willie J. Spencer.

The Ladies' Aid has recently bought some furnishings for the parsonage, a dining room table, chairs and rug.

Mr. F. M. Taylor had some damage done to property by a recent wind storm. A water tank near the house was blown down, barely missing his car which, fortunately, had just been blown from where it was standing near the tank. Many trees in this community were blown down or broken off.

REPORTER.

Enfield Charge.—We were glad to have Dr. T. M. Johnson with us the fourth Sunday morning to preach for us. He brought us a fine message bearing on the events connected with Palm Sunday. We are hoping that it will be so he can come back and preach for us again.

Last Sunday Easter services were held at both churches, Whitaker's Chapel in the morning and Enfield at night. The offering at Enfield was $17.34. In addition to the regular program, a film slide of the Resurrection and Ascension of Christ was shown at the conclusion of the service. Mrs. Ruby Pierson and Mrs. Louise Matthews had charge of the program this year. They did their part well and every one was pleased with their program.

This charge is considerably in advance of what it was last year at this time in its collections.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Asheboro.—The Easter season has been a time of activity with us. On Thursday evening we had a communion service that seemed to mean a great deal to those who were present. Then on Friday afternoon at 3:30 we had a union service of all the churches in town. This service was held in our church and the writer had been selected by the Ministerial Association to preach the sermon. Then on Sunday morning we had Sunday school as usual, and at 11 o'clock the children of the Sunday school, under the leadership of Misses Kate Bulla and Ultra Lowdermilk and Mrs. W. F. Redding, Jr., gave a beautiful Easter program with an offering of $29 for missions. At the evening hour the choir, with Mrs. H. W. Walker as director and Mrs. G. P. Pritchard at the piano, rendered a fine Easter cantata entitled "The Easter Song." Really, it was one of the finest musical programs which the writer has heard here. Quite a good many members of the choir took special parts, either as solos or duets or in quartettes. We have not asked the choir yet to repeat their program; however, it does seem that it ought to be given again.

We are looking forward with a great deal of pleasure to the branch meeting which will be held here April 9, 10 and 11.

Our revival meeting begins April 28 with Rev. H. F. Surratt, of Winston-Salem, as the pulpit help. We hope to have prayer meetings in the homes of the people two weeks before the meeting starts.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Lexington, State Street.—All the services Sunday were well attended. The beautiful and helpful Easter sermon by our pastor was much enjoyed by all present. At the evening hour a good Easter program was given by the children and young people. This program was supervised by the ladies of the primary department, led by Mrs. F. J. Cox. Mrs. Cox did fine work and the program was a very interesting one.

Dr. J. C. Leonard, pastor of First Reformed Church, will preach for us next Sunday night at the request of Bro. Betha. We are all very glad Dr. Leonard and his congregation are coming to worship with us. We are expecting Dr. Stone to come on Monday and preach the first sermon of the series he is to preach for us on Monday night.

Many of our neighboring churches in the country and also in the nearby towns are planning to be with us in the revival service. We are very glad that this is true. We are also glad of the promise of co-operation and help from other denominations in the city.

All are requested to pray for the success of the meeting.

REPORTER.

High Point, April 1.—Lenten services were held in the First Church every evening for the week preceding Easter Sunday, when the pastor delivered a series of impressive and spiritual messages based on the seven utterance of Jesus while hanging upon the cross. The attendance at these services was splendid, and the interest and spirit of reverent worship were deeply marked. The hearts of the people were in sympathy with these Holy Week observances, and were made ready for the happy and triumphant Resurrection Day. We followed Jesus through His base betrayal, the agony of Gethsemane, the cruel buffets and scourging in Pilate's hall, the lonely walk through the Via Dolorosa, the burden of the cross to Calvary's hill, and His shameful crucifixion, sufferings, and death. On Thursday evening the Last Supper was celebrated with a sweet and solemn communion service, led by the pastor and his associate, Rev. E. L. Ballard. On Friday evening the choir, under the skillful leadership of Prof. Ernest B. Stimson, gave a splendid and finished rendition of Stainer's "Crucifixion," which was enjoyed by a large audience of our own people and several friends from other churches. This was the most beautiful cantata ever rendered in our church. The solo parts were given most admirably by Messrs. E. Lester Ballard, Clarence Schultheiss, Mesdames J. H. Allred and J. C. Whitesell. The work of the choir in this masterful rendition showed faithful practice and remarkable strength and harmony in the blending of voices. Without a doubt it was one of the most ambitious musical performances ever presented in High Point.

On Sunday morning the pulpit was lovely in its profuse decoration of palms, Easter lilies, white hyacinths, and calla lilies, which were the silent but beautiful tribute to the memory of a charming young girl, just budding into lovely young womanhood, "standing with reluctant feet where the brook and river meet." These exquisite flowers were given by Mr. and Mrs. Geo. T. Penny in memory of their only child, Evelyn, who left us seven years ago. This is an annual custom of Mr. and Mrs. Penny on Easter Sunday.

The sermon on Sunday morning was given as a crowning culmination to the Lenten services of Holy Week, and Rev. R. I. Farmer gave a beautiful interpretation of Jesus' seventh saying on the cross, "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit." Never have last words and latest breaths carried such wonderful import. God so loved us that the sonship is permanent and never ending. It is accepted or rejected by what we do with Christ, whether we choose to let him pass by, thus crucifying him anew, or accept Him as our Savior. The gospel brings not only a work to be done, but a word to be believed. If you know Jesus Christ better than any man or woman in High Point, you will cry out with Mary and Thomas, "My Lord and my God!"

On Sunday evening the Easter pageant, "There Is Hope of a Tree," by Miss Dorothy Elderdice, Westminster, Md., was presented by members of the Sunday school. To the committee, composed of Mesdames L. R. Johnston, C. R. Hinshaw, L. R. Peacock, J. C. Whitesell, and R. I. Farmer, a large share of the success and magnificent beauty of this exquisite pageant belongs, for they worked faithfully and effectively in the practice and presentation of this lovely entertainment, which many concede to have been the very prettiest ever given in our city. The lovely costumes, beautiful decorations of green and white, the cross and crown of flowers symbolic of the Resurrection, with the varicolored lights thrown on them, presented a scene of surpassing beauty and splendor. This charming presentation was witnessed by a large audience which filled the church, with a large number seated in the gallery. A very interesting feature was the native costumes of India worn by several among the group of foreigners, which were loaned by Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Minnis, of Graham.

The pretty and attractive baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ross H. Davis was christened Sunday morning in an interesting ceremony by Rev. R. I. Farmer. This little lady bears the name of Lyna Jane Davis. It is always inspiring and impressive when young parents bring their children to be baptized, and dedicate their lives to Jesus. In addition we were delighted to receive into our fellowship 23 members, a number by transfer from other churches, others by confession of faith, and a large number of children were baptized for the first time, these coming from the Junior church.

President R. M. Andrews announces the gift to High Point College of a $3,000 endowed scholarship by Mr. John S. Welborn, prominent citizen of our city. This scholarship which will be open only to lineal descendants of Confederate veterans is given by Mr. Welborn in honor of his wife, who is president of the local U. D. C. chapter, and will be called the "Cadia Barbee Welborn Scholarship." It will be awarded by the local chapter to the college student who is adjudged most deserving, and applicants for the scholarship must have an average grade of 85 in studies and deportment as well. Girls will be given the preference, but boys will also be eligible. No time limit is set for its use by one student, and if entering from high school the same student may have its assistance for the four years of the college course. The value of the scholarship is $130 a year, and many thanks are due Mr. Welborn for his generous and gracious gift to the college and the worthy and deserving young people of the community. While living, Mr. Welborn will enjoy the fruits of his generosity and magnanimity.

Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Ballard left Monday for a visit to Magnolia Gardens, Charleston, S. C., which will be a well-earned vacation after a strenuous week's work.

After an Easter vacation of five days, classes at High Point College will be resumed tomorrow (Wednesday) morning.

English Street.—Our sick folks are getting better now and we are looking forward to an increased attendance at all our services. Mrs. Bowers and Mrs. Ridge have been out for more than a month but glad they are now about well again. Bro. J. A. Lec has been right sick but he is much better at this writing. Mrs. J. P. Hulin has also been in for some time and we are hoping she, too, will soon be able to be at church. We miss all these when absent from church and Sunday school.

Our pre-Easter services were held each night last week with Rev. J. H. Moton doing the preaching. Bro. Moton preached the old time gospel with Holy Ghost power. The people heard him gladly and were benefited by these Spirit-filled messages. On Sunday at 11 a. m. the children rendered a very appropriate program of songs and recitations.

Our Ladies' Aid Society conducted a food sale Saturday on the corner of North Main and East Washington Streets, and made about $35. Mr. Bailey, manager of the Army and Navy Store, allowed them to use this building without charge. The city furnished free lights and water, and Kester Furniture Company furnished the tables and chairs free. The ladies thank these men for this kindness, and the church also appreciates it. Mrs. Goebel is president of the Ladies' Aid and is very energetic in her work. She also has some helpers who are determined to make things go. This society is doing good work and the pastor appreciates all their efforts.

We were pleased to have Rev. D. I. Garner and Miss Pickett with us a night last week. Bro. Garner was pastor here last year and his many friends were glad to see him again.
GEO. L. REYNOLDS.

Palestine, Flat Rock Circuit.—The second quarterly conference met in Palestine church March 30 with 15 members and four visitors present. Bethany and Flat Rock churches were not represented. In the absence of the secretary due to illness, Brother Harvey Wilson, of Gideon's Grove church, acted as secretary.

The conference was held in love and harmony. The reports from the churches represented were about as usual. The Sunday school reports were very good this quarter for winter months.

The conference voted Pastor and Mrs. Pegg a vacation for the first and second Sundays in May.

Brother G. A. Middleton, of Gideon's Grove church, and Brother Archie Tucker, of Palestine church, were nominated for delegate to annual conference. The conference adjourned to meet in its third meeting at Gideon's Grove church.

Our pastor has filled all his appointments during this quarter. The attendance has been very good. Our pastor has partly organized a women's club and a young people's club in our church. We are hoping soon to see results from both clubs when they get completed and actively at work. Easter Sunday after our pastor's message, communion service was held and a goodly number partook in remembrance of our dear Savior.

The Young People's Club, Mr. Albert Walker, president, met Easter Sunday evening at 7 o'clock, the first meeting; twenty-two were present. Meeting adjourned to meet again next Sunday evening at 7 o'clock.

Our Sunday school superintendent and his wife had the misfortune of a car wreck Easter Sunday afternoon. Though they got only shock and a few scratches, the car was badly damaged.

HEALTH

Think health!

Yourself as healthy see,

For as you think within your heart,

So you'll be.

Talk health!

Speak words of truth and praise,

And know that wisdom's tongue

Is life and length of days.

Act health!

Let manner, mood and mind,

Show purpose, poise and power

In high degree combined.

Build health!

By thought and word and deed;

Look high, have faith, endure,

Persist and you'll succeed!

CANADA AND THE VOLSTEAD ACT

The attitude of the great mass of the Canadian people toward the request of our American neighbors that we do not allow our ports, our laws and our customs regulations to be used to invade their land with criminal violation of one of their basic laws, is not to be doubted. We are, as a people, friendly to the American petition.

On the question of the Volstead Act, we are exactly like they are—we are divided. But we are a unit in believing that it is emphatically none of our business. That is, it is not our business to endorse it or to oppose it—to help enforce it or to help violate it. Nor do they ask us to do either.

But it is most assuredly our business to do everything in our power to prevent our land from being used as a pirate base from which "war" can be levied upon a friendly nation. We should not allow men to conspire in Canada to violate the laws of the United States.—Montreal Daily Star.

CONCORD WINS!

With an attendance of 637 persons last Sunday, Concord won the Sunday school attendance contest from Burlington First Church by a margin of 74. Burlington had 513 present, which was 121 less than Concord, but the record prior to last Sunday showed Burlington had a margin of 50, leaving Concord just 74 ahead at the close.

The contest ran for nine Sundays and Concord had a total of 3,518 against Burlington's total of 3,444. The combined average attendance of the two schools for the nine weeks was 774.

The Baraca classes of the two schools also conducted a contest along with the contest between the schools. Burlington had 155 last Sunday while Concord reported 85. Totals for the nine Sundays showed Burlington with 793 Baracas against Concord's 447. The two classes had a combined average attendance of 138 for the nine weeks.

Concord reached its high mark last Sunday, while Burlington had its largest attendance on March 24 with 583 present. Not once during the contest did Concord ever slip back, but showed a steady increase each Sunday. Had Burlington done so well, the result would have been different. The contest has proved very interesting, and it is hoped that the attendance of both schools will continue to be much larger than before the contest began. We shall endeavor to keep in touch with Concord and see how their attendance is for a few Sundays at least.

DID JESUS HAVE BROTHERS, SISTERS?

Whether Jesus had blood brothers and sisters is a disputed question, upon which even the early church fathers differed. Matthew 13:55 and 56 says in part: "Is not this the carpenter's son? is not his mother called Mary? and his brethren, James, and Joses, and Simon, and Judas? And his sisters, are they not with us?" Mark 3:31 and 32 says: "There came then his brethren and his mother, and, standing without, sent unto him, calling him, and the multitude sat about him, and they said unto him, Behold thy mother and thy brethren without seek for thee." These and related passages are interpreted differently, due chiefly to the fact that the words "brother," "brethren" and "sister" are used in the Scriptures to indicate various degrees of relationship, such as blood brothers and sisters, brothers-in-law and sisters-in-law, cousins, and even more distant relatives. The Catholic Church, which believes in the perpetual virginity of Mary, holds that the sisters and the "brethren of the Lord" were his cousins. Many logical arguments have been advanced in support of this position. The Greek Church holds that the "brethren of the Lord" were the children of Joseph by a former marriage, which would make them step-brothers of Jesus. Protestants, however, generally believe that James, Joses, Simon, and Judas, and the unnamed sisters of the Lord were blood brothers and sisters who were born to Mary and Joseph after the birth of Jesus.—Pathfinder.

—Staley community was also storm-stricken.

—Mayor Barrier, of Concord, by proclamation appealed for help for storm sufferers of Cabarrus County.

AS A FAMILY

If we view the church as a family it will help us to get hold of some of the facts that would serve to prove that we are not depending on numbers in order to serve the purpose of God as Christians. Years ago I was exceedingly glad to read about the prospects of some of the churches uniting. Now, it seems to be a fact that any little body of believers can safely serve if they have the true spirit of worship. "They that are for us are not against us."

Safe organization is needed, and we have got that. The M. P. church started up by being safely and consistently organized, and the order is good, and the thing to do is to continue to look to God for direction and protection and to "continue."

The providence of God was and is seen in the life of our church, and our people need not waver about any sort of doubts. She is a safe home for all who make choice of the life of the family. We need not bother about numbers, but we need the moral strictly.

There is more economy in loyalty than there is in numbers. Every church member should be a close reader of our church literature. Some people seem to think that it matters little about children hearing the preaching, and some are allowed to go home after the Sunday school, and not hear the preaching. However, all should be urged to listen attentively to the preaching.

This effort does not try to object to church union, but to urge for holding on to the vital that we have.

The M. P. family literally started by "force of circumstances," and is now one of the most consistent organizations in the country.

The church tries to make it easy to do right and hard to do wrong. It is the duty of every member of the family to do his best in this "well-doing" of making it easy to do the right thing—and the effort will cost self-denial for every person. OBSERVER.

—The Liberty-Siler City charge believes it has the distinction of being the first, or one of the first, to "sign up," as recommended by Dr. Straughn, General Conference secretary of promotional work, and the North Carolina Conference. Quarterly conference on March 17 unanimously authorized its chairman and secretary to sign on their behalf the "Church Loyalty Card" provided by Dr. Straughn, thus recording its loyalty to and support of New Century Service, pledging its utmost efforts to raise its annual and general conference budgets and endorsing the principle of Stewardship as the Biblical method of financing a church.

UNCLE JOE AND HIS COLLAR BUTTON

Uncle Joe's a man of years,
Also a man who cares;
He wears white shirts, and ties
Like man of fashion buys.

He might be called a fop:
His looks make people stop
And say, "O what a sin!"
But some just stand and grin.

Those who laugh can scarcely know
The trial sore he goes through
In the morn of every day,
Fixing himself in gay array.

In a jiffy his shirt's on,
But where's that button gone?
Moment ago it was there,
He could most surely swear.

But where now? the query is,
And a knotty query 'tis.
He looks beneath the bed
And on shelf overhead.

He looks behind the door,
He looks all over the floor.
He looks on top the rug,
He looks inside his jug.

He looks in open drawer
And grows in mad furore.
And then his hair he tears
And quite profanely swears.

Through trousers leg and boot
Goes on his mad pursuit.
He searches long with frenzied mind,
For shirt's on front behind!

TEA-TIME

Last summer under yonder tree,
At five we sat and sipped our tea;
The sky o'erhead was purest blue,
And birds sang golden notes and true.

Today the scene is changed to grey.
The tree stands bare, the birds away;
A dark and mottled sky o'erhead,
The chill of winter makes things dead.

But I am sure there'll come a day
When tree will bloom and birds sing gay;
The sky will smile on you and me,
While we sit there and sip our tea.

—Grenville Kleiser.

"NO MIRACLES"

That's what the skeptics 'gan to say
In early morn ere break of day;
The world's grown old and still we're told
The same old thing in words more bold.

That which we see from day to day
Is nothing else than nature's way.
We see the water turn to wine,
But with the help of some grapevine.

Of course the Maker of grape and vine
In other ways could not make wine;
And if He could, would surely not,
For in His ways He's much too "sot."

Thus by two lies the truth is proved
And skeptics all to laughter moved
At men with minds so very small
They think their God can act at all.

DROP OF PERSPIRATION STARTS FIRE

Most people know that many materials, such as hay, will cause spontaneous combustion when wet or damp, and eventually burst into flame. But whoever heard of a fire started by a drop of perspiration!

This novel fire was reported from Durham, North Carolina, by Fire Chief Frank Bennett. An employee in a hosiery mill in East Durham was weighing a combination of chemicals used in the process of bleaching cotton, when a drop of perspiration fell into the mixture, resulting in a spontaneous combustion fire which caused a loss of $800. Further interest in this fire was aroused because it was the only one reported from Durham for the entire month!

This is a new cause of fire to the National Board of Fire Underwriters, which maintains an Actuarial Bureau to compute the annual fire losses of the country, separating the figures under headings of various causes. The total loss for 1927 was over $472,000,000.

ODD MESSAGE TO HOOVER

An oddity of the inauguration was a message penned to President Hoover on a single grain of rice. The message was written by E. L. Blystone, of Ardara, Pa., who claims to be the champion letter writer on a grain of rice. Containing 99 words, the message was as follows:

"Hon. Herbert Hoover. Dear Sir: Here's wishing you health and happiness, and a very successful administration as the new president of the U. S. A. I hope that business will return so we can all have work to do. I am only one of the many thousands who at present is unemployed and am trusting that conditions under your leadership will so improve that we can all get plenty of work. Trusting that the confidence of the millions of citizens that voted for you has not been misplaced, I am, Very truly yours, E. L. Blystone."

Incidentally, the champion writer on a grain of rice has written the alphabet 46 times, plus four letters, a total of 1,200 letters on a single grain of rice. Of course, they have to be read with a microscope.—Exchange.

Though the mills of God grind slowly, they grind exceeding small;
Though with patience He stands waiting, with exacting grinds He all.

TO PAVE ISRAELITES' ROUTE

In a few years motor cars may speed along a highway which will mark the road taken by the Israelites on their 40 years' journey from Egypt to the Holy Land. The plan of the Egyptian government is to make this a modern paved road. The first steps in opening it up across the Sinai Peninsula, which connects Egypt with Palestine, have already been taken. Eventually the route will go from Suez to Beershed.—Exchange.

A GOOD ORANGE, BUT SOUR JUICE

Nice oranges, five cents apiece. Every one hears that, but until an orange is cut you can't tell whether it's good or not. Though it is smooth and shiny on the outside, it is very apt to have sour juice and the juice is what counts. You often hear this, too, “Oh, I just think she wears the prettiest clothes and she is so pretty, but she is always gouching; that's the only thing wrong with her.” That may be, but yet with all her pretty clothes and her pretty face she has some sour juice. Every one has a little and some have a lot, but there's a way to sweeten it, though not with sugar. It just takes a little good disposition. BEVERLY BURGESS.

AN INSIDE REPUBLIC

A little French district near the Swiss border calls itself the “Republie of Sauget,” claiming that its freedom dates from feudal times.

There are only about 500 inhabitants of this “republie,” but they have a language all their own—a language that is as foreign to their French neighbors as to Americans. The people of the three small villages forming the “republie” call the people around them “French” as if speaking of foreigners.

But a concession has at last been made to progress. Sauget, like her neighbor Switzerland, likes to have tourists. Heretofore the villagers have been accustomed to treat these visitors to the singing of the Sauget national air, but deciding that it would be more courteous to sing in an understandable language they have had the song translated into French. Of course all the Saugetians know French, for that is the only language taught in their schools.—Exchange.

It was also learned that the exile, still held a rabid red, had pledged himself not to organize any demonstration. A few days previously it was announced that Trotzky's friends at Moscow were taking steps to have him brought back there. Opposition to his presence in Germany developed which influenced decision of the government there on his application to live in Berlin.—Exchange.

ABOUT THE MOVIES

The moving picture is here to stay. We may not like it, and especially we may not like the kind of pictures shown; but outside of the school no single educational feature exerts so great an influence upon the lives of young people as the moving picture show.

One may take the attitude of advising all young people to stay away from such shows, and the advice will be very largely disregarded. That is a plain fact. A good many people are coming to see that since the moving picture show is a factor in modern life, the thing to do is to try to force managers of such places to show only worthwhile pictures.

The Roman Catholic Church has an organization that investigates pictures shown, and indorses only the best of them. Catholics are advised to support good pictures, and not only so, but to request local managers to show the pictures indorsed by the organization. Further, they are urged to protest against the showing of pictures which are considered unworthy.

If the Protestant Church, instead of merely wringing its hands in despair, would organize a nationwide group to investigate and indorse the best pictures, we may be sure that managers would listen. The one supreme argument that producers and local theatre managers never disregard is the argument of the box-office. A deserted show is to them a calamity, and we may be very sure that they will give the public what is wanted.

National leaders of Christian thought might find here a good field for their organizing ability.—Robert P. Anderson, in C. E. World.

—The Christian Endeavor societies of Jebbar, Jaluit, a little island in the South Seas, recently sent $24 to the Near East Relief. "If It Were Not So I Would Have Told You"

Jesus surprises us by this statement. It lies between the two great announcements—"In my Father's house are many mansions" and "I go to prepare a place for you." With so great and blessed a future before his disciples we would have expected him to tell them about it long before. We would have told them about it at the very beginning and all the way along. We like to preach about heaven, to sing about it and to dream about it. Jesus says if there had been no heaven "I would have told you." That would have been fair, but since there is a heaven why not tell about that early and late and all the time?

If we go through the records of Jesus' previous discourses we will find implications of a blessed future state, but we will also find that the great bulk of His teachings had a view to the life that now is. He realized the dependence of the future upon the present. He preached heaven by teaching men the way that leads to heaven. He would not so dazzle the eyes of men with visions of heaven as to paralyze their efforts along the lines that lead to heaven. The motive stirred by a prospect of future bliss is but a step removed from that which makes men seek present pleasure. The motive of loyalty to God should not be weakened by arousing the motive of self-interest. Jesus taught men first of all to get right with God and then project their lives in loving service under the will of God. The sense of rightness with God is itself a very great reward. With heart right and life right, a man may reasonably expect that all else will be right. Instinctively the righteous man looks forward to a blessed future.

The disciples of Jesus had been indulging in high hopes. Jesus knew that these hopes were false in form but in substance true. They were looking for high places, and there were high places for them, though very different from what their fancies pictured. Jesus did not ruthlessly crush their false hopes, but he gently led them on to the true hope. Their reward would be—not high office in an earthly kingdom, but—prepared places in the Father's house of many mansions. Their great expectations would be far surpassed. He was not leading them to a fall over a precipice. He was not leading them to crushing disaster. They might lose much, even life itself on the way, but He was leading them to glory and to God. He exhorts them not to lose faith in Him when appearances are against Him. All would turn out well. They would find the realization of their hopes in the great hereafter, the eternal future. They might seem to be cheated now: they would be more than compensated hereafter. Thus He gave them a vision not to dazzle them, but to comfort them.

Our hope of Heaven should bring us comfort, but not paralysis. By dreaming of Heaven we may miss it. This life is not a time to indulge in visions of ease and pleasure.

Best rest is found in labor, and labor to which love leads us in the faith of Christ is the road that leads to Heaven. We may feel sure of that. If it were not so, surely He would have told us. Jesus said little of our future life, but enough. He spoke much of the life we are now living, but not too much.

The Publican's Prayer

Far off he stood,
Low bowed his head,
His breast he smote,
Few words he said.

Oppressed by sin,
His guilt deep felt,
At thought of God
His heart did melt.

One thing he knew,
One thing to do:
To God to go,
For mercy sue.

But God's keen eye
And God's keen ear
First motion saw,
First word did hear.

Swift answer came,
God's pardon free!
And now there's hope
For you and me.

"There is a place where Thou canst touch the eyes
Of blinded men to perfect instant sight.
There is a place where Thou canst say, 'Arise'
To dying captives, bound in chains of night.
There is a place where Thou canst reach the store
Of hoarded gold and free it for the Lord,
There is a place, upon some distant shore,
Where Thou canst send the workers and the will.
Where is that secret place, dost thou ask, 'Where'?
O, soul, it is the secret place of prayer."

—Selected.

—We never find Jesus confessing his faults and begging pardon. He is the only gentleman of whom we can say that. A man too proud to acknowledge his failings is too proud to be a gentleman. A man too stupid to see that he has faults is too stupid to be a gentleman. It was neither stupidity nor pride that kept Jesus from confessing His faults. He had no faults,

THE TURN OF THE TIDE

A Study in Revivals

By GEORGE H. MORRISON, D.D.

Deep Experiences Move Men

The first is that all great experiences have the power of profoundly moving men. Any psychologist will tell you that this is one of the touchstones of their greatness. Once I was living with a friend who was a candidate for an honorable post. To get it meant everything to him. All his future depended upon getting it. He got it, and all night long I heard him, sleepless, moving through his room, and then halting, and just saying "God." Tell a mother that her son is lost, that his vessel has foundered with all hands; then tell her that a telegram has come announcing that he is miraculously saved. Tell it gently—break it to her tactfully—who will blame her if she weeps or staggers and falls swooning to the ground? Such experiences are deep, and, being deep, they justify emotion. We do not judge. We call it natural. We should be surprised if it were otherwise. And what I want to know is, is it not just as natural when the experience is not the saving of a son, but far more wonderful, the saving of a soul? Why justify emotion in the one case and frown upon it in the other? Why call it natural in shipwreck, and condemn it as unnatural in soul-wreck? The intense emotion that accompanies revival, dislike it as we will, may be the signature of an infinite experience.

The Office of Emotion in Religion

Then, too, we must seek to understand the office of emotion in religion. It is the very office which it exercises in every other sphere of human life. You may convince a man that a certain act is right, and yet he may be a laggard in the doing of it. But touch his heart, kindle his emotions, and immediately the thing is done. And that is the divine office of emotion, to make men do, in the passion and the surge of it, things that in cold blood would be impossible. Now I want you to consider for a moment the kind of people affected by revival. They may have years of backsliding behind them. They have settled habits and besetting sins. And to change the lives of people such as these, what fitter instrument could the great Master use than what Newman calls the power of excited feeling? Men dare greatly when they feel intensely. Nobly excited, they will venture anything. Perhaps there is no venture in the world so magnificent as venturing on Christ. That is why, in seasons of revival, God uses the spur of the motions as surely as the convictions of the intellect. Emotion is not permanent. It is transient; it passes. It is no more permanent than the fire upon my heart that by nightfall may have sunk into its ashes. But while it lasts it leads. It laughs at obstacles. It leaps the parapet. And that is exactly what God wants.

"They Are Self-Centered"

Another common objection to revivals is that they are self-centered. Nothing matters but the individual; revivals are concerned with him alone. When one compares a revival with a conference, that difference is very manifest. For conferences almost without exception deal with the larger aspects of religion. The great themes of religious conferences are the various impacts of the faith—on the home, on the commonwealth, and on the world. There is a breadth of view about a conference that is apparently lacking in revival. The one confronts the problems of society; the other is intense in introspection. And yet I venture to say that never was any conference so mighty in its social issues as, always, is the genuine revival. Do you know what happens in revival times? Let me tell you from long study of the subject. Debts are paid; quarrels are made up; bitter enemies are reconciled. Trade grows honest; business life is purified; wrecked homes revert to love and happiness; every social relationship is sweetened. John Wesley with tremendous power forced men to think about themselves. It seemed a very selfish thing to do in an England seething with rebellion. Yet the coldest historian admits today that Wesley did more than any man in England to save his beloved land from revolution. He did not hold conferences on the social order. He preached Christ to the sinner. He confronted each separate man and woman with the love of God in the Lord Jesus. And such is the genius of our religion that, doing so, he woke the national heart, and saved his country from social disaster. It is not selfishness that seeks the one. It is the wisdom from above that seeks the one. For one coin the woman swept the house. For one sheep the shepherd went a-seeking. Lord, give us a great revival speedily, intensely personal and individual, and it will permeate the fabric of society.

"Next Revival Will Be Ethical"

May I say in passing how inept it is to assert that the next revival will be ethical. As if there the revival that is coming were to differ from revivals in the past. The implication is that past revivals moved largely in the sphere of the emotions. They did not awaken, and awakening deepen, the sense of social responsibility. Whereas in the next revival which God sends that social sense is going to be paramount, and the revival will be pre-eminently ethical. Fathers and brethren, I dispute that statement. It is based on a spacious ignorance of history. It confuses the moral issues of the day with the permanent elements of ethics. All great revivals have been intensely moral, and have fallen with terrific impact on society, only it was the society of their own day, and not that of our present twentieth century. If in the revival that is coming we are wakened to the injustice of our social order, to the horror of slums, the evils of competition, the organization of nefarious traffics, that does not mean that our forefathers were blind when the Spirit of God came down on them in power—it means that their moral problems were not ours. Every age has its own line of battle. Every age its peculiar moral problem. No two ages, if I might put it so, meet the devil in the same habiliments. But in every age, when there has been revival, that revival has been magnificently ethical along the line of battle God has set. Think of the influence of Francis upon Italy. Think of the influence of Luther upon England. Think of the influence of Moody upon Scotland. Profound emotion used by the Spirit of God has thrown men into the battle-line of morals, and has done so when all the philosophers have failed.

"They Do Not Last"

But perhaps the strongest objection to revivals is that they do not last. They are evanescent—there is nothing permanent about them—they dissolve and leave not a wrack behind. On that there are two things I want to say.

The first is that it seems to me that all such judgments rest on a confusion. There is a confusion between emotion and effect. That the emotion passes is unquestioned. It passes because its work is done. Intense excitements never have any permanency, nor are they divinely intended to have permanency. But the effects produced by high emotion, whether religious or artistic, are as lasting as any facts in history. April showers do not last, nor does anybody expect that they should last. But when the April showers have passed away, there is a thrill of greenness along every hedge-bank. And the quickened emotion of revival times passes, as the April showers do, yet issues in a thousand things of beauty. Has the Reformation proved a transient thing, though the initial glow of it is gone? Has not England, though the rapture has departed, been permanently influenced by Wesley? I venture to say that to this very hour one can trace the ethical effects of the revivals of Kilsyth and Cambusland. Granted that in these seasons of excitement things are said and done that are regrettable; granted that not a few prove renegade who have only been emotionally touched—nothing is more certain, in the whole course of history, than the permanence of revival—issues in the individual, the nation, and the Church.

The Witness of the Higher Level

The other thing I want to say is this. I call it the witness of the higher level. When there is decadence after revival time it is never the same as that which went before. Allow me to illustrate that point. Men deplore the coldness of the Church today. We are told that it is unspiritual and worldly. Nor can any one, alive to spiritual things, deny that there is truth in that description. Yet to the student of history one great fact is manifest, and that is that the Church in bygone eras fell to degradations and to depths which are inconceivable today. Find out what Italy was like when Francis came; find out what Europe was like when Luther came; study the religious life of England when the voice of Wesley rang across the land, and you discover things, depths of degradation, impostures, organized hypocrisies, which now are utterly unthinkable. The tide goes back after every great revival. There is a tidal element in history. But it never goes back to the old point of ebb. Something is gained never to be lost. There is a general heightening, a rise of level, a more sensitive conscience, a glimpse of new ideals, which persist even when deadness comes again. That is as true of painting and of poetry as it is of the renaissance of religion. Renaissances may disappear, but they leave something that never disappears—something that abides, more than a memory, a kind of bridling and controlling power, even when all the lights of heaven are dim, and the winds of paradise have ceased to blow.

Can We Foretell Revivals?

I pass on to another interesting question. Is it possible to foretell the season of revival? Is it possible to predict the time appointed as it is, for instance, in the world of nature? I have a friend, a botanist, a man in an humble walk of life, and he will tell you almost to a day when the first primrose will blossom by the Gareloch. And the question is, can we foretell the happy morning of spiritual revival, as he the happy morning of the primrose? To some extent that is impossible, for a reason you will recognize at once. In spiritual revival the will of man intrudes, as it never does in the processes of nature. And that, the power of the human will to hasten or retard the will of God, introduces the incalculable element. Spring comes again, in her appointed time, undeflected by the will of man. The rosy-fingered dawn is on the hills whether we yearn for it or are indifferent. But the instant you enter the region of the spirit the incalculable element appears, in the impact of the human will. When a doctor goes to see a patient he may predict recovery in such and such a time. In so many weeks, everything being normal, the tossing and fevered patient will be well again. But nobody knows better than the doctor how recovery may be hastened or retarded by the influence of the patient's will. If the man makes up his mind that he is dying, the chances are that he will die. If he asserts the will to live, he may outstrip the doctor by a week. And that strange influence of the human will over the fortunes of the body is powerful over the fortunes of the soul. We can retard revival if we will. We can hasten revival if we will. We can take the kingdom of heaven by violence, if we only have faith and prayer and will enough. Fathers and brethren, it is that word "if," which cannot affect the sunrise or the spring, which introduces the incalculable element when we enter the region of the spirit.

But when that is said, and it requires to be said, there is something more that must be said. For there are certain signs of the fullness of the times, manifest right down the course of history. These are constant. They are never wanting. They are part of the ordering of God. In larger or in lesser measure they precede or accompany every revival. What are they? Can we unravel them? And, if we can, may we discern them in the state of our religious life today?

Precursors of Revival

Well, always preparatory to revival, there has been a certain deadness in religion. Always, preparatory to revival, there have been unrest, dissatisfaction, and unsettlement. And always, I venture to say always, revivals have been given of God in periods of historical transition. Just as in individual life, crises are associated with such periods, as when childhood is passing into youth, or youth emerging into manhood, so in history revivals come when things are waxing old as doth a garment, and the foundations of society are rocking. It is when the new ideas are fermenting, and new thoughts swimming into the ken of man; when there are new conceptions of the social order; or when new classes are rising into power; when the older social groups are breaking up, and men dream of a reconstituted world—it is then you have the coming of revival. I cannot enlarge on that. Time fails me. I simply refer you to the page of history. Francis, Savonarola, Luther, Wesley—that is true of the periods of them all. And, fathers and brethren, he must indeed be blind who cannot recognize these signs in the conditions of our life today. Unrest on every hand. Unsettlement on every hand. Profound dissatisfaction with the state of things, both in society and in the Church. New thoughts, fermenting in the minds of millions, about the Bible and about the universe, as if we moved in worlds unrealized. I feel profoundly that the time is near when we shall be in the midst of a revival. History points to it with no uncertain finger. For revival, as for spring and sunrise, there is a fullness of the time, and the fullness of the time is nigh.

A New and High Expectancy

So I would respectfully ask my brethren, gathered from every quarter of the land, to go home again from this assembly touched with a new and high expectancy. No one, I take it, would ever think to charge me with belittling the quiet routine of ministry. I have given my life to the quiet routine of ministry, and had I another life to give I should do the same. But something is lacking in preaching and in worship, in cor-

1,200 are in Egypt, commending themselves by their probity and industry to the officials and all with whom they come into contact. They can be found in 1,700 towns and villages in Macedonia, all across Greece, in France, Syria, Persia, Palestine and the Caucasus, and wherever found, with but rare exceptions, they are proving a credit to the philanthropy that saved them. No one would attempt to predict what the release of these new, alert, moral and intellectual forces will mean to the Near East.

Trying Their Wings

It is not possible adequately to train a child in an orphanage to take at once his proper place in society. A child can be disciplined, intellectually and physically educated, given high moral ideals and all that, and yet he will have little practical knowledge of what society requires of him. Strict orphanage discipline partakes much of the military, since order and regularity must be maintained among a thousand or more children living a community life. But this alone does not wholly prepare the child to face successfully the competitive problems of, to him, a new social order, and to make his living and maintain his moral standards in his new surroundings. For several years we have seen the difficulty of integrating successfully these children, who by the inevitable force of circumstances have lived a sequestered life, into the social order of which they must become a part, without some follow-up methods of extending moral support during this critical period in their lives. It would be little short of flagrant folly, after carrying these wards for years and training them for life, to permit it all to go to destruction during their first year of supreme trial.

We have therefore learned the wisdom and high value of maintaining for a whole year a measure of guardianship over these candidates for successful admission into the society of the East. No work we have done from the first has been more rewarding at so small financial outlay. To have at hand a trusted counsellor and proved friend in a time of unusual need, often means to a boy or a girl all the difference between submission to a new subtle and fatal temptation and a signal triumph. Working boys' homes in cities, as in Beirut, Aleppo, Alexandria, Cairo, Athens and Paris, and visiting directors to country areas where the children are in isolated positions, have proved to be of incalculable value in maintaining the moral and social esprit de corps and the intellectual and professional ideas with which these children face the unknown and untried world. This department must be maintained for a time after the doors of the last orphanage have been closed. The girls are given even closer supervision in a land where dangers are unusually many and subtle.

Special means have been found by which a considerable number of boys and girls of capacity have been able to pursue further studies in schools of higher grade. Some of these are winning honorable places, showing marked ability and high character.

Service to the World

The Near East Relief has justified its organization and support by the lives it has been instrumental in saving and by the children it has found, housed, maintained and educated for life.

But this alone would be an incomplete summary of what this relief organization has accomplished. It has focused the attention of the world upon a country and upon peoples hitherto little known. A world of sympathy has been awakened and cultivated for peoples in the Near East whose worthy history, notable achievements and patient endurance have given them an unique place in the sympathy and affection of all mankind. "The Near East" will henceforth have a significance to millions not only in this country, but throughout the world, which will never fail to stir in the heart a throb of human sympathy established through need and service.

Again the Near East Relief has opened the hearts of hundreds of thousands of children in all parts of the world and in almost every nation and created in them a feeling of fellowship with the orphans of another continent, who, deprived of parents and relatives, have looked to the more favored children in more prosperous countries for that help which was imperative to their lives. For a decade, in Sunday Schools, Epworth Leagues and Endeavor Societies and in public schools as well as in thousands of homes the sympathies of the children and youth have been awakened with the stories of need, and at the same time they have been able to translate that sympathy into service. A sense of fellowship in suffering has been produced and through it our children have experienced an expansion of the spirit of sacrifice that has made them more Christ-like in their conception of the oneness of the human family and their relation to child life everywhere. It has created in the youth of the world a consciousness of world citizenship.

Those Who Have Labored

Again it has opened the door for hundreds of our most cultured and eager young people, some of whom desired to be in the war and were not able, others who were not old enough at that time to be in the army, later to enlist in the service of reconstruction. Many of these young, upstanding, clear-eyed and strong-hearted men and women have enlisted in the work of relief, some wholly at their own expense, and for years have found their joy and satisfaction in salvaging life and preparing it for a life vastly more abundant. These knowingly entered upon service as exacting, as full of hardship and often as perilous as much of the war service in France. They have gone into regions infected with Oriental diseases, epidemics and plagues, more difficult to face than visible and boisterous dangers. Twenty-three have bravely and uncomplainingly laid down their lives in the service. These in perils by land and by sea, in the midst of the "pestilence that walketh at noonday," have gloriously performed their loving task and their bodies lie in the soil of the land for whose help they gave themselves. Others have suffered from accident or disease, the marks of which they will carry with them to their graves. But hundreds have given years to a service which many proclaim to be the most happy and rewarding years of their lives, and they still stand by for the completion of the task.

The Golden Rule of Jesus

Once more, the benevolent people of the world have been united in a supreme endeavor to apply the Golden Rule of Jesus to the God-given task of saving life and of salvaging childhood. People of all creeds and of no creed, and from all grades of society and in all walks of life, have united upon what is the only command of Jesus upon which all could unite. Christian sects hitherto unable to co-operate, religions that have never recognized Jesus even as a prophet, have come together under the magic power of His imperial command and united to save and rear the orphan child for service to the world. It has taught multitudes in the name of the Christ, the sacrament of sacrificial service.

The beneficent influence of the Near East Relief upon those who have had a share in its support and in its operations has a value in itself both upon the individual and upon society hardly second to what it has achieved overseas.

Responsibility

The Near East Relief sprang into being in an emergency and as an emergency organization it has continued its operations for more than twelve years. Now that we can see the termination of its trust, it is laying its plans to make a final appeal to discharge its orphan responsibilities. Its continuing emergency is the army of children adopted into its homes and for whom no relatives or friends can be found but who are too young to be cast out into the physical and moral perils of the Near East.

An eminent jurist has declared that if a spectator sees a person struggling in the water and calling for help, he is legally under no obligation to attempt a rescue, but that if he once attempts to save the drowning victim and then changes his mind and abandons the undertaking and the party drowns he becomes legally responsible.

If one is called to his door by the ringing of the bell and there sees upon his doorstep a babe in a basket, he is under no legal obligation to the child even if it there perishes; he may close the door without incurring legal obligations and forget it if he can. But if he takes the child into the house, he cannot later abandon it without assuming legal responsibility. The child has become his ward and he has become involved in an obligation for its life and safety.

In 1915 and 1916 more than 100,000 children, helpless and unprotected, were left upon the doorstep of philanthropic America. They were taken in and for years generously cared for, fed, clothed and taught, and have been largely fitted successfully to face life's problems. To all such our final responsibility has been effectively and honorably discharged.

But there are yet remaining in the hospitable homes that have harbored them, nearly seven thousand, all of them yet too young and untrained to be sent safely away. The sum of the child year units of this remnant aggregate 28,600. This means that we still have under our roofs this remnant of the larger body, 28,600 child years still to care for and train for life, before we can be free from the obligations we deliberately assumed when we found them abandoned and took them in. This takes no account of aid given to children who have been placed in homes, or of those in subsidized institutions or the post orphanage program for the protection of those who have been discharged.

Beginning with the war and atrocities of 1914 and 1915 and continuing through 1918, followed by the burning and evacuation of Smyrna, the earthquake in Armenia and the war in Syria, there have arisen new and repeated demands upon us to salvage and protect child life. This accounts largely for the number of young children under sixteen years of age in our orphanages.

To the generous people of a great prosperous country we do not need to plead legal obligations. The Near East Relief, conscious of the emergency character of its organization, has taken on no new responsibilities since the burning of Smyrna. But there has been a complete recognition of the sacredness of the trust it did assume when it opened its doors to the mass of child life cast upon the doorsteps of great generous America by the repeated waves of human hate and devastating war.

The Children

Thus we turn again, with confident expectations, to those who have made it possible hitherto to keep these children, for the support necessary to carry through the remaining group. This appeal must be kept before the public until the full amount is secured. We have the orphan homes and schools equipped and functioning and we have the trained teachers and caretakers who have been abundantly successful through the years. All that is needed is the support necessary to allow us to see these children through to the age of 16 when they can be safely placed and we can all feel that our moral obligation has been honorably discharged.

Experts on the field and the national office have made a most careful estimate of the amount needed to fulfill this sacred trust. We are assured that $5,200,000 will be required to finish successfully the orphan problem of what has come to be the most comprehensive and efficient emergency child welfare organization of all history.

Refugee Remnants

There are, however, Armenian refugees in Syria and Greece who should be placed upon land which the government is ready to turn over to them, and there established upon a self-respecting, self-supporting basis. There are also groups of Nestorians in Iraq who are in an equally hopeless and desperate situation. It has been carefully estimated that $800,000 would be sufficient to accomplish a transformation of these peoples who may become chronic charges upon the charity of the world. The Near East Relief has the agencies which could be used in co-operation with local governments for carrying out these plans.

Although America's first responsibility is undoubtedly to the orphans and children of the Near East, yet a large portion of the total sum expended by the Near East Relief has been used for supplies of food and clothing for destitute refugees and for their re-settlement. To withdraw from the Near East without helping to clean up the remaining refugee plague spots and to leave these destitute people, the victims of war and famine, without hope and unrestored to normal life, would be to cease before America's contribution to a New Near East and its suffering people had been fully made. However, it is fully recognized that the first call upon all available Near East Relief funds is for the incompleting child welfare program, and until sufficient funds for the fulfillment of this program are available, the much-needed refugee program must necessarily be held in abeyance.

Six Million Dollars

If and when the amount needed to complete this work is given, we will cease solicitation and lay plans that will adequately provide for our remaining responsibility overseas.

This appeal for $6,000,000 is the final appeal of the Near East Relief to the generosity of the people of America. We must have the full amount stated for the children and should have the full amount for the refugees. We cannot believe that the generous hearts of our supporters will fail us in this our final plan. We have faith that it will not and that thousands even who have never given will see in this last request an opportunity to share in completing a philanthropic task never surpassed in scope and significance. The emergency was unavoidable, the acceptance was Christ-like, the outcome is divine.

OPTIMISM

The President's Letter

EVANGELISM

*Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit;
so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.*

Sickness—Death

Just a few days ago we were shocked and saddened by the sudden passing of our neighbor, Bro. Henry Hunter. But few men ever enjoy a fuller confidence and a higher esteem in their communities than he did in his. On last Saturday a note from Bro. E. A. Bingham brought to us information of the passing of his father. Today news comes of the death of Sister Totten, wife of Bro. W. T. Totten, and the going of Mrs. E. L. Owen, of Yadkin College, our neighbor and friend since the days of our childhood. And now, just before getting this off to the press, word comes of the death of Dr. Benson. "A prince in Israel has fallen." The entire church is poorer by his death, but how much richer by his life!

"Death is not rare, alas! nor burials few."

But there is much comfort in the fact that this is God's way of bringing his friends to himself. "Where I am there ye shall be also." Our tender sympathies go out to those who feel most keenly these afflictions, and we pray that God's sustaining grace may be granted to them in abounding measure.

Five of our ministers—Bros. Martin, Hall, Whitaker, Moton and Suits—are sick. If there are others I do not know of them. They have the deep interest of the brethren and the assurances of their prayers.

Randolph

April 7, Sunday.—We were with this charge in two appointments—Bethany at 11 a. m. and Bethel in the afternoon at 3 o'clock. Congregation was good at each place, and the response to our efforts pleasing and helpful. These churches seem to us to be located in communities where they have an opportunity for service, and they are, no doubt, rendering invaluable service to their respective communities. We noted a number of children and young people in the services, and this is always a hopeful sign. We believe that one of the children at Bethany church has the distinction of being the farthest advanced in his school work of any child we have seen at his age. He is soon to be promoted to the fourth grade, and is only seven years old. His name is Jesse Julian, the son of Bro. and Sister E. C. (we believe the initials are correct) Julian. A church with children in it like this should certainly have a promising future. We found in the Bethel church a fine spirit of co-operation and progress. We shall not be at all surprised to find this church on every conference Honor Roll this year. They enrolled as a "Loyalty Church," and paid their Gratitude Gift allotment of $7. This work, with its 797 members, should be a tower of strength. We doubt, though, if the charge has ever discovered its real ability. We hope that this year they will put themselves to the test in a program that will really call out their latent powers. A Woman's Auxiliary at each church, C. E. societies, and a good financial system would help greatly in bringing this charge to where it really belongs. Pastor Garner is serving his first year here, and is applying himself thoughtfully and studiously to his tasks. The relationship between pastor and people is pleasing, and the signs indicate a good year. We are always glad for a day on Randolph.

The Rural Church

Much of our conference is in the rural districts. Seventy-five per cent of our churches and our membership is there. A large part of our financial strength is there also. Just about half of all of our finances come from the rural churches; and nearly two-thirds of our annual membership increase. With these facts before us, it is easy to see how very important the rural church is to our work. It is likewise easy to see how the development of the rural church is essential to our enlarging usefulness as a denomination. Whatever strengthens the church here, very materially adds to our strength everywhere. We are glad to note the signs of progress at many of our country churches. Better houses of worship are being built, and more adequate equipment is being provided for Sunday school work. Push the country church, brethren. Much of our hope lies with it.

Our High Point Meeting

Sunday, April 28, at 2 p. m., in the interest of Evangelism. This meeting is for everybody, ministers and laymen; men and women; youth and age. We hold many church meetings for many purposes. Of necessity this is so. And they are all important; but surely no church meeting is more important than that which concerns the thing that lies closest to the heart of Jesus Christ—the saving of immortal souls. Let every one who possibly can, attend this meeting. And in the meantime, let earnest prayer be offered for God's blessings upon it. An interesting program is assured.

Busy?

Of course you are! How can any of us be otherwise now? This is April—Stewardship month, Tithing month, Pay-Up month. Please push the program, brethren, and let us bring pastors' salaries, A. C. B. and G. C. B. up to date, April 30. Dr. Straughn will be looking for "Loyalty" and "Tither's" cards. Let us see that they go in as rapidly as possible. Thank you.

Information

Two cards have been received, giving the information asked for last week. This is what we desire: The number of special Easter services; the number of Easter offerings for the Board of Missions; the amount of the offerings for the entire charge; whether or not pre-Easter evangelistic meetings were held; the number of additions to the church. If pastors will give us this information on a postal card, we shall be grateful.

Enthusiasm

Do you know what it is? It may be a little difficult to define, but most of us recognize it when it is about. And unless it is speeded too high, we enjoy it. In fact, it is a wonderful something if it is kept in proper gear. It becomes very dangerous, though, with too much speed. It is a very splendid thing for a preacher. He can use it well in the pulpit. His scripture reading, his public prayer, his sermon, are all helped greatly by it. And even in his visiting among his people it works well. It is good, also, for a Sunday school superintendent and teacher. It is absolutely essential to a church organist, and the choir and the congregation can't do much singing without it. And it works wonders with a board of stewards. In fact, enthusiasm fits in well anywhere in the church. And there is no surprise in that, for it is scriptural: "Fervent in spirit, serving the Lord."

Appointments

April 9-11.—Asheboro, in meeting of the North Carolina Branch of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies.

April 14, Sunday.—Richland Charge.

April 14, Sunday.—Asheboro, 7:30 p. m.

May 5, Sunday.—Greensville. Churches to be visited as follows: Philadelphia, 11 a. m.; Matthews Chapel, 3 p. m.; Wesley's Chapel, 7:30 p. m.

THE STRENGTH FOUND IN UNION

In 1918, when the Allied Armies were waging a brave, but losing, fight against the Central Powers, it suddenly occurred to some one that the cause of failure was lack of unity. The forces of each nation were fighting under their own commanders, striving for the same end, co-operating as much as possible under their plan of organization, but getting nowhere. Then, when the battle was going against the allied forces, came this sudden inspiration to unity. Marshal Foch was placed in supreme command, and all the armies began battling under the orders of his master mind. A few months thereafter defeat was turned into victory.

The churches have for many centuries been fighting the forces of evil, but with no pronounced success. Can there be success so long as there are divisions in the Christian forces? Can we hope to establish the religion of Jesus so long as our fighting forces are divided upon non-essentials? What answer can we give to the non-Christian who asks, If the religion you teach is true, why cannot you agree among yourselves? Can any convincing reason be given for the more than 200 divisions of the Christian church? Is it convincing to have to say that these divisions represent the inability of men to compose their differences of opinion in secondary matters?

When asked what was the great commandment, Jesus answered: Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul and with all thy mind. And the second is like unto it: Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. Are there 200 different ways of obeying these commandments? When we are called to account for the manner in which we have lived this life, will we be asked with what denomination we affiliated, or how well we lived?

The forces of evil will not be routed until we present to them a united front. When we become deeply in earnest about bringing the whole world to Christ, regardless of how much it may cost in personal sacrifice, then denominationalism will be seen in its true light as a hindrance to the work and the churches will unite.

In the past few weeks I have heard three Presbyterian ministers declare themselves in favor of denominational union. Four Methodist Protestant ministers have indicated their approval. Numbers of laymen have expressed themselves similarly. I am convinced that the weight of decision is with those who favor union, and that if all who favor it would openly declare themselves a movement would be started towards union that could not be resisted.

E. S. WILLS.

(We would call attention to the fact that our last General Conference appointed a commission on church union. "Barkis is willin'." Church union is like matrimony. Indiscriminate combinations are not best and some sensible people know it and stay single. Others wish they had stayed single, though they endure in silence. Others marry and are happy. It certainly is not best to marry in haste and repent at leisure, and none of us can believe in companionate marriages. If we wish to be under one human head, the Roman Catholic Church has a plan and a very old and large organization. We do not, however, believe enough in outward unity to recommend that to the Protestant churches. We believe there is unity in the Christian church already, as there is unity in the vegetable kingdom, with all its various forms of life. What we want among Christians is harmony, co-operation in common tasks, concurrence in testimony. The testimony of three witnesses is stronger than that of one. All the denominations preaching Christianity make a more powerful impression on the heathen world than would the testimony of the Roman Catholic Church alone. There may be too many denominations and there may be too few. No one, we think, has yet constructed a valid argument to prove that there should be only one.—EDITOR.)

BUILD HIGH YOUR MANSION

Once there was a famous king. He had great riches and honors. Yet he was not happy. He sometimes almost envied the poorest subject in his realm.

This king heard of an old man, famous for his wisdom and piety, who could tell what he must do in order to be happy. So the king went to see him. He found him living in a very humble way, in a cave on the borders of a great wilderness.

"Holy father," said the king, "I have come to you to learn the great secret of how I may be happy."

The old man did not give him an immediate answer. But he rose, and walking out of the cave, asked the king to follow him. He led him along a rough path till they came directly in front of a very high rock on the side of a mountain. On the top of that rock an eagle had built its nest. Pointing to that rock, the old man said:

"Tell me, O king, why has the eagle built its nest on yonder high rock?"

"No doubt," said the king, "the reason is that it wants to be out of the reach of danger."

"True," exclaimed the wise man. "Then follow the example of the eagle. Build your nest, make your home in heaven. Then it will be safe beyond the reach of danger, and you will find peace and happiness all your days."

Such was the old man's answer. And it was a very wise one. It is just what Jesus tells us, when He says, "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal; but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt and where thieves do not break through and steal."—Selected.

President C. E. Society, High Point College
APRIL 14: "BIBLE MESSAGES NEEDED TODAY"

Matt. 16:24; John 3:16; Isa. 55:1-3, 6, 7

Plans for the Meeting

The leader may give out in advance the following Bible references which are characteristic of Bible messages needed today:

Come to Christ, Matt. 11:28-30.

Self-denial, Rom. 13:1-3.

Humility, John 13:1-11.

Topics for Discussion

1. A Bible message on faith.

2. A Bible message of hope.

3. A Bible message on love.

4. A Bible message on redemption.

5. A Bible message on life.

Questions to Be Answered

1. What message has the Bible for young people?

2. Why should the Bible be included in one's education?

3. What message from the Bible does our Society need?

Leader's Talk

The Christian Endeavor topics this month should be of interest to every member of the society. No man or woman is educated until he or she has a thorough knowledge of the Bible. All of you have heard the poem—"I've a message from the Lord, Hallelujah!"

The message unto you I'll give,

'Tis recorded in His word, Hallelujah!

It is only that you 'Look and live.'

The topic tonight is one to remind us that we are message-bearers, repeating the words of Christ, "If any man would come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me." The Bible is a straight message. Its language is often hard to improve. It as a whole is made up of small messages, gems of real worth, that can be taken as the plan or pattern for our lives. Let us see what some of these messages are.

Prayer for Leader

"O God, our Father, give us clean hands, clean words, clean thoughts;

Help us to stand for the right against the easy wrong;

Save us from habits that harm;

Teach us to work as hard and play as fair in Thy sight alone as if all the world saw;

Forgive us when we are unkind; and help us to forgive others who are unkind to us;

Send us chances to do a little good every day, and to grow more like Christ. Amen."

—William DeWitt Hyde.

Poetry to the Point

Blessed Bible! how I love it!

How it doth my bosom cheer!

What hath earth like this to covet?

O, what stores of wealth are here!

Man was lost and doomed to sorrow;

Not one ray of light or bliss

Could he from earth's treasures borrow

Till his way was cheered by this!

Yes, I'll to my bosom press thee,

Precious Word, I'll hide thee there;

Sure my very heart will bless thee,

For thou ever sayest "Good cheer."

Speak, my heart, and tell thy ponderings,

Tell how far thy roving led,

When this Book brought back thy wanderings,

Speaking life as from the dead.

Yes, sweet Bible! I will hide thee

Deep, yes deeper in this heart;

Thou, though all my life will guide me,

And in death we will not part.

Put in death? No! never! never!

Through death's vale I'll lean on thee;

Then, in worlds above, forever,

Sweeter still thy truths shall be."

—Phoebe Palmer.

OUR CHILDREN'S HOME

Mrs. H. A. Garrett for W. H. M. S., $502.09; Palestine, Flat Rock, $2.10; Mt. Mermon, Creswell, $1.79; Hope, Chatham, $6.50; Spring Hill, West Thomasville, $2.13; Chase City, $2.40; Older Girls' class, Mr. Carmel, Forsyth, feeding a child, $5.00; Mr. W. S. Cecil's class, Pleasant Grove, feeding a child, $5.00; Concord, Saxapahaw, feeding a child, $5.00; Oak Grove, Cleveland, $2.17; State Street, $7.29; English Street, $5.51; Spring Church, Spring Church, $2.14.

Note that three communities begin this week the definite plan of sending us $5.00 per month for the feeding of three of our boys. These boys, all about the same age, have been assigned to them and all concerned are happy in it.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Mrs. J. Roy Turner, Stokesland, Va., two pair shoes, three pieces underwear, nine little boys' suits, and three pair pantaloons.

Mrs. J. W. Curtis, Liberty, left two nice lots of canna roots one day this week while we were up town.

We thank all of you for your kind thoughtfulness of us.

We would like those who gave us chickens last fall to know that these chickens have proved a blessing to us during the winter and spring so far. We gathered in 290 dozen eggs during the month of March.

We also wish to thank especially, this week, the women of the church who have contributed to us through Mrs. H. A. Garrett, the treasurer. But for your offering our report would be exceedingly short this week.

Faithfully yours,

A. G. DIXON.

—Rev. C. W. Bates assisted in the funeral service of Mr. J. A. Murchison last Monday afternoon. Mr. Murchison was a member of Westminster Presbyterian church, but Mrs. Murchison and their daughter, Miss Mae, are members of Calvary M. P. church. The burial was at Flat Rock church. Mr. Murchison was an invalid the last two years of his life, and died of pneumonia, aged 75 years. He leaves a half brother in Lillington, a son in California and another in this city, Mr. Holye Murchison. Mrs. Murchison is a niece of J. C. Roberts, promoter of our college enterprise and giver of the fund that founded our board of ministerial education.

—Several textile mills strikes are reported from places in North Carolina. Both sides will probably lose out in this contention. That is usually the case. Striking is a very expensive way to gain justice. There may be instances when strikes are justifiable, but we believe they are very rare. The spirit of co-operation should take the place of conflict of interests. Each party is worthy of more consideration by the other party. Men are men whether they work in offices or in shops.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

MAPLE SPRINGS, FORSYTH CIRCUIT

The W. F. M. S. and the W. H. M. S. have just closed another very successful year with all budgets paid in full.

At the March meeting, held at the home of Mrs. C. A. Long, the following officers for the coming year were elected, the uniting of the two societies going into effect with the new year:

President, Mrs. Ira Wb Baity; vice-president, Mrs. T. L. Speas; secretary, Miss Myrtie Kiger; treasurer, Miss Elsie Baity; secretary of Missionary Education, Ida Long; secretary of Scholarship, Miss Flora Kiger; secretary of Literature, Mrs. Eugene Grubbs; secretary of Thank-Offering, Mrs. C. A. Long; secretary of Christian Education, Miss Myrtie Kiger; secretary of Spiritual Life, Mrs. L. C. Hine; secretary of Temperance, Mrs. R. E. Watts; secretary of Benevolence, Mrs. Paul Hine; secretary of Life and Memorial Members, Mrs. E. F. Kiger; secretary of Y. P. W., Mrs. T. L. Speas; secretary of Pastor's Aid, Mrs. L. C. Hine.

At a recent district meeting held at Maple Springs the following recommendations were submitted:

MYRTIE KIGER, Cor. Sec'y.

Whereas the General Conference of the M. P. Church thought best to unite the four Mission Boards, we, the committee on recommendations, do submit the following:

We recommend: (1) That each church in this district unite their societies into one auxiliary as soon as possible.

(2) That this district co-operate with the Board of Missions and the N. C. Branch of Missions, as outlined in the new constitution.

(3) That an auxiliary be organized in every church in the district with every woman in the church an active worker.

(4) That all members of the auxiliaries subscribe to the Missionary Record, in which may be found the greater part of all missionary activities of our denomination.

May we ever keep in mind the home field and our missionaries and their work in the foreign field and remember them in our prayers.

MRS. IRA W. BAITY,
MRS. H. G. PASCHAL,
MRS. RUSSELL G. HOLDER.

MT. PLEASANT WOMAN'S AUXILIARY, CIRCLE NO. 1

Circle No. 1 of the Mount Pleasant Auxiliary met at the home of Mrs. R. C. Causey Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

The meeting was opened by a Bible reading which was followed by prayer. Following the devotional a business session was held in which the society made plans for the coming year.

During the social period Bible baseball and other games were played. These were followed by refreshments.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. W. G. Causey, the vice-president, Mrs. R. C. Causey, presided. The circle will hold its next meeting at the home of Mrs. T. G. Smith on the first Wednesday in May.

REBECCA CAUSEY.

FINANCIAL REPORT, W. F. M. S.

Mrs. Taylor reports that West End, Greensboro, has paid its budget in full.

EASTER RETURNS

Will all pastors and Sunday school superintendents please make their Easter report of new members received and the amount of Easter offering for Missions at the earliest possible date? Please report the full amount of the offering whether your budget is fully met or otherwise. The cause greatly needs money at this time.

A banner will be awarded to the Sunday school reporting the largest Easter offering. A banner will also be awarded to the Sunday school reporting the largest amount per member.

WEDDING AND ENGAGEMENT RINGS

The custom of wearing engagement and wedding rings on the fourth finger of the left hand originated in an ancient belief that a very delicate nerve ran directly from that finger to the heart. According to Aulus Gellius, this belief was mentioned in the Egyptian writings of Apianus in the second century A. D. During the Middle Ages the connection was supposed to be a blood vessel instead of a nerve. Henry Swinburne, an English ecclesiastical lawyer who died in 1623, left a quaint observation on this subject in his "Treatis of Spousals." "The finger on which this ring (wedding ring) is to be worn," said Swinburne, "is the fourth finger of the left hand, next unto the little finger; because, by the received opinion of the learned and experienced in ripping up and anatomizing men's bodies, there is a vein of blood which passeth from that fourth finger unto the heart called vena amoris, love's vein."—Exchange.

Can you read this old cipher?

U O A O but I O thee.

O O no O but O O me.

And give O O I O thee.

The answer is: "You sigh for a cipher but I sigh for thee. Oh sigh for no cipher, but oh sign for me, and give sigh for sigh for I sigh for thee."

—The ministers of Greensboro were well entertained by the Lions' Club in a supper at the King Cotton Hotel on Thursday night of last week.

—Rev. W. F. Ashburn was called to go to Gray's Chapel on Tuesday to conduct the funeral service of Mrs. Nancy Hackett, aged 82.

—Tuesday afternoon Rev. L. W. Geringer conducted the funeral service of Bessie Lou Thompson, aged five and a half, who was killed by an auto. She was a granddaughter of Rev. H. S. B. Thompson.

—We are pleased to hear that Bro. R. H. Brooks of Grace church is greatly improved in health and hopes soon to leave the sanitarium for home.

—Mrs. J. Norman Wills has gone to Asheville to attend the state convention of the North Carolina Federation of Music Clubs.

—Rev. R. J. Tamblin, pastor of Grace church, is an expert piano player.

Yes, it looks pretty good, thank you. Thirty-six churches and charges report this week; but we have 94 charges with 233 churches, and when the other 197 report, as they will of course, our report will be a real beauty.

The denominational year closes on the 30th of this month, and one-half of our budget will be due. We hope it may be possible for us to pay up to date.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Belmont, Mt. Hermon Charge.—We are glad to report that our Sunday school is still increasing in attendance. For the past few weeks the opening exercises have varied, different classes having charge each Sunday, which made it quite interesting to the school.

We gave the five smallest classes of our Sunday school an Easter-egg hunt on Easter Monday, which seemed to be enjoyed by all the children present.

A very interesting Easter program was rendered at our church Sunday evening. Misses Nannie Coble and Elsie Baker deserve much credit for getting up this splendid exercise, which was enjoyed by a full house.

Our pastor, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, delivered to us the fourth Sunday morning another one of his splendid sermons. He always brings us a good message, which we enjoy.

We have just finished having our church covered.

The Christian Endeavor Society is doing a great work in our church, especially among the young people. They have been rendering some very good programs. The society has recently decided to clothe one of the girls at our Children's Home at High Point.

REPORTER.

Kannapolis.—Yesterday was a good day for our Kannapolis church. At the 11 o'clock hour our pastor brought us a very appropriate message on the resurrection.

At the evening service the young people and children had charge. They rendered a splendid Easter program. We had a large congregation which seemed to enjoy the program very much. Much credit for the success of this program is due Mrs. M. W. Henderson and Mrs. J. M. Gordon for training the children; also Mrs. C. B. McCombs, who had charge of the music. The offering amounted to $8.75.

The Ladies' Aid Society recently purchased a beautiful communion set and presented it to the church. We were very glad to have two new members added to our roll recently.

Our pastor preaches for us every Sunday, both morning and night. This has increased our attendance, especially at night.

We are glad to have Grandma Tilley, who is our oldest member, back in our midst again.

Best wishes to all readers of the Herald.

REPORTER.

Knob Creek, Fallston Charge.—The people of Knob Creek enjoyed a splendid sermon on the fourth Sunday by their pastor, Rev. J. M. Morgan. His subject, "Prayer," was a very impressive one. It must have made the entire audience feel more keenly the benefit of prayer and to see that we should spend more of our time in talking with God. Prayer is the key that unlocks the door to God's store-room where we may have possession of all God has for us. Wouldn't it be a wonderful thing if more of us could possess this key!

We have a very good Sunday school with a very good attendance.

We have several sick members in the community, namely: Mrs. Bynum Chapman is at the home of her mother, Mrs. Frank Norman, suffering from an attack of appendicitis; Mr. Charlie Goodman is on the sick list, and Mr. W. W. Richard is very ill with heart trouble. We hope for these a speedy recovery.

Our second quarterly conference will convene at Laurel Hill on Saturday before the second Sunday in April in the afternoon. We hope to have all the officials present.

With best wishes to the Herald and all its readers.

ETHEL NORMAN, Reporter.

Winston.—The Philathea class met on Monday evening with Mrs. J. E. Kirk at her home on High street. Mrs. Roy Hauser, the president, presided, and Mrs. R. A. Wagoner read the scripture lesson, followed with prayer offered by Mrs. H. F. Surratt. There were 18 members, three new members, and three visitors present. Mesdames Roy Hauser and H. F. Surratt were named delegates with Miss Nannie Watson and Mrs. W. T. Tise, alternates to the Baraca-Philathea convention.

The class decided to prepare and present a play at an early date.

A delightful social hour followed the business session and a delicious salad course was served by the hostess.

Porter.—Our work has been moving along about as usual.

The fifth Sunday in March Rev. W. D. Reed and a number of the people from Davidson charge came over and held a very beautiful service at 2 p. m. This was greatly enjoyed by quite a large crowd. It was indeed a great pleasure to have those good folks visit us and a real treat to have Bro. Reed again in our midst, having been our pastor for six years since. We are always glad to have him visit us and we are hoping they will all come again.

Pastor Hill has filled all his appointments and each time with a real good sermon. We appreciate his faithfulness.

Our Sunday school has been doing very well considering the amount of sickness among the members. The attendance has been fairly good the entire winter, and now that spring is here we are hoping for better attendance and a good year's work from now until Conference.

The second quarterly conference was held Saturday afternoon (April 6) at 1 o'clock. The attendance was fairly good and a very harmonious meeting was held. W. H. Mabry and J. L. Caudle are nominees for delegate.

MRS. W. T. BRASWELL.

Bessemer City.—We have a good Sunday school and think it's going to be better still as spring comes on. We had 110 present yesterday. Bro. Henderson preached Sunday night an interesting sermon. We also had Bro. D. M. Loy with us Sunday night and all our folks were so much pleased to have him back again. He has been our pastor twice and he was loved by all who knew him. We are praying that Brother Loy will still continue to improve in health and be with us more often, for we believe he is a godly man. He is now visiting in the Bess Chapel community. May God bless him and ever be with him.

We are planning to start our revival meeting the second Sunday in July, with Rev.

T. A. Williams as pulpit help. Pray for us that we may be ready for a revival and that many souls may be saved.

REPORTER.

Welch Memorial.—The worship programs have recently been enriched in our Christian Endeavor, our Sunday school and in our preaching services. This is evidently a reaction from the training school recently conducted in our town. Only a small number of our people received credits from this school but even this small number is sufficient to very favorably influence the entire church. I wish that every church in the North Carolina Conference could have a delegation, even though it might be small, in some training school such as we had here in High Point.

At a recent meeting our missionary societies merged into one and officers were elected as follows: Mrs. W. L. Edwards, president; Mrs. J. W. Mitchell, vice-president; Mrs. J. W. Greenway, secretary, and Mrs. Thomas Winslow, treasurer.

The grounds of our church and parsonage have been very much improved recently. Dirt has been hauled in and the low and washed-out places have been built up. Grass seed have been sown and if this is a success our grounds will become a place of beauty.

Our spring revival began yesterday with good attendance. Bro. Troxler is expected today, who will do the preaching throughout the meeting. We are expecting a great revival.

Bro. J. H. Moton, a former pastor and much beloved by all our people, is at this time quite sick. We hope and pray for his speedy recovery. The prayer of all of Bro. Moton's many friends are earnestly desired.

GEO. L. CURRY.

Mt. Lebanon, Randleman.—On the second Sunday morning the Missionary Society held its regular monthly meeting. A special collection was taken for the bungalow in India. All officers were re-elected for the following year. They are: Mrs. J. L. Hall, president; Miss May Caudle, vice-president; Mrs. A. R. Snyder, secretary; Miss Nora Hughes, treasurer. The probability of uniting with the Ladies' Aid Society was discussed but no action taken. While we have a membership of only sixteen (honorary members included) we have been doing splendid work. Our budget for last year was $40. To date we have paid more than $68. We are planning to raise our pledge next year to $50. A fine spirit of enthusiasm and co-operation has been shown during the entire year.

The second quarterly meeting was held at Level Cross on March 23. The usual business was transacted. Brothers Cliff Hinshaw and Arthur Ferree are the nominees for delegate to the next Annual Conference.

On Thursday evening following the third Sunday the Ladies' Aid Society met with Mrs. W. F. Matthews. The devotional was conducted by the pastor, Rev. T. A. Williams. We are planning to hold the annual Dahlia show in October. After the business session delicious refreshments were served.

Easter Sunday morning found a large number of people at church for the sunrise prayer service. The service, which was led by our pastor, was a very impressive one. A number of interesting talks were made by the members of our church and of other churches.

In the evening the children rendered their program of songs and recitations. A pageant was presented by the Junior and Intermediate classes. I wish you could have seen those tiny tots as they walked up to "say their piece." Every one showed very plainly that he was doing his very best—and glad to do it, too. If we oldies ones would always do our best—and willingly!

Attendance at Sunday school the first Sunday was 103, with $8.06 collection.

At the church hour Brother Williams brought to us a very splendid sermon, based on II Cor. 6:10. After the sermon Miss Ruth White united with our church. Miss White is our pianist, a very charming young woman, and we are glad to welcome her as a member of Mt. Lebanon church.

Our mid-week prayer meeting continues to grow in interest and number. The meeting will be called off this week, however, to enable our members to attend the revival which is in session at the local Baptist church.

A special series of revival services will begin at Worthville the second Sunday in this month. Brother J. D. Williams, of Greensboro, will assist in the preaching. It is hoped that the members will attend regularly and that much good may be done.

REPORTER.

Mitchell's Grove, Guilford Circuit.—Easter Sunday was a good day for us. In the morning we had a short Easter service. There were songs and recitations by the children; then at night a pageant was presented by members of the Sunday school. Our Sunday school is doing real good work and also the Christian Endeavor society.

On Sunday afternoon, April 7, our pastor, Rev. J. R. Hutton, gave us a very interesting sermon; he seemed to be at his best, but he is always at his best and inspires us to go forward, and we hope we may all on the entire circuit work together in harmony and much good may be accomplished. We were glad to have some visitors from other churches to worship with us Sunday: Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Montgomery, Mr. and Mrs. Gallimore, and Mr. and Mrs. Bracket, from Lebanon church, High Point; Rev. and Mrs. A. L. Jones, Hickory Grove, Guilford Circuit. We are always glad to have others with us, Come again.

MARTHA PARSONS.

Friendship, Mount Hermon Charge.—Our Baraca boys planted some shrubbery at the church on Easter Monday morning, which will add much to the beauty of the church grounds. Our congregation has purchased an adequate number of new hymnals for the church, and we note an improvement in the song services already. A new piano has been placed in the church on trial and we hope that it may become permanent property of the church.

Mr. Carroll, our pastor, preached a splendid sermon Sunday at the 11 o'clock service to an unusually large congregation. He used as his theme "The Struggle With Destiny."

Mr. Kenneth G. Holt, president of the Friendship Memorial Association, was with us Easter Sunday and appointed committees to make plans for the memorial services which are held annually on the first Sunday in June. The committees are as follows: Program committee, Mrs. D. I. Offman, chairman, Misses Vista Garrett and Gladys Murray; ground committee, Mr. T. F. Overman, chairman, Messrs. J. A. Sharpe and J. S. Graves; decoration committee, Mrs. H. A. Garrett, Misses Mary Murray and Elma Sharpe and Mrs. J. A. Sharpe; music committee, Miss Vista Garrett, chairman, Mr. Garland R. Isley and Mrs. J. M. Murray. Members of these committees who were not present Easter Sunday will please note these appointments.

Delegates from our Woman's Missionary Society to the branch meeting in Asheboro this week are as follows: Mesdames D. I. Offman and H. A. Garrett, with Misses Eula Isley and Mae Patterson as alternates.

MAE PATTERSON, Reporter.

Tabernacle Charge.—A very pleasing program was given at Tabernacle church Easter Sunday morning. All the children rendered their parts well. The committee in charge is to be congratulated on arranging such a splendid service. Rev. T. F. McCulloch, who was present as a visitor, made some appropriate remarks. While Julian church did not give a regular Easter program, Mrs. W. T. Hanner's Sunday school class conducted a sunrise prayer meeting with good attendance and in the afternoon the pastor preached an Easter sermon. Miss Anna Hardin gave her class of children an egg-hunt Easter Monday afternoon.

The two missionary societies at Tabernacle have recently merged with Miss Lelia Kirkman as president. Mrs. Charles Smith and Mrs. R. R. Horney were elected as delegates to the branch meeting at Asheboro to represent the two societies.

Brother Floyd Reynolds is planning to bring the C. E. Society from Calvary church, Greensboro, to Tabernacle next Sunday afternoon and give a program. We are looking forward to their coming with pleasure.

Bros. C. R. Fields and G. A. Garrett went to High Point sometime ago to confer with Dr. Dixon about re-furnishing a room in the Children's Home. The church voted to pay Dr. Dixon $75.00 out of the treasury for this program.

Miss Kate Reynolds, daughter of Bro. C. O. Reynolds, is taking nurses' training in Long's Hospital, Greensboro. We miss her from our services at Tabernacle.

Mr. C. E. McCulloch, of Wilmington, is visiting relatives in Guilford County. He is one of our members at Tabernacle and we were glad to have him worship with us Sunday morning.

Bro. P. A. Hardin remains ill.

Thanks to Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Hanner for some sweet potatoes and pumpkins.

H. L. ISLEY.

West Forsyth.—Last Sunday was a good day for us with large congregations at both churches in which we had services. We were at Baltimore at 11 a. m. We arrived at this church in time for Sunday school and there was a large number present. The people were very attentive to the efforts of the pastor in the delivery of a message. After the service the pastor and family went to the splendid country home of Mr. and Mrs. George Nicholson where a good dinner was enjoyed. An invitation had been given for this visit more than a week previous. We thoroughly enjoyed the visit. Bro. J. T. Smitherman and two sisters, Misses Nancy and Millie, all of East Bend, and members of Baltimore church, were guests with the pastor and family in the Nicholson home. Mrs. Nicholson is a sister of the East Bend members.

An unusually large congregation was present at Stony Knoll at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon where we had a good service and good attention. We were delighted to have Mr. Hampton, a blind musician of Winston-Salem, with us in this service. Mr. Hampton, who is salesman for a piano concern at Winston-Salem, placed a piano in the church last week and was present to play for the service and permit the church to try the merits of the instrument with a view of purchasing the piano.

Both the Baltimore and Stony Knoll churches made Easter offerings for the Board of Missions. Also Pleasant Hill made an offering for the board at its Easter exercises on Easter Sunday night. The program for Pleasant Hill church was hurriedly prepared and rendered in a fairly good manner by the children and young people of the Sunday school.

The Baltimore church had a meeting announced for last Sunday night to organize a Christian Endeavor society. We have not heard of the result of the meeting, but presume that the society was organized, which will be the second organization of its kind on the West Forsyth charge.

We are looking forward with much interest and expectation to the meeting of the second quarterly conference for West Forsyth charge, which will be held at Stony Knoll church on Saturday before the third Sunday in this month. We are to have President Taylor with us. He will preach at 11 o'clock and the session of the quarterly conference will be held in the afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. Dinner will be provided by the people of Stony Knoll church. Then on the third Sunday President Taylor will preach at Pleasant Hill at 11 a. m. and Tabernacle at 2 p. m.

Our regular appointment for next Sunday will be with the Union Hill church, near East Bend, in Yadkin County.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Lexington, State Street.—Last Sunday was one of the best days we have ever experienced since the organization of the church. Sunday school attendance was above the average in number and several new members were enrolled. The sermon Sunday morning by the pastor was very fine indeed and all who heard it were helped.

At the evening hour Dr. J. C. Leonard, pastor of First Reformed church, conducted the service for us. A large number of his congregation was present and also some of the M. E. folks. Their pastor, Rev. Mr. Mangum, called off the evening service in his church to worship with us. We are all deeply grateful to these good people for their co-operation. Dr. Leonard's address was inspiring beyond description. His subject was the parable of the prodigal son and the character most stressed was the father, typifying the heavenly Father and His joy over the return of His wandering children. Surely, none who heard this splendid address but felt more forcibly the great love of God for humanity.

At the 11 o'clock hour a week ago last Sunday we were much pleased to receive into the church Mr. and Mrs. Dallas Potts, Mr. Potts coming from the First Baptist church here and Mrs. Potts from the First Reformed.

They are both fine and faithful young people and we feel that we have been strengthened by having them join us. Mrs. Potts is a talented singer and is doing fine work as junior choir leader.

Dr. Stone was detained on account of the death of Dr. Benson, so will not arrive here until Tuesday.

Bro. Bethea had charge of the service last night (Monday).

Mr. and Mrs. Bethea have as their guest this week Miss Byrd, of Enfield. Miss Byrd has visited here before and has many friends who are glad to have her come again.

REPORTER.

Spring Hill, West Thomasville Charge.—Our Easter program was given in the afternoon of Easter day with a good number present.

Rev. T. J. Whitehead was with us April 7, bringing an interesting sermon based on the 23rd Psalm. This is one of the most beautiful passages of the Bible, and its significance was made very clear.

The second quarterly conference is due to meet at Spring Hill, Saturday afternoon, April 20.

Miss Vina Cecil presented to the church three pulpit chairs in honor of her sister, Mrs. Daisy Cecil Bowles. They add much to the beauty of the church and every one wishes to thank her for this liberal gift.

We are planning to organize a Ladies' Aid Society in the near future. The ladies are now making plans to beautify the church grounds.

The funeral for J. L. Moore was held at Spring Hill March 24, and burial followed in the church cemetery. Although not a member of this church he will be greatly missed, as he attended our services often and was greatly interested in the new building.

ALICE HAYNES, Reporter.

First Church, Thomasville.—We see improvement in every department of our church activities. I am convinced more and more that I am serving a mighty good people. I was complimented the other day by a fine, intelligent woman of the First M. E. church here. This is what she said: "Bro. Powell, you are the pastor of the best church in Thomasville—not the finest church, but the best people." I am beginning to believe her statement is true. Our attendance, while not satisfactory, is equal to or surpasses the finer churches and larger memberships of Thomasville. We have a great field here. I see the situation quite differently here from what I used to think before I came here to be pastor. My former impression was that we were trying to take care of a church and congregation where not needed. My present impression is that we are situated with the finest location, with a fine band of workers and in the finest field for church activities in the city of Thomasville. It would have been a great mistake had this church been done away with. There is no church in any town filling a greater need. Its mission is great. I have said this to call the attention of our conference for the prayers and larger consideration. We have received nine new members since coming here. We are looking for a large ingathering this year.

Our Sunday school is nearing the 200 mark. We had our Easter program on the fifth Sunday night. We had to throw our S. S. rooms open and then could hardly seat the congregation. Some said it was the largest congregation they had ever seen here.

On the second Sunday night in April we are going to worship God in song. An old family quartet from Albemarle will be with us and sing the old-time Gospel hymns.

May the Lord greatly bless His people.

H. L. POWELL, Pastor.

P. S.: The second quarterly conference Monday night after the fourth Sunday in April; hour, 7:30. Let all officers of the church be present.

H. L. P.

Greer's Chapel.—Our church work is progressing nicely. The warm weather has caused better attendance in Sunday school. That pleases us indeed.

On March 31 we had the "dedication service" at the church. A large crowd was present. The morning service was conducted by Rev. R. S. Troxler, our pastor, in which he preached a wonderful sermon. Along with this, several beautiful songs were sung by the choir and the Palmer Sister and also Miss Annie Chislem from Thomasville.

At noon a large dinner was spread on the grounds. Everybody ate and enjoyed it. Afternoon service was mostly devoted to special singing and talks. Rev. James Fitzgerald made a splendid talk and several other men made good talks. We had with us a male quartet from High Point who favored us with several good selections. The whole day was enjoyed by every one.

May God send us another good day.

REPORTER.

First Church, Albemarle.—We have just closed one of the best meetings that I was ever in. We began with one week of prayer service each evening at 7:30 and on Sunday at 11 o'clock Bro. Cowan, of Atlanta, Ga., was here and began the revival. He was a real old Gospel preacher and it sure was a success. Folks were saved in church, at home, on streets and at work. Fathers, mothers and children were all at the altar at the same time and were wonderfully saved, and the whole church was wonderfully served. We feel like we can take on new life and do better service for our Master. I can safely say our church is in the best spiritual condition it has ever been in since I have been here with this good people. We are very proud to see our attendance increasing in Sunday school and church services. We were also made glad to see 25 new members taken into church at the close of the revival. There were boys and girls, husbands and wives, ranging in age from eight years to possibly 70 years. We thank God for religion that saves even old men from their sins and makes them want to get in the church.

We had a very fine Easter program given at 11 o'clock by our Junior department, directed by their superintendent, Mrs. C. S. Moton and Miss Ruth Green. The song service was conducted by our young folks under the leadership of Mr. C. L. Hatley and Mrs. John Johnson, their Sunday school teachers. It was indeed a good day for us. Sunday night service was given over to the regular choir, with special Easter music and a short talk by Brother Cowan, very fitting for the occasion.

We are planning to reorganize our Christian Endeavor in the near future. We realize we are losing a great deal of interest among our young boys and girls by not having one.

We are deeply sorry to note the illness of one of our former pastors and one whom we love like a brother, Mr. John Moton. He is the father of one of our own beloved members, Mr. C. S. Moton. Our prayers and sympathy go out to the entire family.

Our Men's Bible class is the pride of our Sunday school. Bro. Anderson is teacher; they have on roll 47 and an average attendance of about 30—as fine a bunch as you can find anywhere.

I almost forgot to tell you we will soon have a new scholar in Sunday school, a new boy, Jene Tyson Whitlock, born to Mr. and Mrs. J. U. Whitlock. Mrs. Whitlock is our reporter and I am substitute, so you can look forward to a good report in the near future.

R. L. L.

Albemarle.—Our reporter is sick, and I am sending in a report of our revival meeting this week. We have just closed one of the greatest revival meetings in the history of our church here. It began with a week's prayer meeting in the church. The prayer meeting was a revival within itself. We had a number of reclamations and conversions there. After a week of prayer Rev. E. P. Cowan, of the Georgia conference, came as our pulpit help for ten days. His strong, clean cut, gospel sermons were an inspiration to the Christian, and a powerful appeal to the unsaved. As a result we had 25 to join our church, 20 on profession of faith. Three children were dedicated to the Lord the last night of the meeting, one of them being the pastor's baby.

It has always been a great pleasure to me to work with these people here, but it's going to be a greater pleasure now than ever since many of our members have taken a fresh and a stronger grip on God. It was a very pleasing sight in these days of card-signing and other formalities to see men and women, boys and girls, kneeling around an old-fashioned altar, (yes, we have one in our new church; I would not build or pastor a church without an altar) confessing their sins and praying through to God. Everything seems to have taken on new life. Our Sunday school has gone up from about 85 to 179. The Junior department had 100 per cent present last Sunday. Mrs. C. S. Moton, superintendent of the Junior department, and her efficient staff of officers and teachers are doing a great work.

We are going to have our formal opening of the new church some time soon, at which time we want all of the former pastors and members to be present.

J. R. ANDERSON, Pastor.

Hollister.—Our Sunday school is increasing rapidly in attendance. There were 78 present Sunday, an increase of ten over the previous Sunday. We have 73 members on roll and we are adding new members nearly every Sunday.

We did not have an Easter program but we sent in an Easter offering.

On the fourth Sunday morning in March our pastor brought us another good sermon, after which the Lord's Supper was observed.

A New Century Service committee was appointed by the pastor to raise our General Conference budget.

Our second quarterly conference will meet at Eden church next Friday at 2 p. m. We hope to have all official members present, as this is the time for nomination of delegate to Annual Conference.

KATHLEEN SHEARIN, Reporter.

Fairview, Anderson Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. G. B. Ferree, preached Sunday to a large and attentive congregation.

We are planning to have on the first Sunday in May our annual "Home Coming Day." We are expecting some good speakers and hope also to have many of our former pastors with us.

We were glad to have Rev. T. E. Martin, one of our former pastors, and his son, Henry, worship with us Sunday.

Misses Fannyner Freeman and Emma Lee Poole, of High Point College, spent the Easter holidays with homefolks.

BERTHA CONNELLY.

Easley, S. C., Route 1.

Burlington, First Church.—L. A. Braxton, Jr., son of our good reporter, has been ill for a long while, so that Brother Braxton has not been in position to report regularly. L. A., Jr., is better now and we trust he will soon be out again and back in the Sunday school.

Our evangelistic services that were conducted at the same time meetings were being held in 12 other churches, came to a close Easter Sunday morning. Dr. J. D. Williams, of Greensboro, came on Monday after the third Sunday in March and continued with us until the night of March 27th. After that the pastor conducted the services until the close. Dr. Williams did as good preaching as any one needs to hear. I have not heard better anywhere. I have known preachers to make a bigger stir and have more excitement but not preach any better, if as well. There was good attendance throughout the meeting, better perhaps than last fall when ours was the only meeting in progress. Brother T. O. Pender was with us from the beginning to the close and rendered us most valuable service in directing the singing. Both of these men have our thanks for the helpful service rendered.

We have received to date six members, four of these on profession of faith and two by transfer.

On Easter Sunday night the children of the Sunday school under the direction of Mrs. M. A. Colde and her committee gave an Easter program. A full house enjoyed the service. The offering amounted to about $44. The best we can say about the offering is that it is much larger than last year.

We are finding the financial side of the work a bit more difficult this year than last because, I suppose, of the failure of the two real estate companies that have gone into the hands of receivers. Then, too, quite a number of our people have been without work because of a depression in cotton mill and hosiery mill business. The situation is some better now, and we are looking to the future hopefully. We do not want to entertain the idea of not meeting our obligations as Burlington has for a great number of years done. No church can afford to do less for the interests of Christ's kingdom than it has been doing. The church (church people) had better beware how they practice economy at the house of the Lord and live extravagantly elsewhere.

Except for finances we are running along about normal, I think. Here's hoping that many of the churches are doing better than that.

L. W. GERRINGER, Pastor.

Mecklenburg.—I am still in the hospital; am improving some. It will be two weeks tomorrow since I came. I was fortunate in securing Bro. N. M. Harrison, of Charlotte, to hold our second quarterly conference last Saturday; also Bro. Harrison filled our regular appointment at Zoar church Sunday, and we have arrangements made with our brethren to keep up our services during our sickness for one month at least.

W. C. HALL, Pastor.

High Point. At the morning hour for worship, 11 o'clock, Miss Annie Robbins, delighted the congregation with a vocal solo, "The Lord Is My Shepherd." Annie's voice is a lyric soprano, and possesses great beauty and volume for one so young in years. She is a pupil of Prof. Ernest B. Stinson, and gives much promise of being a lovely and artistic vocalist.

April having been designated as Stewardship Month for the New Century Service, the minister, Rev. R. I. Farmer, delivered a most earnest and timely sermon on "Our Christian Stewardship," based on the parable of the talents. He said in part that in those days there was no such thing as life insurance, or a bank vault, or travelers' insurance which may be purchased for a quarter at the railway station, but in olden times when a man made a journey, he would take his valuables with him, or entrust them to a tried servant. A tragedy of the Christian is the want of belief in the Lord. All that we have is a trust fund. Back of it all is God, the owner. If we fail to acknowledge the ownership, we are unprofitable servants. The pagan idea of a tithe or tenth is as wide as the poles. You belong to Christ, if you confess His name. A man's possessions are acquired and accumulate with God's consent and help, and when we take the name of God, we acknowledge our stewardship and ownership. It has always been a sign of spiritual progress when a man enlarges his vision of service. Nothing but character and God is worth anything; cleanliness, honesty, integrity, stewardship of money and service are the valuable assets of a life. There is a difference between genius and talent; few possess genius, but everybody has talent of some kind. The kingdom of God means work to all of us. There has always been diverse management; two of the servants in the parable quickly responded to the call for service. It is a tragedy in the Christian world when gifts and talents are not invested for Christ. It does not mean that a man must not provide for the rainy day for his family, for "he who does not provide for his own is worse than an infidel." When we work and minister for God, it is a proof of our love for Him. I challenge you Methodist Protestants of High Point to heed the call of God and give your tithes. This was a very strong and impassioned appeal for the New Century Service, which means the General Conference Budget. Rev. Mr. Farmer is entering very heartily into this cause, and has appointed the Educational Committee, Stewardship Committee, and a Finance Committee.

The theme for the evening sermon was "Resurrection Reality," and the music was unusually beautiful. We were much gratified to have Repton Lodge, I. O. O. F., and the Rebekahs with us as our guests.

The first meeting of the new Woman's Auxiliary was held at the church Monday afternoon. Mrs. R. M. Andrews was in charge of the program, which was very entertaining. The new secretaries were elected, and names of circle chairmen, who had been previously elected, were read. There are now nine circles; one of high school and college girls, of which Mrs. Roy I. Farmer is chairman; two circles of business and professional girls, of which Miss Mary E. Young and Miss Nellie Martin are chairmen; a home circle, Mrs. E. L. Ballard; a group composed mostly of young married women, Mrs. Ben T. Moore, chairman; four circles of adult women, of which Mrs. L. R. Johnston, Mrs. E. L. Douglas, Mrs. Paul S. Kennett, and Mrs. J. G. Snipes are chairmen. This gives us a working force of more than 200 women, of whom we are anticipating much work and service. A rising vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. C. L. Gray for her untiring efforts and faithful service as treasurer of the Ladies' Aid Society for 12 years. Mrs. John S. Pickett, treasurer, reported that the Foreign Missionary Society raised during the year just closing $515.00; the Home Missionary Society sent to Mrs. H. A. Garrett, treasurer, the sum of $601.25 with an additional amount of $15 for local expenses. Miss Young, chairman of Young Woman's Auxiliary, reported $143.00 contributed, which was more than their budget. The Ladies' Aid Society raised $750.00 for local expenses—all told, the women of our church contributed $2,000 last year to all causes. After the business was finished refreshments were served by the hostesses.

At the C. E. meeting Monday evening the topic, "Using the Bible as a Daily Guide," was discussed.

At prayer meeting Wednesday evening the pastor will continue his helpful and inspiring discussions on the Lord's Prayer, the subject for this week being "Forgiveness, a Need of the Soul."

In the annual high school operetta, presented by Mr. Lewis L. Stookey last Friday evening, April 5, in the high school auditorium, C. L. Gray, Jr., sang a leading role in his unusually beautiful and strong tenor voice. Among the young people of our church, Dorothy Rankin played the role of Katonka, an Indian princess and won much applause. Margaret Neese, Robert Davis, J. D. Koonce, Jr., James Hinkle, and Ernest Auman, Jr., played very creditable parts.

At the girls' debate at High Point College last week, the question, "Resolved, That the President of the United States should be elected by a direct vote of the people," was debated, and the affirmative won, which was upheld by Misses Claire Douglas, of High Point, and Willie Fritz, of Lexington, over the negative side, championed by Miss Elizabeth Nicholson, of Mebane, and Helen Shields, of Kernersville.

Capt. A. M. Rankin has gone to Orlando, Fla., to spend a month for his health.

Mrs. S. S. Coe went to Asheboro this (Tuesday) afternoon to attend the N. C.

Branch meeting. Mrs. S. D. Shelton and Mrs. E. L. Ballard will attend the sessions for the three days. Mrs. R. T. Pickens and Mrs. Ben T. Moore expect to go tomorrow. Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, Mrs. R. M. Andrews, Miss Olive Thomas, and a number of others plan to attend a part of the sessions.

Rev. E. L. Ballard has gone to Lexington to assist in a meeting with Rev. N. G. Bethea this week.

We are much pained to learn of the illness of Mrs. A. L. Cecil, who is taking treatment in Danville, Va. Her numerous friends are hoping for her early recovery.

First Church, Winston-Salem.—Spring has come with all its glory and splendor. May all the churches take on new life like all nature has.

Easter Sunday was a very interesting Sunday. At the evening hour the young people gave a pageant, "From Darkness to Dawn." This was delightfully presented, the costumes being very appropriate.

Our Easter offering amounted to $61.53.

The following were received into our fellowship: By confession of faith, Madelyn Long, Mildred Kelly, Lollie Hickey, Ruth and Gladys Sharpe, George Millaway and William West; by transfer, Mrs. S. E. Hauser comes to us from Shoals Baptist church.

The executive meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society was held Monday afternoon at the church.

Misses Ruby Tise and Anna Mae Hauser represent the Young People's Society at the North Carolina Branch meeting of the Woman's Missionary Societies which meets in Asheboro, N. C., April 9-11.

The Board of Stewards met Tuesday evening, April 9th, at 1:30 with Mr. B. K. Millaway.

The boys and girls between the ages of 12 and 16 years have organized a Mission Club. It is a very interesting organization and the young folks should be urged to attend. It serves as a training school for them; when they grow older and take more active parts in the church.

Since the Workers' Council has been organized they are doing a great work and planning great things for the church.

Our Sunday school has made a decided increase in the last month and we hope to continue to grow and prosper with the help of God.

EVELYN SMOTHERS.

First Church, Thomasville.—It seems as if our Sunday school does not increase as much as we had hoped it would. I think that if we would boost our Sunday school more we would win more people to it. We should tell other people about our church and get them interested in Christian work. If we can get people interested in work for the Lord our church will grow as it has never grown before.

Our Christian Endeavor Society and prayer meeting are moving along nicely. Our attendance in C. E. has not been very high for the last few Sundays. It seems as if the people have something else to do on Sunday afternoons and can't get out to C. E. Some people go joy-riding and ride until it is too late to come, which does not help the society any. If we would put our church and its work foremost in our lives, we would prosper as never before.

On Easter Sunday night, the children of the church and the choir gave an Easter program. This program took the place of the regular Sunday evening service. We were delighted to see a full house. The children gave the program very nicely to a very attentive audience.

On last Sunday morning the regular monthly communion service was held, after a very fine sermon delivered by Mr. Powell, our pastor.

We were glad to welcome into our midst, as members of the church, Mr. and Mrs. John Russell on last Sunday morning. We are striving to make this a great year for our church.

JUANITA DORSETT, Reporter.

Bethel, Mocksville Charge.—On Sunday morning just as the sun was peeping over the eastern hills, the C. E. Society met at the church where everything had been made beautiful. The church was beautifully decorated in green and white, with potted plants, hyacinths and hand-made lilies. On the outside the yard and cemetery were lovely, every grave being covered in green with flowers here and there. All nature seemed to smile. We gathered in the church for our sunrise service, the first of the kind ever held here. The program consisted of songs, scripture readings of the resurrection and ascension of Christ and story, "The Brightest Day the World Ever Had," beautifully told by Miss Janie Martin. Talks by different ones were made. The quartet sang "Up From the Grave He Arose" very beautifully. Attendance was good for this place. The interest and spirit of worship were profound.

At the evening hour the children and young people gave an interesting Easter program consisting of songs and recitations. The children did their part well. I wish to make special mention of a little girl six years old and her brother, Clara and Oscar Lee Poplin, who sang "The Old Rugged Cross" as a duet. They held the large audience spellbound.

We were glad to have as visitors in the service Mr. and Mrs. Baxter Foster and a number of others from Winston-Salem, Asheboro, Martinsville, Va., and other places. It was a good evening for us.

The Sunday school for the past quarter has been fine. The children are very much interested in the work and like to hear it their class had perfect attendance. The attendance has been very gratifying for the past quarter. We hope to improve.

We will hold our Young People's service at fourth Sunday at 11 a. m. The program has been arranged in part. Now for a prayerful effort in making this a success. Our pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton, is very much interested and will do all he can for the cause.

GRAHAM-MEBANE CONTEST

An attendance contest between the Mebane and Graham M. P. churches, similar to the recent one between Burlington and Concord, began Sunday, April 7th and will continue through the month of April. The contest includes all the Sunday services, except Christian Endeavor. We trust that much good will result from this contest. The report for the first Sunday is as follows:

	Graham	Mebane
S. S. attendance	165	169
Morning service	88	189
Evening service	72	133
Totals	325	491

MRS. EARL BRADY.

NOTICE

Our second quarterly conference on Vance Circuit will meet at Flat Rock church Saturday, April 20th, at 2 p. m. A good attendance of the official members is desired. Please be there, brethren.

J. B. O'BRIANT.

—Report comes of the death of Mrs. Rev. W. T. Totten, of Draper. She had been very ill for weeks and her death did not come as a surprise. Bro. Totten has our sympathy in this bereavement.

GREENSBORO, N. C., APRIL 18, 1929

NUMBER 24

"Come, Ye Blessed!" . . . "Depart, Ye Cursed!"

Our life's been lived, the end has come,
We're brought before the great white throne;
Before the Righteous Judge of all,
We sons of men, both great and small.

The throng's immense, the number great,
From every clime, from every state.
The whole of Adam's race appears,
Some filled with joy, some filled with fears.

In space around, in space above,
Bright angel forms are seen to move.
Both heaven and earth are met together
For greatest business settled ever.

A breathless stillness fills the air,
Though some would shriek did they but dare.
It is the world's last great assize,
To pick the men for life's great prize.

To call for witness there's no need,
The Judge of all to all takes heed.
He knows the record of every man,
East inmost soul does clearly scan.

And quick as flash He draws a line,
On right and left He does assign
Each man his own most fitting place,
Each man of all the human race.

On right are seen the souls that love,
Whose records clear their love well prove.
On left, self-centered, loveless souls
Who from the needy their hearts withhold.

The Judge speaks out in words so strong,
They place mankind where all belong.
'Tis "Come" to those of loving heart;
To others, fearful word "Depart!"

What shouts of joy and songs of praise
Do those on Judge's right hand raise!
What moans of pain and words of gloom
When those on left hand hear their doom!

No other tale has e'er been told
Like this true tale of human soul.
It fills with hope, it fills with dread.
To what extremes we may be led!

It gives to life a meaning deep,
It tells us why we should not sleep.
It makes of life a stern warfare,
It makes us think, it bids us care.

—We thank the Duke Endowment for two pamphlets giving in tabulated form much information regarding orphanages and hospitals in North Carolina and South Carolina.

—In the death of Dr. Frank Benson the denomination loses one of its outstanding servants. He had been editor of the Methodist Protestant since 1916 and his services were highly satisfactory. He was a graceful and thoughtful writer. The suddenness of his going intensifies the feeling of loss. He had only a moment's warning, just time to express to his wife his appreciation of her. However, he knew that he was afflicted with an affection of the heart which at any time might have a fatal termination. We shall miss his genial spirit as it shone out in his eye and through his writings. But surely our loss is his great gain. He passed from great labor to great reward.

—We are in receipt of a communication from Dr. W. Knighton Bloom of Washington, D. C., announcing a missionary education conference at Black Mountain, N. C., from June 25 to July 5, 1929. All denominations are invited. There will be "intensely interesting Bible study courses, thrilling missionary educational hours, great books studied, demonstration classes with children from Blue Ridge and Black Mountain, vesper hours, an evening forum, recreation periods." We doubt not that it will be worth while and hope some of our people may take advantage of it. Those going should send their names with registration fee of $5 to Mr. J. J. King, Blue Ridge, N. C.

—The special session of our Annual Conference was held last week according to announcement, with a good attendance of ministers and a number of laymen. Some laymen who could not be seated as delegates because they had not been regularly elected were given honorary seats with the privilege of the floor in discussions. The principal business was the endorsement of a scheme for refinancing High Point College. The original plans contemplated the early payment of building debts, but the cost of three large buildings was so great that it could not be met in a short time. The new scheme proposes to sell bonds for enough to pay off present debts, these bonds to run for ten years, and to be balanced by subscriptions of friends of the college to be paid in ten years, one tenth each year. The college is fortunate in having some friends of large means. One has pledged $50,000, two others $25,000 each, and others smaller amounts aggregating $156,000. Brother George Penny has been chosen to present a personal appeal to other friends of the college and he hopes to secure the entire amount needed to pay the college out of debt. This year the Annual Conference is trying to raise $10,000 toward running expenses. This special session endorsed the proposition to make this sum $6,000 per year to help on interest in the case of friends who might find themselves unable to pay both principal and interest of their pledges. The success of this scheme will put the college in a very much more hopeful position. The conference gave unanimous endorsement.

OUR INSTITUTIONS

The Children's Home

Sixteen years ago a small group of women, working under the auspices of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the North Carolina Branch, conceived the idea of providing a home for dependent children. Their resources were small, and their undertaking unpretentious. But their hearts were warm with fervent heat, and subsequent events have proved that their purposes were set in the right direction. From a very small beginning the institution has grown in means and in service, far beyond, we dare say, the most sanguine among us sixteen years ago. Nearly 100 children are now comfortable, housed in the two large brick dormitories.

These children are being well cared for physically; they are also being trained mentally and spiritually, that when the time comes for them to leave the home they may be able to go out into the world and take places of usefulness and honor. It will be gratifying to the many friends of the home to have it under the care of the new Superintendent, Rev. A. G. Dixon, D.D. We bespeak for him the co-operation of the churches in a measure of increasing generosity. It is a matter for thanksgiving to Almighty God that there has been so little serious sickness in the home, and only one death since the beginning, and that by accident.

Since the Trustees are to make a detailed report to the conference, it seems unnecessary to say more here.

High Point College

This institution is now in its fifth year, and is enjoying a growth that is highly gratifying, both to the conference and to the entire denomination. With unfailing fidelity on the part of our people, the institution will continue to grow, and to have an increasing place of usefulness in both church and state. It will need, and must have, as is to be expected, constant nurturing, and the strength of the entire conference is needed for this task. It will be neither right nor religious to shift the burden onto the shoulders of a few. It is OUR college, and WE must take care of it.

From the time the college was first opened for students until now, the enrollment has been good,—in fact all that could be expected, and even more. Dr. J. F. McCulloch said from the auditorium platform, on the occasion of the observance of Founder's Day last Thursday, that there were more students sitting there before him than he ever hoped to see at the institution in his time. The first graduates have now gone out from the institution, and as this list grows from year to year the college will have an enlarging group of friends, and a widening circle of influence. The faculty of 23 members gives to the individual student the opportunity of personal contact that is not possible in the larger colleges and universities. This, we think, is a strong argument for the small college. The character of scholastic work that the college is doing, and the quality and amount of college equipment, has received the endorsement of the state grading authorities, and a full A-grade rating has been granted. This is an achievement that merits the full appreciation of the church, and one that will materially enhance the prestige of the college. President Andrews, the College Faculty, the Board of Trustees, and all friends who have contributed to the gratifying success thus far of the institution have the grateful appreciation of the conference and of the entire church. This conference will be asked to make larger provision for the maintenance of the school, and we trust that the challenge will be met with a faith and a courage commensurate with the great work that the institution is doing.

Yadkin College

Because of sentimental reasons, growing out of the associations and the traditions of a lifetime, I do not know that I am competent to address the conference in regard to this old institution, existing now only in name, and in the building and the six acres of ground upon which the building stands. No, pardon me, brethren, for that is not true. There is infinitely more to Yadkin College today than the material substance that still exists of the institution. There is much in the strength, integrity and progress of this conference at this hour for which Yadkin College must be given a meed of praise. All over the state are men and women of honor and distinction who received their scholastic training at Yadkin College. The late and lamented T. T. Hicks, than whom there was no better lawyer in eastern North Carolina, and no more loyal Methodist Protestant, said to me, that next to his father, he was indebted to Prof. S. Simpson more than to any other man, for instruction and information. Brother Hicks was a student at Yadkin when Professor Simpson was president of the school. For nearly three quarters of a century, and almost without an intermission, a school of higher learning was maintained at Yadkin College, and during that time thousands of the youth of this and other states were taught and trained there. It is unthinkable that the value and influence of those 75 years can perish, though the school no longer exists.

Out of deference to what the school has done, and still is doing in the lives of those who were taught there, it does seem that some way should be found to preserve it, even in physical form. The old building is in bad repair, and unless something is done for it soon, the ravages of time will demolish it. It would be difficult for me to encourage any disposition of the property that would offend the tender sentiments and cherished traditions of the local community. The institution is like a child to them, and they can not sever from it their affections. However, if some plan can be found by which the building can be preserved and put to some useful purpose, either in the community or elsewhere, that, it seems to me, should be done. It does not seem necessary or wise to let it stand as it is until nature destroys it.

Westminster Theological Seminary

We cannot speak too highly of this school of the prophets, beautiful for situation, and the joy of the whole church. Its presiding head is a modern Samuel, and all of his assistants are imbued with the spirit of real prophets. Our own scholars, playful, profound Forlines keeps the school very close to us and enhances our unfailing confidence in it. There is no better place for our ministerial candidates, and we earnestly urge upon them the merits of this institution, and their necessity for the course of study offered. The very generous financial assistance that the Seminary is now offering is not without our deep appreciation, and must be very attractive to our young men. Only complete satisfaction can await those who avail themselves of these offers. Again, we urge our young men to go to Westminster Theological Seminary.—From President's Address to Annual Conference.

THE KAREN WOMAN'S RUPEE

Mr. Kincaid records the following touching incident of his work in 1841:

"Some time since, I went to the house of an aged woman who worshiped God. For several months she had been unable to leave the house, and was fast wearing out with consumption. She has four children, but one is blind and another is deaf. She is very poor. The house might have been worth fifteen rupees, and all in it fifteen more. She could talk but little on account of her cough, but expressed great anxiety for the eternal welfare of her children.

"After about an hour spent in conversation and prayer I rose to take my leave, when the poor woman bade me remain a little longer. She crept along to another part of the house, and returning soon, she put into my hand a rupee. I could not comprehend what she meant, and said, 'What is to be done with this?'

"'This is very little,' she replied; 'but it is all I have, and it is to help the cause of Christ.'

"'But you are old, and infirm, and poor.'

"'Yes, but I love Christ, and this is very little.'

"Surely, I thought, here, in the midst of poverty and decrepitude, is a converted heathen exercising the enlightened faith which works by love, purifies the heart and overcomes the world. For days I could not cease from reflecting on the expression, 'This is to help the cause of Christ,' and when I thought of the withered hand and wrinkled face of her who gave it, that rupee was magnified to a thousand times its value."

The same rupee was brought to this country, and its exhibition by agents of benevolent societies, in connection with this affecting incident, has awakened in thousands of hearts a deeper interest in missions, holier emotions, and firmer purposes of Christian benevolence.—Selected.

"UNWEPT, UNHONORED AND UNSUNG"

The Legislature of 1929 has passed out. "unwept, unhonored and unsung." The best thing which it did during the whole three months it was in session, was to adjourn. The people had high hopes when it began.

Everybody supposed that the Legislature had heard what happened on last election day, and that it knew the attitude of President Hoover toward Prohibition enforcement, especially after his aggressive stand on March 4th. We all assumed that a Republican Legislature would follow its party's national and state platforms and the leadership of President Hoover, but we are sorely disappointed. The Legislature killed every moral measure introduced, either by suppressing it in committee or killing it on the Assembly floor.

The editor of The Bulletin is a Republican and all Bulletin readers know that he did more to help elect President Hoover than all the wet Republicans in the Legislature put together. Hence, we have a right to speak our mind, and we are going to do so. When political parties fail in the purpose for which they are organized—to serve the people—then it is time for them to die and get out of the way of some other party that will help the people get what they want. Unfaithful legislators should be retired.

The Republican party in 1923, both branches of the Legislature being Republican, passed the Mullan-Gage repeal bill, to wipe the State Prohibition enforcement law off the statutes—evidently to help the bootleggers. In its state platform of 1924 the Republican party promised to re-enact that law, and the people elected a Republican Legislature again, but when the Legislature met it shamelessly repudiated its party platform pledge. The Republican leaders have been promising, or half promising, every year since then to re-enact such a law. They have been "stringing" us along year after year with the hope that such a law would be passed. They have at last shown their true hand—that they do not intend to pass such a bill at all.

The Republicans have spent their time fighting Governor Roosevelt, instead of trying to remedy great outstanding evils in our state. The Bulletin editor did not vote for Governor Roosevelt, but we are frank to say that we believe he has acted much more honorably than the Republican Legislature. We think the Governor is right in his budget fight with the Legislature, and we hope he wins. We believe he is constitutionally right in the stand he has taken.

What Should Be Done This Fall?

Every Republican Assemblyman who voted against the Jenks bill should be defeated for re-nomination, and if re-nominated by the local wet Republican machine of his county should be overwhelmingly defeated on election day, no matter how large a Democratic majority may result thereby in the next Assembly. We will trust dry Democratic Assemblymen sooner than wet Republican Assemblymen. Even a wet Democratic Legislature could do no worse than the wet Republican Legislature has done this year.—Reform Bulletin, published by Rev. O. R. Miller, Albany, New York.

CHILDREN'S DAY, SECOND SUNDAY IN JUNE

Children's Day supplies will soon be ready. We are delayed in getting out the service just a little because of the printers—not our own printing plant, however. We will be glad to have all churches to send in their orders promptly so that when the services reach us shipment will be made at once.

We have prepared this year a beautiful service, music and recitations with recitation sheets and offering envelopes. Pageants will be supplied to those who order them. Now, everybody for a great Children's Day service and a most liberal offering for the cause of Missions in our foreign field.

G. W. HADDAWAY, Executive Secretary.

EASTER RETURNS

Easter returns are coming in quite satisfactorily. We have not yet heard, however, from quite one-half of the schools who ordered the service. Please send in returns as to the number of new members and the amount of Easter offering at the earliest possible date.

The Sunday school making the largest offering will receive a banner, also the Sunday school making the largest offering per membership. The church receiving the largest number of members on Easter Sunday will be given special notice. Even if your General Conference apportionment is met without the Easter offering, why not send it in anyway. It was taken for missionary interests; thus giving good measure. The Board of Missions needs the money.

EVANGELISM

Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.

Richland

April 14, Sunday.—We were with this charge in two services Sunday. In the morning at 11 o'clock we were at Cedar Falls, our first visit ever to this church. The appointment for the afternoon was at Brower's Chapel. At each place we were cordially received and heard by interested and interesting congregations. In addition to the faithful and earnest adult members of these congregations, we found young people, intelligent and capable, who give hope for the work in the years that lie ahead. We were impressed with the need of organizations for this field, and the ability of the people to effect and to carry on organizational work. A brotherhood for the men would be helpful; the young people need the benefit and the opportunity of Christian Endeavor; the women would find in the Women's Auxiliary a means of effective and pleasing service. A better financial system is needed also. There can be but little hope of liberality on the part of the people without a program that acquaints them with the needs of the church and that gives to the individual member a definite financial allotment, as an obligation to the entire budget. We were glad to find the pastor interested in these matters, and we trust that the charge may soon be organized along these lines. Brother Pierce is serving his first year on this charge. He speaks well of the people and the people speak highly of their pastor. We hope that all together they may be able to work out their problems, and that this may be a year of encouraging growth for this field.

Asheboro

At night we were with this church, speaking in a Stewardship program which the pastor had carried through the day. The attendance here was encouraging, and a pleasing spirit was in evidence in the service. Since our people here live at the center of things, we, of course, expect them to be a conference center in all the essentials of a progressive and growing church. They deserve much credit for their new and attractive church—well built, well planned, and well paid for. Final payments were made last year, and the church dedicated in October. Our hearty congratulations! We have an influential membership in our church in this growing city. In the management of conference and denominational affairs they are well represented. Bro. Pritchard is serving his fourth year on this charge as pastor, and has proved himself a zealous and capable leader. He has the full confidence of his people, and the expectations are for another good year in the work. Their spring revival begins on the fourth Sunday in this month; we shall hope and pray for a spiritual awakening, and for the redemption of the unsaved.

The day with these two charges was happily spent, and our gratitude is hereby acknowledged to pastors and people for kindnesses shown us during these visits.

Forsyth

April 15, Monday.—Rain! Rain! How it did rain! But this did not stop the quarterly conference on this charge, held at Hickory Ridge church. Fifteen persons were present, though two churches were not represented. The pastor's report and the reports from various departments of the work showed that the charge is in good condition and growing. There is a Sunday school at each church, and all are functioning well, and some unusually so. Oak Grove has, perhaps, the best school ever. More room is being provided at the Mt. Carmel church, and we observed that two rooms were curtained off at Hickory Ridge. The pastor stated that plans were working to carry out the full building program of the Maple Springs church. The women have merged their work, and the faithfulness that characterized the old order on this charge will be carried over into the new. The finances are somewhat behind, but a good showing will be made when the year is finished. The charge paid last year, for all purposes, more than $23 per member. Pastor Stubbins is giving diligent and thoughtful attention to his work, and is popular with his people. We were glad to be with Pastor Stubbins and his people, and to renew, in this brief visit, the fellowship of friends on this charge.

Special Session

The annual conference, meeting in special session in the Asheboro church, April 10, was well attended, and a spirit of optimism prevailed. The session was called for the purpose of assisting the college finance committee in working out some plans to complete the financing of High Point College. This was promptly done, in complete harmony with the wishes of the finance committee. The plans appear well thought out and feasible. It now remains for every one of us to help realize them. To maintain an institution such as we have in High Point College is a task. No one will deny that; but it is a task of which we are capable, and which we will accomplish. But surely no one will suffer any one else to accomplish his part of it. Every shoulder, then, to the wheel, until this college is thoroughly equipped and moved out into its rightful place of largest usefulness.

At a recent meeting of the Board of Trustees, an arrangement was made by which President Andrews will give a large part of his time in assisting the finance committee in raising the money necessary to liquidate the debt on the college, and to provide an endowment. All of our churches will, of course, be open to him for this purpose, as he may feel he needs these public hearings in carrying out the purposes of the trustees and the finance committee. We bespeak for him the fullest co-operation in this matter by pastors and churches. And again, let us pray that the rich blessings of God may attend us in these efforts.

Herald Allotments

THE METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD has become such a fixture with us that it is difficult to see how we could ever get along without it. It is at once a medium of information, inspiration, and edification, and the good that it has done our conference can hardly be reckoned. But listen: We need more subscriptions. For the benefit of the reader, we need more. To read the HERALD means to be better informed on church matters, and thereby more loyal to church programs and purposes. For the benefit of the HERALD, we need more. It takes money to publish the paper, and unless we can get this money in subscriptions, the conference must find some other way of providing it. Enough subscriptions would provide the means for maintaining the paper without the necessity of any appropriation by the conference.

The special session of the conference created a committee and charged it with the responsibility of trying to increase the subscription list. The instruction was to give each church in the conference a subscription goal, and to urge pastors and people to bring the subscriptions up to the goal. We trust that the committee may have this ready by next week. Watch for it in the HERALD.

"Lest We Forget"

Our Evangelism Promotion meeting in First Church, High Point, April 28, 2 p. m. We want everybody present who can possibly be there. Nothing that we can think of or do can be more energizing to our conference than a deepened spirit of Evangelism. And surely it will be pleasing to our Lord for us to come together in a meeting that has that alone for its purpose. Unless other matters are in your way, please plan to be present in this meeting. And let us ask again that you pray the blessings of God upon this effort. We trust, too, that pastors will speak of the meeting publicly, and invite their people to attend.

New Century Service Program

Please do your best with this, brethren. See that Loyalty cards are properly signed and returned to Dr. Straughn. Also have the following committees appointed for each church: Educational, Stewardship, and Finance. Push the tithing plan for the month. For both the Annual and General Conference budgets, April is Pay-Up month. Let us do everything possible to bring every obligation up to date by April 30.

INDIANS AND TOBACCO-USING PREACHERS

WILL H. BROWN

When the Presbytery was held with one of the Indian churches of the Great Northwest, the missionary said to the Indians: "It is customary when the Presbytery meets with a church to invite the visiting elders to distribute the elements of the Communion." One of the Indian elders replied:

"Missionary, the Communion is a holy thing. We cannot endure to have it touched by unholy hands. Some of the white elders use tobacco, and we are not willing to take the risk of having men who use tobacco assist at the Communion." A paper, reporting the incident, says: "No Indian minister or elder, or member, of the Presbyterian church among the Northwest Indians ever touches tobacco."

Contrast this with other white ministers. A. M. Young, writing to the Tobacco Record, says a lady erected a magnificent institution in the South for aged and poor Baptist ministers, who could be admitted in case they did not use tobacco. After the Home had been opened for some time, with only a few inmates, an investigation was made as to why more did not come. Many needy preachers were interviewed. Here are the actual words used by Mr. Young in telling the rest of the story:

"It was learned that these ministers would not accept, much as they needed the protection of this foundation, because they would not give up their smoking. After careful consideration the lady withdrew this rule, and the home was immediately filled."

This will give some idea of the awful slavery into which tobacco leads its victims. John 8:36: "If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed."

ACCORDING TO RESOLUTIONS

At a missionary meeting held among Negroes, the following resolutions were agreed to:

1. We will all give something.
2. We will all give as the Lord has prospered us.
3. We will all give willingly.

A secretary took his seat at the table with pen and ink, to note what each gave.

Among those who came forward was a comparatively rich old man, almost as wealthy as all the others put together, who threw down a small silver coin.

"Take dat back," said the secretary; "dat may be 'cordin' to de firs' resolution, but it aint 'cordin' to de second."

The rich man took it up and went back to his seat in great rage.

One after another came forward, and as almost all gave more than he, he was fairly ashamed of himself, and he went up again and threw a gold coin on the table, saying, "Dar, take dat."

It was given so ill-temperedly that the secretary answered, "No, dat won't do yet. It may be 'cordin' to de firs' an' de secon' resolutions, but it aint 'cordin' to de last"; and he was obliged to take his coin again.

Still angry at himself and the rest, he sat for a long time, till nearly all the people were gone, and then came up to the table with a smile on his face, and pleasantly handed a large gift, and heard the secretary say, "Very well; dat is 'cordin' to all de resolutions."—The Little Missionary.

OUR STORY PAGE

FOR VALUE RECEIVED

"And now, young man, how much do I owe you?" The prosperous appearing motorist took a leather billfold from his pocket and looked inquiringly at Paul Hastings.

Paul wiped his greasy hands on a piece of old canvas with which he had been removing some superfluous oil from the engine of the stranger's expensive car.

"Oh, I hardly know—it didn't take me ten minutes to fix the engine. I happen to know quite a little about cars, as I look after my father's car and tractor. Whatever you think it is worth will suit me."

The motorist fingered his purse reflectively. "True it took you but a few minutes to get my engine running again, but you had to leave your work in the field, walk a half-mile in the hot sun, and you will have to walk back now."

Paul laughed. "Oh, I'm used to all those things. I don't mind the walking, and I can work a little later tonight to make up for the time I lost."

"Will a dollar pay you for your trouble?" inquired the stranger.

"Yes, thank you very much, sir."

"Thank you," returned the other, extending the money.

"And now would you mind telling me your name?"

"Paul Hastings."

"I suppose you live in the house yonder."

"Yes, but during school terms I attend high school in the city."

"I see. Well, Paul, you have done me a great favor by starting my car, and I appreciate it. Perhaps I can do something for you at a later date. My name is Emory Markwell, of Chicago."

"From Chicago," mused Paul to himself after the stranger had driven on. "He is a long way from home."

As he started toward the tractor, which he had left standing in the field when he went to the aid of the stranger, he saw some one apparently waiting for him near the machine. Quickening his pace, he soon recognized one of his friends, Henry Brooks.

"Where have you been?" asked Henry. "I knew you must be close somewhere, but I couldn't see you."

"I was over in the road, fixing a fellow's car."

"I pulled a motorist out of a mud-hole the other day," Henry announced, an expression of glee crossing his face, "and I made him pay for it, too, I can tell you. I believe in charging a good price for my work in such a case."

"Why?" asked Paul wonderingly.

"Well, when a man driving a car gets stalled, he usually wants to get started as quickly as possible, and he'll pay well if he has to," said Henry sagely. "I got ten dollars for pulling this man's car out of the mud."

"Ten dollars!" cried Paul. "You surely did get enough."

Henry chuckled. "Yes, I figured that I did."

"You didn't do ten dollars' worth of work for him," said Paul.

"Oh, no, not in actual labor, but he had to pay for the accommodation. What did your man pay you for starting his car?"

"A dollar."

"A dollar? One dollar? Paul Hastings, do you mean to tell me that you let him get away as cheaply as that?"

"That was ample pay for my time," argued Paul.

"What about the accommodation?" demanded Henry.

"I just threw that in," said Paul, a little reluctantly. "Besides, the man said he might be able to do me a favor sometime."

"Ha, ha, ha! You are certainly poor at business. The very idea of accepting one dollar, when you might as well have had five or ten. Perhaps you don't need money as badly as I do, though," Henry laughed derisively.

Paul flushed. "I need it in high school, all right, but I don't need any that I don't earn."

"The man could easily afford the ten dollars," said Henry easily. "He looked as if he had plenty of cash, and when he flourished a monogrammed billfold and asked how much he owed me, I thought I might as well get what I could."

"The man whom I assisted today had a monogrammed billfold, also. He drove a blue car."

"Was he a tall man with glasses?"

"Yes, he answered to that description," said Paul.

"The very same fellow," cried Henry. "No doubt he is glad that his car stopped in front of your place this time instead of mine, for had I been able to make the car run, I'd have expected good pay."

After Henry had gone, Paul climbed upon the tractor seat and resumed his plowing. As he guided the powerful machine along the rows he thought over the conversation with his friend, wondering if he really had been foolish to do the work for the motorist at so reasonable a figure. He felt a trifle disappointed that he had not been offered more, too, for if the stranger had paid Henry ten dollars for no more of a service, it seemed to Paul that he might have been more generous today.

He told his parents about the incident that evening. Mr. Hastings approved of his son's action heartily, and declared that he would certainly object if he thought Paul would try to overcharge strangers just because they needed help very badly.

When the school term started, Paul did whatever work he could obtain in the city. Henry worked at various tasks, also, but as a result of his shrewd bargaining during the summer, he had a great deal more pocket money at the outset than his friend. He did considerable boasting of the fact, letting his friends know how Paul had deliberately passed by opportunities to get some extra money.

Naturally Paul did not enjoy this sort of thing. He had done what he thought to be right, and it was not at all pleasant to be made sport of because he had been fair.

One autumn day, Henry and Paul were walking from school together.

"It seems as if it's hard to get enough to do to earn books, supplies, and the like," said Henry, who had been rather prodigal of his easily obtained vacation money.

"Yes, it is, even if one is very careful of what he spends," replied Paul, who was obliged to economize rigidly.

That night, Paul was called to the telephone, and a man's voice came over the wire.

"This is Hartley's Garage. I understand you are working after school. If you want something better than odd jobs, we'd like to have you drop in and see us."

"I'll stop after school hours tomorrow," promised Paul eagerly, and the man said that would be satisfactory.

The owner of the garage gave Paul a searching look when he appeared the next day, asked him a few questions, and gave him the position, which was far better than his previous work. Paul was delighted, but mystified as well.

"If you would not mind telling, I should like to know how you happened to hear of me," he said to Mr. Hartley.

"Oh, I've had you in mind ever since last summer," said Mr. Hartley.

"Since last summer? But I have never applied to you for a position," said Paul in amazement.

"No; but one day last summer a motorist stopped here for a few days and told me of your skill and courtesy. He informed me that you are a student here during the school term, and recommended that if I needed some one, you would surely fill the bill. This is a garage where we mean to give our patrons what they pay for, and according to your story told by Mr. Markwell, your policy is the same as ours."

"Mr. Markwell! The man whose car had oil spurting out over the spark plugs. I remember him well," said Paul.

"He didn't pay you very much, did he?" inquired Mr. Hartley in a half humorous voice.

"He paid me fairly," said Paul.

"A fine man, Mr. Markwell. He never forgets little favors—those things that cannot be measured out in dollars and cents. He's always ready to speak a good word and use a bit of influence in return for value received. I've known him for a long time, and you just wait and see if he doesn't look you up next summer when he drives through this vicinity, as he does each year. You will always have a friend in need."

Henry was somewhat chagrined at first when he learned of his friend's good fortune and the reason for the position having been offered to him, but when he had thought it over, he admitted that Paul deserved it.

"I don't blame him a bit for not recommending me," said Henry, "and I'm through trying to get more than I earn from folks in trouble just because I can."—Selected.

WHAT THE PRINCESS-DAUGHTER WANTED

Once upon a time there lived a king in a splendid castle on the top of a hill. Now, this king had a daughter who was very beautiful, and every one loved her and wanted to do nice things for her. Every time she wished for anything, some one was sure to overhear the wish and see that it was fulfilled. It was almost like having a fairy grandmother right in the house!

But one day the princess-daughter wanted something that no one could get!

"I don't even know what she wants!" wailed the queen-mother.

"Nor I!" said the king-father. "Let us hear what the soothsayer can tell us."

The soothsayer was called in, and he listened to what the princess-daughter wanted.

"I want something that will make my heart sing," said the princess-daughter. "I want something without a price which can not be bought, and yet which I would not exchange for a king's ransom."

The soothsayer stroked his whiskers thoughtfully. The king-father looked at the queen-mother, and none of them had the faintest idea what the princess-daughter wanted.

So the king-father issued a proclamation. In these days he would have advertised. But in those days they posted up big notices on the gateways and doors and posts and prominent places in the kingdom, and the people answered them at the castle.

When the notice appeared asking for something rare and wonderful for the princess-daughter, a number of people at once came to the castle bringing all kinds of queer things. I just wish you could have seen the things that some of them thought were priceless!

But the princess-daughter thought differently. She already had most of the things, and they didn't make her heart sing.

Now, it happened that away in one corner of the kingdom there lived a little boy with his grandmother in a little house. The little boy tended to the garden and kept ducks, and when he was not doing anything else he whittled wood with his jackknife.

A long time before, the little boy had been driving his ducks along the road, and he saw a beautiful girl in a handsome coach. Some one told him that she was the princess-daughter, and right then the little boy decided that she was the loveliest person he had ever seen. He took his knife that very night and began to whittle on a nice, smooth stick. After a while his grandmother could see that the stick was growing into a doll, but she couldn't imagine what the little boy would want with a doll! And the little boy didn't tell her. He just went on whittling.

After a while the doll was done, and it was a very beautiful one. It was carved perfectly, and then polished with sand and stained with the juice of walnut-hulls until it was a lovely, shiny brown. Then the little boy put on his best clothes and went to the castle.

The man at the castle gates stopped him, but he said he had something for the princess-daughter, so the man at the gate, who had been ordered to let any one through who had a gift for the princess-daughter, opened the gate, and the little boy went right in. He went right to the little room where the king-father and the queen-mother were playing checkers, and the princess-daughter was reading by the window.

The king-father looked up when the little boy came in, and when he saw the parcel which the little boy carried so carefully he smiled.

"You have come to try for the reward?" he asked.

"I didn't know about a reward," said the little boy shyly.

"I brought this to the princess-daughter because I love her."

He held out the parcel, and the princess-daughter took it and opened it.

As soon as the princess-daughter saw the doll, her heart sang. "Where did you buy this?" she asked.

"I—I made it," said the little boy. "I thought you might like it."

"Then it has no price!" cried the princess-daughter, "and can not be bought; but it was made for me out of love, and so I would not exchange it for a king's ransom!"

"That is what you wanted!" cried the queen-mother.

"Why, of course!" cried the king-father.

"Not the doll!" said the queen-mother.

"Of course not!" cried the king-father.

"Just some one to make something for me because he wanted to!" said the princess-daughter softly. "Something I hadn't asked for, or offered a reward for!"

"Why, of course!" they all said together. "Why didn't we think of that before?"

"Little boy," said the queen-mother, "bring your grandmother here and live at the castle with us. We love all our subjects—"

"Of course!" nodded the king-father.

"But we love those the most who do something for us out of love for us!"

"Of course!" nodded the king-father again.

"Of course!" echoed the princess-daughter. And so the little boy and his grandmother came to live at the castle, because he was the only one of the king-father's subjects who made something for the love of the princess-daughter, and not for the reward!—Selected.

THE WHISPERING FOOTPRINTS

"Eddy, O Eddy, where are you?"

"Here, mother," came a shrill little voice from the back yard.

"Come here, Eddy; I want you to do something for me."

Then the back door opened and Mrs. Taylor heard the soft thud of bare feet along the passage. But when Eddy entered the sitting room and stood by mother's sewing table, she only said: "Why, Eddy, what's the matter?"

Now, there were no cuts or bumps or bruises about the little boy. Why should the mother think anything was the matter? Because his brown eyes, which generally looked right up at you, like two little birds flying out of a cage, now had an uneasy look—neither here nor there, but away.

"Nothing's the matter," said Eddy, looking out of the window. "What did you call me for, mother?"

"I am sorry my little boy has disobeyed me about going to the apple bin without leave." Eddy gave a little start. "The reason God put me here as your mother, Eddy, is because he thinks I know better what you ought to do and ought not to do than you yourself."

Eddy did not answer. He was wondering how mothers knew so much.

"I am especially sorry that you should disobey me by sneaking through the coal-room window," said Mrs. Taylor. "I would much rather you say, 'I won't mind you,' and go in before my eyes than go in by telling a lie."

"Why, mother, I didn't say"—began Eddy, glad of a chance to defend himself.

"Do you think you talk only with your lips?" interrupted his mother. "What do you suppose has whispered to me that you have been in the apple cellar, and that you went through the coal room?"

"I can't imagine," said Eddy honestly.

The little boy turned, and there between him and the door were five coal-dusty footprints on the white matting. Mother could not help smiling at the look of surprise on the little face; but it was a rather mournful smile.

"Do you think we can ever do wrong, Eddy, and not leave marks of it somewhere?" she asked. "And O, my little boy, the marks which sin leaves are on your heart, which ought to be clean and white for God's eyes, instead of being all tracked over by wrong doing!"

"Won't they come out?" asked Eddy. He meant the footprints on the matting. But mother was thinking about those other marks when she said: "The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin. You must ask him to forgive you, Eddy, and to take away your guilt, and to make you hate sin, which leaves such ugly footprints on your little life."

And then, for a punishment and for a reminder, mother kept the footprints on the sitting room floor that whole day, so that Eddy might see them and remember how every wrong deed leaves dark stains on his little heart.—Selected.

HOW CHRISTLIKENESS IS ATTAINED

Christ is first a Savior, then an example. Unless He is to one the former, as one is born of the Holy Spirit, one can never intelligently take Him as the latter. There could hardly be a wilder delusion than for a man in whose heart sin is unbroken to imagine that he, without being regenerated, can follow in the steps of Jesus. And even for the Christian it is only in certain aspects of His life that are illustrative of the duties and privileges of Christian discipleship in general that Christ is an exemplar. Many of His acts are related to His mission as the Lamb of God and the Redeemer of mankind, and for men to undertake to do as He did in the fulfillment of that unique mission would be the height of presumption and profanity. Christ was not baptized until he was thirty years of age; should the Christian wait that long? He lived a life of celibacy; should all his followers feel obligated to live like Him in that respect? He taught with an authority that sprang out of His Deity and Lordship; should finite, ignorant, and sinful human beings essay to speak and teach with the confidence and commanding spirit that He did? To ask these questions is to answer them. It is in the way of salvation and service as it is plainly set forth in the Scriptures and as it has been understood by the true followers of Christ through the centuries, that we become like our Lord in character and live most like Him.

What is it that causes the daughter in the home to become like her mother? Is it the mere external imitation of the mother's example? That, to be sure, may have something to do with it; but it is not the chief factor in bringing about the resemblance. There is a kinship of nature between the two; the mother's blood courses through the daughter's veins, and inherited characteristics of body and mind, operating from within, tend to reproduce the mother's likeness in her offspring. A similar principle operates in effecting in regenerate men a likeness to the God-man, the second federal head of the human race, as Adam was the first federal head. The eternal, Divine Son of God became incarnate (was begotten, so to speak) by the Holy Spirit. Every person who is converted, who becomes a Christian, is born of the same Divine Spirit, though not in the exalted and unparalleled sense that the second Person of the adorable Trinity was. There is a kinship (though not an equality or identity) of nature between the perfect Son of God incarnate and the Spirit-regenerated human sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty. Jesus in his humanity is our Elder Brother. Only the newborn children of God can ever wear Christ's glorious image and exhibit in their daily lives the mind that was in Him.

These Christlike qualities—"love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance"—are never possessed as the artificial acquirements of mere outward human effort. They are fruits of a spiritual life implanted and nurtured in the soul by the living, indwelling Holy Ghost, with whom the Christian, by faith and self-surrender, co-operates in their development.

It was to those "born from above," and to those only, that St. John addressed these luminous and inspiring words: "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is."—Selected.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

RALLY AT SPRING VALLEY

There will be a missionary rally held at Spring Valley church Friday, April 26.

Rev. Mr. Minnis, a returned missionary from India, is planning to be with us at this time.

We also expect to have Rev. Lawrence C. Little, of Duke University, to speak in the afternoon.

Everybody is invited to come and bring their baskets.

CRYSTAL BOBBITT,
District Chairman.

REPORT OF BRANCH MEETING

Joint Sessions and Foreign Society

A large number of officers and delegates assembled at Asheboro on Tuesday, April 9, 1929, for the annual Branch meeting of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary societies, and a large majority remained throughout the entire sessions. About 25 or more ministers were presented, as well as a number of prominent Asheboro men.

Mrs. W. C. Hammer brought greetings from the Asheboro auxiliary, and the response of appreciation was given by Mrs. George R. Brown. Both of these beloved women, well known in Methodist Protestant missionary circles, gave of their best through the entire time and reports showed how unstintingly they had given of their time and thought toward making this a successful year in the missionary work in North Carolina.

As chairman of the Standing Committee on Education, Mrs. R. M. Andrews read her report and presented to the Asheboro Auxiliary of W. F. M. S. and to the Maple Springs Auxiliary of both W. F. M. S. and W. H. M. S. awards for meeting the requirements set forth by that committee in April, 1928.

Mrs. C. W. Bates was re-elected Secretary of Extension of Work, this office being formerly known as Chairman of Districts.

District Chairmen were elected as follows: No. 1, Mrs. J. M. Cutchin; No. 2, Miss Crystal Bobbitt; No. 3, Mrs. J. J. Crawford; No. 4, Mrs. H. A. Garrett; No. 5, Dr. Harris Glascock; No. 6, Mrs. J. H. Allen; No. 7, Miss Esther Ross; No. 8, Mrs. J. W. Boyles; No. 9, Mrs. C. L. Koontz; No. 10, Mrs. T. L. Speas; No. 11, Miss Velma Beam; No. 12, Mrs. D. A. McLaurin; No. 13, Mrs. J. J. Atkins; No. 14, Mrs. J. A. McIntire.

The boundaries of these districts are the same as for Annual Conference and have recently appeared in the Herald.

Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, in a beautiful way, paid tribute to the memory of our beloved Dr. F. T. Benson, editor of the Methodist Protestant, whose untimely passing on April 6 brought sorrow to the hearts of Methodist Protestants all over the country. A number of ministers also spoke highly of Dr. Benson and his contribution to our denomination.

On Tuesday evening the program was under the direction of Mrs. T. L. Speas and Miss Mary Young, secretaries of Young People's Work. A group of young people from High Point College and from the Children's Home gave the following program:

Devotional service—Miss Grace Barnette, Mebane, N. C.

Talk: "Missions a Challenge to Youth," Miss Lucy Nunnery, Whitakers, N. C.

Solo: Mr. H. E. Jones, Weaverville, N. C.

Talk: "The Opportunity for Leadership in the Rural Church," Miss Leona Wood, Randleman, N. C.

Chorus: Children from the Children's Home.

The above young ladies are juniors at High Point College and Mr. H. E. Jones is a senior in that institution. The program was beautifully presented and gave the audience some idea of the type of training our young people are receiving at the college and Children's Home. Following this program the Community Church, Thomasville, auxiliary gave the pageant entitled, "Broken China." This pageant depicts the narrow, idolatrous life of the Chinese women, and was presented in a most impressive way.

The sessions on Wednesday were given over to the Home Missionary Branch, with Mrs. W. C. Hammer, president, presiding. Interesting reports from the Children's Home and Bethel Home were given by Dr. Dixon and Rev. Homer Casto, respectively, and the needs of both institutions were noted by the delegates. In the absence of Mrs. A. G. Dixon on Thursday, a review of the work in our other home mission stations was given by Mrs. Marie Thompson, associate secretary of the Board of Missions. In the afternoon Rev. J. Clyde Auman gave a brief and comprehensive report of the work in Japan, and in the evening after Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Thompson had spoken of the women's work of "Yesterday," and "Tomorrow," Rev. J. F. Minnis gave his very interesting illustrated lecture of our work in India. A more detailed report of Wednesday's program will no doubt be given by the secretary of the Home Mission Branch.

The 29th session of the Foreign Branch convened Thursday morning, April 11, with the president, Mrs. George R. Brown, presiding.

The report of the corresponding secretary, Mrs. M. P. Harrell, revealed the fact that in all lines of endeavor the North Carolina Branch has had a year of splendid achievement and many auxiliaries are to be commended for increased efficiency. It also showed that the unifying of the women's work is going forward in a very satisfactory and harmonious way. About 30 auxiliaries reported that they had merged and were well pleased with the results. They find the attendance is better and that the new plan enlist the activity of women who never before showed any interest. Mrs. Harrell still stresses the importance of reporting the work. Her report is made up from the information she receives from the auxiliaries, and she urges again that the corresponding secretaries of the auxiliaries send in quarterly reports promptly and properly filled out.

The treasurer reported that about 35 auxiliaries paid up or overpaid their budgets, and much commendation is due those who responded so nobly to this cause. The entire budget fell short several hundred dollars, however. We are hoping and praying for a better report for next year.

The presence of Mrs. Marie Thompson, Associate Secretary of the Board of Missions, added a great deal to the success of the meeting and we appreciate her help and counsel.

All officers of both the Home and Foreign Branches were re-elected. Reports submitted by the secretaries and chairmen of committees containing recommendations or other valuable information or suggestions will appear in the Herald from time to time as the editor finds room for them.

Mrs. George R. Brown, Mrs. J. M. Millikan and Mrs. E. L. Ballard will represent the Foreign Branch at the Board meeting in Pittsburgh on May 8th.

MRS. E. L. BALLARD, Recording Secretary.

FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF CALVARY CHURCH, GREENSBORO

The fifth anniversary of the organization of Calvary Methodist Protestant Church, Greensboro, will be celebrated April 25 to 28. The members and friends of the church are looking forward to the time with much interest and pleasant anticipation.

On the 25th—which is the exact date on which the church was organized—a fellowship supper will be held in the church hut. At this supper comparative reports will be given by all the departments and organizations of the church, showing the growth of the church during the past five years. It is hoped that every member of the church will be present, and as many of those who are not members but are interested in what Calvary is doing.

On Sunday, April 28, there will be three anniversary services. At 11 o'clock, Rev. L. W. Gerringer, pastor of First Church, Burlington, will preach. Brother Gerringer was the first pastor of Calvary Church, and it is altogether fitting that he should be selected to preach the anniversary sermon. At 2:30 a "Fellowship Service" will be held in which the Methodist Protestant churches in Greensboro and the surrounding territory will unite. It is expected that the pastors of these churches and charges will make short speeches. In addition, Rev. S. K. Spahr, D. D., who was pastor of Grace Church when Calvary was set off, will deliver an address on "The Place of the Church in the Community." At 8 o'clock, Rev. S. W. Taylor, president of the North Carolina Annual Conference, will bring the closing message of the day.

The pastor and the membership of Calvary Church extend a cordial invitation to all Methodist Protestants to attend any and all of these services. No special collections will be taken. We want to give the time to celebration, and we shall be glad for all the friends of the church to come and help us enjoy the services.

GRAHAM-MEBANE CONTEST

The following is the report of the Mebane-Graham attendance contest for Sunday, April 14:

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Asheboro.—The Branch Meeting has come and gone and it was a great blessing to those who were privileged to attend it. Our regret is that so many of our own women were not able to be in this meeting. However, there is some compensation in the fact that they were busy looking after the needs of those in attendance.

Last Sunday was known as Stewardship Day here. At the morning hour Rev. A. G. Dixon, D. D., brought a fine message and at the evening hour President Taylor was the very acceptable speaker. Both these brethren brought fine, helpful messages.

Our revival meeting begins April 28th. Rev. H. F. Surratt, of Winston-Salem, will do the preaching and we are praying for a great meeting.

Another one of our families has been greatly bereaved in the death of brother Thad Swaim on Sunday, April 7th. Little more than a year ago this splendid young man was married to Miss Pauline Williams, of our church. They immediately established a home right by the side of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Manley Williams, and there was every prospect that happiness would continue to abound, but, alas, the young man was stricken down with disease and the end came peacefully. The funeral was held from Flag Springs M. P. Church on the morning of the 9th and the body was left there in the church cemetery to await the resurrection morn. We deeply sympathize with these sorrowing ones. But they sorrow not as those who have no hope.

• Brother O. R. Fox, who has been in failing health for quite a while, is in a serious condition now.

Mrs. J. S. Ridge went to a hospital in Richmond last Sunday to consult a specialist. We do not know how long she will be there.

Miss Iola Lowdermilk was operated on in the High Point hospital last Saturday and is doing nicely at the present time.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Friendship.—We were very glad indeed to have with us Mr. and Mrs. Reed the fifth Sunday in March. Mr. Reed made a very interesting talk to the small children, which was enjoyed by all. We also enjoyed the singing; it was fine.

The Easter program was good and we enjoyed it very much.

We had our second quarterly meeting on Saturday night before the first Sunday.

The first Sunday Mr. Hill preached an interesting sermon and was enjoyed by a large congregation.

Since spring has come and the weather is so pretty we have a larger congregation. I am sure we all love spring-time.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

REPORTER.

Fairfield.—Sunday, April 14, we met at the church for preaching service. After the service we reorganized our Sunday school, which had been stopped for a couple of months.

Craven Howard, our superintendent, lives quite a distance from the church, but we feel sure if we will all work together and help him our Sunday school will be a great success this summer.

Rev. Fred Love, of Lincolnton, is our pastor now. He delivered his first sermon to us Sunday afternoon. Every one seemed to take a great interest in the message, and I feel sure we are all going to like him fine. He will preach to us twice a month from now on, every second and fourth Sunday afternoons.

We had several visitors from Lincolnton with us Sunday afternoon. We were very glad indeed to have them with us, and hope they will come often.

Our revival meeting will begin the fourth Sunday afternoon in May, if nothing happens to prevent it.

AGNES PROCTOR, Reporter.

Orange Charge.—Owing to a misunderstanding, President Taylor will not visit this charge the fourth Sunday in April, as previously announced. He will visit all churches on the charge later during this Conference year.

Revival meetings have been planned as follows. Effand, beginning the fifth Sunday in June, Rev. J. A. Burgess to help; Union Grove, the first Sunday in August, Rev. G. F. Millaway to help; Hebron, the second Sunday in August, Rev. J. F. Minnis to help; Chestnut Ridge, the third Sunday in August, Rev. J. D. Morris to help.

Yesterday was a good day for us. The weather was fine. Large congregations were present at Chestnut Ridge and Hebron.

Chestnut Ridge church is planning to paint and re-cover the church this summer. Plans were adopted yesterday which we believe will bring this to pass.

The outlook for the entire work at the present is encouraging.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Hope, Chatham Charge.—We had our regular monthly service Sunday at 11 o'clock. The service was well attended and our pastor brought a splendid message on "Giving," which was very appropriate, as April has been set apart as "Tithing Month."

We were glad to have our pastor's wife, Mrs. Lindley, and two young sons with us.

Ero. Lindley is going to preach for us on each first Sunday night. This will give us two services a month instead of one. We hope that these services will be well attended and profitable.

We are sorry to lose Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Moore and children from our Sunday school and church services. On account of a change in Mr. Moore's work, they have moved to Pleasant Garden.

Sunday school was on the increase Sunday and we want to see it grow each Sunday.

Our Auxiliary has been reorganized and we are planning to hold an installation service on the third Sunday in this month.

REPORTER.

Concord.—A beautiful baptismal service was held on Sunday, April 7, and the following children dedicated to the Lord by baptism: Sybil, child of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Winecoff; Selda Fay and Hildreth, children of Mr.

and Mrs. Hoyle Widenhouse, and two children of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Love.

The congregations are good at all services, and our pastor is bringing us good sermons.

Several of our folks attended a part of the Branch Meeting at Asheboro last week, and our missionary budget of $200 was paid in full. At a called meeting of the Missionary society held last Monday night it was decided to fix our budget the same as last year, and in addition give a scholarship to a child in India.

A very sad and tragic accident happened last Saturday in Greenville, N. C., when Oscar W. Davis, formerly of this city, was instantly killed by a heavy oil truck which he was driving turning over on him. The body arrived in Concord late Saturday night and was carried to the home of Mrs. F. C. Garmon on Kerr street, where the funeral services were held Sunday afternoon. The service was in charge of Rev. G. H. Hendry, who was assisted by Rev. C. H. Trueblood, of the First Baptist church, this city.

Mr. Davis was a splendid young man and had many friends here. He is survived by his young wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Nora Lee Hamilton, a daughter of Mrs. F. C. Garmon, and a grand-daughter of the late Rev. D. A. Braswell; two small children, and his mother, Mrs. B. F. Ritchie, of this city.

Miss Adelaide Reed, of Mitchell College, Statesville, who has been spending a few days at home here, returned to school today.

Some of our folks attended service at State Street church, Lexington, last Thursday night and heard Dr. Stone, of Baltimore, preach a splendid sermon.

REPORTER.

Alleghany, Davidson Charge.—The second Sunday in April our pastor, Rev. W. D. Reed, preached an excellent sermon. I wish that every member could have heard him and examined themselves to see that they were living up to their duty. We know that we all have to live up to our duty if the church is to prosper. The church is too careless to do the good that it ought to do. Our church is not what it ought to be. I would love to see the church get on higher ground. Bro. Reed preached plainly, and that is what we need, the plain truth, and then try to live by it. Bro. Reed and wife and the reporter all stopped at the home of Mr. H. H. Smith, where there was a good dinner prepared. Bro. Reed can eat as well as preach and we are all glad of that.

On the 5th Bro. Reed held the funeral of Pro. Samuel Surratt. He was a member of Pleasant Grove church. He was a good man and well thought of. The large crowd present and the nice flowers showed the high esteem in which he was held.

He leaves a wife, three children, father, mother, two brothers and a host of friends. They all have our sympathy.

Quarterly conference will be held at the Grove on Saturday before the first Sunday in May at 2 o'clock.

ABIGAIL COGGINS, Reporter.

Hobbs Chapel, Greenville Circuit.—Our members are coming out more since the weather has opened up, and the roads are better. We are going to reorganize Sunday school next Sunday. My prayer is that we can have great success, as we have so many little folks that need to be in Sunday school; not only little folks, but grown as well. Bro. Cowan preached a splendid sermon on "The Vision of the Cross" Sunday. He gets better every time he preaches. Most of the churches took a part in the Rally Day the fifth Sunday at the center church, Philadelphia. It was much enjoyed by all. We would like very much to go to the District Rally the next fifth Sunday, but since it is so far for us we will have one at some place here. I think it will be at Hobbs, if the other churches are willing.

Much success for the Herald and its readers.

REPORTER.

Davidson.—This is not a charge noted for its sensational developments, but still we are hoping that some worth while progress is being made. It will be a glad day when our people learn that increased possessions bring a corresponding increased responsibility, and that the one talented man is not required to give as much as those of two or five talents, and that God demands His rent the first day of the week and not the last day of the year.

The epidemic of sickness in our community is well nigh over. Bro. James Lodin seems to have closed the mump siege. Mrs. J. P. Elliott and his son, Dewey, are still indisposed, but we hope they will soon be well again.

We have just recently lost by death two of our older brethren—Bro. Samuel Surratt, of Pleasant Grove, and Bro. B. E. Morris, of Lineberry. Two good men have gone from us, leaving bright testimony behind.

W. D. REED.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle Charge.—Our Easter program was a success in every way; the training committee certainly is to be commended for untiring efforts to "put it over big," which they did to a packed house of orderly folks.

There were several comments of praise heard, even the Rev. A. L. Hunter himself was heard to say it was the best program he had seen at Mount Zion, and that means that it was real, for he has seen about all that have been held there.

Our attendance at Sunday school has increased since the service, registering 20 new members. "It pays to advertise." We mean to advertise for the Master by putting on entertainments of worship, observing all the special days and inviting everybody to take parts—that's the way our fine Easter program was done—everybody worked.

On last Wednesday night the teachers and officers of the Sunday school met in the home of Bro. and Sister Ed Jones and organized a "Workers' Council." There were seven teachers and officers present, and officers of the council were elected as follows: Chairman, superintendent of Sunday school, and secretary, Mrs. C. W. Allen. The chairman instructed teachers and the council elected a "supplementary literary committee," comprising Mrs. W. E. Jones, Mrs. Ed Jones and Mrs. E. S. Stone. We are expecting something new all along from this committee. Those present were O. P. Jones, W. E. Jones, Mrs. W. E. Jones, Mrs. E. S. Stone, Mrs. Ed Jones, Mrs. C. W. Allen, Miss Lola Barber and C. W. Allen. The next workers' council meeting will be with Mrs. E. S. Stone on Wednesday night after the first Sunday in May.

I got the date wrong in my last report concerning "Old People's Day;" I had it the third Sunday in May, but it is next Sunday, the third Sunday in April. All the older people of the community are earnestly and especially invited to attend this 11 o'clock service.

The third Sunday in May we will hold memorial service.

Bro. O. P. Jones had the misfortune to have an automobile wreck and is carrying a severely injured thumb and hand as the result, but is improving. Mrs. O. P. Jones continues to improve, we are glad to report.

Mrs. O. W. Barber, who has been sick most of the winter, was with us today in S. S. We are glad she is improving.

Bro. Guss Edwards, a near relative of the Stones and Fowlers of our church, was buried at his home church, Chestnut Grove M. E. church, in Stokes County at 11 o'clock today; therefore a goodly number of our S. S. members were absent.

We notice several of the pastors are numbered among the sick last week. Our prayers go up for their recovery.

C. W. ALLEN.

Mt. Moriah, Cleveland Circuit.—On April 14 our pastor, Rev. C. E. Ridge, brought us another good sermon, after which the Lord's Supper was observed. A large number attended Sunday, and we hope to see as many every Sunday. We had several visitors today; we hope they will come again.

Our Sunday school is increasing in attendance. There were about 90 present for Sunday school last Sunday. We hope to have them every Sunday.

On Easter Sunday night, Bro. Ridge preached a very interesting sermon on the resurrection of Christ.

DAPHNE HUNT, Reporter.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—Sunday was a good day for Midway church. Sunday school was at 2 o'clock, there being nearly 100 present. At 3 o'clock our pastor brought us a very good message from Luke 5:5. The writer has heard several says that this was the best sermon that Bro. Trollinger has preached since being with us.

A very interesting Easter program was rendered at our church the fifth Sunday afternoon. Much credit is due to Mrs. Tom Butler, assisted by the day school teachers, for this splendid program. The offering amounted to $40.

The C. E. S. held an interesting service the first Sunday after Sunday school, led by G. W. Apple, Jr.

Best wishes to all readers of the Herald.

MRS. G. W. APPLE, Reporter.

April 16, 1929.

Draper.—We are sorry indeed to report the death of Sister Totten. We extend to our dear pastor our sympathy in his bereavement and sorrow.

We had a grand revival and 19 souls accepted Christ and became new beings in Christ Jesus. We are grateful to Bro. J. S. Riddle; he has brought us great messages in every meeting. We are thankful for such a man. He stands four-square for God and against sin.

Our Sunday school is coming along nicely. We have on roll 113 and an average attendance of about 78.

Sister Totten has gone but she is not forgotten. She suffered in silence and went out to meet her God, but her influence will live for years. May God bless our dear brother and pastor.

LEWIS C. CRAIG.

South Lexington Church.—The work at our church is moving on nicely. The Sunday school is growing in both number and in interest. Last Sunday we had 212 in Sunday school. We are so glad to see the people come out to the house of worship. There is so much to do yet, but with God as our helper we can do great things for Him. May we ever look to Him for strength and guidance.

We are glad to have several of our good workers join our church. They are: Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Everidge, Mr. and Mrs. Isley, Mr. Guy Barber, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Snyder and Mr. R. L. Williams. We are glad to have these good people join us and may we do all we can to help these people in the work and we are sure of the fact that they will be of great value to us and the work of our Master.

There has been quite a great deal of work done on our church. The men's Bible class has painted its room and also has done work on the floors of the entire church.

Our revival meeting will begin next Sunday with Rev. D. I. Garner as help. We pray that we may have a revival such as has never been known before. May the whole church be revived and go out and reach the entire town. Pray for us that God may send a revival and may we let the revival begin in our own hearts.

Some of our people have been enjoying the good services at State Street. These people have been so nice to us we feel we owe them something in return. We welcome you in our services.

Pray for us.

REPORTER.

Charlotte, First Church.—The Easter program was given by the children Easter Sunday morning after a short session of Sunday school. Miss Enolia Presnell had charge of this program. Following at the 11 o'clock hour, Mr. Harrison brought the message, a sermon on "Life From the Tomb." The choir rendered a beautiful anthem, "Who Shall Roll the Stone Away?" On invitation by the pastor the following Junior girls presented themselves for baptism: June Sechrest, Margaret Helms, Agnes Bennett, Wilma Robinson and Pauline Robinson, Mr. E. V. Helms and Master Hubert Robinson. Others received into membership at this hour were Mrs. E. M. Walters, Miss Edith Walters, Miss Marie Walters, Mr. Guy Walters, Mr. Harry B. Walters, Miss Margaret Walters, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Broome, Mrs. Annie Fowler, Miss Bertha Connell and Miss Edna Walters. On Easter Monday afternoon the children of the Sunday school and a number of the grown-up young people went on their annual egg-hunt. This was enjoyed very much by all.

Those attending the Branch Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society in Asheboro last week were Rev. and Mrs. N. M. Harrison, Mrs. J. H. McCall, Mrs. R. S. Garmon and Mrs. B. W. Little. The executive meeting and also the Auxiliary meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society will meet Tuesday of this week at the church. We are expecting some interesting reports from the Branch Meeting.

The Circles will meet the fourth Tuesday. Mrs. A. F. Love, who is superintendent of Cradle Roll and very active in her work, reports the following new members to the Cradle Roll: Parker Mouzon and Leo Beryl Hager, children of Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Hager, of Louise avenue; Bobbie Gerald Shaw, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Shaw, Parkwood avenue; James Alvin Prather, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Prather, Clement avenue; Helen Margaret and William Henry Moore, children of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Moore, Peachtree street; Robert Burnett, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Burnett, South Church street; Sara Jane Wilburn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Wilburn, Davise street; Paul Spencer Stroebel, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Stroebel, Pecan avenue; Betty Lou Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Davis, Peachtree street. This makes a total of 69 babies on Cradle Roll to date.

Others uniting with our church this year are Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Shaw, Misses Lillian and Willie King, Miss Enolia Presnell, Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Harrison.

It is pleasing to note the increase in Sunday school attendance, also the increase in offerings.

The Baraca class held their monthly meeting last Thursday evening with a dinner. Their program usually is carried out with a speaker, songs and business; the purpose of which is fellowship.

The parsonage, which is being erected on the lot adjoining the church, is nearing completion and by the first of May the pastor and family expect to move in. It is built of brick veneer, consists of eight rooms all on the first floor, with a large basement. It is very conveniently arranged.

Plans are to renovate the old parsonage rooms adjoining church for class and assembly rooms and Sunday school purposes.

On next Sunday, April 21, there will be a district rally in our church. Dr. E. K. McLarty, pastor of Hawthorne Lane M. E. church, this city, will be one of the speakers. Miss Annie Livengood, of Greensboro, will also appear on the program with others. The hours are three and eight, p. m.

A Boy Scout troop has been organized with 18 or 20 members. Rev. N. M. Harrison is scoutmaster; assistants are Mr. Ernest Pressley and Mr. William McCall. The troop committee is composed of Mr. J. C. Watts, chairman, Mr. J. A. Pressley, Mr. C. H. Daughtry, Mr. B. W. Little and Mr. Tom Barnhardt, Jr.

The last Sunday in April the ministers of all the Protestant churches of this city will exchange pulpits with Rev. Herbert Spaugh, pastor of the Moravian church, and Rev. N. M. Harrison exchanging pulpits.

REPORTER.

Glen Raven.—On last Saturday evening supper was served in the basement of the church, and a goodly number were served. The object of the supper was the liquidation of a piano debt. The income from this sale and an extra effort in Sunday school Sunday morning realized the $45 due on the piano. The church is now free from all incumbrance. The parsonage was free from debt last year.

Sunday school attendance yesterday was 119. The Baracas had charge of the opening exercises.

Our special meeting is scheduled to begin here the third Sunday in June. Rev. N. G. Bethcia is our engaged helper.

Fairview: The morning hour attendance here Sunday was fairly good. There were 78 in Sunday school. At night the weather was unfavorable and the attendance small. The community here has access to four churches. Neither church can boast of large congregations.

The Ladies' Aid will meet this Monday night with Mrs. Yancey Tickle.

Wm. H. NEESE.

Lexington, State Street.—The revival meeting now in progress is being attended by large numbers at every service. Much interest is shown and already many have been saved. Dr. Stone is doing his usual wonderful preaching and the singing under the direction of Rev. E. L. Ballard, of High Point, is fine. We were very fortunate in being able to have this talented singer and good man with us.

Mr. Hubert Waters, a xylophone artist of the city, brought his instrument at the beginning of the meeting and has been helping much with the music. Beginning today (Tuesday) there will be an afternoon service at 3:15 each afternoon this week. Mrs. Stone is with us in all the services. For this we are all glad and grateful. She is a delightful Christian character; her presence is like a benediction wherever she goes.

We have had delegations from all the nearby charges and some from Concord, Kannapolis and Denton. Tonight we are expecting folks from every M. P. church in High Point. We are looking forward to having these friends with us with glad anticipation.

The Missionary meeting which would have been held Thursday afternoon will be held over until the following Thursday.

We are very grateful to the Arnold-Holman-Leonard Furniture Company here for the gift of rubber matting for the aisles of the church. These gentlemen were given a unanimous rising vote of thanks by the congregation at the first meeting after the gift was received.

Bro. McCulloch, editor of the M. P. Herald, was with us in the 11 o'clock service Sunday. We were all very glad to have him with us and hope he comes again.

REPORTER.

Concord, Saxapahaw Circuit.—Mr. Loy filled his regular appointment the last first Sunday. There was a large crowd present, but we noticed that some were not there on account of sickness in the home. We hope that since spring has opened up we may have still larger crowds.

We did not have an Easter program at our church, but took an Easter offering, which amounted to $17.35.

The young people of the community gave their play at White Cross on Easter Monday night. We made around $20. This is the third time we have given this play. We started funds for a piano. Now we have the piano paid for by the help of the members of the church. Those who took parts in the were Misses Willie Mae and Mattie Ferguson, Bessie Coble, Mrs. R. N. Roberson, Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Hargrove, Messrs. Kenneth and Newman Johnson, Eric Davis, John Royal and Lindo Pickard.

The members of the Philathea class are working on a program now, which will be given some time soon. They are planning to use the funds from this to enlarge and beautify the cemetery. The date will be published later.

REPORTER.

Enfield.—Last Sunday we had two very good services, there being a very good attendance at both services. The fact that there is a noticeable increase in the number of young people attending our services is encouraging. This is due to many forces at work in behalf of the young, but particularly the work of the young people's societies. Not long ago, a regular attendant of our Christian Endeavor society, after attending a meeting of the Senior society, remarked about the way in which the members of this society had improved since the organization of the society a little over a year ago.

Wednesday night of this week there is to be a joint meeting between the Endeavorers of Whitakers church and the church here in the hut.

The second quarterly conference is called to convene on Friday after the fourth Sunday in this month at 3 o'clock at the Enfield church.

Mrs. Cecile Matthews has not been well and expects to go in the next few days to Park View Hospital for an operation.

Bro. B. R. Kimball, Sr., is still confined to his home, not being able to be up very long at a time. Let us all pray for these co-workers of ours and ask God to keep them near His side.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

High Point.—In the absence of the pastor, Rev. R. I. Farmer, who went to Dothan, Alabama, last Friday to attend and deliver addresses at the State Christian Endeavor Convention, the pulpit was ably filled Sunday morning by Prof. Paul S. Kennett, who always brings interesting and helpful messages. At the evening service C. L. Gray, Jr., sang a beautiful solo, "Day of Peace," by Bailey, and the choir rendered the anthem, "Holy Father, Cheer Our Way." Rev. E. Lester Ballard delivered a very earnest and forceful message on the "Responsibility of Stewardship," as based on the Parable of the Talents. He said in part that every one has some talent or the ability to do one thing better than another. He related the story of a young lady who came to Dr. Dwight L. Moody in distress because she was not able to do active church work, and was induced by him to sing one evening in his evangelistic services, when a young man was converted, and he afterward admitted that his heart was won by the beauty and power of her song. Stewardship of talent is just as important as that of time or money. Tithing our incomes is a great pleasure and blessing to those who practice it. Dr. G. Campbell Morgan tells the story of a young man whose business was about to go on the rocks, when he came in possession of a tract on the subject of tithing. He felt that he could not give a tenth of his income when he was in debt, but finally decided that he would make the experiment. His business began to improve, and he soon became a prosperous and much esteemed leader in the business world of his community. In closing. Mr. Ballard sounded a solemn, earnest warning as to the final day of reckoning that will come to each one of us, when we must give an account of our stewardship, and hear the welcome, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant," or the opposite, "Depart from me."

The Sunday school, under the efficient leadership of Supt. E. L. Douglas, is taking on renewed life and energy in the spring-time, and the average attendance for April thus far is 375. The different departments are well organized and doing good, faithful work. The Philathea class, Miss Stowe, teacher, is paying for a piano.

The newly-organized Woman's Auxiliary is entering the work of the new year with the greatest zeal and enthusiasm. The five adult Circles met in different homes Monday afternoon with an attendance of 56 in spite of very inclement and disagreeable weather. The Circles with the following chairmen: Mesdames Douglas, Kennett, Rankin, Snipes, and Moore, have all organized and elected officers, and are busily engaged with various plans and projects, that range from rummage sales to bazaars and chicken suppers and glee club concerts. Everybody is optimistic and eager to work. Our budget of $2,100, one-half for local work and the same amount for outside interests, was accepted by the Branch Meeting at Asheboro. The women of First Church will "let no grass grow under their feet" the coming year.

Great emphasis is being laid on Stewardship during the month of April, and the committee, of which Mr. E. L. Douglas is chairman, is leaving no stone unturned to get this matter before the attention of the people. All are being urged to sign the tither's card and claim God's blessing in Malachi 3:10, "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

The C. E. meeting on Monday evening was led by Miss Dorothy Lee Rankin on the topic, "Bible Messages Needed Today."

Circles No. 2 and 3 of the Auxiliary, which are composed of Business and Professional Girls numbering 70, will meet this (Tuesday) evening at 8 o'clock in the Philathea room at the church. Misses Young, of High Point College, and Nellie Martin are chairmen of these circles. Mrs. R. I. Farmer, chairman of Circle No. 1, High School and College Girls, is calling that group to meet at her home on Thursday evening.

Rev. R. I. Farmer returned Tuesday morning from a pleasant trip to Dothan, Alabama, and points in Florida, and will conduct the mid-week prayer meeting Wednesday and talk on the clause of the Lord's Prayer, "Lead us not into temptation."

High Point College defeated Furman University, Greenville, S. C., in debate last week. Representatives of High Point, Messrs. Ralph Mulligan and Milbourne Amos, defended the negative side of the question regarding abolition of trial by jury, and won over the affirmative side upheld by Messrs. N. R. Beacham and I. W. Barber, Jr., from Furman.

We are much pleased to see Mrs. H. U. Oakes out after a rather severe illness. We are delighted to know that Mrs. J. C. Welch, Sr., is improving rapidly after an attack, which has kept her indoors for two weeks. She is now able to go out for rides in her car.

Mrs. Harriet Guire, widow of the late Mr. J. W. Guire and one of our oldest members, now residing in Lenoir, N. C., with her two sons, Messrs. V. D. and J. C. Guire, will celebrate her 87th birthday on Friday, April 19, and the members of the congregation will remember the day with a post-card shower and letters to our absent and greatly loved member, whose cordial interest in our church and its membership touches our hearts very deeply, although her lot has been cast in a community removed from her old home. May the day be a happy and joyful one for this faithful friend and Christian sister, who in the evening of life looks back with serene content on "duties well performed and days well spent."

It was with poignant sadness and deepest regret that we learned the news of the passing of that able editor, loyal friend of all Methodist Protestants, and staunch Christian gentleman, Dr. Frank T. Benson. We have been reading with keen interest and great comfort of soul his cheerful, sweet-spirited editorials ever since he assumed management of the Baltimore paper. He always looked through the cloud and saw the silver lining; through the gloom of night his eyes pierced through, and beheld the stars. Out of active, buoyant life he "walked with God, and was not, for God took him." An ideal way to depart this life! He will be sadly missed, and the vacant place will be hard to fill.

Asheville.—The Brotherhood of our church have postponed their meetings for another week.

Quarterly conference will be held next Wednesday night in the Sunday school auditorium of the church.

The monthly business meeting of the Christian Endeavor society will be held at the church Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Miss Nancy Clouse is president of the society.

The Girls' Auxiliary will meet Monday evening with Miss Clarice Younginer. Mrs. F. W. Paschall is leader.

The Woman's Auxiliary will meet Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. J. S. Williams in Norwood Park. This meeting is expected to be a very interesting one, as reports will be heard from the delegates who attended Branch Meeting in Asheboro last week. Those attending were Rev. and Mrs. F. W. Paschall, Mrs. Ralph Beacham and Miss Elsie Drake.

Easter Sunday morning the primary children gave a most interesting exercise under leadership of Mrs. Alva McIntire and Miss Verda McIntire, with Miss Mildred Younginer at the piano.

The morning service was well attended and Mrs. James Bailey joined our church. Mr. Bailey has been a member from boyhood.

In the evening a pageant, "The Quest," was given and much enjoyed by a large audience. Those in the pageant were Rev. F. W. Paschall, Mrs. James Bailey, Mrs. Paschall, Misses Louise and Arline Hanner, Clarice and Janeth Younginer and Verda McIntire. The angels of life were Helen Foster, Kitty Lou Freeman, Josie McNeil and Janette Simpson. The angels of death were Marion Drismore, Felicia and Phyllis Younginer and Eva Moore. Those in the choir were Mr. and Mrs. Alva McIntire, Mr. E. H. Pratt, Mrs. Bolick, Misses Mildred Younginer and Elsie Drake, with Miss Novella McIntire at the piano. All our members who missed this pageant were indeed losers. We of the audience only hope that we may have another treat soon.

Rev. and Mrs. J. S. Williams returned from Florida last week.

Mrs. Y. D. Eller has been sick for three weeks and we miss her at church, for she is faithful in attendance when well.

Monday morning (after Easter) at 6 o'clock in the morning the Christian Endeavor society had a sunrise service at the church. This service was well attended and much enjoyed. Mrs. F. W. Paschall was leader for this meeting.

REPORTER.

Connelly Springs and Union Grove.—First, we want to thank our good friends and neighbors of Rutherford College and our good people of this charge for the very fine way in which they stood by us in the sickness and death of our dear wife. They did not only bring comfort and cheer by word, but by deed. Headed by Bro. Johnson, they brought loads of coal and wood and provisions of all kinds; also, our own church people were very thoughtful of us. They kept us satisfied with corn, wheat, meat and many other things that we will not take space to mention here, but for all of these we are profoundly thankful and pray God that He may richly reward every one of them.

Our work here is moving on nicely. The people received us kindly and are proving it by the way they are standing by us. We have organized C. E. S. at Shady Grove, Burks Chapel and Union Grove. The young people are entering into the work with very fine spirit.

Union Grove has plans on foot to build four Sunday school rooms; these rooms are badly needed and we are hoping the rooms will be up in the next few weeks and in use.

Burks Chapel has recently built a new recess pulpit and are re-working the front of the church, adding a belfry, which will improve the appearance of the church when completed.

Shady Grove gave notice today that these improvements were needed. Let us rise up and build.

Brother Christians, pray for us; we are trying to get Connelly Springs charge back in its place in conference and doing its bits for the Kingdom.

Yours for Kingdom service.

L. S. HELMS, Pastor.

Harmony-Yarborough's Charge.—Although our report is late, nevertheless, we are glad to say that our Easter service was a great success. Mrs. W. H. Balentine and Miss Julia Medlock deserve much credit for taking such a great interest in training the children so well. The service was enjoyed by a very attentive audience. Mr. Broome delivered a very effective address after the program. We also had with us a quartet from the West Laurens-North Greenwood Singing convention. The offering amounted to $13.63. Mrs. L. C. Taylor is also given much credit for decorating the church so beautifully.

Our Christian Endeavor held its regular meeting Sunday evening, April 14, with a good attendance. So far much interest is being shown and we feel and hope that in the future our society will be able to accomplish something really worth while.

We are sorry to learn at this writing that one of our best church workers, Miss Sudie Medlock, is confined to her bed. We all wish her a speedy recovery, for we miss her very much in our church and community work.

We are glad to report that our Sunday school is still increasing and we hope it will continue to do so.

GRACE KILLINGSWORTH, Reporter.

Level Cross, Randleman Charge.—We held our union singing here the first Sunday, as usual, with a good crowd present. The Glenwood quartet, and the Ross quartet, from Pleasant Garden both sang and added greatly to the song service.

The first Sunday in May we will have an all-day song service, beginning at 10:30, with dinner on the grounds, and everybody is invited. If you don't want to sing, come and enjoy the day with us.

Yesterday (Sunday) our pastor gave us an extra good sermon, his subject being "Making Excuses," and there are so many of us that needed to hear it. I think it did all of us good. One of our members, Sister Sarah Coltrane, is right sick, but we pray for her a speedy recovery and that she may soon be with us at church again. REPORTER.

Denton Charge.—Piney Grove rendered one of the best Easter services I ever heard on Saturday night before Easter. I was really surprised that a small school had gotten up such an unusual exercise. Mrs. Joe Delk, daughter of Rev. J. B. Trogon, had charge of getting up the exercises. Mrs. Delk takes great pains in training the children. We also appreciate the assistance given by Misses Mattie Hicks and Madge Craver, teachers in the Piney Grove day school. Every helper and child deserves credit.

This church has engaged a painter to finish painting the church outside and inside.

Denton church had a sunrise Easter service. Mr. Shaw started his car before day, blowing the horn as he passed the homes of the members to awake them for the service. We had a very good attendance. The service was enjoyed by all who came. The Denton church is also trying to raise the debt on the parsonage. We lack some having the total amount at present.

Canaan church is making progress on Sunday school rooms. The inside work is not yet complete.

Mr. Julius E. Lanier, of this community, was buried at Canaan Sunday afternoon, April 14. He was 59 years, one month and 28 days old. He was not a member of any church, but during his sickness on several occasions he said that he was trusting in his Lord, and was ready to answer the call of God. The service was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. Atlas Ridge, in the presence of an overflowing congregation. Mr. Lanier had many friends, and will be greatly missed by the family and community.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The second quarterly conference of Denton charge will be held at Canaan M. P. church April 27 at 2 p. m. All members of the conference are urged to be present.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Flat Rock Auxiliary, Flat Rock, three sheets, eight pair pillow cases, one towel and ten wash-cloths.

Mr. H. H. Moffitt, Moffitt Underwear factory, High Point, two suits of summer underwear for each one of our boys, making 90 suits.

Mr. J. Ernest Hardin, for Proximity Print Mills, Greensboro, 100 yards cloth for suits for our small boys.

Mrs. S. P. Montgomery, High Point, 100 glasses for table use.

Our friends through the Conference will also rejoice with us in the gift of $1,545.54 which came to us this week from the Duke Endowment. This gift helps wonderfully, and if things had been normal here it would put us on "easy street" for a while; but since our finances have been running behind this simply helped to partly pay up at this time. In making application to the Duke Foundation for this help we were required to answer this question: "Will a gift from this endowment inspire your people to give more, or will it have a tendency to make them give less, thinking that the Home can get along without their gifts." Our faith in our people led us to say: "It will inspire them to give more."

If we could just get all our Sunday schools lined up to make a creditable offering each month we could soon strike an even balance sheet here and move along happily. God is blessing in the work, and His people will respond more liberally. And we thank you. May God bless you.

Faithfully yours,

A. G. DIXON.

—The Asheboro church had two conferences in session at the same time last week: the women's conference on one side of a partition, and the men's conference on the other. When the men sang the women had to stop and listen. They stood it as long as they could, then one of the ladies came in and asked that singing cease. It ceased instantly.

—Prof. J. H. Allen, superintendent of schools in Rockingham County, has announced that he will retire from that service at the expiration of the present term.

A DEBATE

Said Adam to Eve,
First begging her leave:
"My dear, would you mind
Our trying to find
Some theme for debate
In form you can state?"

Said Eve to Adam:
"Please call me Madam!
It seems rather late
To join in debate;
If nought else will do,
I will soon squelch you!"

Said Adam to Eve,
Still begging her leave:
"Most gracious are you!
Very thing to do;
The query you state
And start the debate."

Without hesitation,
Full of animation,
The woman she spoke
And uttered no joke;
The query in her mind
Would soon be defined.

A question so deep
Is destined to keep
You thinking quite strong
And may be quite long;
But question was there:
"Should she wear bobbed hair?"

With many things to say,
They argue all day
And late in the night
By the bright moonlight;
Pleasing thing to tell,
They speak wondrous well.

But what you want to know
Is, How did it go?
I'm sorry to say
That to this late day
It's not ended yet,
The end—no date set.

—J. F. M.

CARD OF THANKS

We want to thank one and all for their prayers and help and all that they did for us during my wife's sickness. She was not able to get off of the lot for four months or over. She was very sick, had heart trouble and low blood pressure, but is much better now; can walk from home to church and back, one mile each way.

We both enjoy reading our church paper, and love our church, always attending when possible.

Best wishes for you and the whole North Carolina Conference.

MR. AND MRS. A. S. BARKER.

—Congress is in special session now, trying to legislate in the interest of agriculture. The problem is to bring sales prices up to a point that will make farming profitable. Many businesses have to run at a loss sometimes, but farmers have the impression that they have to run at a loss more than is their share. It is a hard problem that confronts our national legislature. It is to be hoped that wise methods will be chosen.

Sixty-one churches have reported Easter offerings, leaving 172 to hear from. Reports from these churches ought to be forthcoming. Please bear in mind the fact that your treasurer must make his report to the General Conference treasurer by April 30. Help him to make a creditable report.

Brethren, "keep the home fires burning" by looking after the A. C. B. It has been impossible for us to meet the current expenses of the conference with the contributions made to this budget, and they had to be met, and have been met. Can you guess how the "trick was turned"? Of course you can, but we can't keep on "turning" it in this unsatisfactory way. The day of reckoning is dawning, and your treasurer must be prepared to meet the issue. Are you coming to his rescue? We shall see.

REPORT OF TREASURER OF COLLEGE BUILDING FUND

Amount previously reported, $192,364.54.
No receipts since last report.

Endowment Insurance Fund

Amount previously reported	$9,958.21
Dr. and Mrs. A. G. Dixon	50.00

Total $10,008.21

With the payment of $50 by Dr. and Mrs. Dixon, the contributions to the endowment insurance fund pass the ten thousand dollar mark. Many will recall that when the Board of Education borrowed $150,000 from the Jefferson Standard Life Insurance Company, endowment insurance policies for the same amount were taken out on the lives of a number of young men. There are 21 of these policies. It was hoped to secure a sufficient amount in subscriptions, payable yearly, to provide for the insurance premiums, but this we regret to say was far from being accomplished.

The annual payment on the insurance amounts to $14,873.39. Five premiums, amounting to $74,366.85, have fallen due. The insurance company has extended the time for payment on the last premiums, but we are in need of $13,015.55 to complete the payment. When this has been done we shall have a cash value at the end of the policy year of $71,836.17. If we pay five additional premiums, at the end of ten years the cash value of the insurance, according to the company's figures, will be $177,841.16. While the cash value thus far is a little less than the amount paid in, it will increase rapidly hereafter.

Those contributing to the fund will have the satisfaction of knowing that the amounts they pay will serve to accumulate a fund which will provide for the retiring of the indebtedness of the college, or, should that be otherwise provided for, for a substantial fund toward the endowment fund.

AT STATE STREET CHURCH, LEXINGTON, LAST SUNDAY

Attracted by Brother Bethea's announcements, the editor, accompanied by Brother J. G. Sullivan, of Calvary church, attended services in State Street church last Sunday. We found Dr. E. D. Stone of Baltimore in the pulpit with the pastor. The auditorium which seats over 300 was nearly filled with eager hearers and earnest worshipers. We could tell by the way they sang that they were in earnest. This demonstration of religious interest on a spot where a few years ago there was only a vacant lot shows what can be done by faithful, persistent effort. We were agreeably surprised at the extent and adaptation of the equipment already provided. In addition to the auditorium there is a large basement with concrete floor for social occasions and also housing the steam heating plant, ladies' kitchen and rest rooms, and there are upstairs fifteen Sunday school rooms and a room for the superintendent. In his room we saw an array of electric buttons, each one connected by wire with one of the class rooms. By pressing these buttons the superintendent dismisses the classes in order and thus prevents confusion and crowding in the hall as they descend to the assembly room. We also noted another device to keep the secretary or treasurer from disturbing the classes when he comes after the report and offering. Between each class room and the hall is a little window with shutter inside and outside. In the pocket between these shutters the offering is placed by the class and the door is shut. The secretary opens the door on the hall side of the pocket and takes the offering without being seen or even heard by the busy class.

In this connection we should speak of the parsonage. It is on a lot adjoining the church lot and is a well-built and well constructed house with an unusually large number of rooms. The church services were held in this house for a few years, the pastor living upstairs. Perhaps that helps to explain how the parsonage is so roomy. We believe it is the best parsonage our church has in North Carolina.

Before leaving the subject of material equipment we should refer to the lot already provided for the church to be built some day when the present building is found too small for the congregation. This lot has already been bought and occupies a corner next to the present building. The present house was planned with a view to becoming a part of a larger structure in the future.

We learned, too, that parking space, now an important consideration, has been increased by the kind offer of Mr. Zimmerman, who has a gasoline station on the opposite side of the street, to give free use of his grounds. He has decided to close his place of business on Sundays. It may surprise you to learn that Mr. Zimmerman sells more gasoline per week since he closes on Sunday, but such he says is the fact.

We were diverted from the Sunday services to tell about the equipment and the plant. Dr. Stone preached at 11 o'clock in his characteristic way. You will have to hear him, fully to understand what that is. He begins as if he were beginning a conversation with you; but he does not stop for you to reply. He just keeps on talking, telling you one interesting thing after another. There is never a time when you can say, Now he has quit talking and begun preaching. But after awhile, if you will take note of the state of your feelings, you will realize that you have been hearing preaching of the most moving sort. He never seems greatly aroused, but you will find yourself greatly aroused. He uses few gestures—we do not recall any at all—but he tells of human experiences in the most vivid way. His illustrations are very apt, but he says he has no use for a book of illustrations. He draws upon his own knowledge and experiences for his illustrations. He spoke again at three o'clock to men only. There were present perhaps 200 men. He asked those who would pledge themselves to begin the Christian life, trusting in Christ for strength, to come forward and give him their hands. Three men responded. Then he asked those who wished prayer in their behalf to raise their hands. Several hands went up. The afternoon service had several songs by a male quartet.

Dr. Stone was accompanied by Mrs. Stone, whom we were permitted to meet at dinner in the Hege Inn. We also saw there Miss Mabel Hutton, of Greensboro, daughter of Rev. J. R. Hutton, who for six years has been serving Lexington as a teacher in the city schools. The large number of guests in this inn indicates its popularity.

One thing at the close of the morning service in the church deserves notice. Bro. Bethea asked women who would agree to pray for the men's meeting while it was in progress from 3 to 4 to come and give him their hands. Eight or nine ladies went forward.

—George Ross, son of Bro. R. R. Ross of Asheboro, has been appointed by Governor Gardner as director of state farms. The governor hopes to make the farm products more valuable by proper diversification.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Hammer

Cordie Dillon Hammer was born at High Point, N. C., April 24, 1878. She was the daughter of Arrington B. and Amanda S. Dillon. Her childhood and youthful life was spent at Colfax, N. C. December 22nd, 1897, she married Victor P. Hammer. Since August, 1902, their home had been in Washington, D. C.

After a brief illness she died February 28th, 1929, and was buried in Oakwood Memorial Park Cemetery, High Point, N. C.

The deceased was a member of Epworth M. E. Church, South, in Washington, and other organizations, with which she was actively identified.

Her husband and daughter, Charlotte, and a sister and two brothers survive her.

Her relatives, a large circle of friends and acquaintances, both in Washington, D. C., and North Carolina, sadly miss her presence and the influence of a good life.

"Fading away like the stars in the morning,
Losing their light in the glorious sun,
So do we pass from earth and its toiling,
Only remembered by what we have done."

A FRIEND.

Thompson

Bessie Lou Thompson, the five-and-a-half-year-old daughter of Brother and Sister Lloyd Thompson, met a tragic death Sunday afternoon while crossing the road at their home in Elon College when she was struck by an automobile driven by a Miss Thomas of Gibsonville. The accident is said to have been unavoidable. The little girl was rushed to Rainey Hospital immediately but died near midnight. The father and mother and other relatives are sorely stricken. May the dear Lord make His grace to abound toward them, that their hearts may be comforted and that they may be sustained in this time of great sorrow.

The funeral service was conducted by the writer at the residence Monday afternoon at four o'clock, assisted by Dr. Alexander of the college. Her little body was then laid away under a blanket of flowers in the Pine Hill Cemetery in Burlington to await the day of reunion.

How true it is, as Longfellow said:

"There is a reaper whose name is Death,
And with his sickle keen
He reaps the bearded grain at a breath
And the flowers that grow between."

But Longfellow has also said, and he got his inspiration from the Book of Truth:

"There is no death! What seems so is transition;
This life of mortal breath
Is but a suburb of the life elysian,
Whose portal we call death."

Wherefore comfort one another with these blessed assurances.

L. W. GERRINGER.

Bingham

Samuel J. Bingham departed from this life April 4, 1929, aged 73 years, five months and two days. He was happily united in marriage to Drusilla Wright about the year 1880. To this union were born eleven children, seven boys and four girls. Four of the children preceded him to the great beyond. The living are Mrs. Robert Leanhart of Fallston, N. C., Joseph Bingham of Morganton, N. C., Rev. E. A. Bingham of Denton, N. C., Gettys Bingham of Fallston, N. C., Mrs. Lawrence McSwain (wife of Rev. Lawrence McSwain) of Harmony, N. C., Rev. Ptyllo Bingham of Westminster Theological Seminary, Westminster, Md.

Uncle Sam (as he was known by many) was a good neighbor. He was honest in all his dealings with others. He never tried to deceive or take advantage of others in a trade. He was always willing to help any needy ones in the community. He was a man of good habits; that aided greatly in making him one of the strongest men of his day.

Possibly the greatest good he was able to do was the rearing and training of his children by precept and example. He taught his children to do right, and to build Christ-like characters. He was true and devoted to his life companion and children as long as he lived.

He professed faith in Christ at 18 and joined Friendship M. P. church, and was a loyal member for 35 years. For many years he was class leader. It was his great pleasure to go with his children to Sunday school and preaching. He enjoyed hearing the Word of God preached and during the sermon he always shed tears of joy.

He will be greatly missed by the community, church and family. He leaves to mourn their loss, a faithful and loyal wife, seven children, 30 grandchildren, four great-grandchildren, two sisters, Mrs. Mahala Wright and Mrs. J. J. Hayes, and a host of friends. The services were conducted by the pastor and Rev. J. D. Morris.

—Bro. J. W. Swain and wife, of Calvary church, are rejoicing over a boy, William Ellis Swain, recently come to enliven their home. Last Tuesday was his natal day.

—The rain last Monday did not stop the ladies of Calvary church from holding their auxiliary meeting.

—The conference trustees met in Greensboro on Tuesday to consider the title to some church property in South Carolina.

—Returning from Lexington last Sunday, we stopped in Thomasville to see the Community Church building. We found one door unlocked and went in. We were impressed with the magnificence of the auditorium. Bro. Maier has some space to fill when he preaches. We saw the screen back of the pulpit for moving pictures and in the gallery the moving picture apparatus. Brother Finch had a large conception when he planned this great church, he wrought in faith. It will take years to realize all he hoped for, but steady pulling toward the goal will accomplish far more than could have been done without any inspiring vision. May Brother Finch and others who labor there with Dr. and Mrs. Maier see satisfying fruits of their labors while they labor. But the greatest results will be seen in the more remote future. May God abundantly bless this heroic effort.

—Rev. C. W. Bates received three members into Calvary last Sunday morning: Bro. Jurney and wife, and a son of Bro. A. C. Dixon. A very appreciable increment.

—Rev. H. L. Isley was called to conduct the funeral of Ben Reynolds at Tabernacle on Wednesday of last week.

—Rev. George F. Laughlin, of Cedar Falls, was called to Greensboro last Friday to officiate in the funeral of his old friend, Mr. J. M. Jennings.

—Calvary's C. E. Society, of which Bro. Floyd Reynolds is the wide-awake president, went to Tabernacle church last Sunday afternoon and held a joint meeting with the Tabernacle society. They report an interesting time.

—Rev. H. L. Powell was in attendance at the State Street meeting, Lexington, last Sunday afternoon.

God's Ways of Love

Men dig in earth, men soar in space,
They seek below, they seek above,
But nowhere do they find a place
That bears no marks of God's great love.

The things that hurt are not our foes,
But friends indeed in some disguise,
If only one their nature knows
And keeps them where their purpose lies.

The winds that blow, the snows that fall,
The rains that pour, the frosts that come,
Are heavyladen with good to all,
Despite the seeming ill to some.

The deadly plants, the beasts of prey,
The wasteful birds, the creeping things,
Are all our friends in God's own way,
And each to us some blessing brings.

When sickness comes, when pains afflict,
When men forsake, when foes assail,
To this one thing we may well stick—
The love of God can never fail.

Because He loves come pain and loss:
'Tis thus He brings us greater gain;
With false desire upon the cross,
Then we may live a life that's sane.

All ways of God are ways of love,
Both when He smites and when He heals.
All life below and life above
His ceaseless love to all reveals.

Ministers and Strikes

A strike in a minister's community puts him in a close place. It is impossible and also improper for him to ignore the situation. But what part shall he take? Shall he take sides in the contention? Shall he become a peacemaker? Shall he severely denounce the wrong he sees on both sides? Shall he assume the office of a judge? Shall he in his pulpit utterances refer plainly and specifically to the questions at issue in the strike?

Some years ago our whole country was agitated by reports of a strike in the copper mines of northern Michigan. It happened that a classmate of the editor of the HERALD was pastor of a church which included in its membership both employers of the strikers and some of the strikers themselves. He endeavored to mediate between the two with perfect impartiality. The result was that each party thought of the pastor as being on the other side. The pastor in such a case needs the wisdom of the serpent and the harmlessness of the dove. He needs more than the serpent's wisdom—he needs divine wisdom and guidance.

Comfort for the Aged

Old folks are often unhappy. More often than need be, we believe. The same remark is in a measure true of mankind in general. People are more unhappy than they need be. If they will investigate they will find in many cases—perhaps most cases—that the causes of their unhappiness were under their own control and might have been thwarted. I think it unquestionable that people are responsible for most of their miseries. There is no comfort in this reflection, but the conviction that this is true may help us to avoid future miseries.

An unalterable past cannot utterly cast us down while we have before us an undetermined future. While there is chance there is hope. Lost fortunes may perhaps be retrieved. Lost health may be regained. Lost friends may be won. Hope saves us from despair. We turn from an ugly past to a glorious future. All of us but the old people. To them the future has almost all slipped into the past. What remains offers them little but a continuance and increase of their present miseries. Health has given place to pains and infirmities. Friends have passed on and their like cannot be found again. The senses are failing and the world no longer delights with its changing seasons. Life has become dull and uninteresting. The emotions do not respond to excitation. Some old people live on simply because they cannot die.

We believe the last years of life should be the best and happiest. There are reasons for this belief. If we have lived well, our powers of appreciation of God and His world and His good providences have increased. The future instead of growing darker has grown brighter. God has come nearer to us; yes, His presence has come to shine about us. Conscious of being borne onward by forces that we cannot resist, we are also conscious that we are borne on wings of love. The future, instead of contracting to a few feet of space, widens out to an infinite range. Death, instead of being thought of as the end of this life, is thought of as the beginning of that life. While the senses grow dull to the sights and sounds of earth, the soul grows keen to the intimations of the realities of Heaven. Those gone before and thought of as dead and unreal are thought of as living a very real life.

Old people instead of moping and drooping in wretchedness should lift up their heads and put on their long-range glasses for a view of the beauty and glory of the celestial hills. The older we grow, the nearer we approach to the more blessed life of the future, if we have learned well the lessons of this life. And however far short of our best we

WILL THE ROMAN CHURCH CONTROL EDUCATION IN ITALY?

By GEORGE LA PIANA

Professor of Church History, Harvard University

The text of the agreement between the Vatican and Italy is a most astounding document of ecclesiastical pretensions on the one side and of amazing surrender of principles and State rights on the other.

The agreement has three parts: a Treaty proper, a Financial Convention, and a Concordat. In all three of them there is a long series of grants made by Italy to the Vatican, of lands and buildings, of cash money and bonds, of privilege and exemptions for ecclesiastics and ecclesiastical institutions, of rights of precedence to the canonical legislation over the civil legislation. In return, the pope "declares the Roman question definitely and irrevocably settled and therefore eliminated, and recognizes the Kingdom of Italy under the dynasty of Savoy with Rome the capital of the Italian State. (Art. 26 of the Treaty)." That is all; a mere recognition of what has been already a fact since 1870. The Treaty proper creates the new Vatican City as an independent State which will take its place among the European nations in the system of international relations.

If there had been no other concession, this Treaty, in spite of the heavy financial obligation imposed upon the Italian people and the change in the international jurisdiction conditions of the Vatican, would have made little difference in the de facto situation. But besides the Treaty, there is a Concordat between Italy and the Vatican which has much more importance than the Treaty itself; for while the Treaty creates a small Vatican State that does not seriously affect the unity of Italy, the Concordat on the contrary creates within the Italian State, throughout all its cities and provinces, an enormous ecclesiastical jurisdiction which is a real State within a State and which is supreme in certain domains of public life. Let us consider for instance how the Concordat affects the system of public school education and cultural progress in general.

The layman who reads the Concordat will find in it only one direct reference to this subject, the 26th article, in which it is provided that religious teaching "now imparted in the elementary schools be further developed in the middle schools," according to the program to be fixed by and under the strict supervision of the ecclesiastical authority. By this, religious teaching along strictly Catholic lines becomes compulsory in all the "Ginnasii" and "Licei," that is to say, in all the high schools and colleges. Teachers are to be appointed and dismissed at the will of the ecclesiastical authority, whose approval of the texts is also required.

These provisions with their compulsory character are far-reaching enough, but they do not tell the whole story. There are two articles (Art. 5 of the Concordat and Art. 23 of the Treaty) which indirectly secure to the Church a full and unlimited control over the whole system of public education and over the destinies of Italian cultural life. Article 5 of the Concordat establishes that all members of the clergy who have withdrawn from the Church, and, in general, all "those incurring censure of the Church, cannot be employed in a teaching position or office or employment in which they have immediate contact with the public."

The first part of this article, which affects former members of the clergy, will have the result that several hundreds among the best professors of universities, "Licei," and "Ginnasii," all of them men who have reached their position through the system of competition in scholarly achievements and who have held a conspicuous place in the public schools for years, will be dismissed without consideration for their rights as citizens and scholars. But the second part of the article has an even wider significance. Any teacher who incurs an ecclesiastical censure is to be dismissed. The list of such censures is rather imposing (Codex Juris Canonici, Can. 2255, and so on), and the list of motives, sins, crimes, violations of rules, etc., because of which a censure is either automatically incurred or explicitly applied, is a formidable one, as can be seen by reading the constitution, Apostolicae Sedis, of Pius IX, which is still almost entirely in vigor. Teaching of errors, such as are listed in the famous Syllabus of the same Pius IX, or in the Encyclical Pascendi of Pius X against Modernism, is enough to incur a censure. The ecclesiastical authority has in its hands, therefore, a weapon by which it will be able to keep in line the whole teaching personnel of the Italian public schools, from universities and "Licei" down to "Ginnasii" and grammar schools. All free research, all independent investigation, especially in the field of religious history and religious sciences, is made altogether impossible from now on within the boundaries of Italy. Lest this article of the Concordat might offer some loophole or be interpreted as affecting only ecclesiastics and not laymen of every class and condition, an article was included in the Treaty which in its general formulation covers and extends even farther the ecclesiastical jurisdiction. This article (Number 23 of the Treaty) says: "Sentences and decrees issued by ecclesiastical authority and officially communicated to the civil authorities regarding ecclesiastical or disciplinary matters will have at once full judicial efficiency for all civil purposes." The words, "ecclesiastical or disciplinary matters," are indefinite enough to include everything, especially because the only judge whether a case comes within the domain of ecclesiastical or disciplinary matters is the ecclesiastical authority itself.

The control of the Church over the most important and vital cultural and scientific institutions of Italy is now secured; the sentences and decrees of the ecclesiastical authorities will be enforced by the police.—The Harvard Crimson.

FOR SALE—A JAIL

The Christian Observer points out that the city council of Mound Bayou, an all-Negro town of 3,000 inhabitants, has ordered the jail closed as "a useless and unnecessary institution."

According to the records, only one arrest has been made in the community during the last six years. There are no uniformed officers in evidence, and many of the oldest inhabitants have never seen a policeman in uniform. Such a record would be significant in any community, but it is particularly so in this case, as indicating the capacity of Negroes for good citizenship.

Mound Bayou was established in 1887 as an all-Negro community by Isaiah T. Montgomery, former slave in the family of Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederacy. Purchasing a large tract of delta land, he subdivided it into town lots and sold them exclusively to colored people. This was the beginning of Mound Bayou, which was incorporated in 1895 with its founder as the first mayor.

Mound Bayou is a clean, splendid town, with a record that few towns in Mississippi could equal.—Chattanooga News.

DENOMINATIONAL ENTERPRISES

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER WEEK May 12-19, 1929

There are many readers of THE HERALD, no doubt, who are looking forward to May 12, for that date marks the time when every one will endeavor to make our dear mothers happy by an adequate observance of Mother's Day. The psalmist says that the severest pain one can experience is that of longing for a lost mother, and that the most comforting moment is when one is comforted by a mother. The Sweet Singer of Proverbs sings of the Ideal Mother:

Strength and dignity are her clothing;
And she laugheth at the time to come.
She openeth her mouth to wisdom;
And the law of kindness is in her tongue.
She looketh well to the ways of her household,
And eateth not the bread of idleness;
Her children rise up and call her blessed,
Her husband, also, and he praiseth her, saying:
"Many daughters have done virtuously,
But thou excellest them all."

—Proverbs 31:25-29.

Not only would we fittingly observe Mother's Day, but we would give some thought to those who will be the ones to take the mother's place in the future. We have been observing occasions for the fathers and sons and find such an occasion for much helpfulness. A beautiful and practical program for observance of "Mother and Daughter Week," May 12-19, has been prepared by the International Council of Religious Education, 5 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Many activities for mothers and daughters are suggested. Some of them are:

"A Mother and Daughter Program of Worship," "A Mother and Daughter Social or Conference," and a "Mother and Daughter Banquet." Suggestions are also made for a follow-up program, the purpose of which is to promote the interest and concern for mother and daughter relationships throughout the entire year. "Every day should be Mother's Day," and nothing would make it more so than for there to exist a happy relationship for mothers and daughters.

We hope there will be many of our churches taking advantage of this entire week for making mothers happy, and promoting happy mother and daughter activities.

The following materials are ready for distribution by the International Council of Religious Education, 5 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill.:

(1) A General Descriptive Folder, 6 pages, 1½¢ each, $1.25 per 100; (2) Mother's Day Worship Program, 4 pages, 1¢ each, 75¢ per 100; (3) Mother and Daughter Song Sheet, 4 pages, 1¢ each, 75¢ per 100; (4) After Mother and Daughter Week—What? 1½¢ each, $1.25 per 100.

LEADERSHIP TRAINING IN METHODIST PROTESTANT CENTERS

F. L. GIBBS

A new opportunity for leadership training has been inaugurated by the Department of Religious Education, formerly Board of Young People's Work, for the Methodist Protestant Church. In addition to the work done in our Conference Leadership Training Schools and the work done by correspondence, there has been started in a successful way the plan of taking the work into Methodist Protestant centers, where many that could never attend the Summer Conference School may have the benefit of such training.

The initial school was held recently in the High Point, N. C., area. This proved a great success. Three standard courses were offered and approximately fifty students finished with credits, while others had the benefit of attending some of the time. It was such a successful experiment that the plan has come to be a part of our leadership training program.

The Eastern Shore of Maryland adopts it! Just now three such schools are closing after having done very practical work during the month of April. Each school has been run on the standard level with an accredited faculty of Maryland Conference ministers, with the exception of a director from the Department of Religious Education, who assisted by rotating from one school to another.

Rev. E. L. Bunce and people were entertainers of the Pocomoke, Maryland, School. Three courses were offered and were taught by Reverends J. L. Nichols, F. B. Bailey, and F. L. Gibbs.

The school in Easton was cared for by Rev. E. T. Read and folk. Four courses were offered by Reverends E. T. Read, Colvin Randall, F. L. Gibbs, and Dr. E. A. Sexsmith.

Rev. N. C. Clough and folk were host to the Seaford, Delaware, School, which enrolled 49 students and had a faculty composed of five and their courses were: "The New Testament," Rev. N. C. Clough; "A Study of the Pupil," Rev. G. E. Leister; "The Life of Christ," Rev. J. Colvin Randall; "The Teaching Work of the Church," Rev. J. Earl Cummings, and "The Principles of Teaching," F. L. Gibbs.

Approximately 100 students will finish and receive credits from the three schools and a goodly number have been benefited who will not satisfy the requirements for credit.

Another school! A request has been received to plan another such school for the Winston-Salem area in North Carolina. Plans will be made for its provision and the date is already set for May 12-17.

This type of leadership training takes the program within reach of the local church, and seems so practical that many believe that the time will soon come when such effective work can be going on continually throughout the denomination. It's just another step forward for a local church-trained leadership.

Comfort for the Aged may have fallen, we have the great consolation of believing that our failures have been atoned for by the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world. Old people: no matter how well or how poorly you have lived, fix your eyes on Him who was lifted up that you might not perish. He has purchased and prepared a mansion for you. Should you not joyfully approach the day of your translation?

EVANGELISM

*Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit;
so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.*

A Prince in Israel

In the passing of Doctor Benson, a Prince in Israel has fallen. By virtue of his membership, he belonged to the Maryland Conference, but officially, and in his sympathies and interest, he belonged to the entire church. His pen was a trenchant one, and he used it with the zeal and the discretion of a great editor. The imprint of his strong personality went with every issue of his paper. His visits to our conference were always pleasant experiences for us, and he had a ready hearing when he spoke to our body. We shall miss his visits, but the recollections of his whole life will remain with us as a lasting benediction.

Shelby and Caroleen

April 17-18, Wednesday and Thursday.—These two days were given to these charges, with a night service at each place, in the order mentioned. Being there in mid-week services, we, of course, did not meet as many of the people as we would have done could we have had a Sunday appointment. We are hopeful that some work may be done soon on the Shelby church. The roof and other parts of the exterior need repairing, and the interior should be worked over. This would add much to the appearance of the building, and no doubt would help in the work. Our church here is located in a growing section of this thriving city. A school building has just been erected within a stone's throw of our location, and new dwellings are constantly being built in this territory. And ours is the only church in this entire section. It would seem that we should be able to establish a church here that would render a distinct service to the community.

At Caroleen we have an older and much stronger church, and the possibilities are good here, we think, for increasing service. We were here for a very limited time and did not have the opportunity to meet the people and observe the work as we should like to have done. Pastor Carson is serving his first year with these churches and we trust that he may find much to encourage him as the year advances. We heard kind comments regarding his work. Both churches are doing well in the payment of salary, as compared to many charges. We were glad to have this visit with these churches, and we shall watch their work during the year with deep interest and prayer. Our grateful thanks to pastor and people for their kindness to us on this visit.

While on this trip we had the pleasure of seeing four of our other ministers, Bros. Morris, Morgan, Henderson, and Love. We found them well-kept, happy, and hopeful. Bro. Henderson and his people at Bess Chapel are in the midst of a church-building enterprise. We shall not attempt to describe the building here, except to say that when it is completed it will be a credit to the community and to the conference as well. They hope to be in it by mid-summer.

West Forsyth

April 20-21, Saturday and Sunday. We were here on Saturday for the second quarterly conference, preaching at Stony Knoll church in the morning and holding the conference there in the afternoon. A good attendance and a fine spirit characterized the conference. The pastor's report was comprehensive, and revealed an earnest and active relationship to the work. The Sunday schools of the charge were reported in good condition. Some of them that have been in the habit of closing out during the winter months departed from that practice this year and ran right on with gratifying attendance. This is a sure sign of progress. There is one active C. E. Society on the charge, and one live Auxiliary. The C. E. Society has just placed a large and attractive bulletin board in front of their church—Pleasant Hill. We should add that most of the Sunday schools contribute to the Children's Home, and three regularly each month. The report of the stewards revealed some shortage in the finances, though the payment on pastor's salary was up with the average charge. Budget payments to date are small. The conference sanctioned the order of the Annual Conference requiring the budgets, along with the pastor's salary, to be apportioned to the individual member. This was ratified also by the two churches that we visited on Sunday, Pleasant Hill and Tabernacle. We were at the former church at eleven o'clock, meeting with them in the Sunday school and preaching at eleven. In the afternoon the appointment was at Tabernacle. At each church the attendance was good, and a most helpful attitude prevailed in the services. Both churches instructed the pastor to report them as "Loyalty" churches. There are many splendid people on this field, but we doubt if the charge has ever discovered its strength. West Forsyth is rightfully an Honor Roll charge. Bro. Way is popular with his people and happy in his work. We enjoyed our visit with him and his people, and with friends of former days. It is always a pleasure to us to go to West Forsyth. We predict a good year for this charge.

Financing the Church

Hon. J. B. Stewart, mayor of Cambridge, Ohio, and for forty years a school teacher, said in an address in the First M. P. Church of Cambridge, "Without church and Sunday school no city can get anywhere." His statement is literally true, though it may be questioned by some. Without doubt, the most important asset of any community is the Christian church. That being true, it logically follows that nothing else in a community should be more carefully and wisely fostered than the church. To do this, money is necessary. It is God's plan. Therefore, a most thoughtful and adequate financial system should be worked out for the church. This is an imperative need for our conference. But few of our charges have a satisfactory financial system, and many of them have no system at all, we fear, for raising the budgets. Their principal financial effort is to pay the pastor's salary. This is highly commendable, as far as it goes, but it does not go far enough. Of course the salary should be paid, every dollar of it; but no church can thrive where the financial obligations to the kingdom of God are limited to the pastor's salary. The budgets must be paid, or the church can not go on in its programs of kingdom service. It was in recognition of this fact that the last Annual Conference passed an order requiring all charges to apportion to the individual member all conference assessments, in full amount of such assessments, including the pastor's salary. We appeal to pastors and church officials to work out a financial system in harmony with this order. Unless we can get these budgets allotted to the individual member, there is but little hope of raising them. But with this done—and it can be done—we shall see a new day in the matter of our finances.

Our April Program

This is now nearing an end so far as immediate plans and results are concerned. The ends accomplished may not have been all that we desired, yet the full harvest will await future reaping. We urge pastors to press the program as much as possible in these closing days, and to make prompt reports to Dr. Straughn. Let us have reports through the HERALD of all churches paying in full to April 30, those enrolling as Loyalty churches, and those that have appointed the New Century Service committees.

The pressing needs of the A. C. B. have been brought to the attention of the church by a letter recently sent out to pastors by the chairman and secretary-treasurer of the Board of Church Extension. This letter is timely, as a part of the pay-up appeal for April. We trust that it may receive a generous response.

Next Sunday

We feel a deep concern for our meeting in High Point on this day, at 2 p. m., in the First M. P. Church. It seems to us that no assembly of the church can be more important than the one which calls us together to think about, talk about, sing about, and pray about "Evangelism," for surely this lies closer to the heart of Jesus than any other thing connected with His church. And this is exactly what we are to do on next Sunday. A good program has been arranged, and it is our hope that the auditorium of this beautiful church may be filled with those whose minds and hearts are sympathetic with Jesus in this first purpose of His church. Of course some can not attend because of other appointments, but their interest and prayers will be with us. Pray, brethren, for this meeting, and invite your people to attend with you.

Famine—Leprosy

Appeals are going out from responsible sources to the churches for funds with which to feed millions of starving people in China. We are told that 4,000,000 require immediate relief, and that $4,000,000 is required to meet this immediate need.

Another appeal is being sent out on behalf of the "Leonard Wood Memorial for the Eradication of Leprosy." In the Philippine Islands there are said to be 12,000 lepers, and probably 3,000,000 in the entire world. Two million dollars is being asked for with which to administer relief to these most unfortunate of all sufferers, many of whom are being cured. One-half of this amount has been raised. We commend these calls to our people as being highly worthy.

"But whoso hath this world's goods, and beholdeth his brother in need, and shutteth up his compassion from him, how doth the love of God abide in him?"

May Nineteenth

This is "High Point College Day," so designated by the last Annual Conference. The purpose of the day is to "boost the college among our people, and to foster and enlarge interest in the institution." We trust that our pastors will make much of this day. No other institution among us is so important to the future of our conference as the college, and we do well, therefore, to designate a day for boosting it among our people. Dr. Andrews, the president of the college, will be glad to furnish information to be used in the programs of this day.

Visiting

The saying, "A house-going preacher makes a church-going people" is familiar, and the truth of it has been proved in the experience of many ministers. There is a personal contact between pastor and people that is necessary, and that can be established only by the pastoral visit. There is a secret place in the hearts of the people that the pastor does not enter until he goes into the home. There is a confidence and a fellowship between pastor and people necessary to a successful pastorate that can not be established until they sit with each other in the family circle. A pastor who will render his best service can not overlook the importance of ministering to his people through pastoral visitation. His own life is enriched by it, and his Sunday sermons are heard with a deeper interest.

THE ALL-BOARDS MEETING

One of the most important gatherings of the Methodist Protestant Church will be held in the First Methodist Protestant Church in the city of Pittsburgh during the week of May 7 to 12. The following boards will be present and hold their meetings during this period: the Board of Missions, the Board of Education and Young People's Work, the Board of Publication, the Executive Board of the W. F. M. S., and the Executive Board of the W. H. M. S. The presidents and treasurers of the annual conferences will also be with us at that time. Watch the papers for further announcements. The plan of entertainment, directions as to how to reach the church and the program for the week will be published later. Plan now to come. This will be one of the greatest history-making weeks in our church.

—The late Cleveland H. Dodge started to raise an endowment fund of $15,000,000 for Robert College, the American University of Beirut, Constantinople Woman's College, the International College of Smyrna, American College of Sofia, and Athens College in Greece. As a tribute to Mr. Dodge a gift of $1,000,000 by Mr. Edward S. Harkness has been followed by others conditioned on the completion of the full sum by July 1.

OUR STORY PAGE

LOUISA OSBORNE'S GIFT

On the beautiful Island of Ceylon, many years ago, the native Christians, who had long worshiped in bungalows and old Dutch chapels, decided that they must have a church built for themselves. Enthusiastic givers were each eager to forward the new enterprise. But, to the amazement of all, Maria Peabody, a lone orphan girl, who had been a beneficiary in the girls' school at Oodooville, came forward and offered to give the land upon which to build, which was the best site in her native village.

Not only was it all she owned in this world, but far more, it was her marriage portion, and in making this gift in the eyes of every native she renounced all hopes of being married. As this alternative in the East was regarded as an awful step, many thought her beside herself, and tried to dissuade her from such an act of renunciation. "No," said Maria, "I have given it to Jesus, and as He has accepted it, you must."

And so today the first Christian church in Ceylon stands upon land given by a poor orphan girl.

The deed was noised abroad, and came to the knowledge of a young theological student, who was also a beneficiary of the mission, and it touched his heart. Neither could he rest until he had sought and won the rare and noble maiden, who was willing to give up so much in her Master's cause.

Some one in the United States had been for years contributing twenty dollars annually for the support of this young Hindoo girl, but the donor was unknown. Rev. Dr. Poor, a missionary in Ceylon visiting America about that time, longed to ascertain who was the faithful sower and report the wonderful harvest.

Finding himself in Hanover, N. H., preaching to the students of Dartmouth College, he happened in conversation to hear some one speak of Mrs. Peabody, and repeated, "Peabody; what Peabody?" "Mrs. Maria Peabody, who resides here, the widow of a former professor," was the answer. "Oh! I must see her before I leave," said the earnest man, about to continue his journey.

The first words, after an introduction at her house, were: "I have come to bring you a glad report, for I cannot but think that it is to you we in Ceylon owe the opportunity of educating one who has proved as lovely and consistent a native convert as we have ever had. She is exceptionally interesting, devotedly pious, and bears your name."

"Alas!" said the lady, "although the girl bears my name, I wish I could claim the honor of educating her; it belongs not to me, but to Louisa Osborne, my poor colored cook. Some years ago in Salem, Mass., she came to me after an evening meeting, saying: 'I have just heard that by giving twenty dollars a year one can support and educate a child in Ceylon, and I have decided to do it. They said that along with the money I can send a name, and I have come, mistress, to ask you if you would object to my sending yours.' At that time," continued the lady, "a servant's wages ranged from a dollar to a dollar and a half a week, yet my cook had been for a long time contributing half a dollar each month at a monthly concert for foreign missions. There were those who expostulated with her for giving away so much for one in her circumstances, as a time might come when she could not earn. 'I have thought it all over,' she would reply, 'and concluded I would rather give what I can while I am earning, and then if I lose my health and cannot work, why, there is a poorhouse, and I can go there. You see they have no poorhouse in heathen lands, for it is only Christians who care for the poor.'"

In telling this story, Dr. Poor used to pause at this point and exclaim: "To the poorhouse! Do you believe God would let that good woman die in the poorhouse? Never!" We shall see.

The missionary learned that the last known of Louisa Osborne, she was residing in Lowell, Mass. In due time his duties called him to that city. At the close of an evening service before a crowded house, he related among missionary incidents, as a crowning triumph, the story of Louisa Osborne and Maria Peabody. The disinterested devotion, self-sacrifice and implicit faith and zeal of the Christian given in favored America had been developed, matured and well-nigh eclipsed, by her faithful protege in far-off benighted India. His heart glowing with zeal and deeply stirred by the fresh retrospect of the triumph of the Gospel over heathenism, he exclaimed: "If there is any one present who knows anything of that good woman, Louisa Osborne, and will lead me to her, I shall be obliged."

The benediction pronounced and the crowd dispersing, Dr. Poor passed down one of the aisles, chatting with the pastor, when he espied a quiet little figure apparently waiting for him. Could it be? Yes, it was a colored woman, and it must be Louisa Osborne. With quickened step he reached her, exclaiming in tones of suppressed emotion: "I believe this is my sister in Christ, Louisa Osborne?" "That is my name," was the calm reply. "Well, God bless you, Louisa, you have heard my report, and know all, but before we part, probably never to meet again in this world, I want you to answer one question. What made you do it?" With downcast eyes, and in a low and trembling voice she replied: "Well, I do not know, but I guess it was my Lord Jesus."

They parted only to meet in the streets of the New Jerusalem, for the missionary returned to his adopted home, where ere long the loving hands of his faithful native brethren bore him to his honored grave. The humble handmaiden of the Lord labored meekly on awhile, and ended her failing days not in a poorhouse verily, but, through the efforts of those who knew her best, in a pleasant, comfortable Old Ladies' Home. "Him that honoreth Me I will honor."—The Christian Giver.

PAPER PREACHERS

"What shall I do with my money," said little Willie; "I have twenty-five cents, and I do not know what to buy."

"Lay it up in heaven, Willie," said his mother.

"Why, mother, how can I lay it up in heaven?"

"Do good with it, my son," said she; "do good for the sake of Jesus who loves you."

"But, mother," said he; "I have only twenty-five cents, and that would not do much good."

"It would help," said his mother, "to send paper preachers to those who never heard of our Saviour, like the poor heathen in Africa."

Willie laughed when his mother said "paper preachers," and asked what they were, and what were heathen.

"The Bible and good books and tracts are paper preachers," said she; "and heathen are people who do not know about God, but pray to images of wood and stone." She told him there are millions of such people, and some live in places very unhealthy for white men who would get sick and die if they went there, but paper preachers, telling about the Lord of heaven and earth, and Jesus Christ who saves from sin all who love and serve Him can be sent everywhere. They can be sent into forests, up high mountains and along the longest rivers. Paper preachers never get sick nor grow weary. There are books and tracts printed in many languages, so that the heathen can read them.

"Twenty-five cents," said Willie's mother, "will pay for several little books, and will my little boy send his money to children who never heard of Jesus?"

"Will the little children care for books?" asked Willie.

"O yes," said his mother, "I heard the other day of a lady who went to the Fiji Islands with her husband. One day she heard a great clatter of children's voices outside the house. She went to the door and found seven little girls who had walked four miles, and each girl held in her arms a bundle of a large kind of fruit which is eaten there instead of bread. 'Where are you going with that bread fruit?' asked the lady.

"One little black-eyed girl said, 'We have come to buy a book.'

"The lady went in, and brought out some little books which were printed in the Fiji language, and intended for just such little children, and, maybe, were paid for with the money of a little boy who liked to send paper preachers to tell of the Saviour. She told the girls that the price was four bread fruit for one book. She knew they would like them better if they gave something for them. One merry little girl had five large bread fruit, and said, 'I will give them all.' But the lady said four was the price, and she could not take more. Then came forward a timid little creature who had only three bread fruit, and, indeed, they looked as much as she could carry. But the price was four, and the girl who had one too many stepped quickly up and laid it with the three. So the children all bought books, and went off quite happy. We are told of another girl who had learned to read, and one day found a torn leaf of a tract, which told of the Son of God who came down from heaven to save sinners. She said, 'What beautiful words'; she read it and asked about it, till she learned to love Jesus.

"A good man was once giving away tracts in the East Indies, when a boy only eight years old asked for one. As tracts were scarce, he was at first refused, but he begged so hard that one called 'The Way to Heavenly Bliss' was given to him. Some days passed when the little fellow came and begged for another. 'But has the other been read?' asked the man. 'Yes,' said he, and standing before the gentleman, and several heathen, he repeated the whole tract from the beginning to the end. Was not that well done for a poor little heathen boy?"

"Yes, indeed," said Willie, "and I hope some of the tracts were left, so that he could have another."

"I hope so, too," said his mother, "but it takes a great many books to supply the great number of people. Only thirty years ago some of the South Sea Islanders had never seen a book, or a printed page, and did not know there was any way of speaking except with the tongue. At first they called books 'speaking leaves.' They had to learn to write and read their own language, which they did very soon, and had their children taught.

"A Hindoo girl was presented with a New Testament, which she put in her trunk, not caring to read anything against the images she worshiped. There it lay for twelve long years; then she happened to take it up and read a few words. She became interested in what she read, and kept on day after day until she had gone quite through the book. She then began at the beginning, and as she read she prayed that the Lord of whom the Testament told would help her with His Holy Spirit to understand it. He did help and she gave up all her images, and became a child of God, one of the Saviour's lambs."

"We have," continued Willie's mother, "some people even in New York who need paper preachers to tell them how to love God and believe on Jesus.

"A little boy once came to a Sabbath school and handing a scrap of paper to the teacher said, 'My father sent me to get a clean paper like this, please give me one.'

"The teacher opened the dirty, worn-out printed paper, and saw it was a hymn, beginning—

"Just as I am without one plea,
But that Thy blood was shed for me,
And that Thou bidd'st me come to Thee,
O Lamb of God, I come."

"The boy was asked where he got the paper and why he wanted a clean one.

"We found it," said he, "in sister Jane's pocket after she died; she used to sing it all the time while she was sick, and she loved it so much that father wants to get a clean one to put in a frame and hang up; please give me one."

"That little leaf, with the hymn on it, was given to Jane at a Sabbath school, and it was a comfort to the dying girl, who sang the sweet words of hope and faith in Jesus, until she became one of her 'Saviour's little lambs in heaven.'"

"O mother," cried Willie, with his eyes full of tears, "take my money and buy Bibles and hymns for the poor heathen, and little children, and maybe I will see them in heaven, and then how glad I will be that I sent them my money."

Now I will pray that God would send Glad tidings of my Saviour Friend,
Far away.

And every little I can spare,
Shall help to send the Bible there,
And men of God the truth to bear,
Far away.

CURING LONELINESS

Loneliness haunts me everywhere—in the far islands of the sea or in the teeming city. A journalist in Germany writes: "This inner loneliness is hard to satisfy; it is easier to bury it beneath some superficial interest than it is to cure it fundamentally. The average American, like the average European of today, at any rate, finds it more convenient to hide this feeling of discontent under some outward activity."

Curiously enough, this observer is convinced that the automobile is the cure for loneliness in America, while in Germany they cure it with beer. Man demands more than gasoline or beer. He needs the companionship of the Highest to satisfy that appalling loneliness, which may make a speed demon out of him or drive him to drink.—Exchange.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By Grover L. Angel

President C. E. Society, High Point College
APRIL 28: "THE TRIUMPHS OF THE BIBLE ON MISSION FIELDS"

Rom. 1:16, 17; Cor. 1:17-21.

Points for the Leader

"Every cause has its positive expression of triumph or defeat, success or failure. The results of earnest effort are reflected in the achievement, which may be immediate or remote. This applies to leaders of great movements, promoters of big projects, good books, including the Bible, and writers who interest and attract their readers.

The success of the Bible on mission fields is measured by its use and distribution, and the spiritual achievement of the Christian missionaries. The American Bible Society, in its 1928 report, shows that in 1927 a total of 10,034,797 volumes of Scripture was issued by this number went to the mission fields. The total issue of the society in the 112 years of its service has been 194,063,757 volumes."

This gives us a faint idea of "The triumphs of the Bible on mission fields," which is our topic for the evening.

Suggested Program

Quiet Music: "Rescue the Perishing."
Hymn: "From Greenland's Icy Mountains."
Opening prayer, by adult (Thanksgiving for the Bible).

Scripture lesson.

Quiet music.

Silent prayer, closed by leader.

Hymn: "I'll Go Where You Want Me to Go."

Leader's talk.

General discussion of topic: questions, topics, etc.

Hymn: "Let the Lower Lights Be Burning."

Sentence prayers, closed with benediction.

Triumphant Declarations

"I am not ashamed of the gospel." (Rom. 1:16). Paul declares as he goes forward with his evangelistic activities. Why should any of Christ's disciples be ashamed of His Word? Are not the following reasons of the Gospel sufficient to sustain us?

1. It is the power of God unto salvation.
2. It reveals the righteousness of God.
3. It assures us that the just shall live by faith.
4. Its author is Christ the Lord, who died that we might live.
5. It saves us from destruction in this world, and gives eternal glory in the world to come.
6. It is a safe guide for human conduct.
7. It teaches us that all men are brothers.
8. It is an acknowledged code of ethics.
9. It expresses divine law and truth.

Topics for Discussion

1. The increase of missionary interest among young folk.
2. Triumphant characters on the mission field.
3. The church facing the missionary task.
4. What we as individuals can do to increase the triumph of the Bible on mission fields.

Illustrations

1. The College Heroes: Two young men were sent from their college to be missionaries in West Africa. At the end of three months there came a cable saying that one of them was dead, and at the end of three more months another cable came saying that the other one was dead. Then came the problem of filling the vacancies. The announcement was made to the college students, and the question asked: "Who will fill these places?" Immediately six young men stood up. Two of these were selected and sent to the field. Within another six months the same thing had happened to these two men. Again the announcement was made and the question asked: "Who will go?" Without any hesitation every young man in that institution stood to his feet with the words on his lips, "Send me." This is a splendid illustration of true missionary spirit.

2. The Indian Chief: The story is told of a missionary who was teaching the Bible to an Indian tribe. As she told of the love of Jesus to all, the chief of the tribe came forward and laid his blanket at her feet, saying, "Big chief give blanket to Jesus." She told more of the love, and the Indian brought his tomahawk. She continued, and he brought his pony. And as she told more yet, he was weeping because he had nothing else to give. Finally he fell at her feet, saying "Big chief give self to Jesus." Then the big thing happened. The whole tribe caught the spirit, and came up and confessed Jesus. This is another illustration of Bible triumph on the mission field.

Poetry to the Point

THE BIBLE

Lamp of our feet, whereby we trace
Our path, when want to stray;
Stream from the fount of heavenly grace,
Brook by the traveler's way.

Bread of our souls, whereon we feed,
True manna from on high;
Our guide and chart, wherein we read
Of realms beyond the sky.

Pillar of fire, through watches dark,
Or radiant cloud by day;
When waves would 'whelm our tossing bark
Our anchor and our stay.

Word of the ever-living God,
Will of His glorious Son;
Without thee could earth be trod,
Or heav'n itself be won?

LETTER FROM AN ORPHAN IN THE NEAR EAST

Dear Mrs. Jaquith:

I asked my teacher why you not come to see us any more at the Orphanage and she said that you had gone to America. I learned your address and I am writing you. I wish very much to know all about you. Do you live in one of those tall buildings and when are you coming back here to see us? I am now the leader of my group. We are four little girls and four older ones. Little Helen and I are nearly thirteen years old. Every day we have our lesson and after dinner we have our rugweaving and then our play. I have a pretty American doll and the rest of the little girls have their American dolls too. Every night I keep mine on my pillow. She is my American sister.

All Sunday last we had only bread to eat because we asked our supervisor to save the money and send it to our stricken brothers in Corinth. Did you learn about the big earthquake there. Over here we are safe. We don't know whether we'll have school and camp this season. Our director says perhaps all of us might have to leave the Orphanage. All little girls cried very much because we have no other home to go. Please write soon and tell us it is not true.

ANATASIA NICHOLAIDES.

(Help is still needed in caring for our orphans in the Near East. We are asked to inform our readers that the need is now urgent.—Editor of the Herald.)

IN MY TRAVELS—

I passed a bank.

I saw bank notes and coin and checks
And also men with craning necks
And women, too, with high-heeled shoes,
With eyes wide open lest they should lose.

I passed a store.

I saw the goods on many shelves
And willing buyers present themselves
And salesmen ready to close a trade,
But no one nodding while I stayed.

I passed a shop.

I heard the sound by workmen made,
I saw the parts on tables laid,
But all the men were strongly bent
Upon their tasks with minds intent.

I passed a school.

I saw the teachers and the taught;
The spirit of place was quickly caught;
Some work there was, also some fun:
Of folks asleep did I see none.

I passed a church.

I saw the Book of world renown,
I heard a man of God expound
And show the way to life most blest,
While some slept on and took their rest.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

The recent Branch meeting of the missionary societies ordered the publication of some of its committees' reports. The following is published in accordance with the Branch's order.

REPORT OF THE BUDGET COMMITTEE

We, your committee, recommend that the budget for the North Carolina Branch of Women's Work for the year 1929-30 be $11,050. Of this amount $6,250 is apportioned to Foreign Work, and $4,800 is apportioned for Home Work.

Of the $4,800 apportioned for Home Work 75 per cent goes to the interests within North Carolina; namely, Children's Home, Student Loan Fund for High Point College, Bethel Home, and Branch expense. Twenty-five per cent goes to the Home Missionary interests outside of North Carolina, namely: Pine Ridge School, work among the foreigners in Ohio and Pittsburgh, Baltimore Girls' Home, and general fund.

The apportionments are as follows:

Your budget committee, in line with the General Conference plan, has given to each auxiliary an apportionment for both Home and Foreign work. All the apportionment for Foreign work, and one-fourth the apportionment for Home work, counts on the General Conference budget as apportioned to your local church.

The Committee:

MRS. C. W. BATES,
MRS. H. A. GARRETT,
MRS. S. W. TAYLOR,
MRS. HENRY NICHOLSON,
MRS. MINNIE P. HARRELL

GOALS FOR NEW HERALD SUBSCRIPTIONS

(Renewals are not to be counted. A "new subscription" is from a family not receiving the paper at this time—April 25, 1929).

The ideal goal is the number of families on a charge. The committee has named goals that seem practical. We would define the period of this effort as including May and June. Pastors are asked to apportion to churches on circuits and direct the campaign.

Com. of Annual Conference.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Kistlers Church.—April, the Tithing Month throughout the denomination, comes to us with sunshine and wind. It makes the buds on the trees burst and put forth their green leaves.

The fifth Sunday in March, which is the day on which Jesus arose, was very beautiful. A small but willing crowd gathered at our church. We discussed our lesson, after which we took an offering for foreign missions that amounted to $6.72.

The first Sunday Brother Ridge, our good pastor, who is loved by all, gave to us a most uplifting message, which I am sure was enjoyed by all. We, having several visitors, appreciate their being there very much. We trust they enjoyed the service and will come again.

Our Sunday school is progressing very nicely. We are glad to see so many more bright faces than usual and we welcome them.

We are very sorry to hear that Mr. Velius Ivester, a regular attending member of our church, is suffering severe pain from a bruise.

FLORA IVESTER, Reporter.

Graham.—On Friday night before Easter an unusually good pageant was given. The committee, Mrs. S. S. Holt, Mrs. A. P. Williams, and Miss Lavona Black, deserve many thanks for the work they did. The offering amounted to $35.95.

The Sunday night service was made impressive with songs of the Cross by the choir and a fitting talk by Mr. Minnis, with the Cross as his theme.

The Woman's Auxiliary held its first meeting at the church Monday night, March 25, with Mrs. J. F. Minnis, the president, presiding. The names of the circle chairmen were read as follows: Chairman of Circle No. 1, Mrs. Louise Glenn; chairman of Circle No. 2, Mrs. H. M. Rogers, and of Circle No. 3, Mrs. N. E. Sykes. Other business was attended to.

Circle No. 1 held its first meeting at the home of Mrs. D. M. Johnson, Monday, April 8. After the business was finished refreshments were served by the hostess.

Our Sunday school has voted to feed and clothe a boy from the Children's Home. We feel this will add interest to the school work.

Mr. and Mrs. Heenan Hughes have returned from a three weeks' stay in Orlando, Florida, where they have been in the interest of Mr. Hughes' health. Their many friends are hoping he will be much improved.

REPORTER.

Rehoboth.—Our pastor, Rev. R. L. Hethcox, preached for us Sunday morning at 11 o'clock and Sunday evening at 7:30. The sermons were very helpful and especially Sunday evening. The subject was "Blind in One Eye."

Our Christian Endeavor Society has been changed from the second Sunday evening to twice a month on Wednesday nights.

The funeral of Mrs. W. T. Totten, of Draper, N. C., was held at Rehoboth church on April 9. Mrs. Totten was Miss Callie Tarkington, and was a very highly esteemed lady and a great church worker. She held several high positions while young. Joining the church under the pastorate of Bro. Totten at the age of 14, she proved to be a valuable church worker. She was made postmistress for Skinnerville community, a postoffice that was situated on the farm of a cousin, Mr. C. V. White. She afterwards took nurse's training at a Baltimore hospital. She then accepted a position at the Home for the Incurables in Baltimore for quite a while. Later she was matron at the Florence Crittendon Home at Roanoke, Va. She remained there for several years and up until the home was destroyed by fire. Mrs. Totten was badly burned and came home and remained with her mother, brother, and sister until the death of her mother, and sister, Miss Eleanor. It was in December, 1924, when Mrs. Totten left home to visit her brother, Mr. C. S. Tarkington, of Baltimore. Rev. Mr. Totten made a special trip from Western North Carolina to visit Miss Tarkington. She came home in August, 1925, and Rev. and Mrs. W. T. Totten were married September 1 by Rev. R. L. Hethcox at the home of Mrs. Guilford Davenport.

Mrs. Totten leaves her husband, Rev. W. T. Totten, of Draper; a sister, Mrs. John Clayton, of Port Norfolk; three brothers, C. S. Tarkington, of Baltimore; N. W. Tarkington, of near Suffolk, Va., and S. P. Tarkington, of Charleston, S. C.

The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. R. L. Hethcox of Creswell circuit.

A very appropriate Easter service was held April 7 at 8 o'clock. The church was beautifully decorated with evergreens, dogwood and Easter lilies. Recitations were by Miss Eva White's primary class; a solo by little Miss Margie White, and music by the choir. The service was opened by Mr. Wheeler Swain, teacher of the Men's Bible class. Mr. Herbert Swain gave a wonderful address on Easter. The offering went to Home Missions.

EVA WHITE.

Gibsonville Church.—Our attendance at Sunday school last Sunday was off somewhat, due to sickness and the threatening weather. There is quite a lot of sickness among our folks at present. We hope they will be well soon and can come back to church.

Dr. Lindley preached a splendid sermon on "What Sin Is," using as a text the first verse of the 32nd Psalm.

Last Saturday evening the teacher of the Young Ladies' Bible class and a committee of six scholars from this class motored to Righ Point to the Children's Home and selected a child to support or to help support, as we are planning to pay its board for a while. We hope to take it to board and clothe in the future.

After Christian Endeavor at 6:30 p. m. a group of Endeavorers visited the M. E. church and heard Rev. E. H. Neese preach a fine sermon. He used as a subject, "The Christians."

REPORTER.

West Forsyth.—The visit of President Taylor last Saturday and Sunday was immensely enjoyed by the people of West Forsyth charge. Our second quarterly conference was held at Stony Knoll church Saturday with President Taylor as the preacher and presiding officer. On Sunday President Taylor preached at two of the churches on the charge, Pleasant Hill at 11 a. m. and Tabernacle at 3 o'clock.

The quarterly conference was attended by representatives of five of the six churches on the charge, Harmony Grove not being represented. The morning session of the conference was devoted to a preaching service and President Taylor delivered a most excellent sermon which seemed to touch the hearts and lives of all who heard it. It was on the subject of going forward in understanding, in evangelism and in liberality. During the noon recess a splendid dinner was served to the members of the conference and others present by the people of Stony Knoll church. At 1:30 in the afternoon the business session of the conference was held, with President Taylor presiding and Bro. J. H. Spease as secretary. Splendid reports were made by the Sunday schools on the charge. All of the Sunday schools on the charge except one were run all the year. The chairman of the board of parsonage trustees reported the completion of the painting of the roof of the parsonage and other improvements made at the parsonage. The pastor's report showed that the work of the charge is in fairly good condition, with an apparent need of a revival of religion among the people. His report expressed gratitude for the fine spirit of co-operation existing among the people of all the churches on the charge, and for the kindness of the people in providing for the needs of the pastor and family. The report showed a total of 187 pastoral visits for the first half of the year, and $301 paid on salary.

The nominees for delegate to the next Annual Conference are Bros J. H. Spease and C. G. Hunter.

The matter of assessing the amounts of the Annual and General Conference budgets was presented to the conference, and after some discussion it was unanimously decided to conform with the action of the last Annual Conference in assessing the budget along with the pastor's salary. The business of the conference was transacted in a spirit of harmony.

Services were well attended at Pleasant Hill and Tabernacle churches last Sunday. President Taylor delivered inspiring and uplifting sermons. Pleasant Hill and Tabernacle churches adopted by a vote of the members present the plan of assessing the amounts of the budgets to the membership of the church, and also authorized the pastor to sign the church loyalty card and send it to Dr. Straughn. The prospects for raising the amounts of the budgets at these two churches seem good.

The pastor and President Taylor were royally entertained in the homes of Bros. John Spease and J. F. Hunter during the visit of the president. A sumptuous dinner was enjoyed at each home. The pastor and family were delighted to have President Taylor as their guest at the parsonage Saturday night and Sunday morning.

This report is becoming lengthy, but the writer cannot refrain from a mention of a nice pounding from members of Stony Knoll church which was presented at the quarterly conference last Saturday. We want to express the sincere thanks and appreciation of the pastor and family for the tokens of love and appreciation and for the fine spirit which prompted the donations.

Pleasant Hill church now has a large bulletin board erected on the outside of the church which bears the name of the church and announcements of services. This addition to the church was made by the Christian Endeavor Society, and is deeply appreciated by the entire congregation. The society has been meeting regularly every Sunday afternoon at 5:30 at the church, and seems to be doing much good. The meeting last Sunday afternoon was well attended, and an interesting program was rendered with Mrs. Russell Holder, president of the society, as leader.

The second Sunday we met our regular appointment at Union Hill with a fairly large congregation present. After the service we were invited to three or four homes for dinner, but could not accept but one at that time, so we went to the home of Bro. Luther Poinexter and enjoyed a splendid dinner and pleasant conversation for a while in the afternoon.

Our service next Sunday will be with Harmony Grove church at 11 a. m.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

English Street.—Yesterday was a very good day for us at English Street. Superintendent W. T. Kennedy was out of town on business, but Assistant Superintendent J. A. Robbins conducted the Sunday school in a satisfying way.

Mrs. A. W. Phillips is in the hospital and Bro. Sink has been out for two Sundays. Bro. Moton has returned from the hospital and is now quietly resting in his home. He requests me to say to his correspondents that he hopes soon to be able to answer all letters, but at present is physically unable. He will be glad to see his brother ministers and friends at his home on Fifth street at any time. We ask all members of the Conference and his many friends throughout the state to join us in prayer for his recovery. He hopes to be able to carry on, as outlined, his evangelistic campaigns this summer.

Our Ladies' Aid held a very interesting meeting last week in the home of Mrs. J. A. Lee. Approximately $140 has been raised by the society during the first six months of this year. Mrs. Goebel, the president, gives the ladies plenty of work and all seem to enjoy it.

GEO. L. REYNOLDS.

P. S.—Bro. R. F. Goolsby has been sick at his home on Grimes street, but was able to be at church Sunday evening.

Dulins, Mocksville Charge.—Our primary Sunday school classes held an Easter program which was very effective Easter Sunday morning at the Sunday school hour; our pastor, Rev. Jabus Braxton, preached a forceful sermon Sunday following Easter.

Sunday was a good day with us. Brother Braxton brought with him two young men, Mr. Wood and Mr. Holt, from college, and our youth service program was rendered effectively. We hope these boys will come again.

We were delighted to have the two young men to speak; they seemed almost to hold our people spellbound. Our pastor also played an important part on this program. He gave us ideas as to what the budget meant.

We are indeed sorry to hear that Rev. J. Elwood Carroll could not be with us this year in our revival meeting. We were looking forward for his coming again.

We are glad that Mr. Gerringer consents at once to come. We are looking forward and intending to give our co-operation for the greatest revival that has ever been held at this place.

We were glad to have to worship with us yesterday some members from Elbaville on this charge.

LEONA HENDRIX, Reporter.

Anderson Charge, S. C.—The writer filled his appointment at Fairview today. There was an unusually large and attentive congregation present.

Our revival meeting begins at Fairview on Wednesday night before the first Sunday in August. Rev. R. C. Stubbins, pastor of Forsyth charge, will do the preaching. Our meeting at Liberty Hill will begin the second Sunday in August. We are praying for a great revival at both of these churches.

Our second quarterly conference was held at Fairview Saturday, April 20, at 3 p. m., with a very good representation from both churches present. The business was transacted in a business-like manner. Mr. Wilma Smith and Mr. L. D. Davis were nominated for delegate to Annual Conference.

Mrs. Lelia Pearson, one of Liberty Hill's faithful members, underwent a serious operation two weeks ago at Chick Springs Hospital. We are glad she is improving very fast and will soon be at home again. There will be preaching at Liberty Hill Sunday morning, April 28; then at the evening service we will have a musical program. We would be glad if you all could be present.

G. B. FERREE.

Elbaville, Mocksville Circuit.—Our pastor filled his appointment here Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The service was well attended. Bro. Braxton rendered a splendid message on "Love." He read the Scripture lesson from the Love Chapter, Corinthians 1:13.

We are glad of the increase of our Sunday school and the interest every one is taking.

Since last report we have purchased more chairs for one of our Sunday school rooms. Have done much work toward the improvement of the church grounds by planting flowers and cleaning the cemetery off.

We are proud of the young people of today, especially the Protestants and the carrying on of the young people's work in God's kingdom. We were delighted to see that some of our people attended the young people's program given at one of our churches, Dulins, Sunday.

We enjoyed having the two young men of High Point College that helped give the program at Dulins, to be with us at the afternoon service.

Best wishes to all the readers of the Herald.

STELLA BAILEY, Reporter.

Spring Hill, West Thomasville Charge.—Pastor Whitehead could not be with us Sunday, but Mr. Peeler had charge of the 11 o'clock services. He used as his subject, "Worship," which had three basic ideas—nature, music, and the home. His talk was very interesting.

We are very glad to say that hereafter we will have Pastor Whitehead with us three times a month instead of twice, which will be the first, third, and fourth Sunday mornings at 11 o'clock.

The second quarterly conference was held at Spring Hill Saturday evening with a right good attendance.

The people of the community met at the church Wednesday, worked on the grounds and planted some flowers. They made a great improvement, but there still remains a lot to be done.

Although the church is not yet completed we are glad to report that it is all paid for. It is hoped that the lights will soon be put in and the church seated.

REPORTER.

Pleasant Grove.—We held our second quarterly conference, March 3. The nominees for delegate to the Annual Conference were Mr. I. A. Teague and Mr. B. E. Payne.

The church has finished paying the $500 Sunday school room debt this year.

We were very glad to have Miss Blanche Fuller from Graham worship with us Sunday. She visited at the parsonage last week.

The Memorial Association is planning to hold the annual memorial service the second Sunday in May.

The Ladies' Aid held its regular meeting Wednesday, April 10, at the home of Mrs. W. H. Newby. The dues, with what had been collected for the society during the month, amounted to $23.00.

REPORTER.

English Street.—Some of our people are still sick. Among that number is Mrs. Warren Phillips, who has been in for some time. She is now at the Burrus Clinic for treatment; we trust she will return home much better. W. L. B. Sink, who is better known as "Grandpa," has been sick at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. A. Robbins. We miss him so much from his corner in the church, he being the oldest member of the Sunday school and much loved by all the little children, as well as the grown-ups. Hope he can be with us next Sunday.

The Junior Department of the Sunday school is growing in number and interest since it has been divided from the older folks. Mrs. Reynolds is superintendent and Miss Irene Reynolds is organist. They have their devotional to themselves and much training is being done in this part of the Sunday school.

Friday night, April 12, was Senior Christian Endeavor night. The society met with Miss Kate Phillips on English street with a good number present, including the pastor and wife. Under the leadership of Miss Iris Caudle as president and Miss Kate Phillips as chairman of the social committee the evening was very much enjoyed.

The Ladies' Aid members stay "busy as bees," working on different plans. Although our number is small we have been doing some work, and at the monthly meeting of last week at the home of Mrs. Lee. Although a cold, rainy night, they realized a good attendance, five visitors and $64 in treasury. Every member that can sew will soon have a job and those who can't sew must sell—so it's work for all.

Last Friday evening at 8 o'clock the Jennie Lee Philathea class held their business and social with Misses Myrtle and Bessie Cates. An interesting program was carried out and several new plans were made and work began at once on some of them. Louis Swann was chairman of the social hour and knew how to handle that part; there was innocent fun for all. Delicious fruit was served.

I am convinced more and more each service, not only on Sunday but week day services, too, that Conference could not have sent us a more capable and consecrated pastor than Rev. George Reynolds, who can preach, teach or whatever is to be done. His wife and three daughters are just as faithful to give their time and talent in any way through all the work here. Without Miss Inez at the piano the choir would be disappointed. God is keeping a watch over all these things and they shall have their reward.

REPORTER.

Pleasant Hill, Cleveland Circuit.—We were glad to have Bro. Eddy Ivester with us Sunday. He made a very interesting talk before the regular sermon. He tells us that a lack of interest is what is wrong with our Sunday schools, and that we need leaders.

Each one, we think, of Bro. Ridge's sermons, is better than the last; his talk this last Sunday was on "The Living Water," taken from John 4. This Water satisfies, it refreshes, beautifies and it cleanses. We can have this for the asking. A way to drink of this Living Water is through prayer. If only the young people would line up with the church and live a simple Christian life! After this, communion service was held.

We extend our sympathy to the two families who have been visited by death in the past few weeks: Mr. and Mrs. Joe Self, of Lawndale, who lost their little son, and to the relatives of Miss Martha Canipe. The funeral services were held only a few days apart.

LUCILLE WARLICK,

Reporter.

Pleasant Hill, West Forsyth Charge.—We are glad to report the church and all of its organizations are doing nicely at present.

President Taylor was with us Sunday. We were indeed glad to have him with us again. He preached a splendid sermon. I heard many compliments of his sermon. We were also pleased to have visitors from other churches with us.

The Christian Endeavor Society meets every Sunday evening at 5:30 o'clock at the church. The meeting last Sunday night was led by the president, Mrs. R. G. Holder. The topic discussed was "The Wonders of the Bible." We were pleased to have our pastor present and talk for us. An honorary member leads the meeting every fourth Sunday. Mrs. J. F. Hunter will be the leader on next Sunday evening. The Christian Endeavor business meeting will be held at the home of Miss Lucille Sprinkle the last week in this month. The society has placed a bulletin board in front of the church.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies met at the home of Mrs. J. F. Hunter for their monthly meetings in March. It was voted on and passed that the two societies be merged into one.

The Woman's Auxiliary met at the parsonage with Rev. and Mrs. C. B. Way last Tuesday night.

MRS. ARZIA DAVIS,

Reporter.

High Point.—Continuing the series of splendid sermons delivered during this month on "Stewardship," at the hour for morning worship last Sunday the pastor, Rev. R. I. Farmer, presented a timely and forceful message on "The Stewardship of Prayer," which was greatly enjoyed by a large audience. Immediately preceding the evening message, Mrs. S. S. Coe, president of the Woman's Auxiliary, gave a delightful three-minute talk on Stewardship and Tithing, which is being stressed so emphatically this month. Mrs. Coe is always a charming speaker, and possesses the happy faculty of speaking before a large audience in a calm, dignified, and effective manner. Rev. Mr. Farmer chose as the subject of his discourse, "The Christian and World Emergency," based on the text in John 5: "Say not ye, There are yet four months, and then cometh the harvest? Behold, I say unto you, Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest." He said that the church has been unfortunate because instead of trying to remove the causes of evil and temptations from the world it has spent the larger part of its effort and time in redeeming a few souls. We must remove the sinister influences that surround the youth of our land, and the sins that have infested our country in an unusual degree since the late World War. He denounced in scathing terms the prevalent modes of advertisement in our leading magazines, such as "Better a Lucky Strike than a sweet," and branded it as a hideous untruth. Mr. Farmer waxed eloquent in his appeal for Christians to rise to this world emergency, and do everything possible to remove the prevailing sins from the paths of our young people, and thus make the world safe for human living. This was one of the most eloquent and effective sermons that Rev. Mr. Farmer has delivered in his pastorate among us.

A flower sale will be held Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. John Pickett under the direction of Mrs. Ben Moore's Circle No. 7 of the Woman's Auxiliary. Dahlias, jonquil, and iris bulbs, also perennial plants, will be on sale.

A tea will be held Tuesday afternoon from 3:30 to 6 o'clock at the beautiful home of Mrs. C. C. Robbins south of the city, under the auspices of Mrs. Kennett's Circle, to which all members of the different circles are invited. Refreshments will be served by the young girls of Mrs. R. I. Farmer's Circle No. 1, and a silver offering will be taken. The country-side around our city is unusually lovely in its spring attire of varied tints of green, blended with the vivid pink of the Judas tree or "red bud," as it is more familiarly known, the snowy white dogwood, and dainty pink honeysuckle. This section is fortunate in its wealth of native flowering shrubs. Mrs. Robbins' home is beautifully located, and this occasion will afford a good opportunity to see the country at its loveliest.

In place of the regular Christian Endeavor meeting Monday evening, Rev. R. I. Farmer will give his illustrated lecture on his trip of a few years ago to England and Scotland. He will show interesting stereopticon views, and give some effective experiences. This will be a real treat to the boys and girls.

At the usual mid-week prayer meeting on Wednesday, the sixth in the series of impressive talks on the Lord's Prayer will be given on the clause, "Deliver Us From Evil."

The second quarterly conference is called for Wednesday, May 1.

The Junior Mission Circle, with Mesdames J. C. Whitesell and J. S. Pickett, leaders, is holding its regular monthly meeting at the church this (Monday) afternoon. This interesting group has a membership of 60 boys and girls, a number from the Children's Home being among the members. They are planning and rehearsing for a delightful operetta to be presented at an early date.

Much stress is being laid on April as Tithing Month, and Mr. E. L. Douglas, chairman, says he has secured 40 signers to the tithers' card. This is also Pay-Up Month, and all members are urged to pay their half-year pledge to May 1.

Holt McPherson, who is employed on the staff of the High Point Enterprise, has been writing some interesting and unique sketches of animal pets in the homes of High Point citizens, including the Carter Daltons' pet bear, "Smoky," the favorite dog of Dr. Hiatt's family, and "Mimi," the midget Pekinese of Mr. C. F. Fadley. Holt's brother, Garland McPherson, a student at our State University, has recently been elected treasurer of the N. C. Collegiate Press Association, which convened in Greensboro. He succeeded Scott Parker, also of this city, who is a student at Guilford College.

Several members of High Point College faculty will deliver commencement addresses at various high schools of the state this spring. Prof. T. C. Johnson will speak at Davidson County commencement Tuesday morning, and on May 5th at Pilot Consolidated school, near Thomasville. Dr. P. E. Lindley will speak at Denton, Efland, Staley, Gibsonville, and Graham. Prof. C. R. Hinshaw will make the commencement address at Wallburg May 11th.

Mrs. Frank Armfield, of Concord, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. R. T. Pickens.

In the music contest by high school students at Greensboro last Saturday, the girls' quartet won first place. This was composed of Misses Dorothy Franklin, Margaret Opal Neese, Margaret York, and Jessie Curry. C. L. Gray, Jr., won third place for tenor solo.

Whitakers.—The work here is moving steadily forward without noise or much ado. The biggest visible thing we are doing is the building of the parsonage, a six-room bungalow—living room, dining room, kitchen, and three bed rooms. Or one of the three may be used as a study, leaving two bed rooms with clothes closets. In addition there will be a breakfast room with seats built in, a bath room, butler's pantry, two built in cabinets, coat room, and back porch under the same roof and screened. The whole is at this writing roughed in, wired for lights, and the roof of composition shingles on. The first of three equal payments of the total cost has been made and arrangements for the other two payments as they become due—the second when all outside work is done, the last when the building is finished. It is fine to have a high pressure Ladies' Aid in action, and other members and friends of the church co-operating, the pastor keeping out of the way while they work.

The Missionary Society meets this week, always with an interesting program. At this meeting two of the members will tell of the things they saw and heard and felt at the Branch meeting in Asheboro.

Wednesday of last week our adult Christian Endeavor Society, with some of the younger Endeavorers, went by invitation to Enfield and held a joint prayer meeting with the C. E. Society of that church. It was a most helpful, inspiring meeting, well attended and freely participated in by the members of both societies. After the prayer meeting a social hour was enjoyed by these two neighboring groups, the local society serving refreshments.

One of the Enfield members said to me it had been thought and often repeated that you could not have a Christian Endeavor Society in our Enfield church. But when Bro. Auman came as pastor, he thought differently and talked differently and now it is different, a striking instance of before and after using—the right kind of thinking.

Our Whitakers church is now trying to establish permanently a "children's period" as part of the Sunday morning church hour, with some degree of encouragement.

One other thing that should have been said before and repeated again and again, namely, the repeated and continuous remembrances on the part of the people of the pastor and his family. We, that is, mine and I, can tell without leaving the house or even looking out when pork is being killed and sausage made, when the pecans are dropping or the peanuts are being threshed, or the potatoes are being dug, or the turnips are ripe, or the lettuce is ready for use. Of course the season for some of the above is over, but the supply is not exhausted. Then, too, I read in some pastors' reports that they receive articles "for the pantry." So have I, but much of it "for the table," ready prepared. This was strikingly true when we both had flu—a tray three times a day and oftener.

But it's not all physical and material. There is in the group here a keen appreciation of the spiritual. They make spiritual contribution to the periods of worship. This in their singing, in their prayers, both audible and silent, in their response that you feel. This church has, of course, its financial pillars, but it has also its spiritual pillars.

T. M. JOHNSON.

Orange Charge.—The second quarterly conference met with the church at Efland Wednesday night, April 17. Each church was represented. The business was transacted harmoniously. The reports were encouraging, especially reports of Sunday school superintendents. Candidates for delegate to the next Annual Conference were nominated as follows: C. A. Bivins, of the Efland church, and D. A. Pender, of Chestnut Ridge church. Either of these will be competent to represent this charge. They are both wide-awake men.

The next conference will meet with the church at Hebron.

B. M. WILLIAMS, Pastor.

Bethesda, North Davidson.—Our Sunday school, under the efficient leadership of Supt. C. L. Wagner, is taking on renewed life and energy during this beautiful spring-time weather.

Our pastor, Bro. R. S. Troxler, has been helping Bro. Curry in a meeting and was not with us the second Sunday as usual. His appointment was filled, however, by a very worthy man, Bro. Seagrave, from Welch Memorial, High Point. We were very glad to have him and enjoyed his message very much.

Our people are looking forward to the second Sunday in May with a great deal of interest and enthusiasm. At that time we are planning to have an all-day service, Mother's Day and Home-Coming Day combined. A very good program for both morning and afternoon services is anticipated. Dinner will be served on the grounds. Everyone is cordially invited. Come and enjoy the day with us.

REPORTER.

Lebanon.—Yesterday the writer went to church for the first time since Easter Sunday. I do not recall that I have ever been out of my pulpit three Sundays in succession before. I did not preach yesterday, but hope to be strong enough to preach next Sunday.

Since I have been sick I have received many words of sympathy. Several have sent cards assuring us they were thinking of us and anxious for our recovery. We greatly appreciate the words of kindness and sympathy.

The following preached for us during our illness: Drs. Andrews, Lindley, and Kennett, all of High Point College; Dr. Crowell, of the M. E. church preached for us once. We appreciate the help of these good brethren in time of need.

The work is progressing nicely. We had 500 in Sunday school yesterday. Good congregations for the preaching services.

The many friends of Rev. J. H. Moton will regret to learn that he remains real sick. He spent about ten days in High Point Hospital where we think his condition was improved. Yesterday he returned home, but at this writing he is very weak. We hope he will soon be out again.

Shoals Church, Pinnacle Charge.—Spring has come in all its glory and splendor. May all the churches take on new life like all nature has. Our Sunday school is increasing rapidly in attendance. We had 58 present last Sunday and hope to have many more. There are lots of the older people and some boys and girls in the community who are not in any Sunday school.

Last Sunday Bro. Hunter preached another good sermon to a large and attentive audience. Fred and Mrs. W. H. Hauser, of King, were with us last Sunday. We were glad to have them. Come again. We were glad to welcome three new members into our church Sunday: Mr. T. J. Westmoreland joined on profession of faith; Mrs. T. J. Westmoreland came by letter from Trinity M. E. church, and Mrs. R. E. Barber, from Shoals Baptist church.

Owing to the inclement weather we did not have services Sunday afternoon.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

MRS. J. P. OWEN, Reporter.

—Dr. T. H. He was elected contributing editor of both our general organs by the General Conference in May, last.

GOOD NEWS FOR "OLD YADKIN"

For some time some of us who have been very much interested in the "Old Yadkin" project have been so busy trying to care for other things that this work has of necessity not been given the attention it should have had. But in the midst of this slow-up, so far as publicity is concerned work has been done that is very encouraging. Miss Vera Garrett, the daughter of the late Rev. J. N. Garrett, has been very much interested in the idea of doing that which would mean the bringing the history of Yadkin into High Point College. She has written to friends and has recently collected $10.00. Those from whom Miss Garrett has collected are as follows:

Ruby O. Garrett, $1.00; Mrs. Ger Welser-Rubble, $1.00; Mrs. Bertie Walser-Prospere, $1.00; Thomas H. Byerly, $1.00; Wade H. Phillips, $1.00; J. Fred Thompson, $1.00; Mrs. Lillian P. Worley, $1.00; J. T. Taylor, $1.00; Mrs. Ella Charles-Shoaf, $1.00; C. R. Craver, $1.00.

At another time Miss Garrett collected $8, which makes $18.00 that she has collected. If we had just a few more such workers we would soon be able to have this historic old bell installed where she would do work for the High Point College through the years to come. Come along, friends of the two institutions, let us put this thing across. It can be done with a little effort on the part of those who should be interested in weaving the history of Yadkin College into that of High Point College. Who will be next with a nice contribution?

Rev. R. S. Troxler has recently paid the $1.00 pledged some time ago.

Anxious to report your contribution, I am,

Yours truly,

GEO. L. CURRY.

—We thank President Elderdice for an invitation to the Seminary Commencement at Westminster, Md., May 5-7. There will be eight graduates in the diploma course and five in degree courses, one of these being Yoshio Ito, of Japan. We regret to see none from North Carolina this year.

—A recent number of the Progressive Farmer has an interesting write-up of Bro. Jesse Causey, "master farmer" of Guilford county. He is quoted as saying in his boyhood days after a hard day's work that he did not expect to make his living by farming. But he got rested and changed his mind. He took a rundown farm and by using his brains as well as his muscles brought it up to such a condition as to be the admiration of those who see it.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Thompson

The citizens and neighbors of Cedar Cliff community were much grieved on Thursday, March 28, to learn of the passing of their oldest citizen, George Washington Thompson. Mr. Thompson had been ill over a year. He was born February 19, 1846, and died March 28, 1929, in his 83rd year. He was a leading member of Cedar Cliff church.

The funeral was conducted from Cedar Cliff church March 29, at 3 o'clock, by Revs. G. W. Holmes and J. E. Carroll. Interment followed in the local cemetery.

He professed faith in Christ while a young man and joined Bethel church, where he remained a member until 15 years ago when he removed to Cedar Cliff church. He served as steward and trustee several times during his day. His Christian life will be greatly missed.

He served in the Confederate army for three years. He was a member of Company G, 44th Regiment. He was in some of the hottest battles of the last three years of the struggle. He went into service voluntarily.

He is survived by six children: Misses Lelah and Mary Thompson, and Messrs. Tom, Benjamin, John, and Otis Thompson; one sister, Miss Julia Thompson; and two brothers, J. F. and A. G. Thompson. He was progenitor of 14 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

J. ELWOOD CARROLL.

Jones

The death of the just is like the glorious sunset that rounds out and completes the perfect day. How lovingly the light lingers in the supper atmosphere. It may be asked, What glory there is in death: There is no glory in decay. But there is glory in a state of exaltation. When the soul of the Christian is released from flesh it rises free from temptations and all sorrows to the home where changes never come, nor pain, toil nor care. Who would not fain be resting there in that bright and blessed home?

Charles Pinkney Jones, born in Guilford county, departed this life February 28, 1927, aged 79 years, six months and eight days. He was a son of John and Margaret Fitchett Jones. In early years of life he took an active part in church and Sunday school work. He was for several years superintendent of the Sunday school at Poots school house. Quite a number of years ago he united with Bales Memorial Wesleyan Methodist church, where he remained a member until death. He often attended services at Mitchell's Grove M. P. Church. A quiet, unassuming man has passed, a kind neighbor who will be missed not only by his own immediate family but many friends as well. He leaves to mourn his death two daughters, six sons, two sisters and one brother. The funeral was conducted at Mitchell's Grove M. P. Church by his pastor, Rev. Mr. Jones, assisted by Rev. J. R. Hutton and Rev. Mr. Roach. His body was laid to rest beneath a mound of flowers to await the resurrection morn. Interment was made in Mitchell's Grove cemetery. We would say to those who grieve for him that he is just another link to draw you nearer home.

Dearest Father, thou has left us,
And our loss we deeply feel,
But 'tis God that has bereft us,
He can all our sorrows heal.
Yet again we hope to meet thee
When the day of life is fled,
Where no farewell tear is shed.

Morris

Branson E. Morris departed this life April 10, 1929, aged 69 years, 11 days. He was married to Mary T. Elliott. To this union were born three sons and one daughter. They are: Baxter, Autie, Walter Morris, all of Denton, N. C., and Mrs. Van Lanier, of Handy, N. C. There are also 15 grandchildren, one brother, five sisters and a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn his passing. He was a faithful member of Lineberry Methodist Protestant Church. A good supporter in all the activities of his church and denomination.

He was a man who did a great deal of thinking and meditating, never acting upon important matters hastily, always careful not to speak words of criticism about his neighbors. He exercised fine judgment in matters of business and religion. He was a safe man to go to for sound advice. It can be truly said of him that he attended strictly to his own business and bothered no one. The community, the church, and the home feel very keenly the loss to them. But according to his dying testimony and the life he lived, he has gone to the place prepared for the finally faithful.

The funeral was held at Lineberry Church on April 11th at 11 o'clock in the presence of one of the largest congregations ever gathered there. Besides the writer, the following ministers were present and took part in the service: Bros. W. D. Reed, E. A. Bingham, J. W. Hulin, and J. D. Cranford.

The bereaved have our sympathy.

Cease, ye pilgrims, cease to mourn,
Press onward to the prize;
Soon our Savior will return
Triumphant in the skies;
Yet a season, and you know
Happy entrance will be given,
All our sorrows left below,
And earth exchanged for heaven.

C. E. RIDGE.

Brame

In the early morning hours of April 10 the angel of death visited our community and called Mr. John Richard Brame very suddenly from his labors to reward.

Mr. Brame was born June 21, 1857, and had been a member of Harris Chapel Church on Vance charge for many years. He married Miss Bettie Elizabeth Dickerson, and to this union 11 children were born, six preceding him in death.

He is survived by his wife, three sons, L. W., B. C., and G. O. Brame; two daughters, Mrs. W. H. Hayes and Mrs. T. S. Watkins, and 15 grandchildren. Two of these, Mrs. Wallace Ellington and Hill Ellington have lived with their grandparents since early childhood when death claimed both their parents. Surviving also is a brother, G. W. Brame, of Rocky Mount; Mr. Walter Harris, of Danville, Va., and Mrs. W. R. Wilborne, of Louisburg, half-brother and sister.

Much sympathy is felt for the wife who has been a faithful and constant companion for fifty years. May she look forward to the great reunion around the throne of God. And may we strive to meet him on that day. Let us live closer to Jesus, that should the call come to us as to him, very suddenly, we may be ready.

Funeral services were held at Harris Chapel Church by Rev. R. A. Hunter, pastor of the Henderson M. P. Church, assisted by Rev. Mr. Nelson and Rev. Mr. Teague, of the Baptist Church. He was laid in the family plot of the church cemetery. The flowers were lovely, reminding of his many relatives and friends.

M. V. W.

Hutchins

Mrs. Sallie M. Hutchins, born in Stokes county March 5th, 1860, died February 20th, 1929, in her home in High Point. Sister Hutchins accepted Christ and joined the church in early life. When she moved to High Point she brought her membership with her and placed it in the Lebanon M. P. church. She remained a faithful member of this church till she passed to her reward. She had been in declining health for some time but friends did not become alarmed over her condition till just a few weeks before she died.

Sister Hutchins enjoyed a large circle of friends. Those who knew her best loved her most. She leaves to mourn their loss five children and two sisters. She will be greatly missed by her friends and church, but missed most by her children.

Funeral services were conducted in Lebanon church by the pastor, assisted by Rev. J. H. Moton, a former pastor. Her remains were laid to rest in Lebanon cemetery in the presence of a large concourse of people.

Long

J. H. Long was born in Maryland December 31, 1851, and died at his home in High Point March 8, 1929. Bro. Long had lived in High Point for 29 years. He was well known in the city.

For a number of years Bro. Long had been a member of Lebanon Methodist Protestant Church. Before his health failed he was regular in his attendance. For some time, owing to bad health, he had not attended the services.

The large congregation present at the funeral service was an evidence that he had won many friends in his community.

Surviving are the widow, three sons, and two sisters. Funeral services were conducted by the pastor, assisted by Rev. J. H. Moton, after which the remains were laid to rest in Lebanon cemetery.

DON'T FOOL YOURSELF

(A reminder that April 1 is not the only Fools' Day)

Do you boast that you are smart?
Don't fool yourself.
That you play a lordly part?
Don't fool yourself.
Strut about as handsome, tall,
Think you really know it all?
Pride oft goes before a fall,—
Don't Fool
Yourself!

Do you speculate in stocks?
Don't fool yourself.
Be prepared for tragic shocks,
Don't fool yourself.
Little lambs are easily shorn,
Innocents are daily born,
Money gone and you forlorn,—
Don't Fool
Yourself!

Long to be a millionaire?
Don't fool yourself.
Saddled with a load of care?
Don't fool yourself.
Money is not everything,
It may suddenly take wing,
Better far to laugh and sing,—
Don't Fool
Yourself!

Do you covet worldly fame?
Don't fool yourself.
Want to make a public name?
Don't fool yourself.
Quiet things are best they say,
Ostentation does not pay,
Live the simple life today,—
DON'T FOOL
YOURSELF!

If the 148 churches that have reported nothing from the Easter service intend to report in time for their offerings to be included in our report to the General Conference treasurer, they will have to get busy. April 30, the end of our denominational fiscal year, is almost in sight.

Those of my readers who own automobiles, and most of them do, know that they will not run without gas. I heard that, once on a time, a certain make of cars ran for almost a day on nothing but its reputation. I do not believe a word of it. I was foolish enough to try to run the same kind of a car on nothing but its reputation, and the thing refused to budge an inch. I coaxed and petted it. I reminded it of its reputation to "take you there and bring you back," but it did not "snore" or "draw a breath," or do any such thing, until I "hiked" down the road and got some gas and "drenched" it with it. It takes gas to make a car go.

Neither were churches intended to run without money. It may be true that a few are trying to run without money; if so, they are not getting anywhere, and never will until they change their tactics. It takes money to make a church go. This may sound sordid, but it is as true as the gospel. And the more money you give to a church the faster and better it will run. Give your church the same care and attention you give your automobile, and you will note with godly pride how smoothly she runs, and she comes to a hill you will be overjoyed to see how she "picks up" all the way to the top.

—The rainfall in February and March this year is said to be the greatest for these two months in a quarter of a century.

—Every Sunday witnesses an unusual number of automobile accidents. Last Sunday exceeded most Sundays. Among the victims were G. Walter Burgess, his wife and daughter, and Mrs. Mollie Hudson, all of whom were killed near Brown Summit when the car in which they were riding dashed into a car by the side of the road as an effort was made to pass a moving car or two.

—Six people fell to their death when two airplanes collided two thousand feet above ground near San Diego, Cal.

—Oscar O. Williams, of Kansas, who had been spending the winter in Greensboro, died suddenly of acute indigestion on Wednesday night of last week. He was a cousin of Bro. J. F. Williams, of Calvary church. His son-in-law came from Kansas and took the body to that state for interment. He was a strong-looking man and his death came as a great shock to his friends.

—The Supreme Court says again that Sinclair must go to jail for three weeks. His only way of escape seems to be the president's garden, which he can hardly hope for.

—Rev. R. J. Tamblin visited Gastonia April 9 and made some investigation of the strike at the textile mills. He thinks all our citizens should study the situation in the mills and be prepared to form impartial judgment. As mills multiply the matter assumes larger proportions. Two extremes are to be avoided, and it will require clear understanding of the case to find the true middle road. The first thing to acquire is the will to be just and do right. Employers may do wrong and employees may do wrong.

—"Company" Mill," near Tabernacle, was sold at auction this week. It was bought by Max Hendrix, of Greensboro, for a party as a fishing ground.

—The Preparatory Commission for a Disarmament Conference is again in session at Geneva, Switzerland. The meetings began on Monday of this week, April 15. More than 20 nations are represented. The head of the United States delegation is Hugh Gibson, U. S. Ambassador to Belgium. The commission is investigating the whole problem of armaments and is trying to reach agreement on a plan to limit the armies and navies of the world. If such an agreement can be reached, a world conference will be called to put such a plan into effect.

—All the 48 States now have laws providing a tax on gasoline. New York, the last State to act, has just placed a tax of 2 cents a gallon on gasoline. The tax in the various states varies between 2 cents and 5 cents a gallon. The New York tax becomes effective on May 1.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Miss Georgia Clapp and some of the girls of her Sunday school class, Gibsonville, S. C., came up last Saturday to select a girl to feed. A letter from Mrs. C. W. Bates' S. S. class, Greensboro, N. C., asks for a boy to be assigned them to clothe.

Mr. W. F. Grabs, King, N. C., sent us two bushels of pears. For the money and for these gifts we thank you.

A Request

Right along now many of our friends will be planting chrysanthemums and dahlias and other plants which you will be glad to share with the Home. We are especially anxious to get some dahlia roots and canna roots, or other bulbs, and chrysanthemums planted soon, and if you will send along, by mail or otherwise, a bunch, however small, it will help us to get our flower garden planted. We need these things but must not spend money to buy them this time. Thank you for these or any other gifts for the Home.

Faithfully yours,

A. G. DIXON.

TO CHARLES SMITH, WOULD-BE ATHEIST, NEW YORK CITY

Your letter received.
If I'm not deceived,
Your offer is clear:
For a dollar a year
I can join with you—
An atheist, too.

At once I may state
That advantage great
Does not yet appear
In this hemisphere.
Won't you reconsider
And suit lower bidder?

A dollar a year
Comes so very near
To two cents a week
That I must outpeak:
The price is too high
For what it can buy.

Men learned long ago
By paying no dough
Just how to play fools
Without any rules:
No patent on plan—
Free to any man.

Your price must be lowered
If I can afford
A luxury so great
As letter does state.
Why not make it free
As water in sea?

One thing brings surprise—
Makes wide open eyes:
You say there's no God,
(None above the sod),
That world without thought
Was into form brought.

Then all's accident,
And when full extent
Of accident's seen
On the world's great screen
Something may appear
That won't bring good cheer.

In the great windup,
In the dregs of the cup,
When things settle down,
Here and all around,
You may chance to find
Another state of mind.

Give accident free hand,
In its way don't stand;
Let chance do for you
What it's able to do:
By luck you may dwell
In a place called Hell.

HAZARD OF TRESPASSING

Death took the same toll of trespassers in 1928 as in 1927 on the property of the Southern Railway System, 140 persons having lost their lives in each year while engaging in this hazardous practice. Injuries to trespassers increased from 133 in 1927 to 162 in 1928.

These figures are from the annual report of the Southern's Safety Bureau which shows that 104 were killed and 75 injured while trespassing on tracks and 36 killed and 87 injured while trespassing on trains during 1928.

The coincidence as to the number of deaths in 1927 and 1928 is not as remarkable as might appear, since deaths and injuries to trespasser on the Southern's tracks and trains have been almost constant in number for several years.

Beginning with 1922, the results have been as follows: 1922, 129 killed and 171 injured; 1923, 154 killed and 178 injured; 1924, 130 killed and 174 injured; 1925, 128 killed and 151 injured; 1926, 135 killed and 154 injured; 1927, 140 killed and 133 injured; 1928, 140 killed and 162 injured.

A distressing feature of this unnecessary loss of life and limb is that the majority of the victims are useful citizens or children, using the railway tracks as a walkway on their way to and from their places of work or schools, or boys hopping trains and playing around freight cars. The appalling results from year to year should cause parents to caution their children to stay off railway tracks and away from trains except when riding as passengers.—Southern News Bulletin.

Suffering Servants

Good servants are they who stand and wait,
All ready to serve when comes the date;
Great servants they who toil and strive
To have things ready when we arrive;
But greatest of all are servants who bear
Both pain and misery to lessen our share.

The servants that serve with cunning skill,
That please with product of hand and mill,
We gladly reward for care they take,
But they all serve for their own sake.
Our suffering servants great pains bear
That they may save us from all share.

Reward they seek is ours, not theirs.
They take the pain, free us from fears;
They give their blood to save our lives,
They spend on us their tens and fives;
They lose all things that we may gain,
And never once do they complain.

Strange paradox, they suffer with joy
If only the means that they employ
Can save from pain and bring repose
To anguished souls in dreadful throes.
They live for others, they'd die for others,
With all the zeal of faithful mothers.

These suffering servants uplift the race,
They sparkle like gems in many a place:
The suffering servants are sons of God,
The noblest souls that tread earth's sod.
They sound no horn, they seek no fame,
They ask for nothing in their own name.

But more than thanks do they deserve
Who've saved our life and spared our nerve:
The least we do should plainly show
How much to them we feel we owe.
They have redeemed us with a price
So great we call it sacrifice.

Of suffering servants there is One
Who must be thought of all alone;
For surely there is no compare
'Twixt others' pains and His great share.
He heals the hurt of our great fall,
Redeemed the sons of Adam all.

But what a price! O what a cost,
To gain the day, bring back the lost!
No sounding line of human woe
Can fathom the debt to Him we owe.
He paid our debt, He set us free,
And we, O Christ, belong to Thee.

The Writings of Mr. Smallbean

Mr. Smallbean has been a long-lived, prolific and prodigious writer. He has been writing for centuries and is still at it. For a long time he wrote on theology. Now he is writing on science. His theological writings for a time were much read, but at length the world grew tired of them, and therefore he turned to science. He does not know any more about science than he knew about theology, but the world does not know it yet, and he has a large number of readers. The trouble with him as a writer is a lack of knowledge of what he is writing about. He knew little of God and he knows little of what he calls "Nature," which he writes with a capital letter, just as he wrote the name of the deity with a capital letter. The capital letter helps to emphasize the importance of what he is writing about. It cannot be denied that Mr. Smallbean knows how to choose important subjects for his discourses. He knows what the people are interested in. His success as a writer is due to that fact. Partly, indeed largely, to another fact: he knows how to make the impression that he has a masterly grasp of his subject. People open his great books expecting to be fed. And they are fed—on chaff.

We wonder what Mr. Smallbean will write about when the people cease to read his nature "studies."

God of the Hebrews and Our God

It has been seriously proposed that men turn away from the God of the Hebrews and choose a new God. It is rather late to propose that now. That was done a long time ago. It was done just as a boy turns away from the human father of his childhood days and turns to the human father of his young manhood days. It is not the father that changes; it is the boy's ability to understand and appreciate. The father is the same man, but in the conception of the son he becomes a much greater man. So it is with man's conception of God. In the childhood of the race men knew God, but they didn't know Him well. In later years they came to know Him better. Men are still learning of God and He is growing greater and greater—in their estimation. But He has been all the time the same perfect God.

—We thank Rev. R. A. Hunter of Henderson for a copy of the Directory of Henderson church. The list of members surprises one by the way some names are repeated. We find 10 Bolings, 18 Faulkners, 8 Foxes, 14 Grissoms, 26 Harrises, 11 Hayes', 24 Hights, 9 Powells, 11 Renns, 9 Riggans, 10 Robertsons, 8 Vaughns, 11 Woodliefs, 8 Youngs, and many other names not repeated so many times. This important church has had an interesting history. It was organized in 1881 and the first year had about 35 members. It now has about 375 members. The present building was erected in 1899 and 1900. It has had 12 pastors in its 48 years. It is a growing and hopeful church. It is a leading church in our denominational progress in the state. The Annual Conference has met with this church four times.

WONDERS OF THE UNIVERSE—METEORS

We have been studying about eight planets, twenty-six moons, fifteen hundred planetoids, unknown numbers of comets, and now we come to the smallest members of our solar system—meteors—millions of which come to the earth every day. And how strange they are!

You are all familiar with meteors, sometimes called shooting stars. They have various degrees of brightness, but the brighter they are the more rarely they appear. Once or twice in a lifetime one may see the whole sky illuminated by one of them. It was my fortune when a boy to see one that burst, seemingly not far above me, having somewhat the same appearance as a multitude of sparks flying from an anvil. It lighted up our section of country.

Doubtless the greatest number of meteors are no larger than pebbles, while multitudes of them are invisible, no larger than grains of sand. The earth, in its path around the sun, is continually coming in contact with them. Think of the millions and millions of them reaching the earth's atmosphere every day! If the whole solar domain is alive with them, we can never know of their presence until they take the leap of death into our atmosphere.

Meteors have a velocity ranging from ten to forty miles a second. At their rate of speed they could circle the earth in twenty minutes. When first seen they are usually about seventy miles from the earth, and vanish at about forty or fifty miles, but come in a slanting direction. Traveling at such a tremendous speed, when they strike our atmosphere, it sets up so much friction that they are immediately set on fire and burned. The ashes then float off in the air. Our atmosphere is our protection. The faster the speed of a meteor the quicker it is burned up. If it were not for the air, they would strike the earth and great would be the loss of life. Sometimes one is too large to burn up in its passage through the air, so it strikes the earth. These are called meteorites.

The greatest shower of meteors recorded in history occurred on the night of November 12, 1833, between ten o'clock and daybreak. The display was like the falling of snowflakes. The heavens seemed to be on fire. Many thought the end of the world had come.

The study of meteors began in earnest after this wonderful display, and the astronomers figured out that this shower was periodic in its nature, and could be expected every thirty-three years. Accordingly, in 1866 they looked for another shower from this same meteor stream, and they were not disappointed, except that it was not so brilliant as the previous one.

At the next display, which was to be in 1899, the world was agog for the heavenly fireworks. But they did not appear. The astronomers seemed to be false prophets this time. What had happened to the meteor stream? Why did the earth fail to pass through the great shoal that was circling in its orbit around the sun and had crossed the earth's orbit before so regularly? It was ascertained that this meteor stream had passed close enough to the giant planet Jupiter to be shifted from its regular path, on account of the planet's pull of gravitation, so that it no longer crossed the earth's orbit as it did before. It is claimed that this stream was so long that it took three years for all of the meteors to pass a given point, so that for three years as the earth returned to the point of intersection it would catch some of the stragglers. Some streams are said to be 100,000 miles wide, and scattered more or less all around their own orbit.

The earth encounters another stream of these wanderers in August from year to year, but nothing like the showers of 1833 or 1866.

It is only occasionally that a meteor of unusual brightness flashes out to the astonishment of the world below. In 1876 one passed over Kansas, being seen about seventy-five miles high, and flying for a thousand miles at a speed of ten or fifteen miles a second, disappearing somewhere near Lake Ontario. At a point between St. Louis and Chicago, the great ball of fire burst into a number of pieces, forming a cluster of sparkling stars that chased each other along their path. The cluster was supposed to be about forty miles long by five miles wide. After the meteor had burst and the display was all over, it was fifteen minutes later that the fearful crash was heard in Bloomington, Illinois. As it takes about five seconds for sound to travel a mile, you can see that the explosion took place 180 miles away. What a tremendous racket it must have made! Many thought it was an earthquake.

During showers of meteors some have assumed tremendous proportions. These are called fire-balls and sometimes bolides. They have been known to appear as large as the full moon, lighting up the whole country with their glare, and leaving trains of sparks behind them. They may be entirely consumed before reaching the ground, or they may fall a solid piece of matter and bury themselves in the earth. As the friction of the air melts the fire-ball and portions of it fall behind, it forms the train of sparks that follow. Sometimes these trains of sparks have been known to float around in the breeze for a long time afterward. There is the record of an immense fire-ball passing over southern England in 1909, which left a train that remained visible for two hours, drifting into many curious shapes in the meantime. It must have possessed a phosphorescent light.

Naturally, the question that arises in thoughtful minds is, what is the origin of these meteors? While many answers to astronomical interrogations are mere theories, yet it seems to be a demonstrated fact that meteors are largely the result of disintegrated or broken-up comets. It was discovered that the meteors of the November showers, being thirty-three years in their periodical trips, were following the same orbit as a certain comet having the same period of years. It was concluded that the meteors had originally formed a part of the comet and had gradually separated from it. Six of the larger streams of meteors are now known to belong to comets, and the general opinion seems to be that the thousands of comets that in times past have circled around the sun, leaving behind small fragments of their mass, furnish meteoric showers when the earth crosses their trail. A certain astronomer identified the tracks of no less than seventy-six meteor swarms, most of them small, with those of comets. And yet some meteors are thought to be wanderers through inter-stellar space and picked up by the earth. Some day more definite light may be shed upon the whole question.—W. E. Shepard in Zion's Herald.

—Our older readers will recall Coxey and Coxey's army who 35 years ago marched upon Washington with demand for legislative relief of the prevailing unemployment. They trampled upon the grass and injured shrubbery about the capitol and Coxey and two others were put in jail. The same "General" Coxey, now 75 years old, is preparing for another demonstration in the interest of legislation to furnish work to the unemployed.

DENOMINATIONAL ENTERPRISES

PRESIDENT BROOMFIELD'S QUARTERLY REPORT

Pittsburgh, Pa.,
April 18, 1929.

to the Executive Committee of the General Conference:

On Friday, April 5, at 11 p. m., Rev. F. T. Benson, D.D., Editor of the Methodist Protestant, died suddenly in his home in Baltimore, Maryland. His funeral services were held in Starr Church, and in response to invitation I participated therein.

On January 19 I attended the funeral services in the North Baltimore Church of Rev. J. M. Sheridan, D.D., former secretary of the Board of Home Missions. The unexpected home-going of these two efficient servants of our church is a great loss to us.

Since our meeting on January 16, I have attended two meetings of the Executive Committee of the Board of Missions, two meetings of the Pittsburgh Book Directory, one meeting of the Executive Committee of the Baltimore Book Directory, one meeting of the Board of Publications, two meetings of the Committee on the Consolidation of Our Papers, one meeting of the Commission of Evangelism of the General Conference, one meeting of the Committee on Administration of the Federal Council, one meeting of the Commission of Evangelism of the Federal Council, one meeting of the Budget Council, and several meetings of the Committee on Program for the Missionary Convention.

I have preached or delivered addresses in the following churches: In the Eastern Conference—Inwood, Baldwin, and Ambrook, L. I.; in the Maryland Conference—Deer Park, Rhode Island Ave., Chestertown, Westminster, Starr, North Baltimore, West Baltimore, Edmonston Ave., and Baker Chapel at Western Maryland College; in the Pittsburgh Conference—Fourth Church, Mt. Washington, Over Brook, First Church S. S., and Second Church, Pittsburgh, and Castle Shannon; West Virginia Conference—Morgantown, Clarksburg and Parkersburg; in the Ohio Conference—Tiffin; in the Illinois Conference—Chatham Church, Chicago; and in the Indiana Conference—Logansport, Indianapolis, and Elkhart.

To the Elkhart church I gave the Passion Week, preaching every night in their special services, and every day at noon in the Lerner theater, with thirty churches participating. The special labors performed during these three months were: correcting proof and preparing the index for our new Discipline, assisting on the preparation of the pamphlet, "Facts Concerning the Missionary Situation," writing various articles for publication, addressed the Baltimore Preachers' Meeting twice, spoke a number of times to the Pittsburgh Preachers' Meeting, participated in the dedicatory services of the new addition to the Edmonston Avenue Church, preached twice in the Centennial services of the Tiffin church, addressed the great Missionary Rally in the North Baltimore church, and delivered the Thank-Offering messages for the F. M. S. in the church in Baldwin, L. I., and in Mt. Washington, Pittsburgh.

On January 24 I addressed a large group of the ministers at the Ohio Conference at a special luncheon in Columbus, Ohio. On March 7 I visited Dr. J. C. Berrien, at Amityville, L. I., and found him keenly interested in our denominational program, and especially in the ministers who began their ministry during the period of his service as secretary of the Board of Ministerial Education.

On February 5 I was one of the guests of honor at the annual banquet of the Methodist Social Union of Baltimore, and represented our denomination on the program.

On March 16 I appointed Rev. R. L. Shipley, D.D., to represent us on the Commission on Motion Pictures and Drama of the Federal Council.

On April 17 I addressed the annual meeting of the Ohio Branch of the Missionary Society at Cambridge, Ohio.

In these three months I have delivered fifty-six sermons and addresses, and have traveled over 10,000 miles.

During that same period it has been my great joy to receive the public confession of nearly forty people in their acceptance of Christ as their Savior.

I submit for your review my answers to the questions that have come to me from pastors and churches concerning certain portions of our Discipline.

J. C. BROOMFIELD.

CHILDREN'S DAY SERVICES

G. W. HADDAWAY, Executive Secretary

The Children's Day service this year is an unusually fine one, well arranged and adapted to all schools. It includes very catchy and good music. We had this music passed favorably upon by one of Baltimore's leading singers.

It also includes some pictures from our foreign field. This time we have grouped them rather than scatter them throughout the service. The picture on the back cover page is up to the minute and speaks for itself. We received it only a few weeks ago from China.

The special messages of Drs. Broomfield and Miller are to the point and very good. Following them is a short message by the Executive Secretary and a brief description of the front cover page. This description is very interesting.

Accompanying this service is an unusually large recitation sheet, consisting of two classes of recitations, those for general Children's Day services and others of a missionary character. They are all good and well selected. After all, we believe the best kind of Children's Day program is one most largely made up of children—and the smaller the better.

Also we have issued a new type of offering envelope which carries its own appeal. Every man, woman and child in the denomination is urged to give at least ten cents a day for ten days prior to Children's Day. Pastors, superintendents, and other church leaders are asked to distribute these envelopes to all of their people in both the Sunday school and church and do so at once. Certainly not later than ten days before the service is to be held.

In order to carry out the missionary program of the church and meet maturing obligations we must have at least $50,000 as Children's Day offering. If every one will help, the money will be raised—then everybody will be happy—especially those in the foreign field—and the work of the Kingdom will prosper.

Please send in orders for Children's Day supplies at once. The same will be furnished free to Methodist Protestant churches and Sunday schools.

MEMORIAL WINDOW

On March 3rd the Memorial Window which Mrs. Fred C. Klein has given to the Nagoya Chokyu M. P. Church was unveiled with appropriate ceremonies. Four of the little children of the church drew the ribbons which released the curtain, and the window, with its beauty and truth, was revealed.

What it means to the church will be shown by the letter which follows:

Dear Mrs. Fred C. Klein,

We express our sincere joy in accepting your beautiful present to our church, the Memorial Window of Rev. Doctor Fred C. Klein, your deceased husband. It is put up at the right of the pulpit as we face the altar, and it preaches to us the blessed truth that there, in the hands of our Lord, alone, is the salvation that saves the world from sin and sorrow. As we look up to the window, our souls become filled with rapture and gratitude, for it tells us of a man and wife who, forty years ago, dared the central spot of our land, and laid the foundation for the great work of salvation which God, the Father, saw was good for Japan.

Indeed, the present school, with its one thousand boys, and the present church, with its several hundred members, are the outgrowth of the seeds which were then sown.

The window shall always enrich us with fresh memories of our dear Doctor and Mrs. F. C. Klein.

Again thanking you for the beautiful present, we remain as yours forever and forever.

NOTICE

Missionary Convention May 8 to 12

The last service on Sunday night will be a great occasion. We will have a chorus choir composed of singers from all of our Pittsburgh churches. Services will be closed in all our other churches and a great mass meeting will be held in First Church. Dr. Hugh Thompson Kerr, of the Shadyside Presbyterian Church, whom you have all heard over KDKA on Sunday afternoons, will be the speaker. Dr. Kerr is one of the leading men of the Presbyterian church and you will want to come prepared to stay for this great service.

A LETTER TO THE PASTORS

Dear Brethren:

I have mailed out to your addresses a batch of material on High Point College which can be used by you in putting on a High Point College Day as was ordered by the last Conference. Most of the information is plain and easily understood. Where the comparisons are made between H. P. C. and other colleges as to the cost of operating, we used the names of X College, XY College, and XYZ College because we did not want to use the name of the college. However, the information is correct and you may depend upon that.

Please emphasize the work the college is doing although the offering for the college has already been taken and sent in. We believe the information will be worth passing on. And if for any reason the offering for the college has not yet been received, please take it at the earliest possible date.

Cordially yours,

R. M. ANDREWS,

THE HIGHWAY OF HABIT

Dean Sperry in his illuminating book on Reality in Worship tells us of the report that when Professor Shaler came to Harvard many years ago as a teacher he decided that he would go to chapel every morning. "He ordered his working-day accordingly, and lived by that decision. In later years he used to say that the question of staying away from chapel no longer arose, and that to raise that question and solve it afresh would involve more effort and more readjustment of his day than it was worth." So Professor Shaler "found economy of effort and margins of strength."

This is in line with the report in the gospel narrative. The writer says of Jesus, "And he came to Nazareth, where he had been brought up; and, as his custom was, he went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day." Where did that custom arise in His life? He got it from the habit of His parents. It was a good habit, and He kept it up. Of all men He needed least the synagogue, save as He was a man like us. Probably the service was as stilted, conventional, wearisome as any we have today. Yet He shared its weakness, and gave it the backing of His presence.

You can give the services of religion in your town the backing of your presence. There is something there which will help you and others; but even if there were not, the essential things for which that service stands deserve your open and courageous support. For we live in a day when everything competes with religion. "Sunday mornings on the state highway are now as conventional as Sunday mornings in church." Certainly they have no special originality or spontaneity, or uplift of soul. It is largely habit which takes some people to the highway, or its equivalent, and others to the church. The latter is more important. What is your habit?—Selected.

MAKING PEOPLE MORAL BY LAW

The opponents of our Sabbath law say: "You are trying to make people moral by law. This cannot be done. The only way to make people good is by getting the love of God into their hearts."

Our reply is: We are not trying to "make" people moral by law. We are trying to give them an opportunity to be moral by law. What is a garden fence for? Not to make the garden; the gardener does this. The fence is to make the garden possible, to keep out intruders that would otherwise come into the garden and trample down its tender plants. What are the dykes of Holland for? This country, with its beautiful scenery and fruitful fields, lies below the level of the sea. Great dykes have been built on its shores which put their shoulders against the sea and prevent its waters from sweeping in to destroy Holland. The Dutch, not the dykes, make Holland; but the dykes make Holland possible.

This is all Sabbath laws are for. They do not make people go to church or perform any religious duty. But they do say to greedy commercial interests who are bent upon using the day for money-making: "Stand back and give the preacher, Sabbath school teacher, and Christian father and mother an opportunity on the Sabbath day to reach the people with the teachers of God's Word, which will make them good."—The Christian Statesman.

EVANGELISM

*Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit;
so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.*

Concord

April 25, Thursday.—We were not here on an official visit, but to meet the ministers of this district for the purpose of effecting some sort of an organization that will bring them together for conference and fellowship, at least once a quarter. Fourteen ministers were present, and several visitors. After an interesting and profitable program, the main purpose of the meeting was presented, and the proposal was received zealously by the brethren. Bro. Bethea was elected chairman, Bro. Hendry vice chairman, and Bro. Morris secretary. No treasurer was elected, as the organization does not contemplate the need of much money.

The next meeting is to be held on the last Monday in June. The officers will arrange the program and decide on the place. The ministers that make up this group are those south and west of Lexington, including Lexington. A similar organization is in the making of the ministers grouping around Greensboro. The first meeting was held some weeks ago; the second is to be held the sixth of May, at High Point College, at which time the organization will be completed. It is our opinion that splendid results are to be realized in the coming together of our ministers as is planned by these organizations, and our hope is to expand the idea so as to include the entire conference.

Graham

April 26, Friday.—We were here at night with Bro. Minnis and his people in their second quarterly conference. The reports indicated a hopeful spirit and general progress. Pastor Minnis is liked and trusted by his people, and he is approaching his work thoughtfully and fervently. The budget finances are running behind, though the pastor is confident that all claims will be paid in full. Pastor's salary is paid to date. The Sunday school is being hindered some for lack of teachers and better housing facilities; but these are not insurmountable difficulties and the church is working to overcome them. With proper housing facilities the school can easily be increased to a weekly attendance of 200, and probably more. Plans are now on foot to make some changes in the church building, and to erect a hut. When this is done, better housing facilities will be provided for the work along all lines. In the business meeting of the church, which followed the conference, a decided majority vote prevailed in favor of the hut. The trustees were authorized to go ahead with the project. The women have merged their organizations, and there appears to be general satisfaction with the new order. They expect to raise 100 per cent more than they did last year. The conference ordered that the church be enrolled with Dr. Straughn as a Loyalty church. We were pleased with our visit and with the spirit of progress and co-operation that we found. Unless all signs fail, Graham will be at the front this fall. Watch!

Sanatorium

April 28, Sunday.—At 9:30 a. m. it was our privilege and pleasure to be in the Sunday school of the Guilford County Sanatorium, and to address the school. It was through the courtesy of Bro. R. H. Brooks that we were there, and we are grateful to him and to the school for the pleasure that this visit gave us. We enjoyed the fine fellowship of the folks, as well as the refreshing spirit of the service. This institution is a Godsend, and we were impressed with the splendid type of patients who are being treated there. It is a blessing to any one to visit and worship with them. May the rich blessings of the Great Healer be upon this House of Healing.

The High Point Meeting

Sunday, 2 p. m.—If we had had a favorable afternoon the attendance, we think, would have been very gratifying. As it was, several were present, and we heard a number of very favorable comments. The meeting opened with a worship period, conducted by the pastor, Rev. R. I. Farmer. The speakers follow: Rev. John W. Moore, pastor of Wesley Memorial Church, High Point; Rev. N. G. Bethea, pastor of State Street Church, Lexington; and Mrs. H. W. Maier, Thomasville, a denominational leader in children's work. The closing prayer period was in charge of Rev. George L. Curry, pastor of Welch Memorial Church, High Point. The speakers were all helpful, and we wish here to tender to them our grateful thanks for their splendid contribution to the purposes of this meeting. The spirit of evangelism was no doubt intensified in the group that was there. Our problem—and we believe our first—is to extend this spirit throughout the entire church. And this is surely not impossible. God's program is a program of evangelism, and he always gives his help when his people magnify his purposes.

Calvary

Sunday, 8:00 p. m.—It was our privilege to be with this congregation and to preach in the closing service of their fifth anniversary program. It was a day of good tidings with them, and they were happy in telling it on our arrival for the night service. The congregations were good through the day, and all services pleasing and edifying. At night there was another well-attended service, with the spirit of good fellowship and optimism still prevailing. We doubt not that God was honored in these services, and we believe that it will be His will to grant many happy anniversaries to this growing church, as the processes of time roll round the years. Bro. Bates is putting his all into this work, and he is ably seconded by his wife, who gives unsparingly of her time to the church. Calvary is destined to be a strong factor in our conference.

Pastors' Reports

The blanks will go out today for report for second quarter. Instead of the usual questionnaire report sheet, we are sending a blank, and leaving the pastor with full leeway in making up the report. We trust that detailed information will be given as to Easter offerings and accessions, and the outcome of the April program, as to both the Annual and General Conference work. These reports are important, as revealing the state of the individual charge, and the conference as a whole, and it is our custom to give them careful and interested attention. We bespeak for our pastors thoughtful care in making up this report, and promptness in returning it.

Treasurer's Report

It is gratifying to see the large number of charges reporting on G. C. B.—25 last week. We presume that most, or all of this, was Easter offerings. The list is made up almost entirely of rural churches, Midway, Haw River charge, standing second from the top in the amount of offering—$40. Concord leads with $50. Several other charges have considerable amounts to their credit. We are grateful for each and every contribution, large or small. The smallest contribution may represent the largest measure of sacrifice. Treasurer Brown is urging that these offerings be sent in. Pastors and church treasurers, please see to that at once. This offering is badly needed by the Board of Missions. The Board can't get it until Dr. Brown gets it. He can't get it until you send it to him. If yours has not been sent in, you will see that he gets it within the next week, won't you? Thank you for that!

And now a little open secret: The wolf is at the door. (The pastor of one charge said some time ago that a whole pack was after them.) A notice is going out to pastors this week, and they, of course, will pass it on to their people. Please, churches, be as generous as possible, and prompt. We must protect the credit of the conference.

High Point College Day

By order of the last annual conference this day is May 19—the third Sunday. It is very important that the day be appropriately observed. President Andrews is mailing to pastors helpful material for this purpose. We urge that in every service on this day the college be brought to the attention of our people, and that its place of usefulness as a growing institution be emphasized.

Subscription Quotas

You will find them published in last week's HERALD, page 9. Let every pastor and every charge get behind this matter, and push it until this goal is realized. If we can once get our people to reading our church papers, many of our problems will be solved. Pastors' salaries will be more easily paid; budget receipts will increase; our institutions will be better supported; the spiritual life of the church will be strengthened; our denominational consciousness will be more pronounced; and a more ready response to all conference and denominational programs will be realized. Information begets interest, and interest begets action. We should have a HERALD mailing list of 3,000 subscribers. Let's do it. The editor will publish each week the number of subscribers sent in, giving credits to individual charges. We shall watch to see the number grow. Now, ready? Go!

PRAYER

The Bible is the world's supreme book of prayer. So one has said, "If modern Christians can live their way back into some such consciousness of God as marks the faithful the Bible, a liberation of spiritual power will follow like the release of intellectual and political energy which marked the discovery of America."

All the apostles and writers join in the magnifying prayer. Peter has given us one of the most comforting and comprehensive injunctions regarding prayer in the whole Bible. "Casting all your care upon Him, for He careth for you." If we would draw near to God we must be humble. "God resists the proud, but exalts the humble." "He scorseth the scorners but gives grace to the lowly."

Christ shows us the true spirit of prayer and assures us of His willingness to answer prayer. Millions in many lands today know by personal experience that prayer is the mighty force in the world. If we fail to pray, the world is but a prison to sin.

Sometimes our prayers are not answered immediately, but Christ teaches that we should not cease to pray, but should trust God absolutely. Sometimes God delays the answer to try our faith or test the genuineness of our desire. Too often we do not have a living faith and this is why we do not more often see the power of God. There cannot be intense faith in prayer with little prayer. Weakness is the result of little faith. The more one prays the greater his faith becomes and the more he sees the answer to his prayers. Too often men have more faith in their own working than the working of God for them. They plan but pray little and have no trust in God.

"Give me the wings of faith to rise
Within the veil, and see
The saints above, how great their joys,
How bright their glories be.

"I ask them whence their victory came.
They, with united breath,
Ascribe their conquest to the Lamb,
Their triumphs to His death."

We are to pray and believe. "All who seek Him shall find Him." The promise is, "If ye abide in me and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will and it shall be done unto you."

It is comforting to know that no one is ever repulsed who goes to God with a contrite heart. Not one sincere prayer is lost. It is to God we are speaking, and our prayer is always heard. "He that spared not His own Son but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things.

God never neglects the prayers of His people. Sometimes the way seems dark and we cannot understand, but this we do know, that God permits trials in order that we may be cleansed from earthliness, from selfishness or harsh, un-Christian-like traits of character. He allows the dark waters of affliction to go over our souls, in order that we may know Him, and Jesus Christ who died for us; that we may have the deep longing to be cleansed and may come forth from the trial purer, holier, happier. "He shall bring forth the righteousness as the light and thy judgment as the noonday

CAPTAIN BROWN'S TREASURE

"Tom! Tom!" Beth cried, "Come here, quickly!"

"Rabbits? Snakes?" I questioned.

"No"—there was a note of scorn in her voice—"Bones!"

"Bones?"

"Yes, look at them."

I saw one ashy white bone sticking out from beneath the bushes—then, by spreading back to the branches, I saw a good many more.

"Don't touch them!" Beth warned.

"Why not?"

"It's bad luck to handle a dead person's bones."

"Why couldn't they be from a horse, or a cow?" I questioned.

But before she could reply, we both saw an object that made us draw in our breaths sharply, as though cold water had hit us in the face. It was a skull!

"Tom—don't touch it!" Beth cried.

Beth and I were the only boy and girl ever known to visit Cocos Island—the graveyard of pirates and the hiding place of their plunder. Probably no human eyes had ever before looked upon this gruesome skull. There was nothing to be afraid of, however, so I stooped down and picked it up in my hands.

"It's human, all right."

"Look," said Beth, coming closer to examine our find. "The mouth is stuffed with paper."

We took out the paper and looked at it carefully:

"Here lies the body of Captain Brown,
Ten yards north—six feet down."

We read, and then, underneath this bit of poetry, a short note:

"Find Brown's grave. It is in the exact center of the island."

"Why, Tom!" cried Beth. "Let's look for it!"

"Look for what?"

"The treasure."

"But Beth," I objected, "we don't even know that there is a treasure!"

She laughed, but the sounds caught themselves queerly in her throat. We heard strange voices—voices of rough men who looked like pirates.

With picks and shovels, four of them were digging a large hole in the sand. A fifth was looking at a map, while a sixth—an old man who reminded me of Rip Van Winkle—had thrown himself in a tired attitude on the ground under a tall palm tree.

Luckily, none of them had noticed Beth and me, so we stooped low behind the brush and retraced our steps quickly to the steamer where her father and mine were making a survey for the United States Government.

That night three of us were told to return to the spot where we had seen the strange men digging. Beth couldn't come, and as it turned out later, it was lucky she didn't, for without her the rescuing party would not have saved us in time. Beth's father was with the party; so was I, and a sailor that we could trust made the third.

As we drew near the sandy clearing the party halted while I went ahead to find out if the men were still there.

"The spot is deserted," was my report. "They have left their tools lying idle near the hole they were digging."

Standing over that same hole a few minutes later, Beth's father opened the face of our dark lantern so that the rays could fall on our pocket compass.

"North is in that direction," he pointed out. "Measure off ten yards."

I moved away with the end of a tape measure in my hand. When the right distance had been ruled off, I stopped and called for the others to come with the picks and shovels.

The sand was soft, the work easy. We pitched and shoveled with a will—and soon I struck a hard object. I uncovered the sand from whatever it was and called out in a low but excited voice to Beth's father, but before he could examine the discovery, the pirates jumped out from behind the bushes and grabbed us.

The leader had a revolver in his hand.

"Come out of that hole, you robbers," he ordered.

It would have been foolish not to obey.

"Tie them up," was his next command; and while his men were doing as they were bid, he took our place in the pit and began dragging loose a long narrow chest made of heavy wood and iron handles. They all worked hard, and by daybreak the six of them were trying to move it down toward the beach. But it was so heavy that the Chief had to cut our bonds and order us to help.

Like a strange funeral party we stumbled through the bushes with the heavy chest. Reaching the beach on the south side of the island, I saw for the first time the vessel and small landing boat of the pirates.

"Drop it," commanded the leader. "Now turn the small boat around so that the stern is in toward the shore."

When the box had been placed across the back seat of the boat, the Chief began to look around for the old man.

He had mysteriously disappeared!

The Chief called. There was no answer. Then he cupped his hands to his lips and would have shouted were it not for a sight which robbed him of his voice.

At the turn of the beach, not thirty seconds away for a good runner, was Beth and my father, followed by eight or nine of our sailors!

"Come on," shouted one of the pirates. "Let the old man look out for himself!"

The Chief reached the same decision at the same time. Whatever he was going to do with us, he had no time to do it. Dashing to the boat, he ran it out into the water, jumped over the stern into it, and gave orders for his men to pull at the oars. When our rescuers arrived, he was far enough out from the shore to be safe from revolver shots, although all of our men took tries at him.

"Listen, men!" cried Beth's father, excitedly. "That chest those men are taking away contains treasure—gold and silver, perhaps jewels! We found it—Tom and I and this sailor. It belongs to us—and those men are stealing it. How many of you are ready to go with me in pursuit? Hands up!"

Every man present put up his hand.

"Then back to our ship," was the command.

As we strode across Cocos Island on the way back, Beth's father told the events of the morning to my father, while I tried to give Beth and the men an idea of what had happened. When we came in sight of the palm tree we stopped short in surprise. On the ground near the first hole was a body—stretched out as if dead—and there were glittering objects in each wrinkled and shriveled hand.

"Why—it's the old man!" cried Beth.
And it was!

In his hand were gold coins and jewels—while in the hole was a small chest, overflowing with precious metals and stones!

"Don't touch my treasure. Please don't touch it!" pleaded the old man, when we had nursed him back to consciousness. "It belongs to me."

His strength was ebbing fast, and he seemed to know it.

"Come here, lad," he said to me, "and lass, too. You'll understand."

Beth and I went to him—took his shaking hands in ours. "That box the pirates took this morning—is full of stones. I know—because I buried it there—for a blind. Take the real treasure—do some good with it—as I never had the chance to do. And when I die, have them bury me here"—he nodded at the pit—"in Captain Brown's grave. And build a cross with these words. . . ."

Beth put her ears close to his lips. His eyes had closed, but quite distinctly he murmured:

"Here lies the body of . . ."

He opened his eyes, smiled, then drawing Beth still closer to him, he whispered:

"I'm Captain Brown."

THE PRINCE'S GIFT

Once upon a time there was a young Prince who was somewhat spoiled. He was an only child and wanted everything for himself. Even when he was obliged to share something with the other children who were occasionally allowed to come to the palace and play with him, he would give them the poorest, and keep the best for himself.

And he was a shrewd, he thought, about selecting the best to retain. If there was an apple with a blemish, or an orange somewhat green at one end, or a little cake not so inviting, or smaller nuts, he would bestow these upon his friends with a very grand air, perhaps saying:

"The Prince wishes you to enjoy this."

And his companions, being polite little people, who had been taught to be on their best behavior when they went to the palace, would accept what was given them without protest.

But there was one little lad who came to the palace grounds sometimes with his father, who was the head gardener. And nearly always Toby brought something to the Prince whom he admired very greatly. Whatever Toby brought was the very nicest he had—the biggest and ripest peach, the loveliest rose from the home garden, a pot of clear, golden honey, gleaming in its glass container like a great jewel.

The Prince was always much pleased, and in return he would occasionally bestow something upon Toby, such as one of the books of which he was tired or that had become torn, or a garment he no longer wished to wear.

As the Prince grew older, his greedy nature grew with him, as natures have a way of doing, and one day when he was out hunting in the forest, he became separated from his serving men, and to his great dismay found that he was lost.

He wandered on and on, growing more and more frightened. Nightfall arrived, and he shook with terror. He could see the green, shining eyes of creatures in the darkness, and, not knowing what they might be, he would run from them, perhaps stumbling as he fled.

In one of these flights he stumbled over an old root and went headlong—headlong into dark, muddy waters. He screamed with fright, and to his great relief, a light appeared and a cheerful voice cried to him to keep up his courage.

In a few minutes the Prince was drawn up on the bank, and he then saw that the water was really only a small pool, but large enough to have drowned him. His rescuer was Toby, who was camping in the woods with his brothers. The Prince was very grateful.

"You shall be rewarded for this!" he repeated again and again—"richly rewarded! We will go to the palace now and you shall bring back with you a token of my gratitude."

So Toby and his two older brothers and the Prince returned safely, and there was loud rejoicing. Toby and his brothers were fed and bidden to tarry until they were rested. Before they departed, the Prince placed upon the hand of Toby a gleaming jewel.

"This you must always keep," said the giver, "for it will bring you much honor when you tell people how you got it, and that I, the Prince himself, gave you this lovely gem. You may hand it down to your children for they will like to know what a brave fellow you were."

Several years went past, and the Prince was grown. He was now King in the place of his father. But one day enemies invaded the kingdom and drove the King from his throne. He was obliged for his personal safety to go in disguise to a distant country. No one knew of his departure but Toby, who was still his friend.

Such haste had the Prince been obliged to make that he had been unable to take either food or money with him, but he had never worried about such things as that, and he didn't now. In his dress as a common sailor, he boarded the small boat of a poor fisherman, who was to take him away under cover of darkness.

Toby was there to bid him goodbye.

"Oh Prince and King!" exclaimed Toby in a low and earnest voice, "I haven't much to give you or it should be yours, but one thing I have prized above all else. Take it, and when you need food or shelter, or protection, sell it and use the money as you know I would have you do."

The Prince thanked him hastily, for he thought he heard pursuers in the distance. The fisherman pushed off, and the young ruler, now without a kingdom, was gone.

When morning dawned, the little boat came to rest in a sheltered cove. The King was hungry, for he was young and healthy. He had no money. He was cold, for the night had been chill. He bethought himself of the package which Toby had given him. He drew it from his pocket and opened it. A ring with a great jewel in its setting caught the sparkle of the morning sunshine.

But the young King's face was dark and angry at the sight of it, and a snarling sound came from his lips.

"Bah!" he exclaimed. "It's the very ring I gave Toby myself, and it is worthless—paste—nothing but a clever imitation!"

And in his wrath he tossed the cheap bauble into the waters which eddied about a big rock in the mouth of the cove.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON RESOLUTIONS

(Read at Branch Meeting)

We, the members of the North Carolina Branch, assembled in our 29th annual meeting, being held in the Methodist Protestant Church, Asheboro, N. C., do express our gratitude and praise to our Heavenly Father for His guidance and protection during the years that are past and for the increased interest shown in this branch of His work. Be it

Resolved: That we express our thanks and deep appreciation to the women of the Asheboro Auxiliary, to the members of the church, and to all the women who have so graciously entertained us and made our visit a great pleasure.

Resolved: That we express our thanks to the reporters of papers for their kindness in reporting our meetings each day.

Resolved: That we express our appreciation of the beautiful music rendered by Prof. E. B. Stimson and Mr. Jones, of High Point College; to the group from the Children's Home; to Mrs. Walker and members of the choir; and to the group from the city schools; and for the inspiration received from the talks made by the students from High Point College.

Resolved: That we extend our thanks and deep appreciation to the Woman's Auxiliary of Community Church, Thomasville, for the presentation of the beautiful and impressive pageant, "Broken China."

Resolved: That we also show our appreciation for the presence of Mrs. Marie Thompson, our associate secretary of the Board of Missions; to our missionaries, Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Minnis and Rev. J. Clyde Auman, whose messages have given us greater inspiration and enthusiasm; and for the presence of a large number of our ministers and visitors.

And be it further resolved that we go forth from this meeting ready and willing to carry on the great work of our church, not only at home but bearing His message to the uttermost parts of the earth.

Respectfully submitted,

MRS. D. L. CARROLL,
MRS. M. CALL,
MRS. J. F. COBLE,
MISS THACKER,
MRS. M. P. HARRELL.

ON AN INDIAN ROAD

(Prepared by Miss Mildred Miskimen; published at the request of Mrs. H. W. Maier for use in Sunday schools on Missionary Sunday.)

Characters

Leela, a Christian girl going to school.

Kashie, a Hindu girl going on a journey.

Costumes

Both girls are dressed in simple Indian clothes. Indian costume may be made by wrapping around and around the body a straight piece of material. Begin at the waist, letting material fall to the feet. When upper part of body is wrapped, the material which is left will be draped over the head. Leela carries school books and slate; Kashie, a small bundle wrapped in a blanket as if going on a journey.

(Enter Leela from right, Kashie from stage left.)

Leela: Good morning, Kashie.

Kashie: Good morning, Leela.

Leela: Where are you going; are you not going to school today?

Kashie: Oh, no! I'm going to the great festival at Benares with my uncle.

Leela: Are you truly? All the way to Benares? How splendid! What will you see at the festival?

Kashie: Oh, many things. My brother went last year with our father, and he has not yet finished telling us of all the splendid things he saw there. There are many ladies and gentlemen in fine clothes. The river banks are crowded with people bathing in the clear water. There are many beautiful temples and bells always ringing. There are booths and booths where people have all sorts of fine things to sell, toys, silks, jewelry, and curios. Last year father bought me a pair of silver anklets, and a silk frock for my little sister. Then there is a great wheel which goes round and round, and people ride on it. They call it a Ferris Wheel. The foreigners make them.

Leela: Oh, how splendid! I wish I could go too.

Kashie: And that is not all. There was an old woman who had traveled from Calcutta by measuring her length on the ground. She had a small stick in her hand. She would lie down on the ground and make a mark in the sand as far as she could reach. Then she would get up and put her feet on this mark and lie down, then mark again with her stick. So she had traveled all those miles. Her clothes were filled with dust from the road; she had not washed nor combed her hair in all that time.

Leela: How dreadful! Why did she do that?

Kashie: Oh, I don't know why she did it, but every one gave her money. There was also an old man there who put great darning needles into his flesh. My brother saw him put one clear through his face from one side to another. And an old man was there who lay on a bed of spikes.

Leela: Didn't they hurt him?

Kashie: Of course they hurt him.

Leela: Then why did he lie there? Did some one make him do it for punishment?

Kashie: No, he did it because he wanted to do it. He was a holy man. Holy men always do those things.

Leela: Why do they do such dreadful things?

Kashie: I don't know, but they always do. I hope he will be there again this year.

Leela: How can you want to see such terrible things? I should like to see the big wheel which goes round and round, and the shops, but not those dreadful people. I am glad that I am not going after all.

Kashie (in astonishment): Glad you are not going? How can you say that?

Leela: Tomorrow, one of the teachers will take all us Christian girls for a picnic out in the jungles. There will be carts for those who wish to ride, but we big girls are planning to walk. We shall take our lunch and be gone all day. We can play games and tell stories in the shade, wade in the stream, and maybe catch crabs and little fish. Then the teacher is sure to have a present for each one. I would not miss the fun for anything, and there will be no terrible people there to spoil it all.

Kashie: Well, I must hurry, or we shall miss the train; then my aunt would scold. I am going to their house and go to the station with them. Good-bye.

Leela: Good-bye.

WILL BUILD CAMP FOR RURAL PEOPLE

On twelve acres of land donated by the State Department of Agriculture from its holdings at the Mountain Branch Station near Swannanoa in Buncombe county, a permanent camp for use of 4-H club members and adult farmers and farm women will be ready for use this summer.

"The camp is a triumph of co-operative effort among those interested in the rural advancement of western North Carolina," says John W. Goodman, district agent of the State College extension service, in announcing the close of a successful campaign for its establishment. "We plan to build first an auditorium, dining room, kitchen and lake. These will be available in early summer. Then each county that uses the location for its boys and girls or men and women will build its own cottage for sleeping quarters. The capacity of the camp will be 500 persons at one time and we plan to have it occupied at least three months in the year. One feature of the summer will be a farm and home week at which time we expect to have thousands of men and women from our western counties gathered for instruction and recreation."

Mr. Goodman gives credit to County Agent O. B. Jones, of Henderson county, for first suggesting the idea. He also credits J. M. English, of Asheville, with securing donations of lumber and timber from the Lumberman's Association to make the camp possible. The city of Asheville is hauling the material to the camp site now and the Buncombe county board of commissioners has graded an excellent road. Many business and commercial organizations have helped. Civic clubs have given their support and individuals have made important contributions. The Southern Railway reduced its freight rates on the material contributed.

At the present time, P. H. Gaston, county agent of Transylvania county, is giving his full time to constructing the central group of buildings and the dam.

HERALD SUBSCRIPTION RECEIPTS

—Senator Wheeler of Montana proposes an investigation of mill conditions in Tennessee and the Carolinas. Senator Simmons asks why limit the investigation to the Southern States.

OUR CHILDREN'S HOME

There are only a few items of money to be reported, so we omit those this week and will report next week. Next Sunday is the first Sunday in the month, and many of our Sunday schools take their offerings that day. We are hoping for good returns.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Mrs. Hannah Haynes, canna roots, dahlia roots, and gladiola bulbs. Mrs. Blackman, chrysanthemum plants. Woman's Auxiliary, Mt. Carmel, Forsyth, dahlia roots, gladiola bulbs and chrysanthemum plants. Bethel, Mocksville, lily roots, chrysanthemum and other plants. Shiloh, North Davidson, 10 sheets, 23 towels, 6 pair pillow slips, 8 wash cloths and 2 little dresses. Mrs. L. R. Gooch, Henderson, for the girls of the C. E. Society, a bundle of clothing, including one coat, several dresses, some underwear, and suits for little boys.

We have word that some other flower roots and plants are on the way. We thank one and all for your help.

The Farm

We are now getting plenty of milk. We are also eating home raised radishes and onions. Our cabbage will be ready for use in another week. Our potatoes are looking fine, and our hens are still laying lots of eggs.

A Request

The Colgate Company has offered to secure for us a General Motors Electric Refrigerator for Octagon coupons—coupons of all kinds of Octagon products—whenever we secure enough. We are asking all our friends to be generous enough to mail us the coupons of these products used in your homes, and any you may secure from friends. Thank you for this help also.

Faithfully,

A. G. DIXON.

LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL

For All Churches in the Winston-Salem Area
May 12-17, 1929

Another Standard Leadership Training School has been arranged for the North Carolina Conference. This time the opportunity is given to the Winston-Salem area. A churches within 30 miles of the Winston-Salem Methodist Protestant Church are invited to take advantage of this opportunity for training a local church leadership.

The Faculty and Courses: All courses offered will be on the International Standard Level. Each faculty member has made special study of the subject he is offering and has been accredited by the Board of Christian Education of the Methodist Protestant Church. Those members already secured and courses are:

Course 2, "The Principles of Teaching" Rev. F. L. Gibbs, Durham, N. C.

Course 4, "The New Testament," Rev. N. C. Clough, Seaford, Del.

Course 6, "Teaching Work of the Church" Rev. J. E. Cummings, Laurel, Del.

Course 91, "Church School Administration," Rev. H. F. Surratt, Winston-Salem, N. C.

Course 106, "Missionary Materials and Methods," Rev. J. Clyde Auman.

Who May Attend? All those who are interested and have to do with the teaching and administrative work of the church. Especially Sunday School and Christian Endeavor teachers and leaders. Do you know how to make that Sunday School and your other church organizations a success? Let these instructors work out with you your problems. Let us take time to be efficient leaders for the work of the Kingdom.

Duration and Cost: A small registration fee will be paid upon entering the school. Only $1.00 will cover this fee. Each student will be expected to purchase a textbook in addition to the registration fee. The school opens Sunday afternoon, May 12th, at 3 o'clock. Will close Friday evening, May 17th. Two classes will be taught in each course each evening.

First Period: 7:45-8:35; rest and recreation, 8:35-8:50.

Second Period: 8:50-9:40.

The Workers Council of the First Methodist Protestant Church of Winston-Salem, backed by the church and their pastor, Rev. H. F. Surratt, will be hosts to those who attend. The work will be done under the auspices of the Board of Christian Education, Department of Religious Education, 819 Sixth Street, Durham, N. C. Write us for further information.

Yours for a locally trained church leadership for all churches,

Truly,

F. L. GIBBS,
Assistant Secretary.

N. B.—Registration and classification, Sunday afternoon, May 12, at 3 o'clock at First Methodist Protestant Church, Winston-Salem, N. C.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Friendship, Mt. Hermon Charge.—Sunday was an unusual day at Friendship for several reasons. For a year the Baraca class of our Sunday school has been using the Cross and Crown system of award for attendance. Six young men received gold pins Sunday for perfect attendance at Sunday school for one year. Those receiving pins were Messrs. Paul M. Graves, Garland Isley, Clifton Sharpe, Norman Johnson, Howard Patterson, and our pastor, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll. We want to commend these young men for their faithfulness and loyalty to the Sunday school.

Rev. Lawrence Little, secretary of Young people's work in the entire M. P. church, was at Friendship Sunday evening at 7:30 and preached a most inspiring sermon to the young people. We were glad to have with us quite a number of people from Mt. Hermon and Belmont as well as many visitors from elsewhere. Special music had been prepared for the occasion and the service was one of the most impressive ever held in our church. We hope both Rev. and Mrs. Little will visit us again.

The regular meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Society convened with Mrs. J. L. Kernodle Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. After the business meeting, reports from delegates to the Branch meeting were heard. Plans were discussed for merging the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of our church. Then the hostess, assisted by her daughter, Miss Atrice Kernodle and Mrs. J. A. Albright, served delicious refreshments. The society will meet with Mrs. A. C. Isley next month unless otherwise announced.

REPORTER.

West End.—Special evangelistic service will begin next Sunday, May 4th. Rev. L. W. Gerringer will assist Dr. J. D. Williams. Services during the week will be conducted at 9 o'clock in the morning and at 8 o'clock in the evening. The public is invited to attend.

Yarborough Chapel Christian Endeavor Society.—We have recently re-organized our Christian Endeavor Society with the following officers: Miss Gladys Wilson, president; Miss Lizzie Bell Gossett, vice-president; Miss Sara Evelyn Stone, treasurer; Mrs. Moses Garrett, recording secretary, and Miss Vera Wilson, corresponding secretary.

During the winter months our society had charge of the evening services. We have had excellent meetings and very inspiring and interesting talks by our pastor, Rev. D. D. Broom, who is so interested in our Christian Endeavor and is a great help to us. We have also had talks by laymen of the community.

During March we conducted a membership and attendance contest, dividing our society into two groups, the "Reds" and the "Blues." During this contest 50 new members were added to our society, making our total enrollment approximately 70 members. The contest proved very interesting, and we hope our attendance will prove to be much larger than before the contest began.

The "Reds" were the losers in this contest, entertaining the "Blues" with a weiner roast at historic Musgrove Mill last Wednesday evening.

Much interest is being manifested in our society, and we have a very enthusiastic group of young people. VERA P. WILSON, Cor. Sec'y.

Yarborough Chapel.—Our church and all of its organizations are doing nicely at present. Our pastor, Rev. D. D. Broome, has been with us since January. We feel we are very fortunate in having Mr. Broome as our pastor and under his leadership we feel we are accomplishing much. He brings us inspiring and helpful sermons.

Although a bit late in reporting it, we had a very interesting Easter service. The children did well and much credit is due Mrs. Ophelia Bobo and Miss Lizzie Bell Gossett, who trained them.

We are having good attendance at our Sunday school and church services.

The churches of the community are having union prayer services on Thursday evenings. The attendance has been very good considering sickness and bad weather.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

LLOYD WILSON, Reporter.

Kannapolis.—A two weeks' revival service will begin at the Tabernacle on Walnut street at 11 a. m., Sunday, May 5th.

We have recently purchased new song books and are expecting choir help from our church at Concord. Other promised choir help is also expected.

Evening services will begin at 7:30. A welcome awaits all who may attend.

E. G. LOWDERMILK, Pastor.

Burlington, First Church.—The work with us is moving onward very satisfactorily. Attendance at Sunday school today was 262 and offering amounted to $16.53.

Rev. Geo. W. Holmes preached for us at the morning preaching service in the absence of our pastor, Bro. Gerringer, who was at Calvary church, Greensboro, in a special service. The attendance at both the morning and evening services was very good considering the rainy weather in the forenoon. The sermons were very uplifting and helpful.

Mrs. Mabel Bennett Gerringer, who is a patient at the Sanatorium, is gaining in weight at this time and getting on very well, it seems. We are glad to learn this good news and trust that she may soon be restored to normal health.

Mrs. L. A. Braxton, who was right ill, is up again and recovering nicely. Also, L. A. Braxton, Jr., is up most of the time and gaining back his strength, we are glad to say.

Wedding bells have been ringing in our community recently. Miss Louise Scott and Mr. Anderson Thomas were recently married. Mrs. Thomas is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Scott, of this city, a young lady of excellent qualities, and a member of the First Presbyterian church, we believe. Mr. Thomas is one of our own boys, and a young man of sterling character and the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed R. Thomas. Another wedding of interest to our people is that of Miss Vera Holt to Mr. Steele Anderson. Miss Holt is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Braxton Holt, of our church, and has been a faithful worker in a number of the organizations of the church; a young lady of highest qualities and character. Mr. Anderson is the son of Mrs. E. T. Anderson and stands high in the community. These young people have the best wishes of the entire church for a life of happiness and usefulness.

Next Sunday we will observe "Old People's Day" at the morning hour and it is hoped that all of the older members, as far as possible, will be in attendance at this service. Any who do not have a way to ride to church will please call either the pastor, Bro. Gerringer, or Mr. Henry Cole, and a way will be provided for them to get to church. Plan now to come.

L. A. BRAXTON,

Reporter.

Mecklenburg.—This is the third time I have tried to make this report. Three or four weeks ago while I was in the hospital some big-hearted folks from Antioch church got up a nice, big pounding and brought my family. Time and space will not permit me to mention all by name. There were 20 different kinds of food-stuff, some dress goods and last, but not least, was a purse of $7.15. Now I am back in the hospital again after a two weeks' stay at home; so I will thank you all through the paper, and if you will come and see me at the hospital I will thank you again.

We are so glad that Bro. N. M. Harrison, of Charlotte, is giving our folks one service at each church during the month and many of our members have been in to see us and all of them think a lot of Bro. Harrison's preaching. I ask all the readers of this paper who are praying people to pray for my recovery if it be the Lord's will.

W. C. HALL, Pastor.

Mebane.—We are moving along in our usual way. Bro. Loy has not been well for a few weeks, but insists on doing his work against the doctor's orders.

Several of our ladies attended the Branch meeting in Asheboro and came home with renewed zeal and gave us interesting reports. Most of these ladies are circle leaders and they are putting into their circles the information and enthusiasm gained at the Branch meeting.

There is right much sickness in our congregation just now. Mr. Lewis Nicholson is in Wesley Long Hospital, having had an operation for appendicitis. Mr. John Frank Jobe is ill at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Jobe. The little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Cheek has been very ill. Mrs. John Thomas Hobbs is right ill at the home of her father, Mr. W. R. Jobe. Our prayers go up for these and we wish for them a speedy recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Nicholson are receiving congratulations over the arrival of a son, John Frank.

Mrs. Lucy Barnette was buried Monday of last week at Stony Creek. Mrs. Barnette was the mother of Messrs. J. W. and J. E. Barnette, Mesdames C. C. King and A. V. Boone, all of our church. We extend to them our heart-felt sympathy.

Mebane church has the honor of having two members in the graduating class of High Point College this year. We are proud of the good High Point College is doing for us through these young people. One of our girls, Miss Grace Barnette, was on the program at the Branch meeting in Asheboro and we were very much impressed with her talk. Miss Edna Nicholson will give her junior recital in piano Monday night, May 6, at 8 o'clock.

Rev. and Mrs. O. C. Loy, of Saxapahaw, visited at the parsonage one day last week. Mrs. Loy, mother of our pastor, and Miss Hallie Loy spent last week-end at the parsonage. We enjoyed meeting them and hope they will come often.

Mr. Ab Smith died Saturday night. The funeral was held from our church Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock by the pastor, Rev. W. M. Loy, assisted by the other ministers of the town. Mr. Smith had been in very poor health for some time. We extend our heart-felt sympathy to the widow, who so patiently and tenderly cared for his every want and need during these days of suffering. May His grace sustain her in this hour of sore bereavement.

The Mebane-Graham contest closed Sunday. We are expecting to be really entertained by their program. Graham always gives something of interest and help.

West Forsyth.—It is not the plan of the pastor of West Forsyth charge to send a report to the Herald every week, and as we had a lengthy report in the paper last week, no report was planned for this week. But things will happen that are not anticipated. Yes, it was another pounding! It came on Tuesday night when the Woman's Auxiliary met at the parsonage. Members of the Auxiliary and their husbands brought with them a nice pounding for the pastor and family. We are grateful for these gifts for our dining table and thank each one who had a part in it.

Despite the continual downpour of rain Sunday school and preaching services were held at Harmony Grove church last Sunday. The pastor and family arrived in time for Sunday school and there were about 25 present. These all remained for the preaching service. Harmony Grove church was painted some time ago, which improves the appearance of the church very much.

Miss Millie Smitherman, of East Bend, a member of Baltimore church, is expecting to return to her home this week from Winston-Salem, where she underwent an operation at the Baptist Hospital. She spent one week in the hospital and has been at the home of her niece, Mrs. Webster, in Winston-Salem, for several days. The operation was very successful and Miss Smitherman will recuperate at her home for some time before resuming her work as a seamstress.

Our services for next Sunday will be with the Baltimore and Stony Knoll churches. We are planning to begin our campaign for subscriptions to the Methodist Protestant Herald next Sunday. The goal for West Forsyth is 14 new subscriptions during the months of May and June. We believe we can secure that many.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Seagrove, Why Not Circuit.—Several years ago the people in this part of Seagrove, seeing the need of a place to have Sunday school and preaching, bought the old schoolhouse property, remodeled and arranged it for that purpose. Nearly all of these people were Baptists or Methodist Protestants. It seemed there wasn't enough of either denomination for an organization, so this Sunday school was named Seagrove Union and has been called that since that time.

Ministers of different denominations have preached here, but for a number of years the pastor of Why Not circuit has had a standing appointment here as the parsonage for the circuit is situated at this place.
